Court File No.: A-102-20

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

BETWEEN:

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS

Applicant

– and –

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondent

– and –

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Intervener

APPLICANT'S RECORD

VOLUME 1 of 3

SIMON LIN
Evolink Law Group
4388 Still Creek Drive, Suite 237
Burnaby, British Columbia, V5C 6C6
Tel: 604-620-2666

simonlin@evolinklaw.com

Counsel for the Applicant,
Air Passenger Rights

TO: ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA
Department of Justice
Civil Litigation Section
50 O'Connor Street, Suite 300
Ottawa, ON K1A 0H8

Sanderson Graham
Tel: 613-296-4469
Fax: 613-954-1920
Email: Sandy.Graham@justice.gc.ca

Lorne Ptack
Tel: 613-670-6281
Fax: 613-954-1920
Email: Lorne.Ptack@justice.gc.ca

Counsels for the Respondent,
Attorney General of Canada

AND TO: CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY
15 Eddy Street
Gatineau, QC K1A 0N9

Kevin Shaar
Tel: 613-894-4260
Fax: 819-953-9269
Email: Kevin.Shaar@otc-cta.gc.ca
Email: Servicesjuridiques.LegalServices@otc-cta.gc.ca

Counsel for the Intervener,
Canadian Transportation Agency

Table of Contents of Volume 1

Court File No.: A-102-20

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

BETWEEN:

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS

Applicant

– and –

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Respondent

NOTICE OF APPLICATION

TO THE RESPONDENT:

A PROCEEDING HAS BEEN COMMENCED by the Applicant. The relief claimed by the Applicant appears on the following page.

THIS APPLICATION will be heard by the Court at a time and place to be fixed by the Judicial Administrator. Unless the Court orders otherwise, the place of hearing will be as requested by the Applicant. The Applicant requests that this application be heard at the Federal Court of Appeal in Vancouver, British Columbia.

IF YOU WISH TO OPPOSE THIS APPLICATION, to receive notice of any step in the application or to be served with any documents in the application, you or a solicitor acting for you must prepare a notice of appearance in Form 305 prescribed by the Federal Courts Rules and serve it on the Applicant's solicitor, or where the applicant is self-represented, on the Applicant, WITHIN 10 DAYS after being served with this notice of application.

Copies of the Federal Courts Rules, information concerning the local offices of the Court and other necessary information may be obtained on request to the Administrator of this Court at Ottawa (telephone 613-992-4238) or at any local office.

IF YOU FAIL TO OPPOSE THIS APPLICATION, JUDGMENT MAY BE GIVEN IN YOUR ABSENCE AND WITHOUT FURTHER NOTICE TO YOU.

Date: April 8, 2020

Issued by: _____

JEAN-FRANÇOIS DUPORT
REGISTRY OFFICER
AGENT DU GREFFE

Address of local office: Federal Court of Appeal
90 Sparks Street, 5th floor
Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0H9

TO: CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

APPLICATION

This is an application for judicial review pursuant to section 28 of the Federal Courts Act in respect of two public statements issued on or about March 25, 2020 by the Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency], entitled "Statement on Vouchers" [Statement] and the "Important Information for Travellers During COVID-19" page [COVID-19 Agency Page] that cites the Statement.

These public statements, individually or collectively, purport to provide an unsolicited advance ruling on how the Agency will treat and rule upon complaints of passengers about refunds from air carriers relating to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Statement was issued without hearing the perspective of passengers whatsoever.

The Applicant makes application for:

1. a declaration that:

   (a) the Agency's Statement is not a decision, order, determination, or any other ruling of the Agency and has no force or effect of law;

   (b) the issuance of the Statement on or about March 25, 2020, referencing of the Statement within the COVID-19 Agency Page, and the subsequent distribution of those publications is contrary to the Agency's own Code of Conduct and/or gives rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias for:

      i. the Agency as a whole, or

      ii. alternatively, the appointed members of the Agency who supported the Statement;

   (c) further, the Agency, or alternatively the appointed members of the Agency who supported the Statement, exceeded and/or lost its (their) jurisdiction under the Canada Transportation Act, S.C. 1996, c. 10 to rule upon any complaints of passengers about refunds from carriers relating to the COVID-19 pandemic;

2. an interim order (ex-parte) that:

(a) upon service of this Court's interim order, the Agency shall prominently post the interim clarification (below) at the top portion of both the French and English versions of the "Statement on Vouchers" [Statement] and the "Important Information for Travellers During COVID-19" page [COVID-19 Agency Page] (both defined in paragraphs 11-12 of the Notice of Application):

> The Canadian Transportation Agency's "Statement on Vouchers" is not a decision, order, determination, or any legal ruling of the Canadian Transportation Agency. It does not have the force of law. The "Statement on Vouchers" is currently pending judicial review by the Federal Court of Appeal. This notice is posted by Order [insert URL link to PDF of order] of the Federal Court of Appeal.;

(b) starting from the date of service of this Court's interim order, the Agency shall bring the above interim clarification to the attention of anyone that contacts the Agency with a formal complaint and/or informal inquiry regarding air carriers' refusal to refund arising from the COVID-19 pandemic;

(c) the Agency shall not issue any decision, order, determination, or any other ruling with respect to refunds from air carriers in relation to the COVID-19 pandemic; and

(d) this interim order is valid for fourteen days from the date of service of this Court's interim order on the Agency, and may be renewed by the Applicant under Rule 374(2);

3. an interlocutory order that:

(a) the Agency shall forthwith completely remove the Statement from the Agency's website including any references to the Statement within the COVID-19 Agency Page and substitute it with this Court's interlocutory order, or alternatively the order renewing the interim clarification (subparagraph 2(a) above), until final disposition of the Application;

(b) the interim orders in subparagraphs 1(b)-(c) above are maintained until final disposition of the Application;

(c) the Agency shall forthwith communicate with persons that the Agency has previously communicated with regarding the Statement and bring those persons' attention to this Court's interlocutory order and the removal or clarification of the Statement; and

(d) the Agency shall forthwith communicate with air carriers under the Agency's jurisdiction, the Association of Canadian Travel Agencies, and Travel Pulse and bring those persons' attention to this Court's interlocutory order and the removal or clarification of the Statement;

4. a permanent order that:

(a) the Agency prominently post at the top portion of the COVID-19 Agency Page that the Agency's Statement has been ordered to be removed by this Court;

(b) the Agency remove the Statement, and references to the Statement within the COVID-19 Agency Page, from its website and replace the Statement with a copy of this Court's judgment;

(c) in the event the Agency receives any formal complaint or informal inquiry regarding air carriers' refusal to refund in respect of the COVID-19 pandemic, promptly and prominently inform the complainant of this Court's judgment; and

(d) the Agency, or alternatively the appointed members of the Agency who supported the Statement, be enjoined from dealing with any complaints involving air carriers' refusal to refund passengers in respect of the COVID-19 pandemic, and enjoined from issuing any decision, order, determination or any other ruling with respect to refunds from air carriers for the COVID-19 pandemic;

5. costs and/or reasonable out-of-pocket expenses of this Application; and

6. such further and other relief or directions as the Applicant may request and this Honourable Court deems just.

The grounds for the application are as follows:

A. Overview

1. The present Application challenges the illegality of the Canadian Transportation Agency's Statement, which purports to provide an unsolicited advance ruling in favour of air carriers without having heard the perspective of passengers beforehand.

2. The Statement and the COVID-19 Agency Page preemptively suggest that the Agency is leaning heavily towards permitting the issuance of vouchers in lieu of refunds. They further suggest that the Agency will very likely dismiss passengers' complaints to the Agency for air carriers' failure to refund during the COVID-19 pandemic, irrespective of the reason for flight cancellation.

3. Despite the Agency having already determined in a number of binding legal decisions throughout the years that passengers have a fundamental right to a refund in cases where the passengers could not travel for events outside of their control, the Agency now purports to grant air carriers a blanket immunity from the law via the Statement, without even first hearing passengers' submissions or perspective as to why a refund is mandated by law. This is inappropriate.

4. The Agency, as a quasi-judicial tribunal, must at all times act with impartiality. That impartiality, unfortunately, has clearly been lost, as demonstrated by the Agency's issuance of the unsolicited Statement and usage thereof.

5. The fundamental precept of our justice system is that "justice should not only be done, but should manifestly and undoubtedly be seen to be done" (R. v. Yumnu, 2012 SCC 73 at para. 39). This fundamental precept leaves no room for any exception, even during difficult times like the COVID-19 pandemic.

6. Impartiality is further emphasized in the Agency's own Code of Conduct stipulating that the appointed members of the Agency shall not express an opinion on potential cases.

B. The COVID-19 Pandemic

7. The coronavirus [COVID-19] is a highly contagious virus that originated from the province of Hubei in the Peoples Republic of China, and began spreading outside of the Peoples Republic of China on or around January 2020.

8. On or about March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization declared COVID-19 a global pandemic.

9. On or about March 13, 2020, the Government of Canada issued a blanket travel advisory against non-essential travel outside of Canada until further notice and restricting entry of foreign nationals into Canada, akin to a "declaration of war" against COVID-19, and that those in Canada should remain at home unless absolutely necessary to be outside of their homes [Declaration].

10. COVID-19 has disrupted air travel to, from, and within Canada. The disruption was brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic and/or the Declaration, such as:

    (a) closure of borders by a number of countries, resulting in cancellation of flights by air carriers;

    (b) passengers adhering strictly to government travel advisories (such as the Declaration) and refraining from air travel (and other forms of travel) unless absolutely necessary; and

    (c) air carriers cancelling flights on their own initiative to save costs, in anticipation of a decrease in demand for air travel.

C. The Agency's Actions in Relation to COVID-19, Including the "Statement on Vouchers"

11. Since March 13, 2020 and up to the date of filing this Application, the Agency has taken a number of steps in relation to COVID-19. Those listed in the four sub-paragraphs below are not the subject of review in this Application.

    (a) On March 13, 2020, the Agency issued Determination No. A-2020-42 providing, inter alia, that various obligations under the Air Passen- ger Protection Regulations, SOR/2019-150 [APPR] are suspended until April 30, 2020:

i. Compensation for Delays and Inconvenience for those that travel: compensation to passengers for inconvenience has been reduced and/or relaxed (an air carrier's obligation imposed under paragraphs 19(1)(a) and 19(1)(b) of the APPR);

ii. Compensation for Inconvenience to those that do not travel: the air carrier's obligation, under subsection 19(2) of the APPR to pay compensation for inconvenience to passengers who opted to obtain a refund instead of alternative travel arrangement, if the flight delay or the flight cancellation is communicated to passengers more than 72 hours before the departure time indicated on the passengers' original ticket; and

iii. Obligation to Rebook Passengers on Other Carriers: the air carrier's obligation, under paragraphs 17(1)(a)(ii), 17(1)(a)(iii), and 18(1)(a)(ii) of the APPR.

(b) On or about March 25, 2020, the Agency issued Determination No. A-2020-47 extending the exemptions under Decision No. A-2020-42 (above) to June 30, 2020. This Determination further exempted air carriers from responding to compensation requests within 30 days (s. 19(4) of APPR). Instead, air carriers would be permitted to respond to compensation requests 120 days after June 30, 2020 (e.g. October 28, 2020).

(c) On or about March 18, 2020, the Agency issued Order No. 2020-A-32, suspending all dispute proceedings until April 30, 2020.

(d) On or about March 25, 2020, the Agency issued Order No. 2020-A-37, extending the suspension (above) to June 30, 2020.

12. On or about March 25, 2020, almost concurrently with the Order and Determination on the same date (above), the Agency publicly posted the Statement on its website (French: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/fra/message-concernant-credits; En- glish: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers) providing that:

> The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.
>
> For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.
>
> The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.
>
> On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.
>
> While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).
>
> The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

13. On or about March 25, 2020, concurrently with the Statement, the Agency posted an amendment to the COVID-19 Agency Page on its website, adding four references to the Statement (French: Information importante pour les voyageurs pour la periode de la COVID-19 [https://otc-cta.gc.ca/fra/informationimportante-pour-voyageurs-pour-periode-covid-19]; English: Important Information for Travellers During COVID-19 [https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/important-information-travellers-during-covid-19]).

14. The COVID-19 Agency Page cites and purports to apply the Statement in the context of an air carrier's legal obligation in three circumstances: (1) situations outside airline control (including COVID-19 situations); (2) situations within airline control; and (3) situations within airline control, but required for safety.

15. In effect, the COVID-19 Agency Page purports to have relieved air carriers from providing passengers with refunds in practically every imaginable scenario for cancellation of flight(s), contrary to the Agency's own jurisprudence and the minimum passenger protections under the APPR.

D. Jurisprudence on Refunds for Passengers

16. Since 2004, in a number of decisions, the Agency confirmed passengers' fundamental right to a refund when, for whatever reason, an air carrier is unable to provide the air transportation, including those outside of the air carrier's control:

(a) Re: Air Transat, Decision No. 28-A-2004;
(b) Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013, para. 88;
(c) Lukács v. Sunwing, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013, para. 15; and
(d) Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014, paras. 33 and 137.

17. The Agency's jurisprudence was entirely consistent with the common law doctrine of frustration, the civil law doctrine of force majeure, and, most importantly, common sense.

18. The APPR, which has been in force since 2019, merely provides minimum protection to passengers. The APPR does not negate or overrule the passengers' fundamental right to a refund for cancellations in situations outside of a carrier's control.

19. Furthermore, the COVID-19 Agency Page also suggests that the Statement would apply to cancellations that are within airline control, or within airline control but required for safety purposes, squarely contradicting the provisions of subsection 17(7) of the APPR. Subsection 17(7) clearly mandates that any refund be in the original form of payment, leaving no room for the novel idea of issuing a voucher or credit.

20. Finally, whether an air carrier's flight cancellation could be characterized as outside their control, or within their control, remains to be seen. For example, if a cancellation was to save costs in light of shrinking demand, it may be considered a situation within an air carrier's control. However, the Statement and the COVID-19 Agency Page presuppose that any and all cancellations at this time should be considered outside an air carrier's control.

21. The combined effect of the Statement and the COVID-19 Agency Page purports to ignore decade old and firmly established jurisprudence of the Agency. This all occurred without any formal hearing, adjudication, determination, or otherwise, or even a single legal submission or input from the passengers.

22. As described further below, the Agency does not even outline its legal basis or provide any support for those public statements.

23. The Agency's public statements are tantamount to endorsing air carriers in illegally withholding the passengers' monies, all without having to provide the services that were contracted for. The air carriers all seek to then issue vouchers with varying expiry dates and usage conditions to every passenger, effectively depriving all the passengers of their fundamental right to a refund, which is a right the Agency itself firmly recognized.

E. The Agency's Conduct Gives Rise to a Reasonable Apprehension of Bias

24. The Agency is a quasi-judicial tribunal that is subject to the same rules of impartiality that apply to courts and judges of the courts.

25. Tribunals, like courts, speak through their legal judgments and not media postings or "statements."

26. The Statement and/or the COVID-19 Agency Page is not a legal judgment. They give an informed member of the public the perception that it would be more likely than not that the Agency, or the members that supported the Statement, will not be able to fairly decide the issue of refunds relating to COVID-19.

27. The Agency has already stipulated a general rule, outside the context of a legal judgment, that refunds need not be provided. No support was provided for this radical departure from the fundamental rights of passengers. The Agency merely provided a bald assertion or conclusion that passengers are not entitled to any refund.

28. The Agency's own Code of Conduct expressly prohibits members of the Agency from expressing an opinion about potential cases or any other issue related to the Agency's work, or comments that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias:

> (40) Members shall not publicly express an opinion about any past, current, or potential cases or any other issue related to the work of the Agency, and shall refrain from comments or discussions in public or otherwise that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

29. Although neither the Statement, nor the COVID-19 Agency Page, contain the signature or names of any specific member of the Agency, given the circumstances and considering the Agency's own Code of Conduct providing that the professional civilian staff's role are to fully implement the appointed member(s)' directions, the Statement and the COVID-19 Agency Page ought to be attributed to the member(s) who supported the Statement either before or after its posting on the internet.

30. In these circumstances, the Court must proactively step in to protect the passengers, to ensure that "justice should not only be done, but should manifestly and undoubtedly be seen to be done," and to ensure that the administration of justice is not put to disrepute.

31. The Court ought to issue an interim, interlocutory, and/or permanent order restricting the Agency's involvement with passengers' COVID-19 related refunds against air carriers.

F. The Applicant

32. The Applicant is a non-profit corporation under the Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act, SC 2009 that is an advocacy group representing the rights of air passengers.

33. Air Passenger Rights is led by a Canadian air passenger rights advocate, Dr. Gábor Lukács, whose work and public interest litigation has been recognized by this Honourable Court in a number of judgments:

(a) International Air Transport Assn et al. v. AGC et al. (Federal Court of Appeal File No. A-311-19, Order of Near J.A., dated March 3, 2020) that:

> [...] the Court is of the view that the case engages the public interest, that the proposed intervener [Dr. Gábor Lukács] would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties [the Agency, the Attorney General of Canada, and an airlines trade association] cannot, that the interests of justice favour allowing the proposed intervention in the appeal, and that the proposed intervention would be of assistance to the Court in deciding the appeal [...]

(b) Lukács v. Canada (Transportation Agency) 2016 FCA 174 at para. 6;

(c) Lukács v. Canada (Transport, Infrastructure and Communities), 2015 FCA 269 at para. 43;

(d) Lukács v. Canada (Transport, Infrastructure and Communities), 2015 FCA 140 at para. 1; and

(e) Lukács v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2014 FCA 76 at para. 62.

G. Statutory provisions

34. The Applicant will also rely on the following statutory provisions:

(a) Canada Transportation Act, S.C. 1996, c. 10 and, in particular, sections

25, 37, and 85.1;

(b) Federal Courts Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. F-7, and in particular, sections 18.1, 18.2, 28, and 44; and

(c) Federal Courts Rules, S.O.R./98-106, and in particular, Rules 300, 369, and 372-374; and

35. Such further and other grounds as counsel may advise and this Honourable Court permits.

This application will be supported by the following material:

1. Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács, to be served.

2. Such further and additional materials as the Applicant may advise and this Honourable Court may allow.

The Applicant requests the Canadian Transportation Agency to send a certified copy of the following material that is not in the possession of the Applicant but is in the possession of the Canadian Transportation Agency to the Registry and to the Applicant:

1. Complete and unredacted copies of all correspondences, meetings, notes, and/or documents involving the appointed members of the Agency relating to the Statement and/or issuance of vouchers or credits in relation to the COVID-19 incident, including both before and after publication of the Statement;

2. The number of times the URLs for the Statements were accessed (French: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/fra/message-concernant-credits; English: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers) from March 24, 2020 onward;

3. Complete and unredacted copies of all correspondences, meetings, notes, and/or documents between the Canadian Transportation Agency and the travel industry (including but not limited to any travel agencies, commercial airlines, industry groups, etc.) from February 15, 2020 to the present in respect to issuing of credits, coupons, or vouchers to passengers in lieu of a refund for travel affected by COVID-19; and

4. Complete and unredacted copies of all correspondences, e-mails, and/or complaints that the Agency received from passengers between February 15, 2020 to the present in respect to issuing of credits, coupons, or vouchers to passengers in lieu of a refund for travel affected by COVID-19.

April 6, 2020

"Simon Lin"

SIMON LIN
Evolink Law Group
4388 Still Creek Drive, Suite 237
Burnaby, British Columbia, V5C 6C6

Tel: 604-620-2666
Fax: 888-509-8168

simonlin@evolinklaw.com

Counsel for the Applicant,
Air Passenger Rights

Court File No.: A-102-20

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

BETWEEN:

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS

Applicant

– and –

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondent

– and –

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Intervener

AFFIDAVIT OF DR. GÁBOR LUKÁCS
(Affirmed: September 7, 2023)

I, DR. GÁBOR LUKÁCS, of the City of Halifax in the Province of Nova Scotia, AFFIRM THAT:

1. I am the founder, a director, and the President of the Applicant, Air Passenger Rights. As such, I have personal knowledge of the matters to which I depose, except as to those matters stated to be on information and belief, which I believe to be true.

A. The Applicant: Air Passenger Rights

2. Air Passenger Rights [APR] is a non-profit organization, formed under the Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act, SC 2009 on or about May 2019, to expand and continue the air passenger advocacy work that I have initiated in my personal capacity for the last fifteen years. Details of APR's and my air passenger advocacy work are described below.

3. Since 2008, I have been volunteering my personal time as an air passenger rights advocate, using my knowledge and expertise on air travel, for the benefit of the travelling public, specifically air passengers. Since around 2012, my public interest advocacy work has been conducted under the banner "Air Passenger Rights," which was later formalized as a not-for-profit entity in May 2019, as described above. The non-profit entity APR continued the public interest advocacy work that I was conducting under the "Air Passenger Rights" banner.

4. A copy of APR's articles of incorporation are attached and marked as Exhibit "1". Within said articles of incorporation, the purpose of APR is declared as:

> 1. To educate air passengers and the public at large as to their rights and the means for the enforcement of these rights, by researching and making available the results of such research on the matter of the law relating to air passenger rights on domestic and international flights.
>
> 2. To act as a liaison between other public interest or citizens' groups engaged in public interest advocacy.
>
> 3. To assist in and promote the activity of public interest group representation throughout Canada and elsewhere.
>
> 4. To make representations to governing authorities on behalf of the public at large and on behalf of public interest groups with respect to matters of public concern and interest with respect to air passenger rights, and to teach public interest advocacy skills and techniques.

5. APR's mandate is to engage in public interest advocacy for the travelling public, continuing most of the four pillars of public interest advocacy work that I had previously performed under the banner "Air Passenger Rights," consisting of:

(a) Enforcing Air Passenger Protections: filing regulatory complaints with the Canadian Transportation Agency [CTA] to enforce the airlines' obligations under the laws or the airlines' tariffs, or initiating or intervening in judicial proceedings regarding airlines' obligations to passengers.

(b) Advocating for Stronger Passenger Protections: participating in consultations, and attending Parliamentary committees to give evidence to assist Parliament in strengthening protections for air passengers.

(c) Sharing Information on Passenger Rights: offering a platform for passengers to obtain information and share their travel woes.

(d) Assisting Passengers in Enforcing Their Legal Rights: assisting passengers pro bono by providing information and, for precedent setting matters, assisting passengers in court as permitted by the applicable rules.

6. I actively lead or supervise all of APR's work. APR operates on a non-profit basis and its directors, including myself, do not receive remuneration other than reimbursement for reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of duties.

7. APR does not expect any remuneration for its public interest advocacy work. APR's only source of funding is small donations from a small number of passengers that appreciate APR's work or the work I performed through APR.

8. A small group of volunteers assist with APR's work, including managing APR's Facebook Group, as detailed further below.

9. For this judicial review, APR is represented by Mr. Simon Lin, who is also a director of APR. Since the commencement of this application for judicial review, Mr. Lin's legal services in this matter have been, and is being, provided on a pro bono basis. APR's board of directors has agreed that any costs awarded to APR in this judicial review application would be assigned to Mr. Lin's law office, less any disbursements that APR incurred. Mr. Lin did not take part in this board decision.

10. The fact that Mr. Lin is acting on a pro bono basis for APR on this judicial review was already disclosed in paragraph 78 of my April 7, 2020 affidavit in this proceeding, which was served on the CTA on or about April 9, 2020.

11. For greater clarity, I am providing the above information regarding APR's retainer with Mr. Lin for the purpose of supporting APR's submissions on costs only, and should not be construed as a waiver of any applicable privilege, including solicitor-client privilege and/or litigation privilege.

B. The Four Pillars of Air Passenger Rights' Public Interest Advocacy Work

12. Below I describe the four pillars of public interest advocacy work that I conducted under the banner "Air Passenger Rights," and then continued by the non-profit entity APR.

(i) Enforcing the Existing Air Passenger Protections

13. Prior to forming the non-profit organization Air Passenger Rights, I filed more than two dozen successful regulatory complaints with the CTA in my personal capacity. These complaints resulted in airlines being ordered to amend their terms and conditions and/or their websites and/or their signage, and to offer better protection to passengers. An excerpt from a 2017 brief, summarizing my activities, is attached and marked as Exhibit "2".

14. On the topic of refunds owed to passengers when airlines cancel flights, I initiated three regulatory complaints before the CTA that resulted in three decisions in 2013 and 2014, where the CTA confirmed passengers' longstanding fundamental right to a refund, even if a cancellation was outside an airlines' control:

    (a) The CTA decision from Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines Inc., bearing number 313-C-A-2013, is attached and marked as Exhibit "3". This decision has also been filed in the Federal Court as T-476-20. This CTA decision discusses the fundamental right to a refund at paragraph 15 as follows:

> [15] In terms of passengers' right to refunds, in Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the fundamental right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

(b) The CTA's decision from Lukács v. Porter Airlines Inc., bearing number 344-C-A-2013, is attached and marked as Exhibit "4". This decision has also been filed in the Federal Court as T-475-20. This CTA decision discusses the right to a refund at paragraphs 83 and 88 as follows:

> [83] In this regard, Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 28-A-2004 (Air Transat), the Agency considered in great detail the rights of passengers for protection in the case of events that are beyond the passengers' control:
>
> > By Decision No. LET-A-166-2003 dated August 7, 2003 [...] the Agency advised Air Transat that Rule 6.3 of its tariff was not just and reasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR, in that it does not provide adequate options to passengers affected by a schedule irregularity, and does not protect passengers from events that are beyond the passengers' control, and, therefore, does not allow passengers any recourse if they are unable to connect to other air carriers or alternate modes of transportation such as cruise ships or trains.
>
> [...]
>
> Analysis and findings
>
> [...]
>
> [88] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács, and finds that it is unreasonable for Porter to refuse to refund the > fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond Porter's control.

>
> [Emphasis added.]

(c) The CTA decision from Lukács v. Porter Airlines Inc., bearing number 31-C-A-2014, is attached and marked as Exhibit "5". This decision has also been filed in the Federal Court as T-477-20. This CTA decision discusses the right to a refund at paragraph 137 as follows:

> Analysis and findings
>
> [137] As for reasonableness, Mr. Lukács correctly notes that passengers are entitled to reprotection or a refund, irrespective of the reason for their inability to travel, as long as the passengers are not responsible for it. In Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time. Taking "all reasonable measures" does not relieve Porter from its obligation to refund passengers for the unused portions of their tickets or reprotect passengers affected by flight cancellation, denied boarding or flight advancement. If it was Porter's intent under Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) not to reprotect or refund for unused portions of tickets, employing the "all reasonable measures" defense, Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

15. For greater certainty, before the three aforementioned CTA decisions, the fundamental right to a refund was already stated in the CTA's 2004 decision in Re: Air Transat, bearing number 28-A-2004, a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "6". This decision is referred to in some of the cited passages above.

16. A decade ago, on September 4, 2013, the Consumers' Association of Canada recognized my achievements in the area of air passenger rights by awarding me its Order of Merit for "singlehandedly initiating Legal Action resulting in revision of Air Canada unfair practices regarding Over Booking."

17. In a 2013 review article on aviation law in Canada, a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "7", Mr. Carlos Martins, now a partner at WeirFoulds LLP, described my advocacy as follows:

> In the consumer protection landscape, for the last several years, the field has largely been occupied by Gabor Lukács, a Canadian mathematician who has taken an interest in challenging various aspects of the tariffs filed by air carriers with the regulator, the Canadian Transportation Agency (the Agency). The majority of Mr Lukács' complaints centre on the clarity and reasonableness of the content of the filed tariffs, as well as the extent to which air carriers are applying their tariffs, as filed, in the ordinary course of business.
>
> Mr Lukács' efforts have created a significant body of jurisprudence from the Agency - to the extent that his more recent decisions often rely heavily upon principles enunciated in previous complaints launched by him.

18. In addition, I have successfully challenged, in the public interest, the legality of the CTA's actions on a number of occasions before this Honourable Court:

(a) Lukács v. Canada (Transport, Infrastructure and Communities), 2015 FCA 140, relating to the open court principle in proceedings before the Canadian Transportation Agency;

(b) Lukács v. Canada (Canadian Transportation Agency), 2015 FCA 269, relating to denied boarding compensation; and

(c) Lukács v. Canada (Canadian Transportation Agency), 2016 FCA 220, relating to standing to bring a complaint about discrimination against large passengers without being personally affected.

19. In Lukács v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2016 FCA 174, at paragraph 6, the Federal Court of Appeal recognized my genuine interest in air passenger rights and the legality of the CTA's decisions and actions, and granted me both leave to appeal and public interest standing on that basis.

20. In October 2017, I appeared before the Supreme Court of Canada. The court's judgment was delivered on January 19, 2018, and is indexed as Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2. The appeal arose from the CTA's refusal to consider my regulatory complaint against Delta Airlines for discriminating against large passengers. The CTA initially refused to consider my complaint on the basis that I was not directly affected (i.e., I was not a large passenger).

21. In Lukács v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2019 FC 1148, at paragraphs 46 and 50, the Federal Court recognized my reputation, continued interest, and expertise in advocating for passenger rights. The judicial review involved the CTA giving Air Transat "credit" against a regulatory penalty by paying the equivalent as compensation to passengers. This matter is ongoing.

22. In March 2020, this Honourable Court granted leave for me to intervene in the appeal of the International Air Transport Association and a number of airlines against certain provisions of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations [APPR] in File No. A-311-19. This Honourable Court found that:

> [...] the Court is of the view that the case engages the public interest, that the proposed intervener would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties cannot, that the interests of justice favour allowing the proposed intervention in the appeal, and that the proposed intervention would be of assistance to the Court in deciding the appeal;
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of this Court's Order is attached and marked as Exhibit "8".

(ii) Advocating for Stronger Air Passenger Protections

23. Over the past decade, both in my personal capacity under the banner "Air Passenger Rights" and in my capacity as President for APR, I have been advocating for stronger air passenger protections before:

(a) Parliament, including giving evidence and making submissions at the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities [TRAN Committee], the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications [Senate TCRM Committee], and the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance [FINA Committee]; and

(b) the CTA, as a stakeholder, in consultations.

Involvement in the Transportation Modernization Act and Updates Thereof

24. In September 2017 and March 2018, by invitation, I testified before the TRAN Committee and the Senate TCRM Committee, respectively, regarding the Transportation Modernization Act. The Transportation Modernization Act created the legislative framework for the APPR.

25. The CTA also recognized me as a stakeholder in the consultation process leading to the development of the APPR and I participated in the CTA's consultations described below. These bilateral consultation sessions were organized only for those whom the CTA identified as "stakeholders," and were distinct and separate from the CTA's town hall meetings for the general public.

(a) In June 2018, I had a 2-hour bilateral consultation session with officials from the CTA.

(b) In August 2018, I submitted a 26-page brief to the CTA with respect to the APPR.

(c) In January 2019, after the proposed APPR were prepublished in Canada Gazette Part I, I had a 1.5-hour bilateral consultation session with officials from the CTA.

(d) In February 2019, I submitted a 52-page brief to the CTA with respect to the proposed APPR. A copy of the brief is attached and marked as Exhibit "9".

26. The 52-page brief that was submitted to the CTA in February 2019 (Exhibit "9") highlighted the concern that the APPR did not consolidate the right to a refund for unused tickets in events that are outside an airline's control—a right that has long been recognized in the CTA's jurisprudence—and it would give passengers a false impression about their rights if they only look at the APPR. The relevant section is on pages 42-44 of the brief.

27. Shortly after the COVID-19 pandemic began, on October 29, 2020, the TRAN Committee adopted a motion to initiate a study entitled "Impact of COVID-19 on the Aviation Sector." The study consisted of twelve (12) meetings between December 1, 2020 and June 8, 2021.

(a) On December 8, 2020, I testified before the TRAN Committee by invitation in my capacity as President of APR on the topic of airlines' failure to provide refunds to passengers, and other related topics.

(b) After the testimony at the TRAN Committee, in or around February 2021, APR also submitted a written brief to the TRAN Committee, a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "10".

28. On June 16, 2021, the TRAN Committee released its report entitled "Emerging from the Crisis: A Study of the Impact of the COVID-19 Pandemic on the Air Transport Sector," a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "11".

Within this report, the TRAN Committee made numerous recommendations, including some that specifically relate to refunds for passengers:

(a) Recommendation 20: that the Government of Canada amend the APPR and its enabling legislation to "make explicit passengers' pre-existing right to receive reimbursement in circumstances where the airlines are unable to complete the client's itinerary in a reasonable period of time, even in cases beyond the control of the airlines." [emphasis added]

(b) Recommendation 21: that the Canadian Transportation Agency be required to explain the measures it takes to prevent regulatory capture.

(c) Recommendation 22: that the Government of Canada expressly recognize the fundamental right to a refund that is found outside of the APPR.

29. In addition to the aforementioned appearances before Parliamentary committees, I also appeared at Parliamentary committees as a witness in my capacity as APR's President on the following instances:

(a) On November 21, 2022 and January 26, 2023, I appeared before the House of Commons TRAN Committee to speak about rights for air passengers. In or around December 2022, APR also submitted a brief to the House of Commons TRAN Committee, a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "12".

(b) On May 16, 2023, I appeared before the Senate TRCM Committee to speak about rights for air passengers, specifically the omnibus budget bill that included some changes to the APPR and the Canada Transportation Act. Before testifying at the Senate TRCM Committee on May 16, 2023, APR also submitted a brief to the Senate TRCM Committee, a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "13".

(c) On May 18, 2023, I appeared before the FINA Committee regarding the same omnibus budget bill described in the above subparagraph. Before giving the testimony before the FINA Committee on May 18, 2023, APR also submitted a brief to the FINA Committee, which is substantially identical to the brief submitted to the Senate TRCM Committee (above).

Involvement with Accessibility Initiatives for Air Passengers

30. In addition to the APPR, I have also been involved with initiatives to enhance accessibility for passengers that require accommodation, all under the "Air Passenger Rights" banner.

31. In October 2018, I filed a brief to the House of Commons' Standing Committee on Human Resources, Skills and Social Development and the Status of Persons with Disabilities about the Act to ensure a barrier-free Canada (Bill C-81).

32. In April 2019, I submitted a brief to the CTA about the draft Accessible Transportation for Persons with Disabilities Regulations that were prepublished in Canada Gazette Part I.

33. In April 2019, I submitted a brief to the Standing Senate Committee on Social Affairs, Science, and Technology with respect to the Act to ensure a barrier-free Canada (Bill C-81).

34. In February 2020, I submitted a brief to the Agency about phase 2 of the Accessible Transportation for Persons with Disabilities Regulations.

(iii) Sharing Information on Passenger Rights

35. In October 2018, I delivered two invited lectures at McGill University Faculty of Law's Institute of Air and Space Law under the banner "Air Passenger Rights" on the topic of air passenger rights.

36. APR promotes the rights of air passengers by referring passengers mistreated by airlines to legal information and resources through the press, social media, and the AirPassengerRights.ca website.

37. APR also has a Facebook group, entitled "Air Passenger Rights (Canada)," which has more than 133,200 members as of August 28, 2023 [APR Facebook Group]. In April 2020, there were approximately 23,700 members on the APR Facebook Group. The APR Facebook Group is a public group. While only members of the APR Facebook Group can post in that group, anyone can see the posts made by members of the APR Facebook Group.

38. The APR Facebook Group is a platform for members to share their concerns regarding air travel and passenger rights, and to discuss their issues and concerns with other passengers. Volunteers, including myself, answer some of the queries submitted by members of the APR Facebook Group.

(iv) Assisting Passengers in Enforcing Their Legal Rights

39. In addition to the three aforementioned pillars, I also provide, in my personal capacity, pro bono assistance to passengers in their disputes with airlines to the extent that I am permitted to do so by law. For example:

(a) In Lachance v. Air Canada, 2014 NSSM 14, I assisted a passenger in obtaining a judgment requiring Air Canada to compensate the passenger, who had been bumped.

(b) Since 2015, I have been assisting and representing Ms. Nayla Farah and Ms. Amal Haddad of Toronto, Ontario, who were harassed and discriminated against by airline crew due to their visual impairment and reliance on the assistance of Seeing Eye service dogs. In October 2018, the Canadian Human Rights Commission decided to refer the case to the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal for an inquiry.

(c) In Paine v. Air Canada, 2018 NSSC 215, I was granted permission to represent passengers in an appeal before the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia in a case relating to denied boarding compensation.

(d) In Geddes v. Air Canada, 2021 NSSM 27, as permitted by Nova Scotia legislation, I acted as agent for a passenger seeking standardized compensation under the APPR. I continued to assist the passenger on appeal to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia and the reasons for judgment is indexed at Geddes v. Air Canada, 2022 NSSC 49.

40. APR itself does not represent or assist passengers in court. APR's mandate in that regard focuses on "educat[ing] air passengers and the public at large as to their rights and the means for the enforcement of these rights, by researching and making available the results of such research on the matter of the law relating to air passenger rights on domestic and international flights" (Exhibit "1").

C. Background Relating to the COVID-19 Pandemic and Air Travel

41. At the start of the COVID-19 pandemic in early March 2020, I observed that the APR Facebook Group had begun to regularly receive Facebook posts from members concerning disruption of their travel plans to countries that were heavily affected by COVID-19 during that time, such as the China and Italy.

42. On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization declared COVID-19 a pandemic, in a press release that is attached and marked as Exhibit "14".

43. On March 13, 2020, the Government of Canada issued an advisory advising those within Canada to avoid non-essential travel abroad, and those abroad to consider returning to Canada earlier as options were becoming more limited. A copy of the news release issued by Global Affairs Canada is attached and marked as Exhibit "15".

44. At around the time of the Global Affairs Canada advisory above, the government of Canada began urging Canadians to stem the spread of COVID-19. A copy of a news report published by Reuters, which appeared in the National Post online on March 16, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "16".

(i) Canadian Air Carriers Suspend or Significantly Reduce Flights

45. On or around March 22, 2020, Air Canada announced the reduction of the frequency of and/or suspension of some of its flight schedules. A copy of Air Canada's Route Updates page published on March 22, 2020, showing many flights suspended up to April 30, 2020, as it was archived on March 23, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "17".

46. Air Canada subsequently expanded the suspension of many flights up to the end of May 2020. A copy of Air Canada's Route Updates page published on April 13, 2020, showing many flights suspended up to May 31, 2020, as it was archived on April 13, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "18".

47. On March 18, 2020, Air Transat announced that it was temporarily suspending flights until April 30, 2020. A copy of Air Transat's news release dated March 18, 2020 is attached and marked as Exhibit "19".

48. Air Transat subsequently expanded the suspension of flights up to the end of May 2020. A copy of Air Transat's "Coronavirus (COVID-19)" page, as it was archived on April 14, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "20".

49. Sunwing announced that it was temporarily suspending southbound flights between March 17, 2020 to April 30, 2020. A copy of Sunwing's COVID-19

Policies page as it was archived on March 21, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "21".

50. Sunwing later expanded the suspension of flights up to the end of May 2020. A copy of Sunwing's COVID-19 Policies page, as it was archived on April 14, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "22".

51. In a news release dated March 19, 2020, Swoop announced that it was suspending transborder and international flights until October 24, 2020. A copy of Swoop's news release is attached and marked as Exhibit "23".

52. On March 16, 2020, WestJet announced that it was suspending transborder and international flights as of March 22, 2020. A copy of WestJet's announcement is attached and marked as Exhibit "24".

53. WestJet subsequently expanded the suspension of flights up until June 4, 2020. A copy of WestJet's blog page is attached and marked as Exhibit "25".

54. For greater certainty, I am attaching these Canadian air carriers' suspension announcements solely as evidence of the air carriers' decision to cancel their flights en masse. I do not accept that each one of those cancellations were "situations outside carrier's control" within the meaning of s. 10 of the APPR.

(ii) Before the CTA's Statement on Vouchers was Drafted, Canadian Air Carriers Were Already Issuing Vouchers for Flights They Had Cancelled

55. In this subsection, I attach the announcements or webpages for major Canadian air carriers showing that they were already issuing vouchers instead of refunds for flights they cancelled, even before the CTA issued the March 25, 2020 Statement on Vouchers in Exhibit "36" further below.

56. On March 18, 2020, Air Canada sent an email to travel agents noting that credits that are valid for 24 months would be issued to customers whose flights were cancelled by Air Canada, and this was an amendment to Air Canada's existing schedule change policy:

> [...] Affected customers whose flights are cancelled will be able to receive a full credit, regardless of fare type, valid for 24 months. We will be providing you additional information shortly on how to process the 24-month validity. At this time, we ask that you refrain from actioning or refunding tickets affected by this schedule change.
>
> This new change in schedule change policy will take effect tomorrow March 19, 2020 for all schedule changes implemented as of tomorrow March 19, 2020. Kindly note, any schedule changes made by Air Canada prior to March 19, 2020 are covered by our standard Schedule Change policy, which includes the option for a full refund for all fare brands.
>
> [...]
>
> [Emphasis added in underline; original emphasis in bold.]

A copy of Air Canada's email to travel agents is attached and marked as Exhibit "26". The name and email address of the travel agent that received this email has been redacted to protect their identity.

57. On or before March 21, 2020, Air Canada announced that, for flights that Air Canada cancelled, passengers would receive a credit valid for 24 months instead of a refund in the original form of payment:

> My flight has been cancelled What should I do?
>
> If your flight has been cancelled, you will receive full credit, which you can use towards future travel. This credit is valid for travel within 24 months of your flight cancellation date.
>
> [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of Air Canada's COVID-19 Updates page, as it was archived on March 21, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "27".

58. On March 18, 2020, Air Transat announced that for flights that Air Transat cancelled, passengers would receive a credit valid for 24 months instead of a refund in the original form of payment:

> [...] All customers who were unable to travel because their flight is cancelled will receive a credit for future travel, to be used within 24 months of their original travel date.
>
> [...]

A copy of Air Transat's news release dated March 18, 2020 can be found in Exhibit "19".

59. On or before March 21, 2020, Sunwing announced that for flights that Sunwing cancelled, passengers would receive a credit valid for 24 months instead of a refund in the original form of payment:

> [...]
>
> Customers with departure dates for flights or vacation packages between March 17th and April 30th are eligible to receive a future travel credit in the value of the original amount paid. No action needed. Your original booking number will be the code of your future travel credit. We will communicate formally via the email address we have on file (including group travel bookings). You do not need to contact us.
>
> This credit can be redeemed against future travel for travel up to 24 months from original departure date to anywhere Sunwing Airlines operates.
>
> [...]

A copy of Sunwing's COVID-19 Policies page can be found in Exhibit "21".

60. On or before March 21, 2020, Swoop announced that for flights that Swoop cancelled, passengers would receive a credit valid for 24 months instead of a refund in the original form of payment:

> [...]
>
> Flight Refunds will be returned as a future travel credit in the form of a Swoop Credit, valid for 24 months. We are not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time,
>
> [...]
>
> Are you travelling to the U.S., Mexico, and/or Jamaica before May 31, 2020?
>
> - Log into Manage My Booking and cancel your flight reservation for a credit. For instructions on how, click here [...]

A copy of Swoop's "Making changes to your flight" page as it was archived on March 21, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "28". A copy of Swoop's "How to cancel for credit" page as it was archived on March 21, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "29". Swoop's "How to cancel for credit" page could be accessed by the URL show above from the "Making changes to your flight" page.

61. For greater certainty, I am only attaching Swoop's "Making changes to your flight" page to illustrate that Swoop was already issuing credits valid for 24 months on or before March 21, 2020. I do not accept, as complete or accurate, Swoop's representation at the bottom of the page that it should be up to passengers to cancel their own reservation. On March 19, 2020, Swoop already announced it was suspending all international flights (Exhibit "23").

62. On March 18, 2020, WestJet had communicated to travel agents that WestJet's existing cancellation policy would be "updated" to issue credits and that WestJet was "not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time." A copy of WestJet's email with the subject line "Updated cancellation policy" is attached and marked as Exhibit "30".

63. On or before March 21, 2020, WestJet announced that for flights that WestJet cancelled, passengers would receive a credit valid for 24 months instead of a refund in the original form of payment:

> Flight refunds will be returned as a future travel credit in the form of a Travel Bank, valid for 24 months. Vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, valid for 24 months. We are not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time.

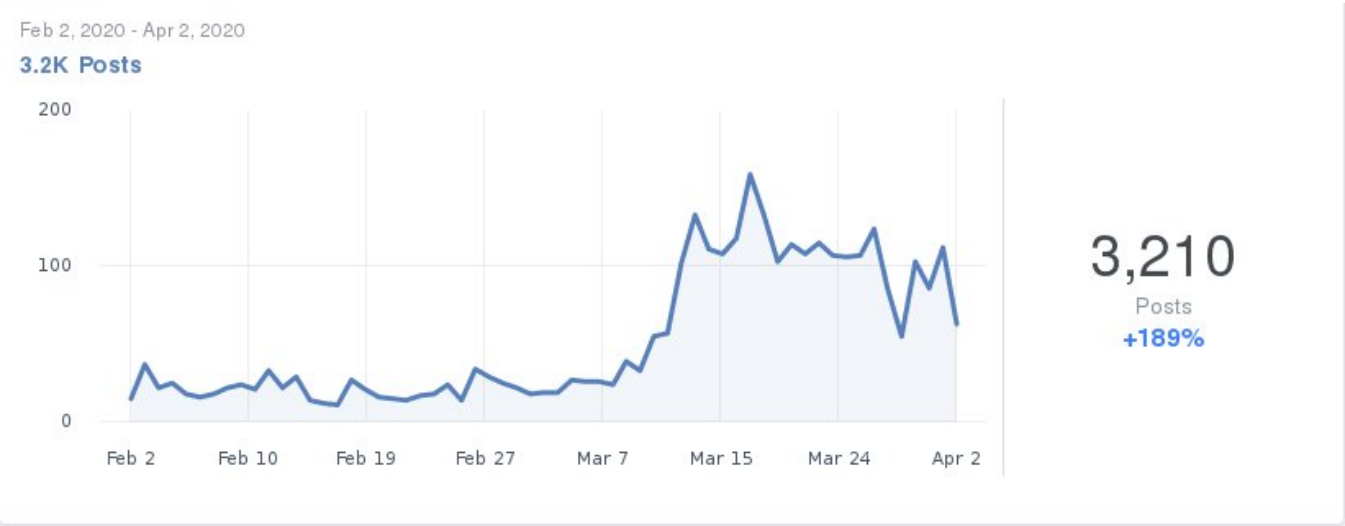
A copy of WestJet's "Coronavirus (COVID-19)" page as it was archived on March 21, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "31".

64. For greater certainty, I am only attaching WestJet's "Coronavirus (COVID-19)" page to illustrate that WestJet was already issuing credits valid for 24 months on or before March 21, 2020. I do not accept, as complete or accurate, WestJet's representation within the page that it should be up to passengers to cancel their own reservation. On March 16, 2020, WestJet already announced it was suspending all international flights (Exhibit "24").

(iii) COVID-19's Impact on APR Facebook Group Members

65. After the March 11 WHO announcement and the March 13 Global Affairs Canada advisory, internet traffic to the APR Facebook Group increased substantially, despite individuals refraining from air travel for a number of reasons. The majority of that increased traffic relates to members experiencing difficulties obtaining a full refund of unused or cancelled travel services, mostly air fare, in light of the COVID-19 pandemic.

66. During the period of February 2 to April 2, 2020, the daily number of new Facebook posts to the APR Facebook Group increased by 189%, to 3,210 posts for the entire period. The graph generated by Facebook is reproduced below.



67. During the same time period, the daily number of comments to the new Facebook posts (above) increased by 196%, to 53,205 for the entire period. The graph generated by Facebook is reproduced below.

68. During the same time period, the APR Facebook Group increased from approximately 15,700 members to 23,709 members on or about April 7, 2020. The graph generated by Facebook is reproduced below.

69. Based on my ongoing and daily involvement with assisting members on the APR Facebook Group, I observed that those members' air travels had been disrupted by the COVID-19 pandemic, starting from mid-March 2020, in at least the following ways:

(a) members could no longer travel to some countries by air, such as France and Italy, because those countries closed their borders to foreign nationals;

(b) members adhering to the government travel advisories or health warnings decided to cancel their air travel plans; and/or

(c) airlines, including those that travel to, from, and within Canada, cancelled some or all of their flights due to low or no demand.

D. The CTA's Lawful Actions in Response to COVID-19

70. Since March 13, 2020 and up to around April 7, 2020, the CTA issued some formal orders or determinations relating to COVID-19, which are summarized below, and are not the subject of challenge on this judicial review application.

(i) Exemptions for the APPR Minimum Compensation and Rebooking

71. On March 13, 2020, the CTA issued Determination No. A-2020-42, suspending and/or relaxing some of the air carriers' obligation to pay minimum compensation to passengers and the obligation to rebook passengers, under the APPR, until April 30, 2020. A copy of Determination No. A-2020-42 is attached and marked as Exhibit "32".

72. On March 25, 2020, the CTA issued Determination No. A-2020-47, extending the exemptions under Decision No. A-2020-42 (Exhibit "32") to June 30, 2020, and further allowing air carriers to respond to passenger compensation requests within 120 days after June 30, 2020, instead of the usual 30 days after receipt. A copy of Determination A-2020-47 is attached and marked as Exhibit "33".

(ii) Suspension of All Existing and New Passenger Dispute Resolutions

73. On March 18, 2020, the CTA issued Order No. 2020-A-32, suspending all of the CTA's new and existing dispute resolution activities, including passenger complaints, until April 30, 2020. A copy of Order No. 2020-A-32 is attached and marked as Exhibit "34".

74. On March 25, 2020, the CTA issued Order No. 2020-A-37, extending the suspension of all passenger dispute resolution activities to June 30, 2020. A copy of Order No. 2020-A-37 is attached and marked as Exhibit "35".

E. The CTA's Publications that are Impugned on this Judicial Review

(i) The CTA's Statement on Vouchers

75. On March 25, 2020, at approximately the same time as the formal orders and determinations of the CTA on March 25, 2020 (Exhibits "33" and "35") were posted online, the CTA also posted a "Statement on Vouchers" [Statement on Vouchers] on its website.

76. The Statement on Vouchers did not state if it was approved by any of the CTA's appointed Members. The contents of the Statement on Vouchers are excerpted in full below.

> The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.
>
> For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.
>
> The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.
>
> On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.
>
> While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, > an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

>
> The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

The English version of the Statement is attached and marked as Exhibit "36".

(ii) The CTA's COVID-19 Page citing the Statement on Vouchers

77. On March 18, 2020, before the aforementioned Statement on Vouchers was published, the CTA posted on its website a page dedicated to COVID-19 matters [COVID-19 Page].

78. On March 25, 2020 at approximately the same time as the posting of the Statement on Vouchers, the COVID-19 Page was updated to include four references to the Statement on Vouchers with a URL linking to the Statement on Vouchers for all three defined scenarios in the APPR, namely: (a) situations outside the carrier's control; (b) situations within carrier's control that are not required for safety purposes; and (c) situations within carrier's control, but required for safety purposes.

> Air Passenger Protection Obligations During COVID-19 Pandemic
>
> [...]
>
> In addition to the APPR, carriers must also follow their tariffs. In light of the COVID-19 Pandemic, CTA has issued a Statement on Vouchers.
>
> Delays and Cancellations
>
> [...]

The CTA has identified a number of situations related to the COVID-19 pandemic that are considered outside the airline's control. These include:

- flight disruptions to locations that are covered by a government advisory against travel or unnecessary travel due to COVID-19;
- employee quarantine or self-isolation due to COVID-19; and
- additional hygiene or passenger health screening processes put in place due to COVID-19.

Airlines may make decisions to cancel or delay flights for other reasons. Whether these situations are within or outside the airline's control would have to be assessed on a case-by-case basis.

Airline obligations

[...]

Situations outside airline control (including COVID-19 related situations mentioned above)

In these situations, airlines must:

- Rebook passengers [...]
  - Please refer to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers.

  [...]

Situations within airline control

In these situations, airlines must:

- Rebook passengers [...]
  - Please refer to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers.

  [...]

Situations within airline control, but required for safety

In these situations, airlines must:

- Rebook passengers [...]
  - Please refer to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers.

  [...]

A copy of the English version of the COVID-19 Agency Page, entitled "Important Information for Travellers During COVID-19," is attached and marked as Exhibit "37".

F. The CTA's Organizational Structure and Composition

79. A copy of the CTA's organizational chart, retrieved from the CTA's website on December 22, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "38".

80. A copy of the CTA's "Organization and mandate" page, which includes a list of the CTA's members, as it was archived on March 30, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "39".

81. The Code of Conduct of Members of the Agency [Code of Conduct] provides under the heading "Interactions with non-Agency individuals and organizations," in part, that:

> (39) Members shall not communicate with political actors or officials of other federal departments and agencies, provincial or foreign governments, or international organizations regarding a matter that is, was, or could be before the Agency.
>
> (40) Members shall not publicly express an opinion about any past, current, or potential cases or any other issue related to the work of the Agency, and shall refrain from comments or discussions in public or otherwise that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias.

A copy of the CTA's Code of Conduct is attached and marked as Exhibit "40".

82. At the time the Statement on Vouchers was published, the CTA's Members consisted of the following individuals, as outlined in Exhibit "39":

(a) Scott Streiner, Chairperson and CEO

(b) Elizabeth C. Barker (also known as Liz Barker), Vice-Chair

(c) William G. McMurray
(d) Mark MacKeigan, Member
(e) Mary Tobin Oates, Member
(f) Heather Smith, Member
(g) Gerald Dickie, Temporary Member
(h) Lenore Duff, Temporary Member

83. A copy of the CTA's "Organization and mandate" page, which includes a list of the CTA's members, printed on September 4, 2023, is attached and marked as Exhibit "41". The CTA did not update the "Date Modified" at the bottom of the "Organization and mandate" page, which continued to read as "2019-05-02," although Ms. France Pégeot was appointed as Chair and CEO of the CTA on June 1, 2021.

84. As of September 4, 2023, five of the CTA Members above are still in their position as CTA Members:

(a) Elizabeth C. Barker (also known as Liz Barker), Vice-Chair
(b) Mark MacKeigan, Member
(c) Mary Tobin Oates, Member
(d) Heather Smith, Member
(e) Lenore Duff, Temporary Member

85. For greater certainty, I am attaching Exhibits "39," "40," and "41" only for the purpose of placing before the Court the list of the CTA's appointed Members from March 30, 2020, the current list of the CTA's appointed Members, and the CTA's Code of Conduct, respectively. I do not agree with, nor accept, any other content within those documents as correctly reflecting the CTA's mandate under the Canada Transportation Act.

G. The CTA's Behind the Scenes Drafting of the Statement on Vouchers

86. Since publishing the Statement on Vouchers, the CTA has been nontransparent and unresponsive as to what occurred behind the scenes leading up to the CTA drafting and publishing the Statement on Vouchers, including who approved it.

87. In this section, I attach the pertinent documents that were disclosed by the CTA and/or Transport Canada [TC], in response to the Court's disclosure Orders or subpoenas, after this judicial review application was commenced.

(i) March 18, 2020: Transport Canada Sent Encrypted Email to the CTA

88. On March 18, 2020 at 2:57 p.m., Mr. Colin Stacey, the Director General of Air Policy at Transport Canada, sent an email to Ms. Marcia Jones, the then Chief Strategy Officer at the CTA [Transport Canada Encrypted Email], a copy of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "42", and is excerpted below:

> Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat
>
> Hi Marcia,
>
> Air Transat are telling us that they are getting pressure from creditors who are pushing on the airlines for cash. They will request that we officially let them to provide vouchers to passengers instead of providing them cash because they literally do not have enough cash to give refunds.
>
> Have you heard anything about this? Are you available to discuss?
>
> Thanks,
>
> cs
>
> [Emphasis added.]

89. Ms. Jones's 5:28 p.m. reply to the Transport Canada Encrypted Email indicates that the Transport Canada Encrypted email (Exhibit "42") was indeed encrypted:

> Hi Colin,
>
> I am sending this unencryped as our remote network access is patchy and we are not able to open encrypted emails on our Samsungs at the Agency.
>
> I would note that for situations outside of the carrier's control, no refunds are required under the APPR. As you know, the Agency issued a determination on Friday to clarify some situations flowing from COVID-19 that are considered to be in that category.
>
> I would assume that writ large this situation is outside of the carrier's control.
>
> If a flight cancellation is within the carrier's control, or within the carrier's control but required for safety, a refund is required and a voucher would not be compliant. Again, this does not seem to be relevant here.
>
> Looping in Cait in case she has anything to add.
>
> I hope this is helpful.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Marcia
>
> [Emphasis added.]

90. In response to the Court's disclosure Orders, the CTA was unable to locate the original Transport Canada Encrypted Email, but only a subsequent response to it. In response to this Court's subpoena, Transport Canada was also unable to produce the original Transport Canada Encrypted Email. A copy of Transport Canada's letter, dated June 8, 2023, is attached and marked as Exhibit "43".

(ii) March 18-20, 2020: CTA-TC Side Exchange after the Transport Canada Encrypted Email

91. After the Transport Canada Encrypted Email was sent to the CTA, Mr. Vincent Millette of Transport Canada sent an email to Ms. Caitlin Hurcomb to initiate a "side exchange" (Exhibit "43"). The subsequent discussions after Mr. Millette's email are attached and marked as Exhibit "44". These two exhibits contain "From MinO: Air Transat" in the email subject line and, collectively, will be referred to as the CTA-TC Side Exchange. The material portions of the CTA-TC Side Exchange are excerpted below:

(a) On March 18, 2020 at 5:14 p.m., Mr. Millette (TC) initially asked:

> Hi Cait - we have a question from our MinO. Would that be contrary to the APPRs to provide vouchers instead of cash for tickets refunds? [...]

(b) On March 18, 2020 at 5:24 p.m., Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) responded:

> [...] are we talking about refunds under the APPR or refunds for trips cancelled by the passenger? [...]

(c) On March 18, 2020 at 5:28 p.m., Mr. Millette (TC) clarified and also asked further questions:

> Refunds under the APPR.
>
> Refunds for trips cancelled by the passenger would be dealt with accordingly with the carriers' tariff? If the tariff allows it, then they can do it. What if the tariff says they reimburse cash but now they want to do vouchers, do they need to amend their tariff?
>
> [Emphasis added.]

(d) On March 18, 2020 at 5:31 p.m., Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) answered stating:

> [...] Yes, policies on cancellations by the passenger would be an airline tariff/fare rules issue. I can ask my colleagues in the Tariffs about your last question.

(e) On the following day, March 19, 2020 at 1:24 p.m., Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) emailed Mr. Millette (TC) stating that:

> [...] Spoke with Tariffs Division and they confirm that airlines must follow the policies in their tariffs and if they wanted to follow different policies, they would have to amend their tariff. [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

(f) On March 19, 2020 at 4:53 p.m., Mr. Millette (TC) responded inquiring:

> Would you know what would be involved in terms of process and timelines if a carrier wanted to quickly change certain conditions of its tariff.

(g) On Friday March 20, 2020 at 8:21 a.m., Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) sent a lengthy email answering the inquiry from Mr. Millette (TC), outlining the available options for a carrier to formally amend its tariff and stating that:

> [...] Obviously I can't speak for senior management or decision-makers at the Agency, but I think there would be some concern here if carriers were looking to change their tariffs in a way that would leave passengers without recourse. [...]

(iii) March 18, 2020 Evening: Air Transat's Request that Vouchers be Recognized in Lieu of Cash Refunds

92. On the evening of March 18, 2020, shortly after Ms. Jones's response to the Transport Canada Encrypted Email, Mr. George Petsikas (Transat A.T.'s Senior Director of Government and Industry Affairs) had a lengthy call with Ms. Jones. The call between Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) and Ms. Jones (CTA) was on the topic of Air Transat's request that the CTA recognize vouchers to pre-empt passengers from making credit card chargebacks.

93. Mr. Petsikas documented his call with Ms. Jones in an email sent to Ms. Jones, which was forwarded within an email thread between Ms. Jones and Mr. Streiner and is attached and marked as Exhibit "45" [AT-CTA Voucher Request Thread]. Mr. Petsikas's email to Ms. Jones is excerpted in full below:

> Marcia
>
> Many thanks for taking time to speak with me this evening.
>
> As discussed, we are currently under enormous pressure from Canada's bank-owned credit card processors as a result of their charge back guarantees to their customers where the merchant is unable to provide the service nor refund the money paid to this end with the card. This is a pretty standard commitment per the credit card agreements offered by the big players such as Mastercard and Visa.
>
> Consequently, one of the conditions imposed by these companies when doing business with large merchants such as Transat is to demand financial guarantees to cover their exposure per their voluntary commitments to their customers in the event we can't deliver or refund regardless of circumstances, including beyond our control and/or force majeure.
>
> The net result is with the avalanche of recent COVID cancellations, consumers are invoking their chargeback guarantees directly with the cards / banks, who in turn are demanding that the merchant makes them whole through the guarantees in question. This is putting enormous strain on our desperate attempts to manage the collapse in our revenues and stabilize our business and avoid ultimate failure and job losses.
>
> As explained, this matter was actively addressed in France and Italy recently, two countries enormously dependant on the stability of their important travel and tourism and tourism sectors that have been severely impacted by the crisis. In brief, the relevant travel industry oversight authorities in these countries publicly recognized and accepted the offering of travel vouchers valid for up to 24 months as a satisfactory resolution of the consumer's claim for a cash refund in the current extraordinary circumstances.
>
> This recognition of this option by state authorities in turn allowed the banks / card processors in those countries to invoke this > voucher in lieu of a cash refund approach as evidence the merchant had fulfilled its obligations per the sale and thus allowed them to deny the charge back claim. The result was subsequently the suspension or significant alleviation of cash guarantee demands on the travel industry merchant by the banks.

>
> Consequently, Transat respectfully requests that the Agency give active and urgent consideration to publishing a similar statement with respect to the existing travel voucher programs now being offered by Canadian air carriers including ourselves and Air Canada, among others. Again, the purpose is not to create any form of obligation in this sense but simply to recognize them as a satisfactory resolution of any cash refund claims against airlines. This of course would be temporary while we ride out the worst of the storm over the next few months.
>
> Thank you in advance for your assistance and expeditious consideration of the present and please don't hesitate if you have any questions or require further information.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

94. In the AT-CTA Voucher Request Thread (Exhibit "45"), at around 10:05 p.m. in the evening on March 18, 2020, Ms. Jones reported back to Mr. Streiner (CTA) and forwarded a copy of Mr. Petsikas's email. Within minutes, Mr. Streiner responded to Ms. Jones stating that:

> Thanks, Marcia. I'm not sure we have a clear role here, as this seems to boil down to a commercial dispute between the carrier and the credit card companies. That said, these are extraordinary times, and if there's something we can do to ease threats to industry viability while protecting passengers, we should at least consider it. Let's discuss during EC tomorrow.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

(iv) March 19, 2020: CTA EC Meeting Discussion on Refunds or Vouchers

95. Starting from March 16, 2020, the CTA had scheduled daily Executive Committee [EC] meetings relating to the COVID-19 pandemic. These meetings were attended by senior CTA personnel, including Mr. Streiner and Ms. Jones. The Outlook meeting invite for these "EC" meetings is attached and marked as Exhibit "46". The required attendees of the "EC" meetings at the time included:

(a) Mr. Scott Streiner, Chairperson and CEO
(b) Ms. Liz Barker, Vice-Chair
(c) Ms. Marcia Jones, Chief Strategy Officer
(d) Mr. Tom Oommen, Director General, Analysis and Outreach
(e) Ms. Valérie Lagacé, Senior General Counsel and Secretary
(f) Mr. Sebastien Bergeron, Chief of Staff
(g) Ms. Mireille Drouin, Director General and CFO
(h) Ms. Alysia Lau, Advisor, Office of the Chair and CEO
(i) Mr. Douglas Smith, Senior Special Project Officer
(j) Ms. Lesley Roberson, Executive Coordinator

96. Notes were taken at the CTA "EC" meetings, including the one that occurred on March 19, 2020. Below is an excerpt of the meeting notes from March 19, 2020 that relates to the issue of refunds for air passengers:

Debriefs - External

- MJ [Ms. Marcia Jones]: Debriefed on suspension order and APPR determination. Air carrier tone is nothing within their control. Want Agency to clarify that they are not required to refund carriers (sic). Air carriers don't have resources to turn to implementing ATPDR.
- SS [Mr. Scott Streiner]: ATPDR largely reflect previous codes, so not reasonable to delay coming-into-force wholesale.
- SS [Mr. Scott Streiner]: Other issue is air carriers refusing to provide refund or voucher to passengers.
- SS [Mr. Scott Streiner]: Considering issuing statement - current context very different from regulations, Agency view is it would be reasonable that air carriers provide refunds or vouchers to passengers affected by mass cancellations.
- DS [Mr. Douglas Smith, Senior Special Project Officer]: Prefer vouchers given cash flow issues.

- LB [Ms. Liz Barker]: Vouchers would need to include reasonable conditions.
- VL [Ms. Valérie Lagacé, Senior General Counsel and Secretary]: Could offer suspension of compensation requirements altogether. SS [Mr. Scott Streiner]: Could imply that these types of situations are outside air carrier control.
- SS and SB [Mr. Scott Streiner and Mr. Sebastien Bergeron, Chief of Staff]: What if government provides bailout?

[Emphasis added.]

A copy of said meeting notes is attached and marked as Exhibit "47".

(v) March 19, 2020: CTA's Response to Air Transat's Urgent Request

97. In the early afternoon of March 19, 2020, Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) sent an email to Ms. Jones (CTA), marked with high importance, to follow up regarding Transat A.T.'s request the previous evening about recognition of vouchers. The email exchange between Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) and Ms. Jones (CTA) on March 19, 2020 is attached and marked as Exhibit "48".

98. Ms. Jones responded to Mr. Petsikas the same afternoon stating that:

> Hi George,
>
> Thanks for your message. Please rest assured we are looking into this - there is a lot going on in government / the Agency at this time, as you can imagine. We do appreciate how much pressure you are facing.
>
> I will definitely keep you posted of any updates.
>
> Marcia

(vi) March 19, 2020 evening: Canadian Automobile Association Highlights the Financial Stress of Air Passengers

99. On March 19, 2020 at 7:21 p.m., Mr. Jason Kerr (Senior Director of Government Relations at the Canadian Automobile Association) sent a letter to the then Minister of Transport (The Honourable Marc Garneau) and copied to Mr. Streiner and Mr. Bergeron (CTA's Chief of Staff) [CAA March 19 Letter]. In Mr. Kerr's letter, he highlighted concerns about air carriers denying refunds to passengers for flight cancellations, and the unfairness to passengers:

> Subject: Air passengers and financial stress
>
> I am writing today concerning two issues of importance to many thousands of Canadian air travellers affected by government actions in response to the COVID-19 virus.
>
> [...] In a related issue, many carriers are offering only credits for future flights, most of which expire within a year, for flights cancelled due to government advisories or orders not to fly to certain destinations. In contrast, Via Rail Canada is offering full refunds to consumers wishing to cancel travel, regardless of when the ticket was purchased.
>
> [...] As for credits, we note that European Union policy in this area is clear, different than Canada's, and much better for travellers. It requires that airlines offer a full refund (https://ec.europa.eu/transport/sites/transportifiles/legislation/c20201830.pdf). Customers may choose to accept a credit for future flight, but they should not be forced to. Again, we support a balanced approach that does not unduly further destabilize the carriers. It may well be that their systems are overwhelmed right now, they are properly focused on repatriating Canadians with special flights, and their cash flow cannot withstand a stream of cash refunds at the moment. But it is not fair to expect passengers to shoulder this either. They should be able to access a cash refund, if not now then in the coming months, whether it is the carriers or government that make them whole. To the extent that credits remain an option, they should not be allowed to expire as they would under normal circumstances. It may be more than a year before a Canadian's financial situation is good enough for her or him to contemplate another trip.

[...]

[Emphasis added.]

A copy of Mr. Kerr's letter is attached and marked as Exhibit "49".

100. On March 20, 2020, Mr. Streiner forwarded Mr. Kerr's letter to the "EC" email list without comments (Exhibit "49").

(vii) March 20, 2020 (Friday Afternoon): Mr. Streiner Parked the Statement on Vouchers Idea

101. At the "EC" meeting on Friday March 20, 2020, Ms. Jones was already tasked to "[p]repare and circulate draft statement with respect to air passenger refunds and vouchers during COVID-19" with an expected deadline of the next week. An email, with the list of tasks, is attached and marked as Exhibit "50".

102. However at 5:00 p.m., shortly after the "EC" meeting, Mr. Streiner instructed that (Exhibit "50"):

> [...] let's remove the "refunds and vouchers" item, since we're not quite sure yet what will be done on this front or how.

(viii) March 21, 2020 (Saturday): Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) Follows Up Again with Ms. Jones (CTA)

103. At 12:30 p.m. on Saturday March 21, 2020, Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) emailed Ms. Jones (CTA) to follow up on Transat A.T.'s request for assistance on passenger credit card chargebacks:

> [...] As you can see, we are not alone in our concerns and that this option is essential to avoid a catastophic run on carrier cash reserves not just from consumers but from credit card chargeback refunds that the big banks want us to pay for.
>
> I await news regarding our urgent request of earlier this week to this end.

A copy of an email thread containing Mr. Petsikas's email and Ms. Jones forwarding Ms. Petsikas's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "51".

(ix) March 22, 2020 (Sunday): Mr. Streiner Unveils Draft Statement on Vouchers within the CTA

104. At 8:54 a.m. on Sunday March 22, 2020, Mr. Streiner circulated the first draft of the Statement on Vouchers to senior personnel of the CTA, including Ms. Jones and Ms. Barker (the Vice-Chair), but excluding the appointed Members. In the email, Mr. Streiner said:

> Good morning, folks. The attached will be one item for discussion on our 10:30 call. Talk soon.

A copy of Mr. Streiner's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "52".

105. Mr. Streiner had scheduled a meeting for Sunday, March 22, 2020 at 10:30 a.m. with the senior CTA personnel that received the draft Statement on Vouchers. That meeting invite had the subject line "Urgent Debrief - Please confirm attendance ASAP." A copy of Mr. Streiner's Microsoft Outlook calendar invite to this meeting is attached and marked as Exhibit "53".

(x) March 22, 2020 (Sunday): CTA Members Approve the Statement on Vouchers

106. After the "Urgent Debrief" meeting with senior CTA personnel, Mr. Streiner circulated the draft Statement on Vouchers to the CTA's appointed Members: Mr. Mark MacKeigan; Ms. Heather Smith; Ms. Mary Tobin Oates; Ms. Lenore Duff; and Mr. Gerald Dickie. In that email, Mr. Streiner said:

> [...] As you know, there have been many questions about what (if any) entitlements passengers have, and what (if any) obligations carriers have, when flights are disrupted as a result of the COVD-19-related mass cancellations.

> After some analysis, reflection, and discussion with other federal players, we're considering issuing a statement (draft attached) that acknowledges the current rule-set never really contemplated the present circumstances and indicates that vouchers/credits would be an appropriate way of protecting passengers from a total loss without pushing carriers closer towards insolvency.
>
> Because this statement is a policy signal of sorts and could inform – though of course, not fetter – future Agency decisions, Liz and I wanted to share it with all Members. We're looking at releasing it as early as tomorrow, so could you please let us know by 2 pm if you concur with it, and whether you have any questions or comments?
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of Mr. Streiner's email to all the CTA Members is attached and marked as Exhibit "54".

107. The CTA's constituent Members replied to Mr. Streiner's email (Exhibit "54"), signalling their approval or endorsement of the Statement on Vouchers:

(a) A copy of the email of Ms. Mary Tobin Oates, CTA Member, to Mr. Streiner and other CTA Members with one attachment entitled "Statement mto.docx", dated March 22, 2020 at 12:55 p.m., is attached and marked as Exhibit "55".

(b) A copy of the email of Mr. Mark MacKeigan, CTA Member, to Mr. Streiner and other CTA Members, with one attachment entitled "Statement mto_mm.docx", dated March 22, 2020 at 1:11 p.m., is attached and marked as Exhibit "56".

(c) A copy of the email of Ms. Lenore Duff, CTA Member, to Mr. Streiner and other CTA Members, with one attachment entitled "Statement.docx", dated March 22, 2020 at 1:12 p.m., is attached and marked as Exhibit "57".

(d) A copy of a chain of emails sent by CTA Members Ms. Heather Smith and Mr. Gerald Dickie, to Mr. Streiner and other CTA Members, is attached and marked as Exhibit "58".

(e) A copy of an email from Ms. Barker (Vice-Chair of the CTA), endorsing all of the above changes, is attached and marked as Exhibit "59".

108. At 4:42 p.m. on March 22, 2020, Mr. Streiner emailed the CTA Members again, stating that:

> Thanks for the quick replies. Most of the suggestions have been incorporated. I'll explain more during our call on Tuesday.

A copy of Mr. Streiner's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "60".

109. While Mr. Kerr's CAA March 19 Letter was forwarded to the "EC" (Exhibit "49"), which included Mr. Streiner and Ms. Barker (see paragraph 95), none of the documents that the CTA produced in this judicial review application show whether Mr. Kerr's CAA March 19 Letter was brought to the attention of any of the CTA's other constituent Members.

(xi) March 22, 2020 (Sunday Afternoon): Transport Canada Already Knew of the Statement on Vouchers and Lengthy Exchanges Thereafter

110. At 2:22 p.m. on Sunday, March 22, 2020, Mr. Millette (TC) emailed Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) indicating he already knew about the Statement on Vouchers:

> Subject: CTA announcement tomorrow
>
> Hi Cait - I was just on a conference call with Lawrence, our ADM, where he briefed us on an announcement the Agency would do tomorrow regarding the refund and voucher issue.
>
> He understood, based on a conversation with Marcia, that the measure you would announce may have an adverse impact on larger carriers like AC or WestJet.

> We are not entirely sure we understand this. Can you explain?
>
> Feel free to call me if easier 343-996-9858
>
> Thanks!
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of an email chain between Mr. Millette (TC) and Ms. Hurcomb (CTA), during the dates of March 22-24, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "61".

111. In the aforementioned email thread (Exhibit "61"), Ms. Hurcomb responded to Mr. Millette on March 23, 2020 at 10:15 a.m. indicating that she was aware that meetings had already occurred between Transport Canada and the Canadian Transportation Agency:

> Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
>
> Hi Vincent,
>
> I understand there is a plan to release a statement indicating that, generally speaking, for cancelled flights, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. This was discussed between the Chair, the DM and the Minister's Chief of Staff and Marcia spoke with your ADM over the weekend as well.
>
> It has been noted, though, that some airlines may not wish to provide vouchers, if their tariffs do not have any reimbursement requirement for force majeure situations.
>
> Let me know if you'd like to discuss further.
>
> Cait
>
> [Emphasis added.]

112. In the aforementioned email thread, Ms. Hurcomb's email on March 23, 2020 at 10:15 a.m. states the title of the three Transport Canada officials, but not their names. I have included the names and titles of those individuals, which were gleaned from the documents disclosed in this judicial review application and publicly available documents showing the names of the individuals in those positions at the time:

(a) "DM" refers to Mr. Michael Keenan. Mr. Keenan was the Deputy Minister of Transport since March 2016, and his previous profile on Transport Canada's website is attached and marked as Exhibit "62". According to the Government of Canada's website, a printout of which is attached and marked as Exhibit "63", on February 20, 2023 Arun Thangaraj was appointed to replace Mr. Keenan.

(b) "Minister's Chief of Staff" refers to Mr. Marc Roy. Based on Mr. Roy's LinkedIn Profile, which is attached and marked as Exhibit "64", Mr. Roy was the Minister of Transport's Chief of Staff in March 2020 and he departed from Transport Canada around February 2021.

(c) "ADM" refers to Mr. Lawrence Hanson. Based on Mr. Lawrence Hanson's LinkedIn profile, which is attached and marked as Exhibit "65". Mr. Hanson was the Assistant Deputy Minister of Policy at Transport Canada from June 2017 to March 2021, and Mr. Hanson then moved to the Department of Fisheries and Oceans Canada in March 2021.

113. Mr. Keenan and Mr. Hanson were also part of the email threads bearing subject line "From MinO: Air Transat" that was circulated within Transport Canada between March 18-19, 2020, which is attached and marked as Exhibit "66".

114. In the aforementioned email thread (Exhibit "61"), Mr. Millette (TC) asked Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) for further details on March 23, 2020 at 10:20 a.m.:

> Would your approach force in any way carriers that do not have refunds specified in their tariff to start refunding or their current tariff still apply?

115. At 11:04 a.m. on March 23, 2020, Ms. Hurcomb (CTA) responded to Mr. Millette (TC) as follows:

> Hi Vincent,
>
> This statement indicates what the CTA views as appropriate given this situation - an approach that would ensure passengers aren't totally out of pocket while taking into account concerns from airlines.
>
> The statement indicates that the CTA would consider vouchers acceptable "refunds" for those airlines that do require reimbursement in their tariff.
>
> The statement does not force other airlines - whose tariffs do not require reimbursement in force majeure situations - to provide passengers with vouchers or credits. It indicates what we view as a good practice that would help make passengers whole. It's not our intention to take enforcement actions against one of these airlines if this practice is not followed, in alignment with their tariff.
>
> If a complaint were brought forward to the CTA, it would be assessed on its own merits, of course.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

116. After receiving Ms. Hurcomb's email at 11:04 a.m. on March 23, 2020, Mr. Millette (TC) reported back to Mr. Stacey (TC) stating that:

> See response below from the Agency. It doesn't seem that the announcement would impact carriers that do not currently refund (AC) - perhaps just make them look bad.

A copy of this email between Mr. Millette and Mr. Stacey is attached and marked as Exhibit "67".

(xii) March 22, 2020 (Sunday Afternoon): Transat A.T. Chairman Requests Vouchers be Recognized as a Refund to Defeat Credit Card Chargebacks

117. On March 22, 2020, Mr. Jean-Marc Eustache (the Chairman, President, and CEO of Transat A.T.) sent a letter directly to Mr. Streiner [Transat A.T. Chairman Voucher Request], stating that:

> RE: Request for further public clarification of air carrier obligations per the Air Passenger Protection Regulations ("APPR") in the context of the current extraordinary circumstances
>
> [...] In the meantime, while our industry fights to survive, we urgently need the federal government and our oversight authorities such as the CTA to provide assistance, both in the form of financial support and relief in terms of the substantial easing of existing regulatory costs and burdens. I have already written to Ministers Garneau and Morneau with regards to the first objective, and I am now hereby addressing myself to you with respect to the second.
>
> [...] Specifically, I hereby request that the Agency publicly and unequivocally recognize the uncontrollable nature of the crisis and that all changes to schedules and capacity reductions are measures needed to manage the devastating losses this crisis is causing. Quite simply, these changes are not within the control of air carriers and our regulator should be clear to this end, as well as for the purposes of the application of the APPR.
>
> Furthermore, the limited scope of the exemption on March 13, 2020 is problematic as our personnel have almost no ability to provide alternative travel arrangements at this time given the above-mentioned folding of flight schedules. Consequently, and as additional support and relief, I hereby request the following:
>
> - Clearly recognize that all delays, cancellations, and denied boarding occurring at this time of crisis are outside of Air Transat's control;
>
> - Clarify that the uncontrollable nature of the crisis means that no refunds to passengers are required under the APPR. This is essential to avoid unnecessary confusion among consumers and to pre-empt a spike in the increase of complaints and lawsuits;

- Recognize the offering of travel voucher options in lieu of cash refunds as an acceptable means to address consumer requests for refunds which, in turn, would allow credit card companies and their processors to deny customer chargeback claims and thereafter cease otherwise resulting and destructive financial guarantee demands on air carrier merchants;
[...]

[Emphasis added in underline; original emphasis in bold.]

A copy of the Transat A.T. Chairman Voucher Request letter is attached and marked as Exhibit "68".

118. Within minutes of receiving the aforementioned letter from Mr. Eustache (Transat A.T.), Mr. Steiner forwarded that letter to the "EC" email list and also commented that:

> Hi, all. Some of these items were covered in our discussion on Friday or the call I have with several of you this morning. Others weren't. We'll talk about all of them tomorrow.
>
> S

[Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Mr. Streiner's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "69".

(xiii) March 22, 2020 (Sunday Evening): Association of Canadian Travel Agencies Seeks the CTA's Assistance on Refunds and Credit Card Chargebacks

119. At 7:49 p.m. on Sunday March 22, 2020, Ms. Heather Craig-Peddle (Association of Canadian Travel Agencies [ACTA], Vice President of Advocacy and Member Relations) sent Ms. Caitlin Hurcomb (CTA) an email marked as high importance [ACTA Request for Assistance on Passenger Refunds], which stated the following:

> Caitlin, ACTA has received numerous responses from our Travel Agency Members concerned about the messaging that Gabor Lukas is reciting in main stream media. While the CTA has suspended all air dispute resolution activities, and airlines are not allowing for refunds to occur (only travel credits/vouchers), this puts tremendous pressure on travel agencies especially in the regulated provinces of BC, ON and QC. For example, Section 45 of the Ontario Travel Industry Act references that consumers must receive a refund if they do not get their product. The travel industry is on the brink. We anticipate 90% of travel agency businesses to temporarily close operations in the next 7 to 21 days. Recovery will be slow until consumers feel confident in traveling again. The industry will not recover if we have to adhere to these regulations.
>
> Is the CTA in any position to assist the retail Canadian travel industry to work with the federal and provincial governments to quell Mr. Lukas's damaging messaging (difficult I know with freedom of speech), and/or assist with going to the banks and credit card companies for prevention of credit card chargebacks during this time. [...]
>
> I appreciate your urgent response to our serious concerns.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the ACTA Request for Assistance on Passenger Refunds is attached and marked as Exhibit "70".

120. The CTA has not produced any documents on what response, if any, the CTA provided to the ACTA Request for Assistance on Passenger Refunds (Exhibit "70").

(xiv) March 23, 2020 (Monday morning): CTA Discussions about Expiry Dates on Vouchers

121. At 9:09 a.m. on March 23, 2020, Mr. Streiner sent an email to the "EC" group and, for the Statement on Vouchers, Mr. Streiner asked "should we retain language on expiry dates and if so, is the current text the best approach?" A copy of an email thread dated March 22-23, 2020, containing Mr. Streiner's email, is attached and marked as Exhibit "71".

122. In response to Mr. Streiner's question, Mr. Bergeron (CTA Chief of Staff) noted the following (Exhibit "71"):

> I agree with Valerie: my least favorite option is to say nothing and let air carriers issue useless vouchers.
>
> Having said this, my preference would be to give these vouchers no expiration date or something like a 5 years expiration date. Allowing airlines to give vouchers instead of cash is already a big move. For reference, the EU, at the exception of Belgium, hasn't gone that far yet. So, in the interest of striking a balance, I would be tempted to give passengers more time to use these vouchers.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

123. In response to Mr. Streiner's question, Ms. Barker (CTA Vice Chair) mentioned the EU approach to the issue of refunds for passengers (Exhibit "71"):

> I think the EU has landed on something different:
>
> https://ec.europa.eu/commission/presscorner/detail/en/ip_20_485

124. The URL in Ms. Barker's email links to the European Commission news release "COVID-19: Commission provides guidance on EU passenger rights," dated March 18, 2020, which stated that:

> In our efforts to mitigate the economic impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Commission has today published guidelines to ensure EU passenger rights are applied in a coherent manner across the EU.
>
> National governments have introduced different measures, including travel restrictions and border controls. The purpose of these guidelines is to reassure passengers that their rights are protected.
>
> Commissioner for Transport Adina Vălean said: "In light of the mass cancellations and delays passengers and transport operators face due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the Commission wants to provide legal certainty on how to apply EU passenger rights.

> In case of cancellations the transport provider must reimburse or re-route the passengers. If passengers themselves decide to cancel their journeys, reimbursement of the ticket depends on its type, and companies may offer vouchers for subsequent use. Today's guidelines will provide much-needed legal certainty on how to apply EU passenger rights in a coordinated manner across our Union. We continue to monitor the rapidly evolving situation, and, if need be, further steps will be taken."
>
> This guidance will help passengers, the industry and national authorities in this unprecedented situation, with important passenger travel restrictions imposed by national governments and knock-on effects on transport services across the EU. By introducing clarity, the guidelines are also expected to help reduce costs for the transport sector, which is heavily affected by the outbreak. The guidelines cover the rights of passengers when travelling by air, rail, ship or bus/coach, maritime and inland waterways, as well as the corresponding obligations for carriers.
>
> If passengers face the cancellation of their journey, for example, they can choose between reimbursement of the ticket price or re-routing to reach their final destination at a later stage. At the same time, the guidelines clarify that the current circumstances are "extraordinary", with the consequence that certain rights – such as compensation in case of flight cancellation less than two weeks from departure date – may not be invoked.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the European Commission page is attached and marked as Exhibit "72".

125. The "guidelines" URL within the above European Commission news release links to a PDF file entitled "Commission Notice - Interpretative Guidelines on EU passenger rights regulations in the context of the developing situation with Covid-19." A copy of these guidelines, as it was archived on March 21, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "73".

(xv) March 23, 2020 (Monday Afternoon): Air Canada Request for Assistance on Passenger Refunds

126. On March 23, 2020, Mr. David Shapiro (Executive Vice President, International & Regulatory Affairs & Chief Legal Officer of Air Canada) made a request directly to Mr. Streiner by way of a letter that was marked "Private and Confidential" [Air Canada Refund Assistance Request]. The pertinent portions of that letter stated that:

> I regret that I have to be writing with the degree of urgency that I am to request immediate relief from the ongoing application of APPR, and the imminent entry into force of ATPDR on June 25, 2020, as a result of the devastating impact that the COVID-19 crisis is having on airlines. These concerns were raised during the Agency's technical briefing on March 19th, 2020, and we were invited to put them in writing.
>
> [...]
>
> Request
>
> Therefore, pursuant to s. 80 of the Canada Transportation Act ("Act"), we request that the Agency declare a complete suspension of the application of all obligations under APPR until further notice.
>
> If this most sensible measure in these unprecedented circumstances is, for whatever reason, deemed not feasible, we request that the Agency at a minimum:
>
> – Clearly recognize that all delays, cancellations, and denied boarding occurring at this time of crisis are outside of airlines' control, with no exceptions;
> – Clarify that the uncontrollable nature of the crisis means that no refunds to passengers are required under APPR [footnote 4]. While this may be clear to the Agency and in Air Canada's tariffs, it is increasingly evident that it is not clear to the general public. Failure to clarify this will inevitably lead to a sharp and unnecessary increase in complaints and meritless lawsuits;
>
> [footnote 4] While para. 7 of Determination No. A-2020-42 does read that only rebooking obligations apply to situations outside > carrier's control, a clear statement that no refunds apply would be extremely helpful in light of the current state of confusion in the public sphere.

>
> [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Air Canada Refund Assistance Request letter, and Mr. Streiner's email forwarding the letter to the "EC" email list, is attached and marked as Exhibit "74".

127. I observe that the two bullet points from the Air Canada Refund Assistance Request letter seem to be worded almost identically to the bullet points in the Transat A.T. Chairman Voucher Request from March 22, 2020 (Exhibit "68").

(xvi) March 23, 2020 (Monday afternoon): CTA "EC" Meeting Discussion on Refunds or Vouchers

128. Below is an excerpt of the "EC" meeting notes taken by Ms. Lau (CTA's Advisor, Office of the Chair and CEO) from the March 23, 2020 "EC" meeting that relate to the issue of refunds for air passengers:

> Debriefs
>
> - SS [Scott Streiner]: TC [Transport Canada] indicated Agency moved faster than they expected. Other travel restrictions expected. Agreement between SS [Scott Streiner] and MK [Michael Keenan] that agencies/departmernts should not issue piecemeal decisions. Call this evening between TC and Agency officials.
>
> Messaging on CTA services
>
> - SS [Scott Streiner]: Where message says CTA pausing air disputes, should specify that Agency still receiving complaints.
> - LB [Liz Barker]: Maintaining Agency services "to the extent possible" too vague and signaling slowdown of services when not true. Need to be more specific.

- TH [Tim Hillier] to revise messaging - continuing normal activity, with the exception of... passengers can file complaints, but response times may be different. Do not want to solicit air travel complaints.

Air carrier requests for additional measures

- SS [Scott Streiner] prepared table comparing AC [Air Canada] and AT [Air Transat] asks.
- Statement that all situations in COVID context = Category 3 should be discussed at Members meeting.

[...]

Varia

- TO [Tom Oommen]: We received two requests for tariffs information. SS [Scott Streiner]: Summary of what tariffs say about refunds/vouchers. MJ [Marcia Jones]: Asked that tariffs team prioritize WJ, AC, and AT tariffs.

[...]

[Emphasis added in underline; original emphasis in bold.]

A copy of the March 23, 2020 "EC" meeting notes is attached and marked as Exhibit "75".

129. The table of the Air Canada and the Air Transat "asks" that Mr. Streiner prepared and referred to above is attached and marked as Exhibit "76", and excerpted below.

Item	AT	AC
APPR		Issue a blanket exemption from all APPR, or take the steps below
Classification of flight disruptions	State that all current disruptions are category 3	Same
Refunds	State that no refunds are owed	Same
Vouchers	Signal that vouchers are acceptable in lieu of cash refunds
Response time	Exempt airlines from the 30 day timeline	Same
Alternative travel arrangements	Exempt airlines from any obligation to provide alternative travel arrangements	Same
April 30	Extend the current exemptions for at least 90 days	Same
Enforcement	Suspend for 1 year	Same
ATPDR		A 90-day or longer delay to the "deadline for compliance" or, at least, to certain provisions

130. I understand "category 3" in the table above refers to situations outside of an air carrier's control under the APPR.

(xvii) March 24, 2020: CTA Members' Meeting on Air Carrier Requests

131. On March 24, 2020, the CTA's Members held a meeting. One of the CTA Members (Ms. Heather Smith) made notes in respect of that meeting, by making annotations to the table of asks compiled by Mr. Streiner (Exhibit "76"). A copy of the annotated table of asks is attached and marked as Exhibit "77". For Transat A.T.'s and Air Canada's request that the CTA state publicly that no refunds are owed to passengers, Ms. Smith's annotation (Exhibit "77") stated:

> Already addressed through the Agency's statement.

(xviii) March 24, 2020: CTA Strategizing on Media Responses, Social Media Complaints, and Public Response to the Statement on Vouchers

132. On the morning of March 24, 2020, Ms. Jones (the CTA's Chief Strategy Officer) prepared a draft email to be disseminated to air carriers en masse about the Statement on Vouchers, and Mr. Streiner provided input on that draft email. The text of the draft email, after Mr. Streiner's edits, is excerpted below:

> I am writing to provide an update on the latest steps the Canadian Transportation Agency has taken related to the COVID-19 pandemic. Today, the CTA issued decisions:
>
> - Temporarily exempting all air carriers holding a domestic licence from the requirement in section 64 of the Canada Transportation Act to provide 120 days' notice and engage in consultations before temporarily suspending the operation of air services between points in Canada, while retaining that requirement for any permanent discontinuation of service. For more information, see Order X.
> - Temporarily exempting all air carriers from the Air Passenger Protection Regulations deadline for responding to passenger claims for compensation, while requiring that responses be provided within 120 days of the end of the exemption to certain APPR provisions. For more information, see Order Y.
>
> In addition, the CTA has released a statement providing guidance for addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place worldwide. In order to balance passenger protection and airline operating realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances, the CTA has indicated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time. Of course, any situation brought forward to the CTA will be evaluated on its own merits. The full statement is available on the CTA's website (insert link).
>
> We will be sure to keep you informed of any further developments. Please don't hesitate to contact me with any questions.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the email exchange between Mr. Streiner and Ms. Jones is attached and marked as Exhibit "78".

133. In the afternoon of March 24, 2020, Mr. Vincent Turgeon (CTA) indicated that the CTA had just received a third request from the media on the issue of airline refunds and vouchers, with the first such media request received the previous week. Mr. Turgeon also indicated that "our Twitter account has received dozens of questions on that same topic" and asked if he could "use that strategy [i.e., responding using the Statement on Vouchers] for direct responses on email (@Info inbox) and on Twitter?" A copy of Mr. Turgeon's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "79".

134. On the evening of March 24, 2020, Mr. Streiner circulated "a draft answer to possible questions on why we issued the statement, whether it shortchanges passengers, whether it puts fragile airlines at greater risk of failure, etc. [...] we need to be ready when the calls come." A copy of Mr. Streiner's email, and the enclosed draft answers, is attached and marked as Exhibit "80".

135. Mr. Streiner's draft answers stated the following (Exhibit "80"):

- The Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations do not require refunds where a flight cancellation is outside an airline's control, which would include cancellations resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Airline tariffs have a wide range of provisions, but it's often unclear which tariff terms would apply to this unprecedented situation and whether the force majeure clauses in most tariffs would exempt airlines from paying anything.
- As a result, many passengers affected by the cancellations have been facing significant confusion about what their rights were and the possibility that they will lose the entire cost of their flights.
- At the same time, airlines have had to deal with huge drops in passenger volumes and have little to no ability to issue cash refunds.

- In these extraordinary circumstances – which were never anticipated by the legislation, the regulations, or the tariffs – the CTA concluded that the best way of balancing passenger protection with airline's current operating realities was to suggest that airlines issue vouchers or travel credits for the value of cancelled tickets, as long as those vouchers or credits don't expire too soon.
- We believe that this is a fair, sensible approach in these very difficult circumstances and that greater clarity and consistency of approach will be of benefit to for both passengers and airlines

[Emphasis added.]

136. In response to Mr. Streiner's draft answers to possible questions, Ms. Jones then circulated her proposed answers on the same issue, stating that:

> Hi Scott, I was thinking of the same issue. I drafted up the following earlier today, for your consideration. I think with regard to the airlines, we are not trying to benefit them per se, but rather, ensure that Canadians can benefit from a variety of carriers, service offerings and routes in the future. The only reason we want to do this is for the benefit of Canadian passengers in the long term. It may be helpful to accentuate this. Marcia
>
> Q3. It does not seem fair to passengers who lost money that they would only get credits or vouchers. Can you explain?
>
> The CTA believes that fair and robust air protection for passengers whose flights are cancelled in these circumstances is essential. That is why the CTA has issued a statement (insert link) indicating that providing vouchers or credits to passengers in these extraordinary circumstances may be appropriate. This measure goes beyond what is required for situations outside of the carrier's control under the Air Passenger Protection Regulations and, in some cases, goes beyond what carriers provide for in their tariffs.
>
> The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic.

> The issuance of vouchers or credits strikes a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances. It is important that passengers not suffer out of pocket, and also that the air industry survive and can continue to provide diverse service offerings to Canadians once the crisis has abated.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of Ms. Jones's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "81".

(xix) March 25, 2020: CTA Publishes the Statement on Vouchers

137. At 9:45 a.m. on March 25, 2020, Mr. Streiner circulated a further revision to the draft Statement on Vouchers to include, among other changes, that "airlines believe[d]" that their tariffs have clauses that relieve the airlines from providing refunds. A copy of Mr. Streiner's email, and the revised draft Statement on Vouchers, is attached and marked as Exhibit "82".

138. At 9:53 a.m. on March 25, 2020, a few hours before the Statement on Vouchers was finalized and published, Mr. Streiner also provided some comments on Ms. Jones's proposed answer (Exhibit "81"). Mr. Streiner stated that:

> Hi, Marcia. As part of Liz's and my discussion of the statement this morning, we concluded that vouchers may not, in fact, go beyond what the APPR require, since they could, arguably be deemed a necessary alternative to itinerary completion where completion isn't possible. That's the sort of interpretation the Agency might could conceivably in future adjudications.
>
> Could you please adjust the answer accordingly, emphasizing not "going beyond" but rather, "bringing greater greater clarity and consistency in unprecedented and unanticipated circumstances"?
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of Mr. Streiner's email to Ms. Jones is attached and marked as Exhibit "83".

139. Approximately thirty minutes after Mr. Streiner's email, Mr. Bergeron (CTA's Chief of Staff) opined that the Statement on Vouchers should instead be labelled as "guidance," as it would carry more weight. Mr. Streiner responded and stated:

> Not sure we should call this [the Statement on Vouchers] guidance. That might slightly overstate it.

An email thread containing this exchange between Mr. Bergeron and Mr. Streiner is attached and marked as Exhibit "84".

140. In the above email thread (Exhibit "84"), Ms. Barker also provided her input on whether to label the Statement on Vouchers as "guidance":

> I understand Seb's [Mr. Bergeron's] point, to try to frame this, and your response, that it might overstate it. But given that it is consistent with your intent, that this be seen as guidance by all, it might be OK to overstate it slightly

[Emphasis added.]

141. At 1:35 p.m. on March 25, 2020, Mr. Streiner circulated the final version of the Statement on Vouchers and included a line stating that "24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases" for expiry of vouchers or credits. As described earlier, in paragraphs 55-64, by March 21, 2020, major Canadian air carriers had already been issuing vouchers with 24-month expiry dates. A copy of the email from Mr. Streiner, with the final version of the Statement on Vouchers, is attached and marked as Exhibit "85".

142. At 1:55 p.m. on March 25, 2020, Ms. Jones forwarded Mr. Streiner's final version of the Statement on Vouchers to relevant CTA personnel for posting on the internet and stated:

> Over to you! ☺

A copy of Ms. Jones's email is attached and marked as Exhibit "86".

(xx) March 25, 2020 Afternoon: CTA Informs Stakeholders of the Statement on Vouchers

143. At 2:34 p.m. on March 25, 2020, Ms. Jones sent an email using the "Blind Carbon Copy (BCC)" feature to an undisclosed list of recipients to announce that the Statement on Vouchers had been published, among other measures. Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) responded to that email thanking the CTA "for turning this around and getting it out the door." A copy of Mr. Petsikas's email, including Ms. Jones's email announcement, is attached and marked as Exhibit "87".

144. At 4:01 p.m. on March 25, 2020, Ms. Jones sent another email using the "Blind Carbon Copy (BCC)" feature to another undisclosed list of recipients, including Mr. Kerr (Senior Director of Government Relations at the Canadian Automobile Association), to announce that the Statement on Vouchers had been published, among other measures. A copy of Mr. Kerr's response to Ms. Jones's announcement email is attached and marked as Exhibit "88".

(xxi) March 25, 2020 Afternoon: CBC Urgent Inquiry about the Statement on Vouchers

145. At 3:53 p.m. on March 25, 2020, a journalist from CBC sent an urgent inquiry to the CTA and also brought the CTA's attention to the CTA decision in Lukács v. Porter Airlines Inc. (No: 344-C-A-2013):

> Is this from the CTA?
>
> https://www.otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers
>
> It has no name attached to it and I would like to know who to attribute it to and on what legislative basis it is endorsing credits and not refunds?
>
> I ask because the CTA has issued decisions that say airlines must refund passengers, even when the cancellation is beyond the airlines' control.

> An August 29, 2013 decision from the Canadian Transport Agency states "The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács, and finds that it is unreasonable for Porter to refuse to refund the fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond Porter's control." I must finish my story today but I need confirmation from you that this link is legitimate and the release is from the CTA. I am hoping you can respond to my questions within the next few hours. Regards, Yvonne
>
> [Emphasis added.]

An email thread containing this CBC media inquiry is attached and marked as Exhibit "89".

146. Within about twelve minutes of the CBC inquiry, Mr. Turgeon (CTA) suggested to Ms. Jones (CTA) and Mr. Hillier (CTA) the following (Exhibit "89"):

> Hi Marcia and Tim, please advise. We just received this. We could simply respond that it is a clarification offered by the CTA.

(xxii) March 25, 2020 Afternoon: Discussion on FAQs for Statement on Vouchers

147. On the afternoon of March 25, 2020, shortly after the Statement on Vouchers was posted on the CTA's website, Mr. Streiner, Ms. Barker, and Mr. Bergeron were exchanging comments on a "Web FAQs" document that related to the Statement on Vouchers. A copy of the email thread and a marked-up copy of the "Web FAQs" is attached and marked as Exhibit "90". In the "Web FAQs," Ms. Barker made a number of comments including those excerpted below:

> [...] The CTA believes that fair and robust air protection for passengers whose flights are cancelled in these circumstances is essential.[...]
>
> > Commented [LB4: Well robust air passenger protection would give them what they're entitled to, wouldn't it...? I think that this is the wrong word..]
>
> [...] This measure provides a clear signal on the carrier's obligations in brings greater clarity and consistency in unprecedented > and unanticipated circumstances in situations outside of their carrier's control under the Air Passenger Protection Regulations - which simply require the completion of the passenger's itinerary, when this may no longer be possible in today's environment - and, in some cases, goes beyond what carriers are to provide under their tariffs.

>
> > Commented [LB8: Would definitely not say this because I believe that if tariffs provide for nothing, they are out of compliance with the APPR.]

H. Transat A.T., Air Canada, and ACTA Correspondences with the CTA Were Not Documented in the Lobbying Registry Communication Reports

148. I searched the Registry of Lobbyists on the website of the Office of the Commissioner of Lobbying of Canada [Commissioner of Lobbying].

(a) Attached and marked as Exhibit "91" are the communication reports that Transat A.T. Inc. filed with the Commissioner of Lobbying for the time period between February 2020 and May 2020 [Transat Communication Reports].

(b) Attached and marked as Exhibit "92" are the communication reports that Air Canada filed with the Commissioner of Lobbying for the time period between February 2020 and May 2020 [Air Canada Communication Reports].

(c) Attached and marked as Exhibit "93" are the communication reports that ACTA filed with the Commissioner of Lobbying for the time period between February 2020 and May 2020 [ACTA Communication Reports].

149. The four known communications between Transat A.T. and the CTA were not documented in the Transat Communication Reports:

(a) The call between Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.) and Ms. Jones (CTA) on March 18, 2020 (paragraphs 92-93).

(b) Mr. Petsikas's email to Ms. Jones within the AT-CTA Voucher Request Thread (Exhibit "45").

(c) Mr. Petsikas's follow-up email to Ms. Jones on March 19, 2020 (Exhibit "48").

(d) Mr. Petsikas's further follow-up email to Ms. Jones on Saturday March 21, 2020 (Exhibit "51").

150. The March 23, 2020 Air Canada Refund Assistance Request (Exhibit "74"), sent to the CTA and marked "Private and Confidential," was not documented in the Air Canada Communication Reports.

151. The Sunday March 22, 2020 ACTA Request for Assistance on Passenger Refunds (Exhibit "70") that was sent to the CTA was not documented in the ACTA Communication Reports.

I. CTA Invoked the Statement on Vouchers to Respond to Passengers

152. On March 25, 2020, the CTA began responding to public Twitter tweets from passengers using the following text:

> [...] please refer to this link that will answer your question: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers Thank you. CTA social media

A copy of the CTA's public tweets on March 25, 2020, also included in my April 7, 2020 affidavit, is attached and marked as Exhibit "94". A copy of the CTA's public tweets on March 25, 2020, and disclosed by the CTA in response to this Court's disclosure orders, is attached and marked as Exhibit "95".

153. Between March 20 to 27, 2020, the CTA was responding to inquiries from a passenger named Tammy Pedersen. On March 20, 2020 at 1:08A a.m., Ms. Pedersen asked the CTA about her rights to a refund when Swoop is cancelling the flight, without reference to the COVID-19 situation:

> I booked a flight with Swoop Airlines for next month and they are cancelling the flight and only offering me a future credit. The flight is from Abbotsford, B.C. to Las Vegas, Nevada and return.
>
> Am I not entitled to a refund back to my card?
>
> [Emphasis added.]

154. On March 20, 2020 at 7:43 a.m., the CTA replied and referred to the COVID-19 situation. The CTA then cited to Ms. Pedersen material portions of Determination No. A-2020-42 (Exhibit "32") relating to the relaxing of an air carrier's obligation to pay the minimum compensation under the APPR and that the air carrier "would have to make sure the passenger completes the itinerary."

155. On March 20, 2020 at 11:25 a.m., Ms. Pedersen wrote back to the CTA indicating she did not understand the CTA's answer. Ms. Pedersen specifically inquired what her rights would be if the air carrier is unable to complete her itinerary:

> Thank you for your response, but I don't understand the answer.
>
> "However, they would have to make sure the passenger completes their itinerary." If the carrier doesn't - what form of compensation am I entitled to? A refund in the form of a future credit or a refund in the original form of payment?
>
> I have them my money in exchange for a service they are unable to provide. This is also outside of my control and a financial burden to me. All I want is my money returned.
>
> Any info/clarification would be appreciated.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

156. On March 27, 2020 at 10:25 a.m., the CTA responded to Ms. Pedersen's inquiry from March 20, 2020 with a copy of material portions of the Statement on Vouchers as follows:

> For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that may relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.
>
> While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

157. A copy of the email chain between the CTA and Ms. Pedersen between March 20 to 27, 2020, provided to me by Ms. Pedersen, is attached and marked as Exhibit "96".

158. On March 27, 2020, a passenger named Ms. Jennifer Mossey received from the CTA a similar email as Ms. Pedersen that repeats the Statement on Vouchers. The CTA's response did not answer Ms. Mossey's concern about Sunwing initially agreeing to a refund pursuant to their own policies, only to change the policy days after and deny any refunds. In particular, the CTA provided a generic response as follows:

> [...]
>
> The CTA has taken steps to address the major impact that the COVD-19 pandemic is having on the airlines industry by making temporary exemptions to certain requirements of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR). These exemptions apply to flight disruptions that occur from March 13, 2020 until June 30, 2020.

> [...]
>
> For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that may relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.
>
> While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).
>
> [...]
>
> [Original emphasis in bold.]

A copy of the exchange between the CTA and Ms. Mossey, provided to me by Ms. Mossey, is attached and marked as Exhibit "97".

159. The CTA continued to respond to passengers using the Statement on Vouchers in the weeks thereafter. A bundle of emails citing the Statement on Vouchers sent by the CTA in response to passengers' inquiries between April 8 to April 20, 2020 is attached and marked as Exhibit "98".

J. CTA Included the Statement on Vouchers in Boilerplate Complaint Responses

160. After the CTA published the Statement on Vouchers, it began including the Statement on Vouchers within the automated response emails that were sent to passengers:

> Thank you. We have successfully received your complaint. Your case number is [...]

> Suspension of all air dispute resolution activities
>
> [...]
>
> Air carriers' obligations during the global COVID-19 pandemic
>
> The CTA has taken steps to address the major impact that the COVD-19 pandemic is having on the airlines industry by making temporary exemptions to certain requirements of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR). These exemptions apply to flight disruptions that occur from March 13, 2020 until June 30, 2020.
>
> Statement on Vouchers for flight disruptions
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the automated email received by a passenger named Reine Desrosiers is attached and marked as Exhibit "99".

K. Canadian Air Carriers Immediately Invoked the Statement on Vouchers to Deny Passenger Refunds

161. On March 27, 2020, Sunwing issued a letter that was distributed to travel agents, including an accompanying FAQ, both of which contained the text below:

> Initially, we offered customers booked on our flights during this suspension the choice between a future travel credit valid for 12 months and a full cash refund. However, after the Government of Canada's non-essential travel advisory, we adjusted our policy to be aligned with all other Canadian airlines and tour operators. This decision is also consistent with the ruling made by the Canadian Transportation Agency on March 26, 2020.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the letter to the travel agents is attached and marked as Exhibit "100".

A copy of the accompanying FAQ is attached and marked as Exhibit "101".

162. On March 31, 2020, WestJet communicated with a passenger, Ms. Steffany Christopher, via Facebook Messenger, stating that:

> We understand the challenges our guest have been faced with. However, the Canadian Transport Agency has approved us to issue refunds to the travel bank. [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A screenshot of those Facebook messages, provided to me by Ms. Christopher, is attached and marked as Exhibit "102".

163. On April 1, 2020, Air Canada wrote in response to an email from Mr. David Foulkes, a passenger, demanding a refund:

> I would like to attach two links from the Canadian Transportation Agency website as they may help clarify some of your questions. The CTA has issued temporary exemptions to the Air Passenger Protection Regulations regarding refund request and extension of ticket validity.
>
> https://www.otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/content/canadian-transportation-agency-issues -temporary-exemptions-certain-air-passenger-protection
>
> https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the email chain between Air Canada and Mr. Foulkes, provided to me by Mr. Foulkes, is attached and marked as Exhibit "103".

164. On March 27, 2020, Air Canada wrote in response to an email from Mr. Ahren Belisle, a passenger, demanding a refund:

> As mention previously the maximum we can provide is to keep your ticket as a credit for 24 months (2 years) [...] The policy we follow at the moment is supported by the CTA (Canadian air transportation agency).
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the email chain between Air Canada and Mr. Belisle, provided to me by Mr. Belisle, is attached and marked as Exhibit "104".

165. On March 26, 2020, Air Transat responded to a personal message on Twitter from a passenger, Mr. Adam Bacour, as follows:

> [...] We strongly believe that the 24-month credit offered to our customers to compensate for their cancelled travel plans is a flexible proposition in these exceptional circumstances [...] In this regard, the Canadian Transportation Agency recently issued an opinion on the subject, which supports our decision and emphasizes that the solution proposed by Transat, among others, is appropriate given the current situation.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A screenshot of that Twitter message, which was provided to me by Mr. Bacour, is attached and marked as Exhibit "105".

166. On March 28, 2020, Swoop responded to an email request for a refund from a passenger, Ms. Susan Simpson, as follows:

> We do understand that a refund would be preferred, however we are only offering Swoop credits at this time for cancelled flights.
>
> On March 25, the Canadian Transportation Agency clarified its position on providing credit for travel due to the uncertain times we are in. This clarification stated that airlines could offer travel credit for cancelled flights, and the credit should be valid for a reasonable amount of time, which was indicated to be 24 months. If you would like more information please visit the CTA's website here: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the email chain between Swoop and Ms. Simpson, which was provided to me by Ms. Simpson, is attached and marked as Exhibit "106".

L. Travel Industry Invoked the CTA's Statement on Vouchers to Deter Refunds

167. On March 25, 2020, a travel agency based in Ontario named TravelOnly, made the following Facebook post on their Facebook page, citing the CTA's Statement on Vouchers as follows:

> To all of our amazing clients - thank you for putting your trust in TravelOnly and our amazing advisors. Over the course of the past two weeks, our advisors have been on hold for upwards of 12+ hours to help you get home or cancel or rebook your trips. No doubt this will continue for the foreseeable future – we are here for you and hope that you will remember the value of using a travel advisor in the future!
>
> Some of you have reached out to enquire how the new Air Passenger Protection Regulations would impact the requirements of airlines when flights were cancelled and/or rebooked.
>
> The Canadian Transportation Agency has provided a statement which provides direction for you and your travel advisor regarding the issuing of future travel vouchers. In summary, the CTA believes that providing affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel is appropriate and reasonable. We understand that you may have questions on your voucher and how to use it for future travel and we encourage you to reach out to your TravelOnly advisor or our offices for assistance at any time. Please note that most vouchers will be issued within the next 4-6 weeks depending on the airline and travel supplier.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Facebook post is attached and marked as Exhibit "107".

168. On April 3, 2020, a news article entitled "Tactful and tough, agents have effective strategies for dealing with refund demands" was published in Travel Week, a weekly publication targeting travel agents. The news article referred to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers and outlined an example of how travel agents can utilize the Statement on Vouchers to cause passengers to accept a voucher, in part, as follows:

> [...] On March 25 the Canadian Transportation Agency waded into the fray, issuing a special statement saying that while specific cases may get further analysis, in general, vouchers are appropriate in these extraordinary circumstances.
>
> [...]
>
> A letter that Vanderlubbe and his team have ready for any client making persistent refund requests or launching credit card chargebacks is strongly worded but fair, and explains the situation from the retailer's side. The letter cites the CTA statement and reads, in part: "We too are experiencing financial damage from the COVID19 pandemic, paying our staff for more than 5 weeks now with little or no revenue coming, in order to help our customers return home, process future travel credits, and we will be re-booking for months later."
>
> The letter also notes: "The Federal Government has issued a plain language statement which you can read from the link below [https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers] that states that, as far as the air travellers protection regime goes, it was never intended to cover acts of God, or a force majeure situation. In short, they state that a future travel credit for 2 years is sufficient compensation under this circumstance.
>
> "Further, the Travel Industry Council of Ontario, that administers the Ontario Travel Industry Act, has issued a statement that 'under Ontario law, there is no requirement for a travel company to refund or offer alternative travel services if a government travel advisory is in effect'. In short, our suppliers are not even obligated to provide a future travel credit, but they are.
>
> [sic] Your chargeback through your credit card is unreasonable given that you are being offered a travel credit good for two years, and that you had the opportunity to purchase cancellation insurance at the time of booking, and you declined to do so.
>
> [sic] We ask that you contact your credit card company and 'reverse the chargeback request'. We need evidence of this in order to process your future travel credit."
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the article is attached and marked as Exhibit "108".

169. On April 1, 2020, the Canadian Life and Health Insurance Association, a voluntary association representing 99 percent of Canada's life and health insurance business, published a press release entitled "Advisory: Travel cancellation insurance and airline vouchers or credits" that specifically relied on the CTA's Statement on Vouchers, suggesting that passengers may be unable to claim against their travel insurance policies as follows:

> [...] On March 25, 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency updated its endorsement of the use of vouchers or credits as an appropriate approach for Canada's airlines as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.
>
> Travel insurers are advising policyholders that if you have been offered this type of full credit, or voucher for future use by an airline, train or other travel provider, in many instances, under the terms of your insurance policy you will not be considered to have suffered an insurable loss. [...]
>
> Disputes over refunds and credits should be directed to your travel service provider, transportation carrier or the Canadian Transportation Agency. [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the press release is attached and marked as Exhibit "109".

M. March 30, 2020: APR Raises Concerns About the Statement on Vouchers Directly with the CTA

170. On March 30, 2020, APR sent a letter to the CTA, specifically raising a concern that the Statement on Vouchers is misleading. APR specifically requested that the CTA remove the Statement on Vouchers by March 31, 2020. A copy of that letter is attached and marked as Exhibit "110".

171. On March 30, 2020, the Secretariat of the CTA sent an email acknowledging receipt of APR's letter of March 30, 2020. A copy of that acknowledgement email is attached and marked as Exhibit "111".

172. The CTA has not responded to APR's letter of March 30, 2020, except for the acknowledgment email above.

N. Statement on Vouchers was Inconsistent with a Lawful Directive of the US Regulator and the Guidelines of the European Commission

173. The United States Department of Transportation [USDOT] is the federal regulator of commercial US and foreign airlines that fly to, from, or within the United States. Unlike the CTA in Canada, the USDOT is a regulator, and not a quasi-judicial tribunal that adjudicates air passenger disputes with air carriers. In the USDOT's "A Consumer Guide to Air Travel," the USDOT recommends filing a complaint and, as a last resort, suing in small clams court. A copy of the USDOT's "A Consumer Guide to Air Travel", as it was archived on April 3, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "112".

174. On April 3, 2020, the USDOT issued a formal enforcement notice, citing various legal authorities and signed by the USDOT Assistant General Counsel for Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings, entitled "Enforcement Notice Regarding Refunds by Carriers Given the Unprecedented Impact of the COVID-19 Public Health Emergency On Air Travel" [USDOT Enforcement Notice]. The USDOT Enforcement Notice specifies that:

> Although the COVID-19 public health emergency has had an unprecedented impact on air travel, the airlines' obligation to refund passengers for cancelled or significantly delayed flights remains unchanged.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the USDOT's notice is attached and marked as Exhibit "113".

175. On or around May 12, 2020, the USDOT further published a document entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Regarding Airline Ticket Refunds Given the Unprecedented Impact of the COVID-19 Public Health Emergency on Air Travel," which is attached and marked as Exhibit "114", and stated that:

> [...] 4. May airlines and ticket agents retroactively apply new refund policies?
>
> The Department interprets the statutory prohibition against unfair or deceptive practices to cover actions by airlines and ticket agents applying changes retroactively to their refund policies that affect consumers negatively. The refund policy in place at the time the passenger purchased the ticket is the policy that is applicable to that ticket. The Aviation Enforcement Office would consider the denial of refunds in contravention of the policies that were in effect at the time of the ticket purchase to be an unfair and deceptive practice.
>
> 5. May airlines or ticket agents offer credits or vouchers to consumers in lieu of refunds?
>
> Airlines and ticket agents can offer consumers alternatives to a refund, such as credits or vouchers, so long as the option of a refund is also offered and clearly disclosed if the passenger is entitled to a refund. Further, any restrictions that apply to the credits and vouchers, such as the period in which credits must be used or any fees charged for using the credit, must be clearly disclosed to consumers. If an airline, by representation or omission, engages in conduct that is likely to mislead consumers about their right to a refund, or the value of a voucher or credit that is offered, the Aviation Enforcement Office would deem such conduct to be a deceptive practice [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

176. As described in paragraphs 123-125, on March 18, 2020, the European Commission issued guidelines to the effect that (Exhibit "73"):

> In case of cancellations the transport provider must reimburse or re-route the passengers. If passengers themselves decide to cancel their journeys, reimbursement of the ticket depends on its type, and companies may offer vouchers for subsequent use.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

O. CTA Changed the Statement on Vouchers Twice After this Judicial Review Application was Commenced

177. Since APR commenced this application for judicial review, the CTA modified the Statement on Vouchers at least twice.

(i) April 22, 2020: CTA's New FAQs Page

178. On or about April 22, 2020, about a week before the deadline for the CTA's responding motion record for the interlocutory injunction motion, the CTA added a new hyperlink at the bottom of the Statement on Vouchers, linking to a new Frequently Asked Questions webpage [New FAQs Page]. The New FAQs Page stated for the first time that the Statement was not a legal ruling and purported to provide some explanation why the CTA issued the Statement on Vouchers. A copy of this New FAQs Page is attached and marked as Exhibit "115".

179. For greater clarity, Exhibit "115" is not tendered for the accuracy of its content, but merely as proof that the aforementioned New FAQs Page was posted on the CTA's website on or about April 22, 2020.

180. On April 21, 2020, Ms. Jones (CTA) wrote to Mr. Hanson (Transport Canada) to give him a heads up that the intent of the New FAQs Page was to diffuse legal risk. Ms. Jones's email was then forwarded to Mr. Keenan (then Deputy Minister of Transport) and Mr. Roy (then Minister of Transport's Chief of Staff):

> Subject: FAQs
>
> Hi Lawrence,
>
> I just wanted to give you a heads up the CTA intends to post these tomorrow. The Chair's office is also advising MINO about these.
>
> The intent is to diffuse legal risk head on, in relation to litigation that has been launched by a consumer advocate. The FAQs also clarify some misperceptions.

Please let me know if you have any questions or wish to discuss.

Thanks, Marcia

[Emphasis added.]

A copy of this email is attached and marked as Exhibit "116".

181. On April 24, 2020, FlyTrippers (a travel information website based in Quebec) posted an article to their website regarding the CTA's New FAQs Page entitled "The CTA Says Their Previous Statement on Refunds Essentially Meant Nothing," which is attached and marked as Exhibit "117".

182. On April 24, 2020, Prince of Travel (a licensed travel agency in Ontario) posted an article to their website regarding the CTA's Statement on Vouchers and New FAQs Page entitled "Refunds on Cancelled Flights: What's the Latest in Canada?," which is attached and marked as Exhibit "118".

(ii) November 16, 2020: CTA's Revamped Statement on Vouchers

183. On or about November 16, 2020, the CTA published a revamped version of the Statement on Vouchers [Revamped Statement on Vouchers].

(a) A new textbox was added to the top of the page, stating that the Statement on Vouchers was "non-binding" and purporting to explain why it was originally published on March 25, 2020.

(b) The hyperlink to the New FAQs Page was replaced with the actual content from the New FAQs Page being pasted below the body of the original Statement on Vouchers.

A copy of the Revamped Statement is attached and marked as Exhibit "119".

184. For greater clarity, Exhibit "119" is not tendered for the truth of its content, but merely as proof that the aforementioned Revamped Statement on Vouchers was posted on the CTA's website on or about November 16, 2020.

185. The Revamped Statement on Vouchers (Exhibit "119") included a textbox at the top stating that:

> This non-binding statement on vouchers was issued on March 25, 2020, in the face of unprecedented and extraordinary circumstances impacting domestic and international air travel. Because the law does not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons beyond their control, there was a real risk that many passengers would end up getting nothing for cancelled flights. This statement was intended to help ensure that didn't happen.
>
> This statement changes nothing with respect to airline obligations and passenger rights under individual airline tariffs. Any passenger who believes they're owed a refund under the relevant tariff and hasn't received one can file a complaint with us. All complaints are dealt with on their merits.

[Emphasis added.]

186. One of the sentences (i.e., "the law does not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons beyond their control") in the Revamped Statement on Vouchers (Exhibit "119") misled the public about the state of the law on whether airlines are required to include refund provisions in their tariffs. This is contradicted by ss. 107(1)(n)(xii) and 122(c)(xii) of the Air Transportation Regulations, applicable for domestic and international tariffs, respectively, which state that:

> 107 (1) Every tariff shall contain
>
> (n) the terms and conditions of carriage, clearly stating the air carrier's policy in respect of at least the following matters, namely,
>
> (xii) refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,

122 Every tariff shall contain

(c) the terms and conditions of carriage, clearly stating the air carrier's policy in respect of at least the following matters, namely,

(xii) refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,

[Emphasis added.]

187. For all of the changes described above, the CTA did not update the "Date Modified" at the bottom of the Statement on Vouchers, which continued to read as "2020-03-25."

P. Statement on Vouchers Invoked to Resist Credit Card Chargebacks

188. In the subsections below, I enclose examples of how the Statement on Vouchers was invoked in response to passengers' credit card chargebacks. These examples were passengers that shared their credit card chargeback experiences with APR. For greater certainty, the examples are only a subset of instances where the Statement on Vouchers was invoked to respond to credit card chargebacks. The passengers' sensitive information has been redacted from these examples.

189. All of the examples below were after the CTA released the New FAQs Page on April 22, 2020 (Exhibit "115"). However, other than the one exception (Exhibit "127" below), airlines continued to include copies and/or excerpts of the original Statement on Vouchers posted on March 25, 2020, without reference to the New FAQs Page posted on April 22, 2020.

(i) WestJet's Reliance on Statement on Vouchers to Respond to Chargebacks

190. In response to passenger credit card chargebacks, WestJet responded with a screenshot of the CTA's original Statement on Vouchers from March 25, 2020, in addition to a template letter [WestJet Template Letter] which stated that:

> [Date]
>
> To Whom It May Concern,
>
> I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to Westjet Vacations booking [number] for the [passenger name(s)].
>
> Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, Westjet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through [date]. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a nonrefundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as Westjet dollars, also valid for 24 months.
>
> Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.
>
> We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided Westjet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a Westjet Dollars account (for Westjet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, how> ever in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

>
> In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's Westjet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.
>
> Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.
>
> Sabrina #5041 Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
>
> [Emphasis added in underline; original emphasis in bold.]

A copy of WestJet's response to Mr. John Rigsby's RBC credit card chargeback received on or around May 15, 2020, containing the WestJet Template Letter, is attached and marked as Exhibit "120".

191. WestJet used a substantially similar response to other passenger chargebacks, including the WestJet Template Letter or the substance thereof, as shown in the exhibits listed below:

(a) A copy of WestJet's response to Ms. Maddison Toppe's Servus CU credit card chargeback, received on or around June 2, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "121".

(b) A copy of WestJet's response to Mr. Byron Thorburn's PC Financial credit card chargeback, received on or around June 13, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "122".

(c) A copy of WestJet's response to Gurmel Chattha's CIBC Visa credit card chargeback, received on or around July 17, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "123".

(d) A copy of WestJet's response to Ms. Joanne Phillips's CIBC Visa credit card chargeback, received on or around July 17, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "124".

(e) A copy of WestJet's response to the Dryhanov-Atroschanka party's Canadian Tire Mastercard credit card chargeback, received on or around July 30, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "125".

(f) A copy of WestJet's response to Mr. Anthony McCullough's PC Financial credit card chargeback, received on or around August 5, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "126".

192. For greater certainty, I am including the WestJet Template Letter above to illustrate that WestJet was invoking the Statement on Vouchers. I do not accept WestJet's assertion in the WestJet Template Letter about other passengers having accepted a credit as being complete or accurate.

193. On or around September 10, 2020, in response to Mr. Damon Criger's RBC Mastercard credit card chargeback, WestJet relied on the Statement on Vouchers and the COVID-19 Page (Exhibit "37") for the assertion that:

> [...]
>
> [a]ccording to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this type of global crisis.
>
> [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of WestJet's response to Mr. Damon Criger's RBC Mastercard credit card chargeback, received on or around September 10, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "127".

194. In relation to Mr. Damon Criger's chargeback, WestJet also included a lengthy written submission that cited the Statement on Vouchers as the CTA's policies and the CTA's New FAQs Page on April 22, 2020 as the CTA's reaffirmation that no refunds are required.

195. For greater certainty, I am including WestJet's response to Mr. Damon Criger's chargeback above to illustrate that WestJet was invoking the Statement on Vouchers. I do not accept WestJet's assertion in the written submissions that WestJet complied with its tariff as being complete or accurate.

(ii) Air Canada's Reliance on Statement on Vouchers to Respond to Chargeback

196. In response to Morgan Rioux's RBC Visa credit card chargeback, Air Canada responded with the CTA's Statement on Vouchers, as follows:

> [...] We confirm that flights were cancelled for reasons listed below:
>
> "As and from February 1, 2020, all of Air Canada's route suspensions were directly caused by the factors beyond its control, principally the COVID-19 pandemic and the government measures put in place to contain its spread. As a result, Air Canada's policy of issuing long term credits with respect to nonrefundable tickets for the flight cancellations relating to those suspended routes is compliance with applicable law (as confirmed in the Canadian Transport Agency's guidance updated March 25, 2020,..."...the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time..." (https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers))"
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of Air Canada's response to Morgan Rioux's RBC Visa credit card chargeback, received on or about July 28, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "128".

(iii) Swoop's Reliance on Statement on Vouchers to Respond to Chargeback

197. In response to Ms. Marlaina Boskers's CIBC credit card chargeback, Swoop relied on the Statement on Vouchers and COVID-19 Page (Exhibit "37") for the assertion that:

> [...]
>
> According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this type of global crisis.
>
> [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

An except of Swoop's response to Ms. Marlaina Boskers's CIBC credit card chargeback, received on or around May 27, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "129".

(iv) Transat's Reliance on Statement on Vouchers to Respond to Chargeback

198. In response to Ms. Serena Uppal's Amex credit card chargeback, Transat Tours invoked the CTA's Statement on Vouchers. An excerpt of Transat's response, received on or around April 28, 2020, is attached and marked as Exhibit "130".

(v) Amex Reliance on Statement on Vouchers to Respond to Chargebacks

199. American Express [Amex] specifically excerpted portions of the CTA's Statement on Vouchers for Amex's template letter for refusing chargebacks [Amex Airline Vouchers Template], stating that:

> [...]
>
> It is worth noting that the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has stated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. However, if > you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, the CTA has indicated that you can file a complaint with them directly, and they will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff on a case-by-case basis in due course.

>
> [...]

200. An excerpt of Amex's response, dated May 16, 2020, to Ms. Heather Steven's chargeback against WestJet, containing the Amex Airline Vouchers Template, is attached and marked as Exhibit "131".

201. An excerpt of Amex's response, dated May 27, 2020, to Mr. Tim Willms's chargeback against Sunwing, containing the Amex Airline Vouchers Template, is attached and marked as Exhibit "132".

202. An excerpt of Amex's response, dated May 28, 2020, to Ms. Carla Paradisi's chargeback against WestJet, containing the Amex Airline Vouchers Template, is attached and marked as Exhibit "133".

203. An excerpt of Amex's response, dated June 21, 2020, to Ms. Kelsey Pruse's chargeback against Air Canada, containing the Amex Airline Vouchers Template, is attached and marked as Exhibit "134".

204. An excerpt of Amex's response, dated June 26, 2020, to Nuo Li's chargeback against Air Canada, containing the Amex Airline Vouchers Template, is attached and marked as Exhibit "135".

Q. Consumer Protection Regulators' Position on Refunds for Passengers

205. On or about March 16, 2020, Consumer Protection BC (the consumer protection regulator in the province of British Columbia) published an information page entitled "Questions about travel plans and COVID-19?" at https://www.consumerprotectionbc.ca/questions-about-travel-plans-and-covid-19/, which stated that:

> Have your travel plans been cancelled?
>
> - Some airlines and wholesalers are offering options for re-booking. While you may not receive the travel services on the desired date; you may be able to re-book travel services on another date or maybe even get a partial refund.
> - Contact your travel service provider to find out their policy on cancellations and re-booking. Be aware that in some cases, you may be required to pay the difference between the original booking and the new booking or a cancellation fee.
> - While you may remember to check your flights, don't forget to contact your accommodation providers and any tours you may have booked to find out your cancellation rights and responsibilities.
> - If you booked with a licensed travel agent, contact your booking agent for assistance. They will be able to help you with your options for re-booking.
> - If travel services are not provided and you paid by credit card, check with your credit card company to see if they will provide a refund for the travel services that were not provided.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Consumer Protection BC "Questions about travel plans and COVID-19?" page, as it was archived on May 3, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "136".

206. On or about May 25, 2020, Consumer Protection BC renamed the "Questions about travel plans and COVID-19?" to "Information for consumers: travel vouchers and refunds," which also included a specific section entitled "Trying to get a refund" :

We continue to get questions about consumer transactions in the time of COVID-19 including travel bookings and other types of businesses offering vouchers for future goods or services.

Many travel plans and other services have been disrupted over the last few months. When trying to resolve an issue, we encourage you to always start by contacting the business – in the case of travel, talk to your licensed travel agent, travel service provider or airline to find out what your options are. Please read all the fine print to fully understand the implications with any consumer contract.

The following information is focused on travel-related bookings, but the rules apply to any business offering vouchers, credits or gift cards, or anyone who has purchased a good or service online or by phone. Please note that these rules apply to not only to BC-based businesses and but also to any business dealing with a BC consumer.

Request a credit card chargeback

If your travel dates have passed and the business did not provide the service (as opposed to you choosing not to go) or if you have been informed by the business that your future travel has been cancelled, and you paid by credit card, check with your credit card company to request that the charges on the card be cancelled/reversed. If you are denied by your credit card company, you will need to go to the Civil Resolution Tribunal or court (depending on the dollar amount) to seek compensation from the business.

Did you book online or over the phone? If you booked your travel online or by phone and didn't get your services (as opposed to you choosing not to go), you can cancel your contract under BC's distance sales contracts provisions and be entitled to a refund from the business or chargeback from the credit card company. There are several steps to this process, waiting periods, and the remedy only kicks in 30 days after you don't get the service you bought (which means the date that you were supposed to travel). To understand and follow the process, visit the "Problem with an online purchase" page on our website, and follow these steps:

- Step 1: Read the section called "My product never arrived" and follow the instructions using the cancellation form. If the business doesn't respond to issue you a refund within 15 days, go to step 2.

- Step 2: Read the section called "I tried to cancel but didn't get a refund" and follow those instructions to obtain a reversal or cancellation of the charges from your credit card provider.

- Step 3: If the business and the credit card company both fail to provide you a refund, contact us to file a complaint. (Please follow all the steps above first.)

Remember that these options apply to any transaction done over the phone or online, it is not limited to travel bookings.

Read about distance sales in the Business Practices and Consumer Protection Act.

[Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Consumer Protection BC "Information for consumers: travel vouchers and refunds" page, as it was archived on August 13, 2020, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "137".

207. On or around April 30, 2021, Consumer Protection BC also published an FAQ page entitled "FAQ: Refunds for cancelled travel services" which provides that:

> Looking for a refund for travel services that were cancelled by your airline, cruise line or other travel provider? Here are some of the most common questions we get on this topic along with our answers.
>
> What you need to know
>
> After over a year of cancelled travel plans, many consumers have had issues getting refunds from travel suppliers. As a BC regulator, one of the laws we oversee gives you cancellation and refund rights when you don't receive the services you paid for online or over the phone. If you're eligible, you may be owed a refund under BC law.
>
> There's a lot to know and a number of steps to follow to get your refund, so we recommend you start by reading this page: COVID-19 and refunds for cancelled travel.
>
> [...]

> Q: The travel supplier (airline, hotel, cruise, etc.) has given me a voucher. Does that count as a refund?
>
> A: It depends. Here are some examples where a voucher is permissible, meaning you would not be eligible to go through our refund process: The travel supplier had a promotion or incentive of some kind to take a voucher and you agreed to it. Or you and the travel supplier agreed over email that a voucher was an acceptable resolution.
>
> Generally speaking, if you have had a voucher forced on you as a substitute to the travel services you bought and you did not indicate that you accept the voucher, you may still be able to go through our process to claim a refund. For example, a situation where the supplier cancelled your travel plans and simply put a voucher into your travel account (despite you wanting a refund). Depending on each circumstance, we may not deem that to be consent.
>
> If you are eligible for a refund under our laws, have been actively pursuing a refund from the business, and have followed the necessary steps, you must be refunded in the same way you paid.
>
> [...]
>
> Q: The travel provider says that their policy does not allow for refunds/full refunds. Can they refuse me a full refund?
>
> A: If you are eligible for a refund under the distance sales law, it does not matter what the business's refund/cancellation policy is - you should still receive a full refund.
>
> [...]
>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Consumer Protection BC "FAQ: Refunds for cancelled travel services" page, as it was archived on May 6, 2021, retrieved from the Internet Archive repository, is attached and marked as Exhibit "138".

208. On January 11, 2022, the Ombudsman for Banking Services and Investments issued a news release entitled "Consumer pursues credit card refund for vacation cancelled due to COVID-19," which stated that:

> Key lessons [...]
>
> - Many provinces have specific consumer protection laws to protect consumers against improper business practices and give them certain rights when they purchase goods and services with a credit card. These laws set out very specific rules and timelines that need to be met for their protections to apply.
>
> Consumer seeks refund when travel plans are cancelled
>
> In early 2020, Ms. Z booked an all-inclusive family vacation for the upcoming March Break through her travel agency. She paid the travel agency $5,600 using her credit card. A week before Ms. Z's departure, the travel agency cancelled her trip due to the COVID-19 lockdown that began in mid March.
>
> Ms. Z thought she would get a refund for the cancelled vacation. Instead, the travel agency offered her a voucher for future travel. Shortly afterwards, she contacted them to request a full refund on her credit card. When the travel agency refused, she contacted her bank to dispute the charge. The bank agreed to process a temporary chargeback for the full amount on Ms. Z's credit card while they investigated.
>
> During the bank's investigation, the travel agency said that it refused Ms. Z's request because its agreement with the bank stated that consumers did not have dispute rights when their vacations were cancelled due to a government regulation. Additionally, the travel agency said their refund policy permitted them to provide travel credit for the value of a cancelled vacation.
>
> [...]
>
> Our findings
>
> During our investigation, we interviewed Ms. Z and reviewed the details of the bank's investigation that led to its decision not to process the chargeback for her vacation. We found that the bank had appropriately applied its own policies and procedures and the rules for credit card chargebacks. However, when we reviewed the applicable consumer protection laws, we found that Ms. Z had complied with all the requirements and timelines for the charge to be cancelled or reversed under her provincial > consumer protection law. As a result, we recommended that the bank process a refund for Ms. Z's vacation along with any associated interest.

>
> [Emphasis added.]

A copy of the Ombudsman for Banking Services and Investments news release is attached and marked as Exhibit "139".

R. May 28, 2020: Minister of Transport on the Statement on Vouchers

209. On May 28, 2020, the Minister of Transport invoked the Statement on Vouchers when questioned on how the Government of Canada intended to answer the National Assembly of Quebec's motion on passenger refunds:

> Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval (Pierre-Boucher-Les Patriotes-Verchéres, BQ): Thank you, Mr. Chair.
>
> On April 27, Option consommateurs sent a letter to the Minister of Transport to warn him that the airlines' refusal to reimburse their customers for cancelled flights was contrary to Quebec's laws.
>
> What is the minister going to do to put an end to this situation?
>
> Hon. Marc Garneau (Minister of Transport): Mr. Chair, I sympathize with the people who would have preferred to get a refund, and I understand their frustration. It is not an ideal situation. The airlines are going through a very difficult time right now. If they were forced to refund their customers immediately, many of them would go bankrupt.
>
> Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Chair, the minister sounds like a broken record.
>
> A few hours ago, the following motion was passed unanimously: "THAT the National Assembly ask the Government of Canada to order airlines and other carriers under federal jurisdiction to allow customers whose trips have been cancelled because of the current pandemic to obtain a refund."
>
> What will the Minister of Transport tell the National Assembly of Quebec?

> Hon. Marc Garneau: Mr. Chair, as my hon. colleague knows, the Canadian Transportation Agency has ruled on this issue and has ruled that, in the present circumstances and in a non-binding way, it is acceptable for airlines to offer credits for up to two years. In the case of Air Canada, the credit has no expiry date.
>
> The Chair: Mr. Barsalou-Duval, you have about 15 seconds for a question.
>
> Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Chair, I find it rather odd that the Minister of Transport and the Canadian Transportation Agency are telling the airlines that Quebec's regulations and laws are not important and that they can override them. It seems to me that this is a strange way to operate. Theoretically, under the famous Canadian Constitution, which they imposed on us, that is not how it should work.
>
> Can they uphold their own constitution?
>
> The Chair: The hon. minister can answer in 15 seconds or less, please.
>
> Hon. Marc Garneau: Mr. Chair, as my hon. colleague probably knows, the Canadian Transportation Agency is a quasi-judicial body that operates at arm's length from Transport Canada and the Government of Canada.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

An excerpt of the House of Commons COVI Committee's Evidence from May 28, 2020 is attached and marked as Exhibit "140".

S. December 1, 2020: Mr. Streiner's Testimony Before the House of Commons TRAN Committee on the Statement on Vouchers

210. On December 1, 2020, Mr. Scott Streiner, the CEO and Chairperson of the CTA, testified before the House of Commons TRAN Committee and also gave evidence in respect of the Statement on Vouchers. A copy of the transcript from that session of the TRAN Committee is attached and marked as Exhibit "141". The pertinent sections are excerpted in the paragraphs following.

211. In the opening statement, Mr. Streiner acknowledged that it would be inappropriate to comment on government policy or matters that are before the CTA:

> Mr. Scott Streiner: [Opening Statement...] Let me conclude, Mr. Chair, by noting that because of the CTA's independent status and the quasi-judicial nature of our adjudications, it would not be appropriate for me to comment on government policy or on any matters that are currently before the CTA, but within those limits, my colleagues and I would be happy to respond to any questions the committee may have.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

212. Mr. Streiner was questioned by numerous MPs on the Statement on Vouchers, loss of impartiality from having issued the Statement on Vouchers, and subparagraph 122(c)(xi) of the Air Transport Regulations [ATR] and excerpted below:

> 122 Every tariff shall contain
>
> (c) the terms and conditions of carriage, clearly stating the air carrier's policy in respect of at least the following matters, namely,
>
> (xii) refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,
>
> [Emphasis added.]

213. The pertinent part of Mr. Streiner's answers to MP Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval's questions on paragraph 122(c)(xi) of the ATR is excerpted below:

> Mr. Scott Streiner: In fact, this provision and regulation requires that the carrier or the airline specify its terms and conditions of services. This regulation doesn't specifically require terms and conditions of service. In other words, there is no minimum obligation in this regulation to refund customers in these situations.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval (Pierre-Boucher-Les Patriotes-Verchères, BQ): Thank you, Mr. Streiner. However, if we read paragraph 122(c) correctly, what I just mentioned is one of the minimum conditions that tariffs must contain. So it's contained in the price of all tickets and in all carrier fares. This regulation applies to everyone, doesn't it?

Mr. Scott Streiner: This regulation applies, but it says that the airline must specify its terms and conditions of service. It does not specify exactly what conditions of service the tariffs must contain. It does not establish a minimum obligation.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Streiner, paragraph 122(c) states that, "Every tariff shall contain ... the following matters, namely", among which is noted that there must be a refund if the service is not provided. I think it's pretty clear that there has to be a refund.

Mr. Scott Streiner: It's clear that carriers must explain to passengers the terms and conditions of service contained in their tariffs. The interpretation of this regulation is clear. I don't want to repeat myself, but this regulation does not specify the exact content of tariffs.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: I think we're playing word games. Are you able to name a single case in the jurisprudence that supports the interpretation that passengers aren't entitled to a refund in these circumstances?

Mr. Scott Streiner: As a quasi-judicial tribunal, we make decision case by case based on the facts and on the relevant act and regulations. This means that we consider all terms and conditions and all circumstances.

It's a question of interpretation of the legislation. I think all the honourable members understand that it isn't appropriate for me, as chair of the Canadian Transportation Agency, to interpret the legislation here or make formal rulings. There is a legal process for that.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: I'd like to know if the people who work at the Canadian Transportation Agency know the provisions of the Quebec civil code relating to consumers.

Mr. Scott Streiner: I suppose some of them do. It's provincial legislation. We're responsible for applying federal legislation.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: According to the Quebec civil code, when a service has not been rendered, it must be refunded. It would be interesting if federal institutions, such as the Canadian Transportation Agency, could recognize and enforce the legislation that already exists.

I have another question. The Canadian Transportation Agency recently released new details about its statement on vouchers. You say that this statement isn't a binding decision. I'm trying to understand. Does the Canadian Transportation Agency have the power to issue a statement that is unenforceable but in conflict with the legislation?

Mr. Scott Streiner: The agency has the power to issue statements and guidance material on any topic within its scope.

As you specified, the statement does not change the obligations of the airlines or the rights of the passengers. The statement contains suggestions, and only suggestions. It isn't a binding decision.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Does the Canadian Transportation Agency have the power to change the legislation?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Of course not. The legislation exists, and our responsibility is to enforce it, which we always do impartially and objectively.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Don't you think the positions that have been taken by the Canadian Transportation Agency call into question its impartiality?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Not at all.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: But that's the impression many people have.

The Canadian Transportation Agency is currently nearly two years behind in processing the various complaints. Last spring, the agency also said that none of the complaints regarding air travel and ticket refunds would be dealt with until September.

What kind of message does it send to the airlines when it says that it won't deal with travel complaints? Are they being told not to issue refunds to their customers, because they're not going to get a slap on the wrist anyway? [Emphasis added.]

214. The pertinent part of Mr. Streiner's answers to MP Mr. Taylor Bachrach's questions on paragraph 122(c)(xi) of the ATR is excerpted below:

> Mr. Taylor Bachrach (Skeena–Bulkley Valley, NDP): Picking up where Mr. Barsalou-Duval left off, I did not get clarity on this in the answers to his questions, so I'm going to ask them again.
>
> Mr. Scott Streiner: Certainly.
>
> Mr. Taylor Bachrach: In the air transportation regulations, it very specifically speaks to the refunds issue, yet the statement on vouchers says, "The law does not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons beyond their control."
>
> If you read the regulations, section 122, which Mr. Barsalou-Duval read earlier, it very clearly says: [text of subparagraph 122 omitted]
>
> These seem to be in direct conflict with each other. How do you explain this?
>
> Mr. Scott Streiner: The air transportation regulations in the section that you and your colleague referred to outline the areas or topics that must be addressed by an airline's tariff. They don't establish the minimum obligations. They don't establish what the terms are; they simply indicate that terms must be established in these areas. Therefore, they don't establish a minimum obligation to pay compensation or to pay refunds in situations beyond airlines' control, only that a tariff has to address those questions.

215. The pertinent part of Mr. Streiner's answers to MP Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury's questions on the Statement on Vouchers and force majeure is excerpted below:

> Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury (Laval–Les Îles, Lib.): Thank you, Mr. Chair.
>
> I'd like to thank the witnesses. Their being here with us is really important and useful to the committee.
>
> We are in the middle of a really complicated and dangerous situation. The impact of the pandemic on the airline industry is unprecedented. Here, in Canada, we rely heavily on our airline industry, much more so than most other countries.

My first question is for Mr. Streiner.

Mr. Streiner, you explained the provisions of the Air Transportation Regulations regarding the obligation to refund - or not - customers. Could you tell us what happens in case of a force majeure? And can the pandemic be called a force majeure?

Mr. Scott Streiner: I thank the honourable member for his question.

I can't really answer that question, for one simple reason: as a quasi-judicial tribunal, we might have to deal with this issue. It's a matter of interpretation of the situation, the facts and the legislation. In order to maintain our impartiality, it's important to wait for the decision-making process before answering this important question.

[...]

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: In the context of this pandemic, in your opinion, Mr. Streiner, what would have happened to the airlines if they had been required to pay cash refunds to all passengers who applied for them? And what might have been the impact on Canadian travellers and communities?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Once again, I think this question should be directed more to my colleagues at Transport Canada, but I'll give a bit of an answer anyway.

We know that this crisis is unprecedented, but we don't know exactly what the consequences might have been in the situation you describe. Our role is simply to determine what the obligations of airlines are and what the rights of air passengers are under the law. These are the issues we are dealing with. I don't want to speculate by commenting on hypothetical situations.

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: Why did you issue directives that credits may be an acceptable alternative to cash reimbursement for travellers whose flights have been cancelled due to COVID-19?

Mr. Scott Streiner: The reason is simple: we did it to reduce the risk of air passengers ending up without any compensation. As I said, the legislation refers to this great variability in the conditions of service of different airlines; that's what creates this risk for air passengers. The objective of our Statement on Vouchers was to reduce this risk. [Emphasis added.]

216. MP Mr. Taylor Bachrach also specifically questioned Mr. Streiner on the purpose of the Statement on Vouchers, who approved the Statement on Vouchers, and whether the CTA would provide to the TRAN Committee documents relating to the Statement on Vouchers, which is excerpted below:

> Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Thank you, Mr. Chair.
>
> Mr. Streiner, which individuals authored and approved the March 25 statement on vouchers?
>
> Mr. Scott Streiner: With regard to the statement on vouchers, like all guidance material posted by the CTA - and we post a great deal of non-binding guidance material, policy statements and information - there are many people who participate in its preparation, in its drafting and in its review, so it's a large number of employees who contributed to that.
>
> Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Who approved it?
>
> Mr. Scott Streiner: Ultimately, every statement like this is an expression of the organization's guidance. As I emphasized earlier, the statement on vouchers, like these other documents, was nonbinding in nature, and it's an expression of guidance or a suggestion to the travelling public by the institution.
>
> [...]
>
> Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Mr. Streiner, will you commit to providing this committee with all internal documents, memos and emails concerning the March 25 statement on vouchers and the subsequent clarification?
>
> Mr. Scott Streiner: The CTA is subject to the same access to information rules as any other organization. We have a policy of transparency, and so we try to come forward. I will commit to certainly providing the committee with those documents that it's appropriate to provide, but we are a quasi-judicial tribunal, an independent regulator, and certain material is privileged.
>
> Mr. Taylor Bachrach: The challenge here, Mr. Streiner, as I'm sure you can guess from this line of questioning, is that as a quasi-judicial body, the CTA is in a position to fairly and without prejudice adjudicate these complaints that have come in from air passengers. Does this statement on vouchers not prejudice > that process? This very clearly sets out the outcome of those complaints related to refunds. You've already said that it's reasonable, so why adjudicate the specific complaint if you've already said that it's a reasonable approach?

>
> Mr. Scott Streiner: I want to give a very clear response to this question. The non-binding statement on vouchers was issued in order to protect passengers from ending up with nothing at all as a result of this situation, in part because of the legislative gap that I spoke about earlier. Nothing in that non-binding statement in any way affected or affects the rights of anybody who brings a complaint before us. The Federal Court of Appeal has already recognized that passengers' rights aren't affected. Right in the body of the statement, we said that every complaint would be considered on its merit. Every complaint will be considered on its merit, impartially, based on the evidence and the law.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

217. For greater certainty, I am citing Mr. Streiner's TRAN Committee testimony only to place before the Court what Mr. Streiner had represented to the TRAN Committee. I do not accept Mr. Streiner's TRAN Committee testimony as being correct, complete, or accurate regarding the asserted purpose for issuing the Statement on Vouchers and his assertion that the CTA has "a policy of transparency."

AFFIRMED remotely by Dr. Gábor Lukács at the City of Budapest, Hungary before me at the City of Coquitlam, British Columbia on September 7, 2023, in accordance with O. Reg. 431/20, Administering Oath or Declaration Remotely.

Commissioner for Taking Affidavits

Simon (Pak Hei) Lin, Barrister & Solicitor
LSO #: 76433W
4388 Still Creek Drive, Suite 237
Burnaby, BC V5C 6C6

Dr. Gábor Lukács

Halifax, NS
Tel:
lukacs@AirPassengerRights.ca

This is Exhibit "1" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada
Corporations Canada

Innovation, Sciences et Développement économique Canada
Corporations Canada

115

Form 4001
Articles of Incorporation
Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act (NFP Act)

Formulaire 4001
Statuts constitutifs
Loi canadienne sur les organisations à but non lucratif (Loi BNL)

1 Corporate name
Dénomination de l'organisation

Air Passenger Rights

2 The province or territory in Canada where the registered office is situated
La province ou le territoire au Canada où est maintenu le siège

NS

3 Minimum and maximum number of directors
Nombres minimal et maximal d'administrateurs

Min. 3 Max. 9

4 Statement of the purpose of the corporation
Déclaration d'intention de l'organisation

See attached schedule / Voir l'annexe ci-jointe

5 Restrictions on the activities that the corporation may carry on, if any Limites imposées aux activités de l'organisation, le cas échéant

See attached schedule / Voir l'annexe ci-jointe

6 The classes, or regional or other groups, of members that the corporation is authorized to establish Les catégories, groupes régionaux ou autres groupes de membres que l'organisation est autorisée à établir

See attached schedule / Voir l'annexe ci-jointe

7 Statement regarding the distribution of property remaining on liquidation
Déclaration relative à la répartition du reliquat des biens lors de la liquidation

See attached schedule / Voir l'annexe ci-jointe

8 Additional provisions, if any Dispositions supplémentaires, le cas échéant

See attached schedule / Voir l'annexe ci-jointe

9 Declaration: I hereby certify that I am an incorporator of the corporation.
Déclaration : J'atteste que je suis un fondateur de l'organisation.

Name(s) - Nom(s)

Gabor Lukacs

Signature

Gabor Lukacs

A person who makes, or assists in making, a false or misleading statement is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of not more than $5,000 or to imprisonment for a term of not more than six months or to both (subsection 262(2) of the NFP Act).

La personne qui fait une déclaration fausse ou trompeuse, ou qui aide une personne à faire une telle déclaration, commet une infraction et encourt, sur déclaration de culpabilité par procédure sommaire, une amende maximale de 5 000 $ et un emprisonnement maximal de six mois ou l'une de ces peines (paragraphe 262(2) de la Loi BNL).

You are providing information required by the NFP Act. Note that both the NFP Act and the Privacy Act allow this information to be disclosed to the public. It will be stored in personal information bank number IC/PPU-049.

Vous fournissez des renseignements exigés par la Loi BNL. Il est à noter que la Loi BNL et la Loi sur les renseignements personnels permettent que de tels renseignements soient divulgués au public. Ils seront stockés dans la banque de renseignements personnels numéro IC/PPU-049.

Canada

Schedule / Annexe

Purpose Of Corporation / Déclaration d'intention de l'organisation

1. To educate air passengers and the public at large as to their rights and the means for the enforcement of these rights, by researching and making available the results of such research on the matter of the law relating to air passenger rights on domestic and international flights.

2. To act as a liaison between other public interest or citizens' groups engaged in public interest advocacy.

3. To assist in and promote the activity of public interest group representation throughout Canada and elsewhere.

4. To make representations to governing authorities on behalf of the public at large and on behalf of public interest groups with respect to matters of public concern and interest with respect to air passenger rights, and to teach public interest advocacy skills and techniques.

Schedule / Annexe

Restrictions On Activities / Limites imposées aux activités de l'organisation

The Corporation shall have all the powers permissible by the Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act, save as limited by the by-laws of the Corporation.

Nothing in the above purposes, however, shall be construed or interpreted as in any way empowering the Corporation to undertake functions normally carried out by barristers and solicitors.

Schedule / Annexe
Classes of Members / Catégories de membres

There shall be two classes of members: Ordinary Members and voting General Members. The criteria for admission to both classes shall be governed by the by-laws of the Corporation.

Schedule / Annexe

Distribution of Property on Liquidation / Répartition du reliquat des biens lors de la liquidation

Upon liquidation, the property of the Corporation shall be disposed of by being donated to an eligible donee, as defined in the Income Tax Act (Canada).

Schedule / Annexe
Additional Provisions / Dispositions supplémentaires

a) Any amendment or repeal of the Corporation's By-Laws shall require confirmation by a Special Resolution of two-thirds of the General Membership prior to taking effect.

b) The Corporation shall be carried on without the purpose of gain for its Members, and any profits or other accretions shall be used in furtherance of its purposes.

c) Directors shall serve without remuneration, and no Director shall directly or indirectly receive any profit from his or her position as such, provided that Directors may be reimbursed for reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of their duties.

This is Exhibit "2" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Halifax, NS

AirPassengerRights.ca

lukacs@AirPassengerRights.ca

The Transportation Modernization Act (Bill C-49)

Submissions to the Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

by Air Passenger Rights

September 2017

Appendix

A. Final Decisions Arising from Dr. Lukács's Successful Complaints (Highlights)

1. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 208-C-A-2009;
2. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 313-C-A-2010;
3. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 477-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-41);
4. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 483-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-42);
5. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 291-C-A-2011;
6. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 418-C-A-2011;
7. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 182-C-A-2012;
8. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 250-C-A-2012;
9. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 251-C-A-2012;
10. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 248-C-A-2012;
11. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 249-C-A-2012;
12. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 252-C-A-2012;
13. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 467-C-A-2012;
14. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 16-C-A-2013;
15. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 204-C-A-2013;
16. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 227-C-A-2013;
17. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2013;
18. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013;
19. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 327-C-A-2013;
20. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 342-C-A-2013;
21. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013;
22. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 10-C-A-2014;
23. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014;
24. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2014;
25. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 420-C-A-2014; and
26. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 49-C-A-2016.

This is Exhibit "3" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

125

Decision No. 313-C-A-2013

August 15, 2013

COMPLAINT by Gábor Lukács against Sunwing Airlines Inc.

File No.: M4120-3/13-02395

INTRODUCTION

[1] On April 22, 2013, Gábor Lukács filed a complaint with the Canadian Transportation Agency (Agency) alleging that Rules 3.4, 15, 18(c), 18(e), and 18(f) of Sunwing Airlines Inc.'s (Sunwing) International Tariff (Tariff) are unclear, contrary to paragraph 122(c) and unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended (ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)). Those Rules concerns Sunwing's liability for schedule changes such as flight delay, advancement and cancellation.

[2] In its answer, as amended on June 3, 2013, Sunwing states that it proposes to delete Tariff Rule 3.4 and certain provisions of Tariff Rule 18 as they were repetitive with Tariff Rule 15. Sunwing advised that it would be replacing its Tariff Rule 15 with Proposed Tariff Rules 15 and 15A, which are, in its opinion, compliant with the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules for International Carriage by Air – Montreal Convention (Convention), the Code of Conduct of Canada's Airlines and Transport Canada's Flight Rights provisions, and reflect the Agency's jurisprudence.

[3] In his reply, also dated June 3, 2013, Mr. Lukács states that the parties agree, among other things, that Sunwing's Proposed Tariff Rules 15 and 15A fully address the issues raised in his complaint.

[4] Sunwing subsequently filed, in its Tariff with the Agency, Proposed Tariff Rules 15 and 15A for an effective date of June 14, 2013. In this case, only Proposed Tariff Rule 15 is relevant to the matter before the Agency. Given that the Previous Tariff Rules to which Mr. Lukács objected in his complaint are no longer in effect, it is not necessary for the Agency to address the clarity and reasonableness of those Rules.

[5] The Agency therefore will only consider the clarity and reasonableness of Existing Tariff Rules 15(1)(b), 15(1)(e), 15(1)(f), 15(1)(h) and 15(3).

ISSUES

1. Is Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(h) clear within the meaning of paragraph 122(c) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
2. Are ExistingTariff Rules 15(1)(b), 15(1)(e), 15(1)(f), 15(1)(h) and 15(3) reasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

RELEVANT STATUES AND TARIFF EXTRACTS

[6] The relevant Tariff provisions and the statutory extracts relevant to this Decision are set out in the Appendix.

CLARITY AND REASONABLENESS OF THE PROPOSED TARIFF RULES

Test for clarity

[7] In Decision No. 2-C-A-2001, the Agency formulated the test respecting the carrier's obligation of tariff clarity as follows:

> [...] the Agency is of the opinion that an air carrier's tariff meets its obligations of clarity when, in the opinion of a reasonable person, the rights and obligations of both the carrier and passengers are stated in such a way as to exclude any reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning.

Test for reasonableness

[8] To assess whether a term or condition of carriage is "unreasonable", the Agency has traditionally applied a balancing test, which requires that a balance be struck between the rights of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and the particular air carrier's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. This test was first established in Decision No. 666-C-A-2001 (Anderson v. Air Canada), and was recently applied in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. WestJet).

ISSUE 1: IS EXISTING TARIFF RULE 15(1)(h) CLEAR WITHIN THE MEANING OF PARAGRAPH 122(c) OF THE ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Analysis and findings

[9] The Agency notes that Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(h) states that the rights of a passenger vis-à-vis Sunwing are, in most cases of international carriage, governed by the Montreal Convention. The same Rule also provides that a carrier is liable for damage caused by delay in the carriage of the passenger and goods unless the carrier proves that it did everything that could reasonably be expected to avoid the damage.

[10] As stated in the test for clarity set out earlier in this Decision, an air carrier meets its tariff obligation of clarity when the rights and obligations of both the carrier and the passenger are stated in such a way as to exclude any reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning.

[11] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(h) clearly establishes that a carrier does have liability for loss, damage or delay of baggage and only in exceptional circumstances is a carrier able to raise a defence to a claim for liability or invoke damage limitations.

[12] The Agency therefore finds that Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(h) is clear within the meaning of paragraph 122(c) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

ISSUE 2: ARE EXISTING TARIFF RULES 15(1)(b), 15(1)(e), 15(1)(f), 15(1)(h) AND 15(3) REASONABLE WITHIN THE MEANING OF SUBSECTION 111(1) OF THE ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Analysis and findings

- Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(e) states, in part, that a passenger has a right to information on flight times and schedule changes;
- Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(f)(i) states, in part, that a passenger whose journey has been interrupted by an advance flight departure, a flight cancellation or overbooking, will be provided with remedial choices of whether they wish to continue to travel or receive a refund;
- Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(b) establishes that Sunwing shall not be liable for damage occasioned by overbooking or cancellation if it proves that it and its employees and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for the carrier and its employees or agents to take such measures;
- Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(f) states that a passenger whose journey is interrupted by an advance flight departure, a flight cancellation or overbooking will be provided with the option of accepting one or more of the following: reimbursement of the total price of the ticket for the parts of the journey not made, and/or transportation to the passenger's intended destination at the earliest opportunity at no additional cost.

[13] With respect to a passengers' right to notice about schedule changes, the Agency noted in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013 that some Canadian carriers have tariff provisions stating that that passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes and found such a tariff provision to be reasonable.

[14] Concerning a carrier's liability for damage, the Agency stated in Decision No. LET-C-A-80-2011 (Lukács v. Air Canada) that Article 19 of the Convention imposes certain obligations upon the carrier, beyond those of payment of compensation:

> A carrier, pursuant to Article 19 of the Convention, is liable for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage of, amongst other matters, passengers, but will not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or it was impossible for them to take such measures. 128

[15] In terms of passengers' right to refunds, in Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the fundamental right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time.

[16] The Agency is of the opinion that all of the Agency's findings stated above are applicable to this complaint.

[17] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rules 15(1)(b), 15(1)(e), 15(1)(f), 15(1)(h) and 15(3) are reasonable in that they strike a balance between the right of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Sunwing's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. Furthermore, these provisions are consistent with previous Agency decisions.

CONCLUSION

Issue 1

[18] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rule 15(1)(h) is clear within the meaning of paragraph 122(c) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Issue 2

[19] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rules 15(1)(b), 15(1)(e), 15(1)(f), 15(1)(h) and 15(3) are reasonable in that they strike a balance between the right of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Sunwing's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. Furthermore, these provisions are consistent with previous Agency decisions.

APPENDIX

EXISTING TARIFF RULES

RULE 15 – RESPONSIBILITY FOR SCHEDULES AND OPERATIONS

[...]

General

[...]

(b) The provisions of this Rule are not intended to make Carrier responsible for the acts of third parties that are not deemed employees and/or agents of the Carrier under applicable law or international conventions and all the rights herein described are subject to the following exception, namely, that Carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by overbooking or cancellation if the Carrier proves that it, and its employees and agents, took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or if it was impossible for the Carrier, and its employees or agents to take such measures. 129

(e) Passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes. In the event of a delay, an advanced flight departure or schedule change the carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform the passengers of delays, proposed advanced flight departures and schedule changes, and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them.

(f) (i) If the passenger's journey is interrupted by an Advance Flight Departure, a flight cancellation or overbooking, the Carrier will take into account all the circumstances of the case as known to it and will provide the passenger with the option of accepting one or more of the following remedial choices:

> reimbursement of the total price of the ticket at the price at which it was bought, for the part or parts of the journey not made, and for the part or parts already made if they no longer serve any purpose in relation to the passengers original travel plan, together with, when relevant, transportation to the passenger's point of origin, at the earliest opportunity, at no additional cost;
>
> transportation to the passenger's intended destination at the earliest opportunity, at no additional cost;

[...]

> (ii) When determining the transportation service to be offered, the Carrier will consider:
>
> available transportation services, including services offered by interline, code sharing and other affiliated partners and, if necessary, other non-affiliated carriers;
>
> the circumstances of the passenger, as known to it, including any factors which impact upon the importance timely arrival at the destination,
>
> (iii) having taken all known circumstances into consideration, the Carrier will take all measures that can reasonably be required to avoid or mitigate the damages caused by the Advance Flight Departure, overbooking and cancellation. Where a passenger nevertheless incurs expense as a result of the overbooking or cancellation, the Carrier will in addition offer a cash payment or travel credit, the choice of which will be at the passenger's discretion.
>
> (iv) When determining the amount of the offered cash payment or travel credit, the Carrier will consider all circumstances of the case, including any expenses which the passenger, acting reasonably, may have incurred as a result of the Advance Flight Departure, overbooking or cancellation, for example, costs incurred for accommodation, meals or additional transportation. The Carrier will set the amount of compensation offered with a view to reimbursing the passenger for all such reasonable expenses.

[...]

(h) The rights of a passenger against the Carrier are, in most cases of international carriage, governed by an international convention known as the Montreal Convention, 1999. Article 19 of that Convention provides that an air carrier is liable for damage caused by delay in the carriage of passengers and goods unless it proves that it did everything it could reasonably be expected to do to avoid the damage. There are some exceptional cases of international carriage in which the rights of the passengers are not governed by an international convention. In such cases only, a court of competent jurisdiction can determine which system of laws must be consulted to determine what those rights are. 130

[...]

(3) Passenger Expenses Resulting from Flight Delays or Advance Flight Departures

Passengers will be entitled to reimbursement from the Carrier for reasonable expenses incurred as a result of a flight delay or an Advance Flight Departure, subject to the following conditions:

(a) The Carrier shall not be liable for any damages, costs, losses or expenses occasioned by delays or advance flight departures if the Carrier proves it, and its employees and agents, took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or if it was impossible for the Carrier and its employees or agents to take such measures;

(b) Any passenger seeking reimbursement for expenses resulting from delays or advance flight departures must provide the carrier with (a) written notice of his or her claim, (b) particulars of the expenses for which reimbursement is sought and (c) receipts or other documents establishing to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier that the expenses were incurred; and

(c) The Carrier may refuse or decline any claim, in whole or part, if:

the passenger has failed or declined to provide proof or particulars establishing, to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier, that the expenses claimed were incurred by the passenger and resulted from a delay or advanced flight departure for which compensation is available under this Rule 15; or

(ii) the expenses for which reimbursement is claimed, or any portion thereof, are not reasonable or did not result from the delay or advanced flight departure as determined by the Carrier, acting reasonably.

Without affecting any obligation to reimburse a passenger as provided for in this tariff, the Carrier may, in its sole discretion, issue meal, hotel and/or ground transportation vouchers to passengers affected by a delay or advanced flight departure.

Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended

111. (1) All tolls and terms and conditions of carriage, including free and reduced rate transportation, that are established by an air carrier shall be just and reasonable and shall, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions and with respect to all traffic of the same description, be applied equally to all that traffic.

122. Every tariff shall contain

[...]

(c) the terms and conditions of carriage, clearly stating the air carrier's policy in respect of at least the following matters, namely, 131

[...]

iv. passenger re-routing,

v. failure to operate the service or failure to operate on schedule,

vi. refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,

[...]

x. limits of liability respecting passengers and goods,

xi. exclusions from liability respecting passengers and goods

[...]

Montreal Convention

Article 19 – Delay

The carrier is liable for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage by air of passengers, baggage or cargo. Nevertheless, the carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it or them to take such measures.

Member(s)

J. Mark MacKeigan
Sam Barone

Back to rulings

Date modified:
2013-08-15

This is Exhibit "4" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

133

Decision No. 344-C-A-2013

An erratum was issued on October 8, 2013

August 29, 2013

COMPLAINT by Gábor Lukács against Porter Airlines Inc.

File No.: M4120-3/13-01412

INTRODUCTION

[1] Gábor Lukács filed a complaint with the Canadian Transportation Agency (Agency) alleging that certain provisions appearing in Rule 16, Responsibility for Schedules and Operations, i.e., Rules 16(c), (e) and (g) (Existing Tariff Rules) of the Tariff Containing Rules Applicable to Services for the Transport of Passengers and Baggage or Goods between Points in Canada, CTA(A) No. 1 (Tariff) applied by Porter Airlines Inc. (Porter) are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the Canada Transportation Act, S.C., 1996, c. 10, as amended (CTA) for the following reasons:

i. these provisions deprive passengers of the right to be provided with notice about schedule changes;
ii. these provisions are a blanket exclusion that exonerates Porter from liability for delays (such as failure to operate on schedule or sudden changes to its flight schedule);
iii. these provisions are inconsistent with the principles of the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules for International Carriage by Air – Montreal Convention (Convention).

[2] Mr. Lukács asks the Agency to disallow the Existing Tariff Rules in their entirety, or in part, and substitute them with wording that incorporates the principles of the Convention.

[3] In its answer to the complaint, Porter proposed certain tariff revisions (Proposed Tariff Rules) in an effort to respond to Mr. Lukács' challenge of the Existing Tariff Rules. In his reply, Mr. Lukács asserts that some of these Proposed Tariff Rules lack clarity, that are inconsistent with the principles of the Convention. He also asserts that they are unjust and unreasonable, and therefore, they should be disallowed.

[4] In this Decision, the Agency will address both Porter's Existing Tariff Rules and the Proposed Tariff

Rules. 134

ISSUES

With respect to the Existing Tariff Rules:

1. Does Existing Tariff Rule 16(c), when considered together with Existing Tariff Rule 20, relieve Porter from the obligation to provide timely notice to its passengers about schedule changes? If so, is Existing Tariff Rule 16(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA?
2. Do Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) relieve Porter from liability for damages suffered by passengers occasioned by delay and failure to operate on schedule and are they inconsistent with the principles of the Convention? If so, are these Tariff Rules unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA?
3. Do the provisions of Existing Tariff Rule 16, starting on the 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff, setting out a list of events for which Porter shall not be liable for failure in the performance of any of its obligations, relieve Porter from liability for delay, regardless of whether it took all reasonable steps necessary to avoid the delay? Are they inconsistent with the principles of the Convention and, if so, are these tariff provisions unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA?

With respect to the Proposed Tariff Rules:

1. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) unclear with respect to Porter's obligations to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes because the phrase "without notice" in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) contradicts and negates the obligation to inform stated in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c)?
2. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) unreasonable because it is inconsistent with the principles of the Convention, in that it relieves Porter from liability for failure to make connections? Does it appear to relieve Porter from liability for the consequences of providing inaccurate information to passengers, including liability for delay as a result of the misinformation?
3. Is the phrase "will make reasonable efforts" found in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) unreasonable in that it tends to relieve Porter from liability if it fails to notify the passenger about a schedule change resulting in the passenger's inability to travel with respect to 1) flight delays; and 2) flight advancements?
4. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) unclear in that it does not contain "terms and conditions of carriage" or other information that a tariff ought to contain pursuant to subsection 107(1) of the Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended (ATR (Air Transportation Regulations))?
5. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) unreasonable and inconsistent with the principles of the Convention as it appears to: a) limit or exclude Porter's liability in the case of delay due to flight cancellation or schedule change and focuses on the cause rather than Porter's reaction to events; and; b) fail to provide passengers with the right to seek a full refund if Porter is unable to transport them within a reasonable amount of time and limit or exclude Porter's liability in the case of delay due to flight cancellation or schedule change?

6. Should the phrase “the Carrier proves that” be inserted into Proposed Tariff Rules 16(a)(i) and 16.2(b)(i) before “the Carrier and its employees and agents” to ensure that the burden of proof of the affirmative defense is on the carrier and to reflect the wording of Article 19 of the Convention?
7. Is the reference to “Event of Force Majeure” in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) unreasonable, given the proposed definition of “Event of Force Majeure” in Rule 1, because it is misleading and may prejudice passengers’ ability to enforce their rights?

RELEVANT TARIFF AND STATUTORY EXTRACTS

[5] The provisions of Existing Tariff Rules, Proposed Tariff Rules and the relevant legislation are set out in the Appendix.

CLARITY AND REASONABLENESS OF TARIFF PROVISIONS

Clarity

[6] As recently stated in Decision No. 249-C-A-2012 (Lukács v. WestJet), a carrier meets its tariff obligation of clarity when the rights and obligations of both the carrier and the passenger are stated in such a way as to exclude any reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning.

Reasonableness and conformity with the principles of the Convention

[7] To assess whether a term or condition of carriage is “unreasonable,” the Agency has traditionally applied a balancing test, which requires that a balance be struck between the rights of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and the particular air carrier’s statutory, commercial and operational obligations. This test was first established in Decision No. 666-C-A-2001 (Anderson v. Air Canada) and was recently applied in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Air Canada).

[8] The terms and conditions of carriage are set out by an air carrier unilaterally without any input from passengers. The air carrier sets its terms and conditions of carriage on the basis of its own interests, which may have their basis in purely commercial requirements. There is no presumption that a tariff is reasonable.

[9] When balancing the passengers’ rights against the carrier’s obligations, the Agency must consider the whole of the evidence and the submissions presented by both parties and make a determination on the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the term or condition of carriage based on which party has presented the more compelling and persuasive case.

[10] Mr. Lukács, in addition to setting out concerns regarding the reasonableness and clarity of Porter’s Existing Tariff Rules and Proposed Tariff Rules, also submits that the provisions do not conform with the principles of the Convention. In past Decisions, the Agency has determined that tariff provisions that are contrary to the principles of the Convention are unreasonable. The Agency will consider the submissions of the parties on the issue of conformity with the principles of the Convention.

EXISTING TARIFF RULES

Issue 1: Does Existing Tariff Rule 16(c), when considered together with Existing Tariff Rule 20, relieve Porter from the obligation to provide timely notice to its passengers about schedule changes? If so, is Existing Tariff Rule unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA?

Positions of the parties

Mr. Lukács

[11] Mr. Lukács submits that, when considered together with Existing Tariff Rule 20, which provides the check-in requirements, Existing Tariff Rule 16(c) is unreasonable because it deprives passengers of their right to be notified about schedule changes affecting their travels.

[12] Mr. Lukács contends that transportation by air requires significant preparations for the passenger such as travelling to an airport that might be located some distance away from their residence, checking in, clearing security and then boarding the flight. Mr. Lukács adds that that due to natural and fully justifiable operation considerations, carriers set deadlines for completing each of these steps. Missing these deadlines may result in losing the assigned seat at the very least and possibly the cancellation of the passenger's reservation. If the departure time of a flight changes, then the respective deadlines change accordingly. In particular, if a carrier reschedules a flight an hour earlier than published, it results in passengers having to arrive at the airport an hour earlier, and having to check in an hour earlier, or else they lose their seats and reservations. Mr. Lukács points out that the Agency recognized, in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Porter), the passenger's right to be informed about delays and schedule changes.

Porter

[13] Porter conceded that Existing Tariff Rule 16(c) is unreasonable and filed Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c).

Analysis and findings

[14] Existing Tariff Rule 20 provides a list of check-in requirements and states that failure to meet these requirements may result in the loss of the passenger's assigned seat or reservation.

[15] Existing Tariff Rule 16(c) is silent on the matter of the liability assumed by Porter should a flight be delayed. Given this absence of liability, passengers may not be informed of a delay or changes and therefore may fail to meet the check-in requirements set out in Existing Tariff Rule 20.

[16] In Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency addressed the same provisions as in this matter in a case that addressed Porter's international tariff. In that Decision, the Agency found that the absence of a provision to this effect relieves Porter from the obligation to provide timely notice to its passengers about delays or schedule changes. Porter has not provided any rationale that would convince the Agency that the domestic tariff should be governed by a different logic than the international tariff. As noted above, Porter conceded that Existing Rule 16(c) is unreasonable.

[17] The Agency therefore finds that Existing Tariff Rule 16(c) is unreasonable.

Issue 2: Do Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) relieve Porter from liability for damages suffered by passengers occasioned by delay and failure to operate on schedule and are they inconsistent with the principles of the Convention? If so, are these Tariff Rules unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA?

Positions of the parties

Mr. Lukács

[18] Mr. Lukács challenges the reasonableness of Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) on the grounds that they are blanket exclusions that relieve Porter from any and every liability for delay and failure to operate on schedule, and because they are inconsistent with the principles of the Convention.

[19] Mr. Lukács submits that the Agency has consistently found blanket exclusions of liability to be unreasonable even in the context of domestic tariffs, where the Convention is not applicable. Mr. Lukács adds that the Agency held that the principles of the Convention are a persuasive authority for determining the reasonableness of provisions, regardless of whether the Convention applies, such as in Decision No. 181-C-A-2007 (Pinksen v. Air Canada) and Decision No. 309-C-A-2010 (Kipper v. WestJet).

[20] Mr. Lukács points out that the Agency's preliminary opinion on this issue was affirmed in Decision No. 291-C-A-2011 (Lukács v. Air Canada) and was subsequently cited with approval by the Agency in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, which concluded that Porter's international tariff Rule 18(e), a provision similar to its Existing Tariff Rule 16(g) of its domestic tariff, was unreasonable.

Porter

[21] Porter conceded that Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) are unreasonable, and filed Proposed Tariff Rules.

Analysis and findings

[22] Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) are silent on the matter of the liability assumed by Porter for failure to make connections, to operate any flight according to schedule, or for changing the schedule of any flight. 138

[23] With respect to applying the principles of the Convention to domestic tariff provisions, the Agency stated in Decision No. LET-C-A-129-2011 (Lukács v. Air Canada) that:

> [...] it is clear that the Agency is, and has been, of the view that the Convention is a useful interpretive tool to which the Agency may refer when applying its "reasonableness" test and striking the balance between passengers' rights and the statutory, commercial and operational obligations of a carrier. In doing so the Agency takes into account the principles of the Convention rather than applying the Convention itself.
>
> The Agency is of the view that passengers should expect and be entitled to consistency in treatment irrespective of whether they are on a domestic or international flight. To that end, the principles set out in the Convention provide insight into what is reasonable to apply in a domestic context.

[24] Article 19 of the Convention provides that the carrier is liable for delay, and it can exonerate itself from liability only if it demonstrates the presence of an affirmative defense, namely, that it and its servants and agents have taken all reasonable steps necessary to avoid the delay.

[25] In Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency addressed tariff provisions similar to those currently being considered. In that Decision, the Agency determined that the tariff provisions were contrary to Article 19 of the Convention and therefore unreasonable because they were silent on the liability assumed by Porter. Porter has not provided any arguments which would convince the Agency to decide differently than it did in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013. As noted above, Porter conceded that Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) are unreasonable.

[26] The Agency therefore finds that Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) are unreasonable and inconsistent with the principles of Article 19 of the Convention.

Issue 3: Do the provisions of Existing Tariff Rule 16, starting on the 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff, setting out a list of events for which Porter shall not be liable for failure in the performance of any of its obligations, relieve Porter from liability for delay, regardless of whether it took all reasonable steps necessary to avoid the delay? Are they inconsistent with the principles of the Convention and, if so, are these tariff provisions unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA?

Positions of the parties

Mr. Lukács – Delay

[27] Mr. Lukács submits that the exclusions appearing on the list starting on 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff are unreasonable as they amount to a blanket exclusion of liability. He argues that they are inconsistent with the principles of the Convention.

[28] Mr. Lukács points out that the list has a preamble that reads:

> Notwithstanding any other terms or conditions contained herein, the Carrier shall not be liable for failure in the performance of any of its obligations due to:
>
> [...]
>
> Upon the happening of any of the foregoing events, the Carrier may without notice cancel, terminate, divert, postpone or delay any flight whether before departure or enroute. If the flight, having commenced is terminated, the carrier shall refund the unused portion of the fare and shall use its best effort to provide alternate transportation to the destination for the passengers and baggage at the expense and risk of the passenger or shipper. If the flight has not commenced prior to termination, the carrier will provide a credit equal to the paid fare which will be available for use in the purchase of a new ticket on the same terms for a period of one year from the date of termination. No refund will be available.

[29] Mr. Lukács also points out that the list of events that Porter purports to exonerate itself from any liability from performance of any of its obligations includes, for example:

> v) Accidents to or failure of the aircraft or equipment used in connection therewith including, in particular, mechanical failure.
>
> vi) Non-availability of fuel at the airport of origin, destination or enroute stop.
>
> vii) Others upon whom the Carrier relies for the performance of the whole or any part of any charter contract or flight.

[30] Mr. Lukács asserts that, as the Agency explained in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, it is not the cause of delay that determines liability but how the carrier reacts to the delay. The exclusions listed starting on 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff relieve Porter from liability for delay solely based on the cause and without reference to how it reacts to the delay. Mr. Lukács argues that these exclusions are inconsistent with the principles of the Convention, and are therefore unreasonable.

Mr. Lukács – Damage or destruction of baggage or cargo

[31] Mr. Lukács points out that destruction, loss and damage to checked baggage and to cargo are governed respectively by Article 17(2) and Article 18(2) of the Convention. The exclusions listed starting on 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff relieve Porter from liability for delay solely based on the cause and without reference to how Porter reacts to the delay. This is inconsistent with the principles of Articles 17(2) and 18(2) of the Convention, and therefore unreasonable.

Mr. Lukács – Relief from “performance of any of its obligations”

140

[32] Mr. Lukács contends that the impugned provisions purport to relieve Porter from “performance of any of its obligations” in the case of certain events, regardless of how the event affects Porter’s ability to perform. Mr. Lukács thus submits that the impugned provisions are a blanket exclusion of liability, and are therefore inconsistent with the principles of the Convention.

Porter

[33] Porter conceded that the provisions starting on 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff, which are in effect, a “force majeure” clause, may have the effect of excluding liability in a manner that is inconsistent with the Convention, and filed Proposed Tariff Rules.

Analysis and findings

[34] Article 19 of the Convention provides that carriers are liable for delay unless it and its servants and agents have taken all reasonable steps necessary to avoid the delay. Articles 17(2) and 18(2) of the Convention provide that carriers are liable for damage or loss of baggage and cargo even in the absence of a causal link between the damage or loss and the inherent defect, vice or quality of the baggage.

[35] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács that the exclusions of liability relieve Porter from liability for delay, regardless of whether it took all reasonable steps necessary to avoid the delay, and for damage or loss of baggage or cargo. Also, as noted above, Porter conceded that the provisions starting on 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff, which are in effect a “force majeure” clause, may have the effect of excluding liability in a manner that is inconsistent with the Convention, and Porter filed Proposed Tariff Rules.

[36] The Agency therefore finds the exclusions listed in Existing Tariff Rule 16, starting on 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff, are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 67.2(1) of the CTA and inconsistent with the principles of the Convention.

PROPOSED TARIFF RULES

Issue 1: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) unclear with respect to Porter’s obligations to inform passengers of delays and schedule given that the phrase “without notice” in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) contradicts and negates the obligation to inform stated in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c)?

Positions of the parties

Mr. Lukács

[37] Mr. Lukács maintains that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) is unclear as part of it contradicts and negates Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c). Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) states, in part: “Schedules are subject to change without notice.” Mr. Lukács points out that at the same time, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) states that: “The carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them.”

[38] According to Mr. Lukács, these two provisions contradict each other because the phrase “without notice” in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) purports to relieve Porter of any obligation to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes, and thus negates the obligation stated in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c).

Analysis and findings

[39] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) is unclear when read in conjunction with Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) because Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) contradicts and seems to negate the obligation stated in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c). In that sense, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) creates reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning.

[40] The Agency therefore finds that if filed with the Agency, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) would be found to be unclear.

Issue 2: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) unreasonable because it is inconsistent with the principles of the Convention, in that it relieves Porter from liability for failure to make connections? Does it appear to relieve Porter from liability for the consequences of providing inaccurate information to passengers, including liability for delay as a result of the misinformation?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[41] Porter submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) contains language taken from Rule 90(B)(2) of the Sample Tariff published by the Agency, and that the statement “schedules are subject to change without notice” was found reasonable in light of the Agency’s finding in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013. Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) reads as follows:

> Schedules are subject to change without notice, and the carrier assumes no responsibility for the passenger making connections. The carrier will not be responsible for errors or omissions either in timetables or other representation of schedules.

[42] Porter acknowledges that when considering the same language in the context of Porter’s proposed tariff rule in that other proceeding, the Agency also held that additional language was required stating that the carrier “will make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes, and the reasons for them." Porter advises that it has accordingly included the latter language in Proposed Tariff Rule 16 at Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c). Porter asserts that this statement serves to inform the passenger that notice from the carrier may not reach the passenger despite the carrier's reasonable efforts, thus reducing the possibility that passengers will place undue reliance on the expectation that they will necessarily receive prior notice in all instances. 142

[43] Porter contends that passengers may more frequently (but are not required to) take steps to independently ascertain their flights' status, thus reducing the likelihood that they will be unaware of schedule changes and increasing their opportunity to mitigate the impact thereof.

[44] Porter contends that the balance of Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) reflects the Agency's repeated findings that timetables do not form part of the contract of carriage and that undue reliance by passengers on stated departure times is unreasonable. Porter argues that, to the extent that this provision is contained in the Agency's Sample Tariff, it is prima facie evidence of its reasonableness.

Mr. Lukács

[45] Mr. Lukács states that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) provides, among other things, that: "[...] the carrier assumes no responsibility for the passenger making connections."

[46] Mr. Lukács submits that in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency considered Porter's international tariff Rule 18(c) that contained a similar disclaimer of liability with respect to making connections, and found that the absence of a provision setting out Porter's liability should a flight be delayed and Porter is unable to provide the proof required by Article 19 of the Convention to relieve itself from such liability rendered tariff Rule 18(c) inconsistent with Article 19 of the Convention, and therefore unreasonable.

[47] Mr. Lukács also states that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) provides that: "The carrier will not be responsible for errors or omissions [...]"

[48] Mr. Lukács asserts that this provision is unreasonable because it relieves Porter from the duty of due diligence to provide accurate information to passengers about Porter's timetables and schedules.

[49] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency recognized that carriers should have the latitude required to amend flight schedules based on commercial and operational obligations, but also recognized the passengers' fundamental right to be informed about schedule changes that affect their itinerary and their ability to travel.

[50] Mr. Lukács submits that this portion of Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) is therefore unreasonable because it purports to relieve Porter from liability for the consequences of providing inaccurate information to passengers, including liability for delay that follows as a result of the misinformation. Mr. Lukács adds that the impugned portion of Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) is also unreasonable because it is inconsistent with the principles of the Convention.

Analysis and findings

[51] Porter has made statements concerning the Sample Tariff published by the Agency on its Web site.

The Agency clarified its intent in the Important Qualifiers section of the Sample Tariff which is set out below. 143

> This Sample Tariff has been prepared by Agency staff and does not represent an Agency endorsement or approval of its terms. If a carrier chooses to adopt the Sample Tariff as its own, in whole or in part, it can still be subject to Agency review and complaints filed pursuant to the CTA or the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency, upon investigating a complaint or on its own motion, could find a carrier's tariff provision to be unreasonable and require a carrier to amend its tariff accordingly even if the carrier's tariff reflects the wording of the Sample Tariff.

[52] In Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency determined that the absence of a provision that required Porter to make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes and the reasons for them rendered the Tariff Rule at issue unreasonable. Porter's Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) does not meet that standard, nor has Porter provided any rationale that would justify a change to the Agency's determination in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013.

[53] Passengers should not be deprived of the right to be informed as described above because an error or omission has been committed by a carrier in preparing and/or publishing a timetable or schedule. The absence of a provision in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) compelling Porter to make a reasonable effort to advise passengers of errors or omissions in timetables and/or schedules renders that Rule unreasonable.

[54] The Agency therefore finds that if filed with the Agency, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) would be found to be unreasonable.

Issue 3: Is the phrase "will make reasonable efforts" found in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) unreasonable in that it tends to relieve Porter from liability if Porter fails to notify the passenger about a schedule change resulting in the passenger's inability to travel with respect to 1) flight delays; and 2) flight advancements?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[55] Porter advises that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) states: "The carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them." In this regard, Porter submits that in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency found that the same proposed change applicable to international transportation properly balances the passenger's right to information on schedule changes.

Mr. Lukács

[56] Mr. Lukács acknowledges that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) is an improvement compared to the current state of affairs, but submits that making “reasonable efforts” sets the bar too low for Porter in some circumstances. 144

[57] Mr. Lukács refers to Decision No. LET-A-112-2003 in which the Agency held, under the heading “Passenger Notification,” that:

> The Agency is of the opinion that Air Transat should undertake to notify passengers of all schedule irregularities, not just flight advancements.

[58] Mr. Lukács argues that the phrase “will make reasonable efforts” ought to be replaced with the more onerous “undertakes.”

[59] Mr. Lukács contends that, while in the case of flight delays, failing to notify passengers usually causes only inconvenience, in the case of advancement of flight schedules, Porter’s failure to inform passengers about the schedule change will likely result in passengers not being able to travel at all, because they miss the check-in cut-off times.

[60] Mr. Lukács submits that under Proposed Tariff Rule 16 in general, and Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) in particular, the passenger is left without any rights or remedies. However, if the word “undertakes” appeared in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c), then the passenger would have recourse.

Analysis and findings

“Reasonable efforts” versus flight delays

[61] In Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency stated that:

> [87] [...] the Agency notes that some Canadian carriers, including Air Canada, have tariff provisions that provide that passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes, and that carriers must make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes, and the reasons for them. The Agency finds that such provisions are reasonable, and that, in this regard, the rights of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage outweigh any of the carrier’s statutory, commercial or operational obligations.

[62] The Agency finds that the commitment to make “reasonable efforts” to inform passengers, insofar as such commitment pertains to flight delays and schedule changes, is consistent with the Agency’s ruling in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, and is reasonable.

“Reasonable efforts” versus flight advancements

[63] No evidence has been put forth that flight advancements are common. They may occur in practice from time to time. When the air carrier advances the scheduled departure of a flight, the consequences 145 may be more severe than a delay for the passenger and it follows that the duty to inform should be no less onerous.

[64] With respect to flight advancements, passengers affected by flight advancement are not afforded the same protection as passengers affected by flight delay or other schedule changes. In that sense, the Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission that in such a case, the passenger is left without any rights or remedies as the liability established by the principles of the Convention only apply to flight delays, and not to flight advancements. The absence of a tariff provision that imposes on Porter a requirement to "undertake" to inform passengers of flight advancements would severely limit the recourses available to passengers affected by those advancements, and would certainly be disadvantageous.

[65] The Agency is of the opinion that the commitment to make "reasonable efforts" to inform passengers, insofar as such commitment pertains to flight advancements, is unreasonable. The Agency therefore finds that if filed with the Agency, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) would be found to be unreasonable.

Issue 4: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) unclear in that it does not contain "terms and conditions of carriage" or other information that a tariff ought to contain pursuant to subsection 107(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[66] Porter submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) contains language taken from Rule 90(B)(5) of the Agency's Sample Tariff. Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) states:

> It is always recommended that the passenger communicate with the Carrier either by telephone, electronic device or via the Carrier's Web site or refer to airport terminal displays to ascertain the flight's status and departure time.

[67] Porter asserts that to the extent that this provision does not create any obligation on the part of the passenger, nor limit the obligations or liability of the carrier, it is reasonable. According to Porter, this provision operates similarly to the warning that schedules may change without notice, insofar as it precludes undue reliance on notice from the carrier and increases the likelihood that passengers will be informed of any schedule changes and thus be better positioned to mitigate the impact.

Mr. Lukács

[68] Mr. Lukács submits that while Porter notes that this provision was taken from the Agency's Sample Tariff, Porter omits to acknowledge that the Sample Tariff is provided to carriers together with the following warning: 146

> This Sample Tariff has been prepared by Agency staff and does not represent an Agency endorsement or approval of its terms. If a carrier chooses to adopt the Sample Tariff as its own, in whole or in part, it can still be subject to Agency review and complaints filed pursuant to the CTA or the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency, upon investigating a complaint or on its own motion, could find a carrier's tariff provision to be unreasonable and require a carrier to amend its tariff accordingly even if the carrier's tariff reflects the wording of the Sample Tariff.

[69] Mr. Lukács maintains that the fact that this provision was included in the Agency's Sample Tariff does not speak either to its clarity or the reasonableness of any provision, and does not convey any obligation of either the passenger or the carrier.

[70] Mr. Lukács asserts that while a carrier is entitled to display various travel tips and recommendations on its Web site, such recommendations do not and cannot form part of the contract of carriage; they are not terms and conditions of carriage, and as such, they ought not be included in the carrier's tariff.

[71] Mr. Lukács submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) fails to be clear, and ought not be included in Porter's Tariff as it contains no "terms and conditions of carriage" or any other information that a tariff is to contain pursuant to subsection 107(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Analysis and findings

[72] The Agency disagrees with Mr. Lukács' contention that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) is unclear. The Agency finds that it is worded in such a manner that does not create reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning. The Agency does agree with Mr. Lukács that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) does not represent a term or condition of carriage. However, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) does not impose an obligation on either the carrier or the passenger, and is therefore unenforceable.

[73] The Agency has not been presented with evidence establishing any harm if Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) were to appear in the Tariff.

Issue 5: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) unreasonable and inconsistent with the principles of the Convention as it appears to: a) limit or exclude Porter's liability in the case of delay due to flight cancellation or schedule change and focuses on the cause rather than Porter's reaction to events; and b) fail to provide passengers with the right to seek a full refund if Porter is unable to transport them within a reasonable amount of time and limit or exclude Porter's liability in the case of delay due to flight cancellation or schedule change?

Positions of the parties

Porter

147

[74] Porter contends that the provisions following Existing Tariff Rule 16(g) have the effect of excluding liability in a manner inconsistent with the Convention, and therefore proposes to replace the impugned clause with Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) which reads as follows:

> Except with respect to compensation available to passengers under this Rule 16, the Carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to scheduled flight times due to an Event of Force Majeure.

[75] Porter maintains that Proposed Tariff Rules 16.1 and 16.2 specifically incorporate the principle that passengers are entitled to compensation unless the carrier took all reasonable and possible measures to avoid the damage. Porter therefore argues that even in the case of a delay due to force majeure, passengers will have recourse to reimbursement for their resulting damages where the conditions of the Convention are satisfied.

[76] Porter advises that it is not aware of any Agency Decision in which a force majeure clause has been disallowed as unreasonable for any reason other than its failure to allow for the application of the liability regime prescribed by the Convention. Porter submits that it is reasonable, in balancing the rights of the carrier and the passenger, to exclude liability for events beyond the control of the carrier, subject always to the carrier's strict liability for damages resulting from delay, irrespective of the cause of the delay.

[77] Porter contends that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) corrects the defect in the Existing Tariff Rule 16 force majeure clause by specifically subjecting it to the liability regime in which Porter will be liable for delay unless it demonstrates the limited defense set forth in Article 19 of the Convention, rendering the Proposed Tariff Rule reasonable.

1. Proposed definition of "Event of Force Majeure"

[78] Porter submits that, as Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) makes reference to the term "Force Majeure Event," Porter proposes to add a definition of this term under Rule 1 (Definitions) of its Tariff. Porter advises that the proposed definition provides that a "Force Majeure Event" represents occurrences "which are not within the reasonable control of the Carrier," and sets forth a number of examples of situations which may constitute force majeure events, subject always to the qualification that such events were beyond Porter's reasonable control.

Mr. Lukács

[79] Mr. Lukács contends that what determines liability for delay is not the cause of the delay, but rather how the carrier reacts to events that may cause delay, even if these events may have been caused by third parties that are not directed by the carrier.

[80] Mr. Lukács submits that the Agency explains this in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013:

148

> [105] Accordingly, what is at issue, in terms of avoiding liability for delay, is not who caused the delay but, rather, how the carrier reacts to a delay. In short, did the carrier's servants and agents do everything they reasonably could in the face of air traffic control delays, security delays on releasing baggage, delays caused by late delivery of catered supplies or fuel to the aircraft and so forth, even though these may have been caused by third parties who are not directed by the carrier?

[81] Mr. Lukács maintains that as Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) deals with flight cancellations and schedule changes, it is difficult to understand what kind of liability, other than liability for delay, this provision aims to exclude. Mr. Lukács further submits that Porter provided no explanation or examples of scenarios where it may wish to invoke Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f), but which do not already fall within the scope of delay.

[82] Mr. Lukács asserts that Porter seems to suggest that the Convention is the only reason the Agency disallowed provisions dealing with the rights of passengers in the case of flight cancellation and schedule changes, which is not the case.

[83] In this regard, Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 28-A-2004 (Air Transat), the Agency considered in great detail the rights of passengers for protection in the case of events that are beyond the passengers' control:

> By Decision No. LET-A-166-2003 dated August 7, 2003 [...] the Agency advised Air Transat that Rule 6.3 of its tariff was not just and reasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), in that it does not provide adequate options to passengers affected by a schedule irregularity, and does not protect passengers from events that are beyond the passengers' control, and, therefore, does not allow passengers any recourse if they are unable to connect to other air carriers or alternate modes of transportation such as cruise ships or trains.

[84] According to Mr. Lukács, that Agency Decision demonstrates that passengers have a fundamental right to a refund of their fares if the carrier is unable to transport them for any reason that is outside the passengers' control and that the carrier cannot keep the fare paid by the passengers and refuse to provide a refund on the basis that its inability to provide transportation was due to certain events.

Analysis and findings

[85] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) is unreasonable in that it fails to reflect the appropriate approach to the issue of liability, as set out in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013:

149

> [105] Accordingly, what is at issue, in terms of avoiding liability for delay, is not who caused the delay but, rather, how the carrier reacts to a delay. In short, did the carrier's servants and agents do everything they reasonably could in the face of air traffic control delays, security delays on releasing baggage, delays caused by late delivery of catered supplies or fuel to the aircraft and so forth, even though these may have been caused by third parties who are not directed by the carrier?

[86] The Agency also agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) does not provide for refunds should Porter be unable to carry the passenger because of reasons beyond Porter's control. Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) simply requires that passengers be compensated in accordance with that Rule.

[87] Existing Tariff Rule 17(b) provides that:

> Involuntary Cancellations – In the event a refund is required because of the carrier's failure to complete the operation of any flight after its commencement and the ticket is partially unused as a result of an enroute cancellation, termination or diversion, that part of the total fare paid for each unused segment will be refunded. If the ticket is totally or partially unused as a result of a refusal to transport, the total fare or that part of the total fare paid for each unused segment will be refunded. No refund will be available if the flight is cancelled prior to the commencement of the flight and the provisions of Rule 16 will apply.

[88] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács, and finds that it is unreasonable for Porter to refuse to refund the fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond Porter's control.

[89] The Agency therefore finds that if filed with the Agency, Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) would be found to be unreasonable.

Issue 6: Should the phrase "the Carrier proves that" be inserted into Proposed Tariff Rules 16(a)(i) and 16.2(b)(i) before "the Carrier and its employees and agents" to ensure that the burden of proof of the affirmative defense is on the carrier and to reflect the wording of Article 19 of the Convention?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[90] Porter submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 16.1 clearly sets out the circumstances in which Porter will be liable to passengers for expenses resulting from delays, in accordance with the principles of the Convention. Porter points out that the contents of its various provisions were considered and determined to be reasonable in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013. 150

[91] Porter maintains that Proposed Tariff Rule 16.1 is consistent with Decision No. LET-C-A-29-2011 and that Rule states plainly that Porter will be liable to reimburse passengers in the circumstances set out in that Decision; there is no suggestion that liability will only adhere in exceptional circumstances.

[92] Porter contends that Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2 addresses Porter's liability under the Tariff for delayed delivery of a passenger's baggage. Porter adds that the Proposed Tariff Rule's contents are substantially identical to those found to be reasonable in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013.

[93] According to Porter, consistent with the Convention's liability principles, Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2(b) positively states that, notwithstanding that concurrent baggage delivery is not guaranteed, Porter will be liable for delays in the carriage of baggage except in the circumstances set out therein. Porter adds that as with Proposed Tariff Rule 16.1(i)(b), Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2(b) reproduces the exception to liability contained in Article 19 of the Convention, and sets out a reasonable process by which passengers may submit claims for compensation to Porter.

[94] Porter asserts that Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2(c) provides notice to passengers of the compensation available to them from Porter, including that:

(a) Porter will reimburse passengers for the loss of her bag after 21 days, subject to limits of:

i. 1131 SDR, expressly stated to be approximately equivalent to CAD $1,800, where no excess value has been declared, and
ii. (CAD $3,000, where the passenger has declared an excess value of the lost item.

[95] Porter points out that in Decision No. 418-C-A-2011 (Lukács v. WestJet), the Agency has found similar provisions – including as to clarity, limits of liability and requirement of proof of value – to be reasonable.

[96] Porter also points out that as with Proposed Tariff Rule 16.1, Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2 permits Porter to deny otherwise eligible claims only where the passenger has failed to follow the reasonable process set out therein, or where the expenses claimed are not reasonable.

Mr. Lukács

[97] Mr. Lukács contends that the vast majority of the provisions under Proposed Tariff Rules 16.1 and 16.2 are reasonable but the phrase "the Carrier proves that" ought to be inserted into Proposed Tariff Rule 16.1(a)(d) [or more correctly, Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2(a)(i)] and Proposed Tariff Rule 16.2(b)(i) before "the Carrier and its employees and agents" in order to reflect the wording of Article 19 of the Convention.

[98] According to Mr. Lukács, this phrase is to ensure that the burden of proof of the affirmative defense is on the carrier, which is a central feature of the Convention that has been widely recognized by the courts in Canada.

[99] Mr. Lukács disagrees with Porter's statement that Existing Tariff Rule 16 does not affect Porter's liability with respect to baggage; not only do these provisions explicitly refer to baggage, but they also purport to relieve Porter from all of its obligations, including with respect to delivery of baggage to the passenger. 151

[100] Mr. Lukács points out that the provisions in Existing Tariff Rule 16 provide that:

Notwithstanding any other terms or conditions contained herein, the Carrier shall not be liable for failure in the performance ofany of its obligations due to:

> [...]
>
> Upon the happening of any of the foregoing events, the Carrier may without notice cancel, terminate, divert, postpone or delay any flight whether before departure or enroute. If the flight, having commenced is terminated, the carrier shall refund the unused portion of the fare and shall use its best effort to provide alternate transportation to the destination for the passengers and baggage at the expense and risk of the passenger or shipper. If the flight has not commenced prior to termination, the carrier will provide a credit equal to the paid fare which will be available for use in the purchase of a new ticket on the same terms for a period of one year from the date of termination. No refund will be available.

[101] Mr. Lukács submits that not only do these provisions explicitly refer to baggage, they also purport to relieve Porter from all of its obligations, including with respect to delivery of baggage to the passenger.

Analysis and findings

[102] Proposed Tariff Rules 16.1 and 16.2 are exactly the same as Rules 18.1 and 18.2 in Porter's international tariff, which were found reasonable by the Agency in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013. The only new argument raised by Mr. Lukács is the need to add the words "the Carrier proves that." The Agency disagrees with Mr. Lukács' submission that to accurately reflect the principles of the Convention, these words should be inserted in the Proposed Tariff Rules.

[103] The Agency is of the opinion that irrespective of whether the words "the Carrier proves that" appear in Proposed Tariff Rules 16.1 and 16.2, the burden of proof rests with the carrier to demonstrate that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it or them to take such measures.

[104] The Agency finds that it is not necessary that the phrase "the Carrier proves that" be inserted into Proposed Tariff Rules 16.1 and 16.2 to reflect the wording of Article 19 of the Convention.

Issue 7: Is the reference to "Event of Force Majeure" in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) unreasonable, given the proposed definition of "Event of Force Majeure" in Rule 1, because it is misleading and may prejudice passengers' ability to enforce their rights?

Positions of the parties

152

Porter

[105] Porter advises that as Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) makes reference to an “Event of Force Majeure,” Porter has filed a definition of that term which it proposes to add to Rule 1 (Definitions) of its Tariff.

[106] Porter submits that the proposed definition provides that an “Event of Force Majeure” is an occurrence that is not within the reasonable control of the Carrier and Porter sets forth a number of examples of situations which may constitute events of force majeure, subject always to the qualification that such events were beyond Porter’s reasonable control.

Mr. Lukács

[107] Mr. Lukács maintains that most events of the type listed under the proposed definition are not considered to be force majeure by Canadian courts or international authorities. Mr. Lukács contends that Porter’s proposed definition of “Event of Force Majeure” is misleading and may prejudice passengers’ ability to enforce their rights. According to Mr. Lukács, the definition is cause-and-event based and unnecessarily complicates the simple and straightforward liability regime of Article 19 of the Convention.

Analysis and findings

[108] The Agency is of the opinion that, in and of itself, the proposed definition of “Event of Force Majeure” provided under Proposed Tariff Rule 1 is unreasonable as it includes incidents that have not been determined to be of a nature to constitute “force majeure.” In addition, the event causing a flight delay or cancellation is not the determining factor in establishing whether a carrier is liable under the principles of the Convention. The Agency has determined in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, for example, that what is vital is the manner in which the carrier reacts to those events.

[109] The Agency finds that the reference to “Event of Force Majeure” in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) would be found to be unreasonable if filed with the Agency, given the proposed definition of “Event of Force Majeure” in Rule 1.

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

With respect to Porter’s Existing Tariff Rules

Issue 1

[110] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rule 16(c), when considered together with Existing Tariff Rule 20 of the Tariff, is unreasonable.

Issue 2

[111] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g) are unreasonable. 153

Issue 3

[112] The Agency has determined that the exclusions listed in Existing Tariff Rule 16, starting on the 3rd Revised Page 31 of the Tariff, are unreasonable.

With respect to Porter's Proposed Tariff Rules

Issue 1

[113] The Agency has determined that the wording in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) would be found to be unclear if filed with the Agency.

Issue 2

[114] The Agency has determined that the wording in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(b) would be found to be unreasonable if filed with the Agency.

Issue 3

[115] The Agency has determined that the wording in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(c) would be found to be unreasonable if filed with the Agency.

Issue 4

[116] The Agency has determined that the wording in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(d) would be found to be clear if filed with the Agency.

Issue 5

[117] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) would be found to be unreasonable if filed with the Agency.

Issue 6

[118] The Agency has determined that it is not necessary to insert the phrase "the Carrier proves that" in Proposed Tariff Rules 16.1 and 16.2.

Issue 7

[119] The Agency has determined that the reference to "Event of Force Majeure" in Proposed Tariff Rule 16(f) would be found to be unreasonable if filed with the Agency, given the proposed definition of "Event of Force Majeure" in Rule 1.

ORDER

[120] The Agency, pursuant to section 113 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), disallows the following provisions of Porter's Tariff: 154

- Rule 16(c);
- Rule 16(e);
- Rule 16(g); and,
- The exclusions listed in Existing Tariff Rule 16, starting on 3rd Revised Page 31.

[121] The Agency orders Porter, by September 30, 2013, to amend its Tariff to conform to this Order and the Agency's findings set out in this Decision.

[122] Pursuant to paragraph 28(1)(b) of the CTA, the disallowance of Existing Tariff Rules 16(c), 16(e) and 16(g), and the exclusions listed in Existing Tariff Rule 16 starting on 3rd Revised Page 31, shall come into force when Porter complies with the above or on September 30, 2013, whichever is sooner.

Appendix

RELEVANT TARIFF EXTRACTS

Existing Tariff Rules

RULE 16 – RESPONSIBILITY FOR SCHEDULES AND OPERATIONS

a. The Carrier will endeavour to transport the passenger and baggage with reasonably dispatch, but times shown in timetables or elsewhere are not guaranteed and form no part of this contract.
b. The agreed stopping places are those places shown in the carrier's timetable as scheduled stopping places on the route. The carrier may, without notice, substitute alternative carriers or aircraft and, if necessary, may alter or omit stopping places shown in the timetables.
c. Schedules are subject to change without notice. The carrier is not responsible or liable for failure to make connections or for failure to operate any flight according to schedule, or for a change to the schedule of any flight.
d. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the carrier cannot guarantee that the passenger's baggage will be carried on the flight if sufficient space is not available as determined by the carrier.
e. The Carrier is not responsible or liable for failure to make connections, or for failure to operate any flight according to schedule, or for a change to the schedule of any flight.
f. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Carrier cannot guarantee that a passenger's baggage will be carried on the flight if sufficient space is not available as determined by the Carrier.
g. The Carrier will not provide or reimburse passengers for expenses incurred due to delays or cancellations of flights or be responsible for any special, incidental, direct or indirect, or consequential damages arising out of such delays or cancellations of flights whether or not the carrier had knowledge that such damages might be occurred. 155

Notwithstanding any other terms or conditions contained herein, the Carrier shall not be liable for failure in the performance of any of its obligations due to:

i. Act of God.
ii. War, revolution, insurrection, riot, blockade or any other unlawful act against public order or authority including an act of terrorism involving the use or release or threat thereof, of any nuclear weapon or device or chemical or biological agent.
iii. Strike, lock-out, labour dispute, or other industrial disturbance whether involving the Carrier's employees or others upon whom the Carrier relies.
iv. Fire, flood, explosion, storm, lightning or adverse weather conditions generally.
v. Accidents to or failure of the aircraft or equipment used in connection therewith including, in particular, mechanical failure.
vi. Non-availability of fuel at the airport of origin, destination or enroute stop.
vii. Others upon whom the Carrier relies for the performance of the whole or any part of any charter contract or flight.
viii. Government order, regulation, action or inaction.
ix. Unless caused by its negligence, any difference in weight or quantity of cargo from shrinkage, leakage or evaporation.
x. The nature of the cargo or any defect in the cargo or any characteristic or inherent vice therein.
xi. Violation by a consignee or any other party claiming an interest in the cargo of any of the terms and conditions contained in this tariff or in any other applicable tariff including, but without being limited to, failure to observe any of the terms and conditions relating to cargo not acceptable for transportation or cargo acceptable only under certain conditions.
xii. Improper or insufficient packing, securing, marking or addressing.
xiii. Acts or omissions of warehousemen, customs or quarantine officials or other persons other than the Carrier or its agents, in gaining lawful possession of the cargo.

[...]

RELEVANT STATUTORY EXTRACTS

Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended

Subsection 107(1)

Every tariff shall contain:

[...]

(l) the terms and conditions governing the tariff, generally, stated in such a way that it is clear as to how the terms and conditions apply to the tolls named in the tariff;

[...] 156

(n) the terms and conditions of carriage, clearly stating the air carrier's policy in respect of at least the following matters, namely,

> [...]
>
> (iii) compensation for denial of boarding as a result of overbooking,
>
> (iv) passenger re-routing,
>
> (v) failure to operate the service or failure to operate on schedule,
>
> (vi) refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,
>
> [...]

Subsection 111(1)

All tolls and terms and conditions of carriage, including free and reduced rate transportation, that are established by an air carrier shall be just and reasonable and shall, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions and with respect to all traffic of the same description, be applied equally to all that traffic.

Section 113

The Agency may

a. suspend any tariff or portion of a tariff that appears not to conform with subsections 110(3) to (5) or section 111 or 112, or disallow any tariff or portion of a tariff that does not conform with any of those provisions; and
b. establish and substitute another tariff or portion thereof for any tariff or portion thereof disallowed under paragraph (a).

Canada Transportation Act, S.C., 1996, c. 10, as amended

Subsection 67.2(1)

If, on complaint in writing to the Agency by any person, the Agency finds that the holder of a domestic licence has applied terms or conditions of carriage applicable to the domestic service it offers that are unreasonable or unduly discriminatory, the Agency may suspend or disallow those terms or conditions and substitute other terms or conditions in their place.

PROPOSED AMENDED RULE 16 TO PORTER'S TARIFF 157

Rule 16 – Responsibility for Schedules and Operations

a. The carrier will endeavor to transport the passenger and baggage with reasonable dispatch, but times shown in timetables or elsewhere are not guaranteed and form no part of this contract.
b. Schedules are subject to change without notice, and the carrier assumes no responsibility for the passenger making connections. The carrier will not be responsible for errors or omissions either in timetables or other representation of schedules.
c. The Carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them.
d. It is always recommended that the passenger communicate with the Carrier either by telephone, electronic device or via the Carrier's Web site or refer to airport terminal displays to ascertain the flight's status and departure time.
e. The agreed stopping places are those places shown in the carrier's timetable as scheduled stopping places on the route. The carrier may, without notice, substitute alternative carriers or aircraft and, if necessary, may alter or omit stopping places shown in the timetable.
f. Except with respect to compensation available to passengers under this Rule 16, the Carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to scheduled flight times due to an Event of Force Majeure.

Rule 16.1 – Passenger Expenses Resulting from Delays

(a) Passengers will be entitled to reimbursement from the Carrier for reasonable expenses incurred as a result of a delay,subject to the following conditions:

i. The Carrier shall not be liable for any damages, costs, losses or expenses occasioned by delays if it, and its employees and agents, took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or if it was impossible for the Carrier and its employees or agents to take such measures;
ii. Any passenger seeking reimbursement for expenses resulting from delays must provide the Carrier with (a) written notice of his or her claim, (b) particulars of the expenses for which reimbursement is sought and (c) receipts or other documents establishing to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier that the expenses were incurred.

(b) The Carrier may refuse or decline any claim, in whole or in part, if:

i. the passenger has failed or declined to provide proof or particulars establishing, to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier, that the expenses claimed were incurred by the passenger and resulted from a delay for which compensation is available under this Rule 16; or
ii. the expenses for which reimbursement is claimed, or any portion thereof, are not reasonable or did not result from the delay, as determined by the Carrier, acting reasonably.

In any case, the Carrier may, in its sole discretion, issue meal, hotel and/or ground transportation vouchers to passengers affected by a delay.

Rule 16.2 – Baggage Delays

158

(a) The carrier cannot guarantee that the passenger's baggage will be carried on the flight if sufficient space is not available as determined by the Carrier.

(b) Notwithstanding the foregoing, passengers whose baggage does not arrive on the same flight as the passenger will be entitled to reimbursement from the Carrier for reasonable expenses incurred as a result of the baggage delay, subject to the following conditions:

i. The Carrier shall not be liable for any damages, costs, losses or expenses occasioned by delays in the delivery of baggage if the Carrier, and its employees and agents, took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or if it was impossible for the Carrier and its employees or agents to take such measures;
ii. The passenger must have complied with the check-in requirements set out in Rule 20 of this tariff;
iii. In order to assist the Carrier in commencing the tracing of the baggage in question, the passenger is encouraged to report the delayed baggage to the Carrier as soon as reasonably practicable following the completion of the flight;
iv. The passenger must provide the Carrier with (a) written notice of any claim for reimbursement within 21 days of the date on which the baggage was placed at the passenger's disposal, or in the case of loss within 21 days of the date on which the baggage should have been placed at the passenger's disposal; (b) particulars of the expenses for which reimbursement is sought; and (c) receipts or other documents establishing to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier that the expenses were incurred;
v. The liability of the Carrier in the case of lost or delayed baggage shall not exceed CAD$1,800 for each passenger, unless the passenger has declared a higher value and paid the supplementary sum in accordance with Rule 9(a) of this tariff, in which case the Carrier's liability will be limited to the lesser of the value of the delayed baggage or the declared value, up to a maximum of CAD$3,000.

(c) After a 21 day delay, the Carrier will provide a settlement in accordance with the following rules:

i. if no value is declared per Rule 9(a), the settlement will be for the value of the delayed baggage or CAD$1 ,800, whichever is the lesser, and
ii. if value is declared per Rule 9(a), the settlement will be for the value of the delayed baggage or the declared sum (per Rule 9(a)) up to a maximum of $3,000, whichever is the lesser.
iii. in connection with any settlement under this subsection (c), the passenger shall be required to furnish proof of the value of the delayed baggage which establishes such value to the satisfaction of the Carrier, acting reasonably.

(d) The Carrier may refuse or decline any claim relating to delayed baggage, in whole or in part, if:

i. the conditions set out in subsection 16.2(b) above have not been met;
ii. the passenger has failed or declined to provide proof or particulars establishing, to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier, that the expenses claimed were incurred by the passenger and resulted from a delay for which compensation is available under this Rule 16; or

iii. the expenses for which reimbursement is claimed, or any portion thereof, are not reasonable or did not result from the delay, as determined by the Carrier, acting reasonably.

Proposed Addition to Rule 1 (Definition)

Event of Force Majeure means an event, the cause or causes of which are not within the reasonable control of the Carrier, which may include, but are not limited to (i) earthquake, flood, hurricane, explosion, fire, storm, epidemic, other acts of God or public enemies, war, national emergency, invasion, insurrection, riots, strikes, picketing, boycott, lockouts or other civil disturbances, (ii) interruption of flying facilities, navigational aids or other services, (iii) any laws, rules, proclamations, regulations, orders, declarations, interruptions or requirements of or interference by any government or governmental agency or official thereof, (iv) inability to procure materials, accessories, equipment or parts from suppliers, mechanical failure to the aircraft or any part thereof, damage, destruction or loss of use of an aircraft, confiscation, nationalization, seizure, detention, theft or hijacking of an aircraft, or (v) any other cause or circumstances whether similar or dissimilar, seen or unforeseen, which the Carrier is unable to overcome by the exercise of reasonable diligence and at reasonable cost.

Member(s)

Raymon J. Kaduck
Sam Barone

Back to rulings

Share this page

Date modified:
2013-08-29

This is Exhibit "5" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

161

Decision No. 31-C-A-2014

January 31, 2014

COMPLAINT by Gábor Lukács against Porter Airlines Inc.

File No.: M4120-3/13-05680

INTRODUCTION

[1] Gábor Lukács filed a complaint with the Canadian Transportation Agency (Agency) alleging that certain provisions in Rules 1, 3.4, 15, 18 and 20 (Existing Tariff Rules) of the Tariff Containing Rules Applicable to Scheduled Services for the Transportation of Passengers and Baggage or Goods Between Points in Canada on the One Hand and Points Outside Canada on the Other Hand (Tariff) applied by Porter Airlines Inc. (Porter) are inconsistent with the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules for International Carriage by Air – Montreal Convention (Montreal Convention), and are unclear and/or unreasonable. The Rules at issue set out Porter's responsibilities relating to flight cancellation, schedule change, flight advancement and denied boarding. Mr. Lukács also alleges that Porter's Tariff fails to incorporate certain elements of the Code of Conduct of Canada's Airlines (Code of Conduct).

[2] Porter filed proposed revisions to its Existing Tariff Rules (Proposed Tariff Rules) with its answer.

ISSUES

With respect to the Existing Tariff Rules

1. Does the failure to incorporate certain elements of the Code of Conduct into Porter's Tariff render it unreasonable?
2. Is the definition of "Event of Force Majeure" in Existing Tariff Rule 1.1 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended (ATR (Air Transportation Regulations))?
3. Are Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
4. Is Existing Tariff Rule 18(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

5. Is Existing Tariff Rule 20 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)? 162

With respect to the Proposed Tariff Rules

1. Is the definition of “Credit Shell” in Proposed Tariff Rule 1.1 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
2. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
3. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
4. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
5. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
6. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?
7. Is Proposed Tariff Rule 20 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

RELEVANT STATUTORY AND TARIFF EXTRACTS

[3] The Existing Tariff Rules and Proposed Tariff Rules as well as the statutory extracts relevant to this Decision are set out in the Appendix.

CLARITY AND REASONABLENESS OF TARIFF PROVISIONS

Clarity

[4] In Decision No. 2-C-A-2001 (Mr. H v. Air Canada) the Agency formulated the test respecting the carrier’s obligation of tariff clarity as follows:

> [...] the Agency is of the opinion that an air carrier’s tariff meets its obligations of clarity when, in the opinion of a reasonable person, the rights and obligations of both the carrier and passengers are stated in such a way as to exclude any reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning.

[5] This test was recently applied in Decision No. 442-C-A-2013 (Azar v. Air Canada).

Unreasonableness

163

[6] To assess whether a term or condition of carriage is “unreasonable”, the Agency has traditionally applied a balancing test, which requires that a balance be struck between the rights of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and the particular air carrier’s statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

[7] When balancing the passengers’ rights against the carrier’s obligations, the Agency must consider the whole of the evidence and the submissions presented by both parties, and make a determination on the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the term or condition of carriage based on which party has presented the more compelling and persuasive case. This test was first established in Decision No. 666-C-A-2001 (Anderson v. Air Canada) and was recently applied in Decision No. 442-C-A-2013.

EXISTING TARIFF RULES

Issue 1: Does the failure to incorporate certain elements of the Code of Conduct into Porter’s Tariff render it unreasonable?

Positions of the parties

Mr. Lukács

[8] Mr. Lukács submits that in 2008, the Government of Canada and the three major Canadian air carriers (Air Canada, Air Transat A.T. Inc. carrying on business as Air Transat (Air Transat) and WestJet) voluntarily agreed to the Code of Conduct.

[9] Mr. Lukács asserts that the key points of the Code of Conduct are:

- Passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes. Airlines must make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of delays and schedule changes and to the extent possible, the reason for the delay or change.
- Passengers have a right to punctuality.
    a. If a flight is delayed and the delay between the scheduled departure of the flight and the actual departure of the flight exceeds 4 hours, the airline will provide the passenger with a meal voucher.
    b. If a flight is delayed by more than 8 hours and the delay involves an overnight stay, the airline will pay for overnight hotel stay and airport transfers for passengers who did not start their travel at that airport.
    c. If the passenger is already on the aircraft when a delay occurs, the airline will offer drinks and snacks if it is safe, practical and timely to do so. If the delay exceeds 90 minutes and circumstances permit, the airline will offer passengers the option of disembarking from the aircraft until it is time to depart.
- Passengers have a right to take the flight they paid for. If the flight is overbooked or cancelled, the airline must offer passengers a choice between transportation to their destination or a refund of the unused portion. 164

[10] Mr. Lukács argues that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are inconsistent with the Code of Conduct. He contends that the Rules fail to incorporate the “right for care” provisions (meal voucher, overnight hotel, and drinks and snacks) that the three major Canadian air carriers have long ago adopted, and which Sunwing Airlines Inc. (Sunwing) recently incorporated into its tariff.

Porter

[11] Porter submits that inclusion in tariffs of the provisions set out in the Code of Conduct is not required by the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), and that its Proposed Tariff Rules contain reasonable provisions, to the full extent required, concerning remedies available to passengers for delay. In addition, Porter argues that any failure to prescribe a right to vouchers in no way limits the rights of passengers in a manner inconsistent with the Montreal Convention.

Mr. Lukács

[12] Mr. Lukács states that while Porter incorporated (c) of the Code of Conduct as Proposed Tariff Rule 18(d), Porter refuses to incorporate (a) and (b) of the Code of Conduct into its Tariff, and vehemently argues against them.

[13] Mr. Lukács maintains that subsection 86(1) of the Canada Transportation Act, S.C., 1996, c. 10, as amended (CTA), and subsection 111(1) and section 113 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) confer upon the Agency jurisdiction to examine whether the absence of tariff provisions requiring Porter to distribute meal, accommodation and transportation vouchers in the case of flight delay renders Porter’s Tariff unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

[14] Mr. Lukács asserts that subparagraph 122(c)(v) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) requires Porter to state its policy with respect to flight delay in its Tariff. He therefore maintains that even if the Agency’s jurisdiction were confined to matters listed under section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), the issue of distributing meal, accommodation and transportation vouchers to delayed passengers would still be within the Agency’s jurisdiction.

[15] Mr. Lukács argues that while passengers have a legitimate interest in being issued meal, accommodation and transportation vouchers in the case of longer delays (as set out in the Code of Conduct), doing so would not affect Porter’s ability to meet its statutory, commercial and operational obligations. Mr. Lukács contends that the incorporation of the Code of Conduct has become an industry standard for Canadian air carriers, and Porter’s competitors have implemented that Code in their respective tariffs.

[16] Mr. Lukács therefore concludes that the absence of the Code of Conduct from Porter’s Tariff, including the requirement to distribute meal, accommodation and transportation vouchers to delayed passengers, renders the Tariff unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[17] The Agency notes, as does Mr. Lukács, that the Code of Conduct is voluntary, and was agreed upon by Air Canada, Air Transat and WestJet. The word “voluntary”, in and of itself, is clearly indicative of a free and unrestrained will. In that sense, the Agency cannot force a carrier, through an Agency decision, to abide by that Code. In any case, the Agency agrees with Porter that its Proposed Tariff Rules provide, to the extent required, reasonable remedies for passengers who have been affected by flight delays. The Agency therefore finds that the absence from Porter’s Tariff of all of the elements of the Code of Conduct does not render the Tariff unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). 165

Issue 2: Is the definition of “Event of Force Majeure” in Existing Tariff Rule 1.1 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Positions of the parties

Mr. Lukács

[18] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Porter), a virtually identical tariff provision that Porter had proposed to include in its domestic tariff was considered, and the Agency held that:

> [108] The Agency is of the opinion that, in and of itself, the proposed definition of “Event of Force Majeure” provided under Proposed Tariff Rule 1 is unreasonable as it includes incidents that have not been determined to be of a nature to constitute “force majeure.” In addition, the event causing a flight delay or cancellation is not the determining factor in establishing whether a carrier is liable under the principles of the Convention. The Agency has determined in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, for example, that what is vital is the manner in which the carrier reacts to those events.

[19] Mr. Lukács maintains that the same conclusion is applicable to the definition of “Event of Force Majeure” in Existing Tariff Rule 1.1, and that the definition ought to be disallowed.

Porter

[20] Porter acknowledged that this Existing Tariff Rule as well as the Existing Tariff Rules set out in Issues 3 to 6 require revisions. In this regard, Porter filed Proposed Tariff Rules.

Analysis and findings

[21] The Agency finds that because the definition of “Event of Force Majeure” includes incidents that have not been determined to be of a nature to constitute “force majeure”, the same conclusion is applicable in this matter as that reached in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013. The Agency finds, therefore, that the definition of “Event of Force Majeure” in Existing Tariff Rule 1.1 fails to strike a balance between the rights of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter’s statutory, commercial and operational obligations. As such, the definition is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Issue 3: Are Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)? 166

Position of Mr. Lukács – Reasonableness of Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15: Limitation of liability

[22] Mr. Lukács submits that the Agency explained in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Porter) that what determines liability for delay is not the cause of the delay, but rather how the air carrier reacts to the delay.

[23] Mr. Lukács maintains that the effect of Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 is to relieve Porter from virtually every liability in the case of delay and/or failure to operate on schedule, regardless of whether Porter and its servants and agents have taken all reasonable measures necessary to avoid the delay. He contends that the impugned provisions effectively limit Porter's liability in the case of delay to providing passengers, at Porter's sole discretion, a credit that is valid for one year or otherwise a refund of the fare paid by the passengers.

[24] Mr. Lukács argues that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are provisions tending to relieve Porter from the liability set out in Article 19 of the Montreal Convention and/or to fix a lower limit of liability than what is set out in that Convention. He submits that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are null and void, under Article 26 of the Montreal Convention, and are therefore unreasonable and ought to be disallowed.

Analysis and findings

[25] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 relieve Porter from virtually all liability in the case of delay and/or failure to operate on schedule, regardless of whether Porter and its servants and agents have taken all reasonable measures necessary to avoid the delay. The Agency indicated in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013 that it is how the air carrier reacts to the delay that will determine the liability, and not who caused the delay. As such, the Agency finds that these Rules are inconsistent with Article 19 of the Montreal Convention, are null and void pursuant to Article 26 of that Convention, and are therefore unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Position of Mr. Lukács – Concomitant obligation of air carriers to reprotect passengers

[26] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 250-C-A-2012 (Lukács v. Air Canada), the Agency held that:

[25] It is clear that Article 19 of the Convention imposes on a carrier liability for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage of, amongst other matters, passengers, but a carrier will not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or it was impossible for them to take such measures. As the Agency stated in the Show Cause Decision, with a presumption of liability for delay against a carrier, there is a concomitant obligation for a carrier to mitigate such liability and address the damage which has or may be suffered by a passenger as a result of delay. [...] 167

[27] Mr. Lukács cites certain court cases to support his position.

[28] Mr. Lukács argues that a carrier cannot avoid liability under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention by merely stating that its flights were fully booked. He maintains that, instead, the carrier must take steps to mitigate the damage suffered by passengers as a result of the delay, and must attempt to secure seats on other carriers.

Analysis and findings

[29] The Agency finds that when a flight delay occurs, Article 19 of the Montreal Convention imposes an obligation on the carrier to take the necessary steps to mitigate the damage suffered by passengers because of the delay, including the arranging of alternative air transportation. As such, the Agency finds that the absence of this obligation in Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 renders them inconsistent with Article 19 of the Montreal Convention, null and void pursuant to Article 26 of the Montreal Convention, and therefore unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Position of Mr. Lukács – Passengers are entitled to a refund if the carrier is unable to transport them within a reasonable period of time

[30] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the fundamental right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time. He also points out that in that Decision, the Agency substituted Air Transat's International Tariff Rule 6.3(d) with the following provision:

> 6.3(d) If the Carrier is unable to provide reasonable alternative transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time, then it will refund the unused ticket or portions thereof.

[31] Mr. Lukács submits that passengers have a fundamental right to a refund of their fares if the carrier is unable to transport them for any reason that is outside the passengers' control. Mr. Lukács adds that, in particular, the carrier cannot keep the fare paid by passengers and refuse to provide a refund on the basis that its inability to provide transportation was due to certain events.

[32] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Porter), the Agency considered Porter's proposed Domestic Tariff Rule 16(f), and reached the same conclusion as in Decision No. 28-A-2004. He asserts that the same conclusion is applicable to Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15, namely, that they are unreasonable, because they purport to allow Porter to refuse to refund fares paid for flights that were cancelled.

Analysis and findings

[33] The Agency finds that as they allow Porter to refuse the tendering of refunds when a flight is cancelled for reasons outside the passenger's control, Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency finds that the Rules fail to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – The choice with respect to refund lies with the passenger [34] Mr. Lukács refers to Decision No. LET-C-A-80-2011 (Lukács v. Air Canada), where the Agency expressed the preliminary opinion that it is unreasonable for a carrier to retain the choice between reprotecting passengers and providing a refund, and that the choice ought to lie with the passengers. He points out that in Decision No. 250-C-A-2012, the Agency affirmed this finding, and stated that:

> [123] [...] the Agency finds that Tariff Rule 91(B)(3), as currently drafted, is unreasonable for failing to give the passenger sole discretion to choose to obtain a refund.
>
> [124] The Agency also determines that Air Canada's proposal to leave the choice of option with the passenger is reasonable.

[35] Mr. Lukács argues that the choice of whether to obtain a refund or be reprotected ought to lie solely with the passenger, and any provision purporting to allow the carrier to retain that choice is unreasonable. He therefore concludes that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable as they fail to give the passenger sole discretion to choose to obtain a refund.

Analysis and findings

[36] The Agency finds that the absence of a provision in Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 providing the passenger with the sole discretion to determine whether a refund will be tendered or reprotection occurs, renders those Rules unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency therefore finds that these Rules fail to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – In certain circumstances, passengers are entitled to transportation to their point of origin without a charge in addition to a full refund

[37] Mr. Lukács refers to Decision No. LET-C-A-80-2011, where the Agency held that:

> [104] [...] As Mr. Lukács submits, payment of a partial refund may force a passenger to absorb some of the costs directly associated with their delayed travel. The Agency accepts Mr. Lukács' submission that the actual costs, or damages, incurred by a passenger may exceed the mere refund of the unused ticket.
>
> [105] Accordingly, the Agency is of the preliminary opinion that the part of Tariff Rule 91(B) that allows for a refund of the unused portion of the ticket only is unreasonable. Air Canada has not demonstrated why, given its commercial and operational obligations, it cannot refund the entire ticket cost. Furthermore, Air Canada has not addressed the question of returning a passenger to their point of origin, within a reasonable time and at no extra cost, in cases where delay or cancellation occurs at a connecting point during travel, with the result that a passenger's travel no longer serves the passenger's purpose. As Mr. Lukács argues, many situations can be envisioned in which a passenger could be forced to absorb the cost of a flight that does not meet their needs, nor fulfill their purpose of travel, and does not coincide with the transportation for which the passenger contracted. 169

[38] Mr. Lukács maintains that in Decision No. 250-C-A-2012, the Agency affirmed these preliminary findings. He also notes that Air Canada, Air Transat, Sunwing and WestJet have all incorporated provisions in their tariffs that give effect to these findings. He submits that Porter will suffer no competitive disadvantage by doing the same.

[39] Mr. Lukács asserts that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable in that they fail to address the question of returning a passenger to their point of origin, within a reasonable time and at no cost, in cases where delay or cancellation occurs at a connecting point during travel, with the result that a passenger's travel no longer serves the passenger's purpose. He also asserts that these Rules fail to provide for a refund of the full fare in such situations.

Analysis and findings

[40] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because they do not provide for the return of a passenger to their point of origin, within a reasonable time and at no cost, when a delay or cancellation occurs at a connecting point during travel, with the result that a passenger's travel no longer serves the passenger's purpose. The Agency finds that the absence of such a provision in Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – Existing Tariff Rule 3.4: "without notice to any passengers affected thereby"

[41] Mr.Lukácspoints out that Existing Tariff Rule 3.4, which he also submits is unreasonable because it purports to deprive passengers of the right to notice of schedule changes affecting their travel, states that:

> The Carrier reserves the right to cancel or change the planned departure, schedule, route, aircraft or stopping places of any flight for which fares in respect of a International Service have been paid, at any time and from time to time, for any reason, without notice to any passengers affected thereby and, in connection therewith, the Carrier shall not be liable to any passenger in respect of such cancellation or change, whether or not resulting from an Event of Force Majeure [...] [Emphasis added by Mr. Lukács]

[42] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. LET-A-112-2003, the Agency held, in relation to Air Transat's tariff, that:

> The Agency notes that Rule 5.2(b) of the tariff is devoid of any provision relating to the notification of passengers in the event of a flight delay. As such, the Agency is of the view that this provision may not be just and reasonable. The Agency is of the opinion that Air Transat should undertake to notify passengers of all schedule irregularities, not just flight advancements. [Emphasis added by Mr. Lukács]

[43] Mr. Lukács submits that the right of passengers to be informed about delays and schedule changes was more recently recognized by the Agency in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, in the context of Porter's International Tariff.

[44] Mr. Lukács maintains that in the absence of notice about schedule changes, passengers are at risk of losing the entire benefit of the itinerary for which they have paid. He asserts that it is unreasonable to deprive passengers of notice about schedule changes, and that any provision exempting Porter from the obligation to notify passengers ought to be disallowed as unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[45] The Agency finds that the absence of a provision in Existing Tariff Rule 3.4 requiring Porter to provide notice to passengers regarding schedule changes renders that Rule unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency therefore finds that Existing Tariff Rule 3.4 fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – Lack of clarity of Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15

[46] Mr. Lukács contends that Existing Tariff Rule 18, which was established in its existing form following Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, imposes liability upon Porter for damage occasioned by delay that reflects Porter's obligations under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention. He adds that, at the same time, Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 purport to relieve Porter from virtually every liability in the case of delay and/or failure to operate on schedule, regardless of whether Porter demonstrated the facts necessary to invoke the defense set out in Existing Tariff Rule 18.1(i) (which reflects Article 19 of the Montreal Convention). Mr. Lukács concludes that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 contradict Existing Tariff Rule 18 and, as such, they render Porter's Tariff unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Analysis and findings

[47] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) given the contradiction between those Rules and Existing Tariff Rule 18(c). Given that contradiction, the Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning as to the Rules' application.

Issue 4: Is Existing Tariff Rule 18(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)? 171

Position of Mr. Lukács

[48] Mr. Lukács contends that while in the case of flight delays failing to notify passengers usually causes only inconvenience, in the case of advancement of flight schedules, the failure of Porter to inform passengers about the schedule change will likely result in passengers not being able to travel at all, because they miss the check-in cut-off times. He argues that making "reasonable efforts" sets the bar too low for Porter in the case of flight advancements, and points out that in Decision No. LET-A-112-2003, the Agency stated, under the heading "Passenger Notification", that:

> The Agency is of the opinion that Air Transat should undertake to notify passengers of all schedule irregularities, not just flight advancements.

[49] Mr. Lukács points out that, subsequently, in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013, the Agency held that:

> [64] [...] The absence of a tariff provision that imposes on Porter a requirement to "undertake" to inform passengers of flight advancements would severely limit the recourses available to passengers affected by those advancements, and would certainly be disadvantageous.
>
> [65] The Agency is of the opinion that the commitment to make "reasonable efforts" to inform passengers, insofar as such commitment pertains to flight advancements, is unreasonable. [...]

[50] Mr. Lukács concludes that Existing Tariff Rule 18(c) ought to be substituted with wording that imposes on Porter the requirement to "undertake" to inform passengers of flight advancements.

Analysis and findings

[51] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission. As the Agency indicated in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013, the absence of a provision in Existing Tariff Rule 18(c) requiring Porter to undertake to advise passengers of a flight advancement renders that Rule unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 18(c) fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Issue 5: Is Existing Tariff Rule 20 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

[52] Mr. Lukács challenges the reasonableness and clarity of Existing Tariff Rule 20, as a whole, because it is, according to him, inconsistent with the legal principles set out by the Agency in Decision No. 666-C-A-2001, Decision No. 204-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Air Canada) and Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. WestJet).

Reasonableness

Position of Mr. Lukács – "reasonable efforts" and "same comparable, or lower booking code" 172

[53] Mr. Lukács asserts that it is a common practice of air carriers to reprotect passengers who are denied boarding on booking codes higher than their original codes, if doing so results in mitigation of the passengers' delay. He also asserts that reprotecting passengers, on a higher booking class if necessary, is the normal and ordinary consequence of overselling a flight, and is consistent with the carrier's concomitant obligation under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention to mitigate the delay of passengers.

Analysis and findings

[54] The Agency finds that the phrase "same comparable, or lower booking code" is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because such phrase is inconsistent with the obligation under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention to mitigate the delay of passengers, including reprotecting those passengers on booking codes higher than their original reservations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – No refund or alternate transportation for flights originating in the United States

[55] Mr. Lukács notes that Existing Tariff Rule 20 provides, in part, that:

> If a passenger has been denied a reserved seat in case of an oversold flight on Porter Airlines:
>
> [...]
>
> (b) where the flight originates in the United States, the Carrier will provide denied boarding compensation as set forth in this Rule 20 below.

[56] Mr. Lukács submits that a literal reading of this provision suggests that with respect to flights originating in the United States, Porter provides only monetary compensation, but has no obligation to provide a refund or to arrange for alternate transportation.

[57] Mr. Lukács contends that while this is likely not the intended meaning of Existing Tariff Rule 20, it is obvious that the Rule is either unclear or unreasonable with respect to the rights of passengers departing from the United States.

Analysis and findings

[58] The Agency finds that the absence of a provision from Existing Tariff Rule 20 requiring Porter to also provide a refund or arrange for alternate transportation for flights originating in the United States renders that Rule unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). In this regard, the Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – No denied boarding compensation for passengers departing from Canada

[59] Mr. Lukács submits that Existing Tariff Rule 20 contains no provisions requiring Porter to pay compensation to passengers departing from Canada who are denied boarding, and that, instead, the Rule is confined to the reprotection of these passengers. He argues that reprotection of passengers is not a form of compensation, but rather the belated fulfillment of the contract of carriage.

[60] Mr. Lukács refers to Decision No. 666-C-A-2001, where the Agency considered the principles governing the amount of denied boarding compensation payable to passengers, and held, in part, that:

> [...] any passenger who is denied boarding is entitled to compensation; evidence of specific damages suffered need not be provided.

[61] Mr. Lukács contends that compensation of victims of denied boarding has two components:

1. reimbursement for out-of-pocket expenses, including refunds; and,
2. denied boarding compensation (lump sum, no evidence of specific damage is required).

[62] Mr. Lukács maintains that this principle has been recognized, for example, in Decision No. 268-C-A-2007 (Kirkham v. Air Canada), where the Agency ordered Air Canada to both reimburse the passenger for his out-of-pocket expenses and pay the passenger denied boarding compensation.

[63] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013, the Agency considered the lack of tariff provisions requiring the payment of denied boarding compensation in WestJet's International Tariff, and stated that:

> [21] [...] any passenger who is denied boarding is entitled to compensation. [...] The Agency finds, therefore, that Existing Tariff Rule 110(E) is unreasonable.
>
> [...]
>
> [39] [...] The failure to establish conditions governing denied boarding compensation for flights to and from Canada is contrary to Decision No. 666-C-A-2001. Therefore, the Agency finds that if Proposed Tariff Rule 110(E) were to be filed with the Agency, it would be considered unreasonable.

[64] Mr. Lukács maintains that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unreasonable because it fails to impose any obligation of paying denied boarding compensation to passengers, contrary to the Agency's findings in Decision No. 666-C-A-2001. Mr. Lukács asserts that the Rule ought to be substituted with a provision that implements the denied boarding compensation amounts of the United States regime, so that the same amounts will apply to all international flights of Porter, regardless of the point of origin.

Analysis and findings

[65] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because the Rule does not require Porter to tender denied boarding compensation to passengers departing from Canada, contrary to the Agency's findings in Decision No. 666-C-A-2001. The Agency therefore finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. 174

Position of Mr. Lukács – Substitution of aircraft with one of a smaller capacity

[66] According to Mr. Lukács, Existing Tariff Rule 20 relieves Porter from the obligation to pay denied boarding compensation to passengers who are denied boarding because "a smaller capacity aircraft was substituted for safety or operational reasons." He notes that a virtually identical provision was recently considered in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013.

[67] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013, the Agency concluded that, in the absence of specific language that established context or qualified Air Canada's exemption from paying denied boarding compensation, the applicable rule was unreasonable.

[68] Mr. Lukács submits that this conclusion is equally applicable to Existing Tariff Rule 20, and therefore the impugned provision is unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[69] The Agency finds that the finding in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013 relating to the payment of denied boarding compensation when substitution to a smaller aircraft occurs is equally applicable to this matter. The absence of specific language that establishes context or qualifies Porter's exemption from paying denied boarding compensation renders Existing Tariff Rule 20 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) as it fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – Cash v. voucher

[70] Mr. Lukács points out that Existing Tariff Rule 20 provides, under the heading "Method of Payment", that:

> Except as provided below, the Carrier must give each passenger who qualifies for denied boarding compensation a payment by cheque or draft for the amount specified above, on the day and place the involuntary denied boarding occurs. However, if the Carrier arranges alternate transportation for the passenger's convenience that departs before the payment can be made, the payment will be sent to the passenger within 24 hours. Carrier may offer free or discounted transportation vouchers in place of cash or cheque payment. The passenger may, however, insist on the cash/cheque payment or refuse all compensation and bring private legal action.

[71] Mr. Lukács submits that in Decision No. LET-C-A-83-2011 (Lukács v. WestJet), the Agency stated that any compensation paid in accordance with the tariff is to be paid in the form of cash, cheque, credit to a passenger's credit card, or any other form acceptable to the passenger. He adds that this finding was reiterated by the Agency in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 in the specific context of denied boarding compensation.

[72] Mr. Lukács argues that the acceptance of other forms of denied boarding compensation must be an informed decision, based on the passenger being fully informed of the restrictions that accepting an alternative form of compensation may entail. Mr. Lukács states that this principle is common to both the American and the European denied boarding compensation regimes. 175

[73] Mr. Lukács contends that although, in theory, receiving a travel voucher for an amount equal to double or triple the cash denied boarding compensation may mutually benefit Porter and its passengers, in practice, the vouchers tend to be nearly worthless due to the many restrictions imposed on their use, and benefit only Porter. He states that one of these restrictions is that vouchers seem to be valid only for Porter's flights, and that is a significant restriction given that Porter does not have an extensive network.

[74] Mr. Lukács asserts that the vast majority of passengers are not aware of the many restrictions associated with vouchers, and that it is very difficult to verify whether passengers have been adequately informed about their rights by the carrier. He maintains that even if passengers are made aware of all the restrictions and limitations of Porter's travel vouchers, they cannot make an informed decision at the airport, in a matter of minutes, as to whether to seek cash compensation or accept a travel voucher instead.

[75] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 252-C-A-2012 (Lukács v. WestJet), the Agency recognized the importance of passengers having a reasonable opportunity to fully assess their options.

[76] Mr. Lukács submits that in this case, acceptance of compensation by way of travel vouchers may have very significant disadvantages for passengers, and there is a very serious concern about passengers being deprived of the ability to make an informed decision, based on the consideration of all the pros and cons, about the form of compensation that they wish to receive.

[77] Mr. Lukács maintains that even if the Agency were to find that paying compensation by way of travel vouchers, with the written consent of the passenger, is a reasonable alternative to cash compensation, passengers ought to be able to change their minds within a reasonable amount of time, and exchange their travel vouchers with cash compensation.

[78] Mr. Lukács refers to Decision No. 342-C-A-2013 (Lukács v. Air Canada), where the Agency considered the issue of appropriate method of payment of denied boarding compensation. He states that in that Decision, the Agency imposed the following restrictions on Air Canada offering denied boarding compensation by way of travel vouchers:

- (R1) carrier must inform passengers of the amount of cash compensation that would be due, and that the passenger may decline travel vouchers, and receive cash or equivalent;
- (R2) carrier must fully disclose all material restrictions before the passenger decides to give up the cash or equivalent payment in exchange for a travel voucher;
- (R3) carrier must obtain the signed agreement of the passenger, confirming that the passenger was provided with the aforementioned information, prior to providing travel vouchers in lieu of compensation;
- (R4) the amount of the travel voucher must be not less than 300% of the amount of cash compensation that would be due;
- (R5) passengers are entitled to exchange the travel vouchers to cash at the rate of $1 in cash being equivalent to $3 in travel vouchers within one (1) month.

[79] Mr. Lukács submits that these restrictions are reasonable, and strike a balance between the rights of passengers to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and the carrier's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. He also submits that if Porter chooses to offer denied boarding compensation by way of travel vouchers at all, then Porter ought also be subject to the aforementioned restrictions.

Analysis and findings

[80] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because of the absence of provisions that provide for the following:

- denied boarding compensation must be tendered in the form of cash, cheque, credit to a passenger's credit card, or any other form acceptable to the passenger;
- the passenger must be fully informed of the restrictions that may apply to alternative forms of compensation;
- in the event that a passenger opts for travel vouchers as compensation, the passenger must be able to change their mind within a reasonable amount of time, and exchange their vouchers for cash;
- if the carrier offers travel vouchers, the restrictions set out in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013 must apply.

[81] The Agency finds that, in the absence of the above provisions, Existing Tariff Rule 20 fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Lack of clarity

Position of Mr. Lukács – Where does the choice lie?

[82] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. LET-A-82-2009, the Agency considered a similar provision in Air Canada's tariff and raised serious concerns about its clarity. He also points out that Air Canada subsequently amended its tariffs to clarify that it retained the choice between a refund and alternate transportation. Mr. Lukács maintains that in Decision No. 479-A-2009, the Agency accepted this amendment for the limited purpose of the Agency's concerns about clarity; however, subsequently, in Decision No. LET-C-A-80-2011, the Agency stated that:

> [108] [...] By retaining some discretion over the selection of the choice of options from its Tariff provision, Air Canada may be limiting or avoiding the actual damage incurred by a passenger as a result of delay. The Agency also notes that with respect to this Issue, Air Canada has not demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Agency why, from an operational and commercial perspective, the choice of option could not lie exclusively with the passenger.

[83] Mr. Lukács states that following this finding, Air Canada amended its tariffs to ensure that the choice lies exclusively with the passenger.

[84] Mr. Lukács asserts that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unclear in its current form because it fails to specify with whom the choice lies between a refund and alternate transportation. He maintains that the choice between a refund and alternate transportation ought to lie exclusively with the passenger. 177

Analysis and findings

[85] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unclear because it fails to specify with whom the choice lies between a refund and alternate transportation. The Agency finds that the choice between a refund and alternate transportation ought to lie exclusively with the passenger. The Agency therefore finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because the Rule is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity and uncertain meaning as to the Rule's application.

Position of Mr. Lukács – "reasonable efforts" and "same comparable, or lower booking code"

[86] Mr. Lukács argues that the phrase "will make reasonable efforts" renders Existing Tariff Rule 20 unclear in that it does not impose a clear obligation upon Porter, and that "will make reasonable efforts" ought to be replaced simply with "shall". He also argues that Existing Tariff Rule 20 purports to limit Porter's obligation to secure alternate transportation on flights "in the same comparable, or lower booking code". Mr. Lukács submits that this phrase is unclear because Porter's booking codes may not be comparable to the booking codes of other air carriers, and that, more importantly, this restriction is unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[87] The Agency finds that the phrase "will make reasonable efforts" in Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unclear in that the provision, as worded, does not impose a clear obligation on Porter. The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission that the phrase "same comparable, or lower booking code" is unclear because other carriers may not have booking codes comparable to those of Porter. The Agency finds that, given those phrases, Existing Tariff Rule 20 is contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because it is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity and uncertain meaning as to the Rule's application.

Reasonableness and lack of clarity

Position of Mr. Lukács – Passenger's option

[88] Mr. Lukács notes that Existing Tariff Rule 20 provides, under the heading "Passenger's Option", that:

> Acceptance of the compensation relieves the Carrier from any further liability to the passenger caused by the failure to honour the confirmed reservation. However, the passenger may decline the payment and seek to recover damages in a court of law or in some other manner.

[89] Mr. Lukács contends that this provision is virtually identical to WestJet's Tariff Rule 110(G) in effect at that time that was considered in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013, where the Agency held, in part, that:

> [28] [...] the Agency is of the opinion that even if a payment is accepted by a passenger, that passenger can still seek to recover damages in a court of law or in some other manner [...]

[90] Mr. Lukács argues that the same conclusion is applicable to the "Passenger's Option" section of Existing Tariff Rule 20, and thus the provisions under this heading are both unclear and unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[91] With respect to the issue of clarity, the Agency finds that the findings in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 also apply to this matter, and that the provision at issue is unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), because it leaves the impression that the passenger cannot seek to recover damages in a court of law or in some other manner even if a payment is accepted by the passenger. The Agency finds that the provision at issue in Existing Tariff Rule 20 is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity and uncertain meaning as to the Rule's application.

[92] With respect to the reasonableness of the provision at issue, the Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission. The Agency finds that the findings in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 also apply to this matter, and that the provision at issue is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because even if a passenger has accepted a payment, that passenger can still seek to recover damages in a court of law or in some other manner. The Agency therefore finds that the provision fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

Position of Mr. Lukács – Last sentence of "Method of Payment"

[93] Mr. Lukács notes that Existing Tariff Rule 20 provides, under the heading "Method of Payment", that:

> [...] The passenger may, however, insist on the cash/cheque payment or refuse all compensation and bring private legal action.

[94] Mr. Lukács maintains that this provision is virtually identical to WestJet's Proposed Tariff Rule 110(G) that was considered in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013, where the Agency held that:

> [44] As to the reasonableness of Proposed Tariff Rule 110(G), the Agency concurs with Mr. Lukács' submission that the Rule seems to indicate that for a person to retain a right to legal redress, that person must first reject any payment offered by WestJet, and that a similar provision was deemed to be unreasonable in Decision No. 249-C-A-2012. The Agency finds that if Proposed Tariff Rule 110(G) were to be filed with the Agency, it would also be determined to be unreasonable.

[95] Mr. Lukács submits that the same conclusion is applicable to the last sentence of the "Method of Payment" section of Existing Tariff Rule 20, and thus the impugned sentence is both unclear and unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[96] With respect to clarity, the Agency finds that the findings in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 also apply to this matter, and that the provision at issue is unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), because it leaves the impression that the availability of the option of seeking payment in a court of law is predicated on the passenger first declining payment offered by Porter. The Agency therefore finds that the provision at issue in Existing Tariff Rule 20 is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity and uncertain meaning as to the Rule's application.

[97] With respect to reasonableness, the Agency finds that the findings in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 also apply to this matter, and that the provision at issue is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). The Agency therefore finds that the provision fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

PROPOSED TARIFF RULES

Issue 1: Is the definition of "Credit Shell" in Proposed Tariff Rule 1.1 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Position of Mr. Lukács

[98] Mr. Lukács notes that stipulation (a) of the proposed definition of "Credit Shell" is that a "Credit Shell" is valid only for one year, and stipulation (c) of that definition states that a "Credit Shell" can be used only once, and the remainder of the balance is forfeited. He submits that the "Credit Shell" refers to payments made by passengers, and that, therefore, it appears that a "Credit Shell" is not a form of goodwill credit by Porter to passengers, but rather a credit for consideration received by Porter.

[99] Mr. Lukács argues that stipulations (a) and (c) purport to permit Porter to keep some or all of the consideration offered by passengers without providing any services in exchange, and that the absence of services (consideration) provided to passengers in return would result in the unjust enrichment of Porter. He maintains that the unjust enrichment of Porter provided by the "Credit Shell" fails to strike a balance between the rights of passengers and the ability of Porter to meet its statutory, commercial and operational obligations, and hence stipulations (a) and (c) of the "Credit Shell" proposed definition are unreasonable.

Analysis and findings

[100] A "Credit Shell" represents one of the alternatives available to a passenger under Proposed Tariff Rule 15 when the passenger's carriage is affected by flight overbooking, cancellation or advancement. As correctly noted by Mr. Lukács, the "Credit Shell" constitutes a remedy, and not a goodwill gesture. The Agency finds that the restrictions associated with the "Credit Shell", as set out in (a) and (c) of the definition in Proposed Tariff Rule 1.1 fail to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. Therefore, the definition of "Credit Shell" in Proposed Tariff Rule 1.1 would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency. 180

Issue 2: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Position of Mr. Lukács

[101] Mr. Lukács asserts that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) is overly restrictive with respect to the rights of passengers, and imposes an unreasonable and impossible burden of proof on passengers, who do not always have evidence about the cause of a schedule irregularity. He argues that the burden of proof ought to rest with the carrier, rather than the passengers, and the test ought to incorporate the principle of “all reasonable measures”.

[102] Mr. Lukács refers to Decision No. 204-C-A-2013, where the Agency considered the question of what conditions a carrier must satisfy to relieve itself from the obligation to pay denied boarding compensation in the case of aircraft substitution with one of a smaller capacity. He states that the Agency made the following key findings:

> In order to relieve itself from the obligation to pay denied boarding compensation, the carrier must demonstrate that:
>
> 1. substitution occurred for operational and safety reasons beyond its control; and,
> 2. it took all reasonable measures to avoid the substitution or that it was impossible for the carrier to take such measures.
>
> If the carrier fails to demonstrate both of these, then compensation should be due to the affected passengers.

[103] Mr. Lukács contends that in that Decision, the Agency concluded that, in the absence of specific language that establishes context or qualifies Air Canada’s exemption from paying denied boarding compensation, the Air Canada tariff provision at issue was unreasonable. He argues that the same principles are applicable to the obligation to refund passengers for the fare and charges paid for segments already travelled that no longer serve the purpose for which the passenger undertook the travel. Mr. Lukács maintains that Porter ought to be able to relieve itself from this obligation only if it demonstrates that:

- (C1) the Schedule Irregularity occurred for reasons beyond its control, and
- (C2) it took all reasonable measures to avoid the Schedule Irregularity or that it was impossible for the carrier to take such measures.

[104] Mr. Lukács concludes that based on the Agency’s findings in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013, Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) is unreasonable without imposing on Porter the requirement to demonstrate (C1) and (C2).

Analysis and findings

[105] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission respecting this matter. Particularly, the Agency agrees that the principles set out in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013 (respecting the matter of the conditions that a carrier must satisfy to relieve itself from the obligation of tendering denied boarding compensation in the event of substitution of aircraft) also apply to refunding passengers for the fare and charges paid for segments already travelled that no longer serve a purpose.

[106] The Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. Therefore, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 3: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Position of Mr. Lukács

[107] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. LET-C-A-83-2011, the Agency stated that any compensation paid in accordance with the tariff is to be paid in the form of cash, cheque, credit to a passenger's credit card, or any other form acceptable to the passenger. He adds that this finding was reiterated by the Agency in Decision No. 227-C-A-2013 in the specific context of denied boarding. Mr. Lukács maintains that the same conclusion is applicable with respect to the refund of fares and charges in the case of flight cancellation or advancement: passengers who paid cash or equivalent are entitled to be refunded in the same manner.

[108] Mr. Lukács contends that the "Credit Shell" is a highly restricted instrument: it is valid only for one year from the original ticket's issuance date and it can be used only once; any balance remaining after its use is forfeited by the passenger. He asserts that these restrictions have a high potential of unjust enrichment for Porter, without providing any benefit to passengers, and that allowing Porter to offer passengers a "Credit Shell" instead of a refund carries the same risks and disadvantages for passengers as offering travel vouchers in lieu of denied boarding compensation.

[109] Mr. Lukács submits that a future credit is not a proper form of refunding passengers money paid for services that were not provided, and that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) is unreasonable. He argues that the Agency should impose the same restrictions on Porter providing a "Credit Shell" in lieu of a refund as the Agency did with respect to travel vouchers in lieu of denied boarding compensation in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013. Mr. Lukács proposes the following restrictions:

- (R1) carrier must inform passengers of the amount of cash refund that would be due, and the passenger may decline travel vouchers, and receive cash or equivalent;
- (R2) carrier must fully disclose all material restrictions before the passenger decides to give up the cash or equivalent payment in exchange for a travel voucher;

- (R3) carrier must obtain the signed agreement of the passenger, confirming that the passenger was provided with the aforementioned information, prior to providing travel vouchers in lieu of cash refund; 182
- (R4) the amount of the travel voucher must be not less than 300% of the amount of cash refund that would be due;
- (R5) passengers are entitled to exchange the travel vouchers to cash at the rate of $1 in cash being equivalent to $3 in travel vouchers within one (1) month.

Analysis and findings

[110] The Agency finds that in the absence of the safeguards set out in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013 associated with the tendering of travel vouchers when denied boarding occurs, Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. Therefore, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 4: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[111] Porter contends that Proposed Tariff Rule 15 resolves the inconsistency found between Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 and Existing Tariff Rule 18, by removing the exclusionary language in Existing Tariff Rule 15, and with the revision in Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a), which expressly indicates that passengers affected by schedule irregularities may be entitled to reimbursement for damages resulting from delays under Tariff Rule 18. Porter notes that in Decision No. 248-C-A-2012 (Lukács v. Air Transat), Decision No. 249-C-A-2012 (Lukács v. WestJet) and Decision No. 250-C-A-2012 (Lukács v. Air Canada), the Agency determined that situations of overbooking and cancellation that are within the carrier's control constitute delays entitling passengers to relief, and such relief may, in certain circumstances, also apply where overbooking and cancellation are not within the carrier's control. Porter submits that by expressly indicating that relief under Proposed Tariff Rule 18 may be available to passengers affected by schedule irregularities, Proposed Tariff Rule 15 harmonizes the two Rules.

[112] Porter submits that, similarly, Proposed Tariff Rule 15 omits the language in Existing Tariff Rule 3.4 indicating that Porter is not required to give notice of schedule irregularities to passengers, consistent with the requirement in Tariff Rule 18 that Porter make efforts to notify passengers in advance of any schedule changes.

[113] Porter maintains that consistent with the circumstance-focussed approach endorsed by the Agency in Decision No. 248-C-A-2012, Decision No. 249-C-A-2012 and Decision No. 250-C-A-2012, 183 Proposed Tariff Rule 15 sets out those remedies which are potentially available in cases of schedule irregularities – including alternative transport within a reasonable time and at no additional cost, refund, credit and remedies under the principles of Article 19 of the Montreal Convention.

[114] Porter contends that Proposed Tariff Rule 15 clearly states that Porter (a) "will consider, to the extent they are known to the Carrier, the transportation needs of the passenger and/or other relevant circumstances of the passenger affected by the Schedule Irregularity", (b) will not limit its consideration of alternative transportation to its own services, and (c) will "make a good faith effort to fairly recognize, and appropriately mitigate, the impact of the Schedule Irregularity upon the passenger".

[115] Porter argues that Proposed Tariff Rule 15 clearly sets forth the range of potential remedies arising from scheduling irregularities, and indicates that Porter will, acting in good faith and in light of all relevant circumstances, offer a remedy or remedies designed to "appropriately mitigate the impact of the Schedule Irregularity", including remedies available under Proposed Tariff Rule 18.

[116] Porter submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 18 clearly indicates that it is the passenger who bears "the choice" among the remedies offered, including as between a refund (Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)) and a credit (Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv)).

[117] Porter also submits that its Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) is similar to that of Air Transat in all material respects, and thus similarly meets the requirement of clarity.

Mr. Lukács

[118] Mr. Lukács points out that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) requires Porter to offer passengers the choice between one or more of five remedial options, including:

> v. a monetary payment to the passenger for any amounts to which the passenger may be entitled pursuant to Rule 18 of this Tariff.

[119] Mr. Lukács contends that this suggests that Porter views the monetary payment pursuant to Proposed Tariff Rule 18 as an alternative to reprotecting passengers, instead of viewing the two as working together, in tandem.

[120] Mr. Lukács submits that it is not clear whether Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) is simply unclear, or if Porter intended it to be read as monetary compensation under Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(v) being an alternative to reprotection. He suggests that the latter interpretation is reinforced by Porter's submission, which refers to three options, at the passenger's choice:

i. alternative transportation to their destination within a reasonable time at no additional charge; or
ii. where the flight is interrupted at a connection point, return to the point of origin and a refund or credit for unused segments or the full ticket in the indicated circumstances; and
iii. compensation for resulting damages under Rule 18, which incorporates the principles of Article 19 of the Montreal Convention per Decision No. 16-C-A-2013.

[121] Mr. Lukács argues that the presence of (v) renders Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) at the very least unclear, but possibly also unreasonable, depending on its intended meaning.

[122] Mr. Lukács asserts that Proposed Tariff Rule 15 ought to clearly state that passengers are entitled to monetary payment pursuant to Proposed Tariff Rule 18 regardless of how they choose to be reprotected (transportation to destination, transportation to point of origin, or refund).

Analysis and findings

[123] As noted by Mr. Lukács, the monetary payment available to passengers under Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) represents one of several options made available by Porter to passengers affected by flight overbooking, delay or cancellation. Given the wording of that Rule, i.e., “the Carrier will offer the passenger the choice of accepting one or more of the following remedial choices”, it is not entirely clear whether a monetary payment constitutes a sole remedy. The Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning as to the Rule’s application and, as such, the application of that Rule is unclear.

[124] With respect to the reasonableness of Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a), the Agency finds that the Rule should clearly state that passengers are entitled to monetary payment, under Tariff Rule 18, irrespective of how the passengers choose to be reprotected. Given that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) does not do so, the Agency finds that it fails to strike a balance between the passengers’ rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter’s statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

[125] Therefore, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), if filed with the Agency.

Issue 5: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[126] Porter argues that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) is consistent with the rule filed by WestJet as a result of Decision No. 249-C-A-2012.

[127] Porter maintains that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) does not purport to exclude any liability on Porter’s part, but rather confirms that the intention of that Rule is not to create an absolute liability regime; that is, there may be instances where schedule irregularities resulting from matters beyond the carrier’s control do not necessarily result in the carrier’s liability under the principles of Article 19 of the Montreal Convention. Porter notes that in Decision No. 249-C-A-2012, the Agency stated that:

> [93] Whether a carrier will be held liable under Article 19 of the Convention will depend on whether it or its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid damage occasioned by delay, or that it was impossible for them to take such measures. Rather than setting out broad exclusions from liability such as acts of nature or of third parties, a case by case approach is warranted which looks, for example, at the predictability of an event in determining whether the carrier is exonerated under Article 19 of the Convention.

[128] Porter points out that the Agency ultimately accepted a tariff filing by WestJet upon its clarification that it was not intended that WestJet be liable for acts of nature or third parties “in all cases”, which clarification is reflected in Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c).

Mr. Lukács

[129] Mr. Lukács submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) creates the impression that Porter does not have to reprotect or refund passengers for the unused portions of their tickets if Porter can demonstrate the “all reasonable measures” defense. He states that if this was not Porter’s intent, then Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) is simply unclear, and that if it was Porter’s intent, then Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) is unreasonable, and inconsistent with the Agency’s findings in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013.

[130] Mr. Lukács also submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) confuses two different rights of passengers who are affected by a flight cancellation, denied boarding or flight advancement:

1. the right for damages occasioned by the cancellation, denied boarding, or flight advancement (Proposed Tariff Rule 18); and,
2. the right for reprotection or refund of unused portion (Proposed Tariff Rules 15(a)(i) to (iii)).

[131] Mr. Lukács argues that the difference between the nature of these two obligations is very substantial. He maintains that a carrier can relieve itself from the obligation under right 1 above by demonstrating that it and its agents and employees have taken all reasonable steps necessary to avoid the damage or that no such measures were available, but a carrier cannot relieve itself from the obligation under right 2 above.

[132] Mr. Lukács contends that passengers are entitled to reprotection or a refund regardless of the reason for their inability to travel, as long as the passengers are not culpable for it. He notes that in Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the fundamental right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time.

[133] Mr. Lukács submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) is either unclear or unreasonable in that it purports to relieve Porter from the obligation to refund the unused portions of tickets to passengers, contrary to the Agency’s findings in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013.

[134] Mr. Lukács asserts that the first half of Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) incorrectly focuses on the cause of the so-called “Schedule Irregularity” rather than on how Porter reacts to it, and thus misstates the test under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention. He notes that in Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, the Agency explained that what determines liability for delay is not the cause of the delay, but rather how the carrier reacts to the delay. Mr. Lukács argues that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) is inconsistent with the findings of the Agency in that Decision, and thus it ought to be disallowed as being either unclear or unreasonable.

[135] Mr. Lukács maintains that the "all reasonable measures" test set out in Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) does not relieve Porter from the obligation to refund or reprotect passengers, regardless of the cause of the "Schedule Irregularity", and that the test is relevant only to the obligation to refund the fares and charges for segments travelled that no longer serve any purpose for the passenger's travel. He submits, therefore, that the scope of Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) ought to be confined to the second portion of Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii).

Analysis and findings

[136] The Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) creates the impression that Porter does not have to reprotect or refund passengers for the unused portions of their tickets if Porter can demonstrate the "all reasonable measures" defense. As such, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) is contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) because the Rule is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity or uncertain meaning as to the Rule's application.

[137] As for reasonableness, Mr. Lukács correctly notes that passengers are entitled to reprotection or a refund, irrespective of the reason for their inability to travel, as long as the passengers are not responsible for it. In Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time. Taking "all reasonable measures" does not relieve Porter from its obligation to refund passengers for the unused portions of their tickets or reprotect passengers affected by flight cancellation, denied boarding or flight advancement. If it was Porter's intent under Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) not to reprotect or refund for unused portions of tickets, employing the "all reasonable measures" defense, Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

[138] Therefore, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), if filed with the Agency.

Issue 6: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Positions of the parties

Porter

[139] Porter submits that Proposed Tariff Rule 18 reflects an approach similar to those adopted by Air Transat and WestJet in their tariff rules concerning remedies for schedule irregularities, filed in response to Decision No. 248-C-A-2012 and Decision No. 249-C-A-2012.

[140] Porter advises that its Existing Tariff Rule 18 was filed in response to Decision No. 16-C-A-2013, and following issues raised in this complaint, Porter has made further revisions, reflected in Proposed

Tariff Rule 18, which: 187

a. Extend the rights set forth therein, including concerning advance notice, to passengers affected by flight advancements (Proposed Tariff Rules 18(c) and 18.1); and,
b. Confirm Porter's practices concerning on-board flight delays, consistent with the voluntary Code of Conduct.

[141] Porter argues that Proposed Tariff Rule 18.1 entitles passengers affected by flight advancements to resulting damages to the same extent as such are available to passengers affected by flight delays pursuant to Article 19 of the Montreal Convention. Porter submits that taken together with the remedies available to such passengers under Proposed Tariff Rule 15, the Tariff would provide clear and reasonable recourse for such passengers which accord with the Agency requirements.

[142] Porter states that it has proposed in Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) to make "best efforts" to inform passengers of flight advancements. Porter argues that it is not in a position to guarantee that notice will reach the passenger despite any efforts Porter may make. Porter submits that it would be required to take the same steps on a "best efforts" basis as pursuant to an "undertaking"; the distinction being, however, one of result: As Porter cannot guarantee that the passenger will receive the message, it cannot "undertake" to ensure that the passenger is informed.

[143] Porter maintains that the explicit extension of the remedies under Proposed Tariff Rule 18, together with the availability of the remedies under Proposed Tariff Rule 15, satisfy the Agency's prescribed requirements as to relief that must be made available in the case of flight advancements.

Mr. Lukács

[144] Mr. Lukács argues that "best efforts" to advise of flight advancements are not sufficient, and that Porter must "undertake" to inform passengers affected by such an event. He notes that in Decision No. LET-A-112-2003, the Agency held, under the heading "Passenger Notification", that:

> The Agency is of the opinion that Air Transat should undertake to notify passengers of all schedule irregularities, not just flight advancements.

[145] Mr. Lukács also points out that in Decision No. 344-C-A-2013, the Agency held that:

> [63] [...] When the air carrier advances the scheduled departure of a flight, the consequences may be more severe than a delay for the passenger and it follows that the duty to inform should be no less onerous.
>
> [64] [...] The absence of a tariff provision that imposes on Porter a requirement to "undertake" to inform passengers of flight advancements would severely limit the recourses available to passengers affected by those advancements, and would certainly be disadvantageous.
>
> [65] The Agency is of the opinion that the commitment to make "reasonable efforts" to inform passengers, insofar as such commitment pertains to flight advancements, is unreasonable [...]

[146] Mr. Lukács submits that in response to Decision No. 344-C-A-2013, Porter amended its Domestic Tariff Rule 16(c) to read as follows:

> Schedules are subject to change. Passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes, and the Carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform passengers of flight delays, and schedule changes and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them. Carrier will also undertake to inform passengers of any advancement of departure times. 188

[147] Mr. Lukács contends that Porter does not have any difficulty to "undertake" to inform passengers on domestic itineraries about advancement of departure times. He adds that the purpose of the requirement to "undertake" to inform passengers of flight advancements is precisely to provide an adequate recourse for passengers affected by these advancements. He submits that the consequence of a passenger not being notified about a flight advancement is not merely a delay of a few hours, but rather the passenger missing the flight, and possibly forfeiting the ability to travel.

[148] Mr. Lukács concludes that in respect of flight advancements, Porter ought to bear all the risks and consequences associated with passengers missing their flights because they did not know about the flight advancement. He argues that Porter making merely a "best effort" to inform such passengers ought not to relieve Porter from these risks, consequences and liabilities, because it is inconsistent with the passengers' fundamental rights to travel on the itinerary they paid for.

Analysis and findings

[149] The Agency finds that "best efforts" to advise passengers of flight advancements is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) for the reasons set out by Mr. Lukács, that carriers must undertake to inform passengers of those advancements, and that the Agency has already ruled on this matter in other decisions. Therefore, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) fails to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. The Agency therefore finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 7: Is Proposed Tariff Rule 20 unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and/or unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)?

Position of Porter

Form of compensation

[150] Porter argues that Proposed Tariff Rule 20 is already clear that the choice between cash or voucher lies solely with the passenger, and this discretion on the passenger's part is maintained with the broadening of the denied boarding compensation regime to Canadian-originating flights. Porter states that, consistent with the Agency's ruling in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013, Porter may only tender vouchers in lieu of cash as follows:

a. at a value ratio of 3:1; i.e., vouchers offered must be redeemable at three times the value of cash compensation the passenger would otherwise be entitled to;
b. upon disclosing to the passenger all material restrictions applicable to the vouchers;
c. if the passenger agrees in writing to accept the vouchers in lieu of cash.

[151] Porter submits that in recognition that passengers accepting vouchers will be making decisions affecting their legal rights in a relatively short time frame, Porter will permit passengers to reverse their decisions and exchange their vouchers for cash within 30 days of the denied boarding incident, in accordance with the Agency's finding in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013.

Reprotection of passengers who are involuntarily denied boarding

[152] Porter points out that passengers affected by overbooking are now expressly entitled to certain remedies under Proposed Tariff Rule 15, including the choice between reprotection and a refund, and Porter is not limited to offering alternative service on its own flights or the "same or lower booking code" on another carrier's flights.

Denied boarding compensation is available on all flights

[153] Porter contends that while Existing Tariff Rule 20 provides distinct remedies depending on whether a flight departs from the United States or Canada (the only two countries served by Porter), Proposed Tariff Rule 20 removes this distinction, applying the same rules on all flights under the Tariff.

Amount of denied boarding compensation

[154] Porter proposes to implement the same "grid" of compensation amounts, depending on length of the delay in the passenger's arrival at their destination, as currently applies to its United States-originating flights.

[155] Porter points out that in Decision No. 204-C-A-2013, the Agency found that the United States' compensation regime and an alternative regime proposed by Mr. Lukács were both reasonable options. Porter indicates that it has elected to implement the United States regime for all of Porter's international flights, including those originating in Canada. Porter believes that the adoption of a single compensation regime will be less confusing to passengers, and that the implementation of a single, uniform regime across all of its stations will ensure consistency and facility of implementation for its own personnel.

[156] Porter points out that it has modified the United States regime slightly to provide for compensation of "at least" the amount prescribed under that regime, up to the stipulated maximums. Porter advises that while this will not prejudice passengers, it will allow Porter some flexibility during the rollout of its broader denied boarding compensation program as overbooking is tested on more routes, whereby it may simply offer the maximum amount to passengers during initial rollout until it can confidently implement a compensation regime based on actual fares paid by each individual passenger. Porter submits that it will not pay any passenger less than the minimum amounts indicated in Proposed Tariff Rule 20, which amounts the Agency has found to be reasonable.

Position of Mr. Lukács

Form of compensation

190

[157] Mr. Lukács points out that in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013, the Agency imposed the following conditions on the offering of travel vouchers in lieu of denied boarding compensation:

- (R1) carrier must inform passengers of the amount of cash compensation that would be due, and the passenger may decline travel vouchers, and receive cash or equivalent;
- (R2) carrier must fully disclose all material restrictions before the passenger decides to give up the cash or equivalent payment in exchange for a travel voucher;
- (R3) carrier must obtain the signed agreement of the passenger, confirming that the passenger was provided with the aforementioned information, prior to providing travel vouchers in lieu of compensation;
- (R4) the amount of the travel voucher must be not less than 300% of the amount of cash compensation that would be due;
- (R5) passengers are entitled to exchange the travel vouchers to cash at the rate of $1 in cash being equivalent to $3 in travel vouchers within one (1) month.

[158] Mr. Lukács argues that while Proposed Tariff Rule 20 incorporates (R2), (R4), and (R5), it fails to incorporate (R1) and to fully incorporate (R3).

[159] Mr. Lukács notes that Proposed Tariff Rule 20 only requires Porter to obtain a written agreement from passengers to accept vouchers in lieu of cash or cheque payment, but omits the requirement to obtain written confirmation that the passengers were provided with the information required under (R1) and (R2). He asserts that the absence of (R1) and the full incorporation of (R3) renders Proposed Tariff Rule 20 unreasonable, and Porter ought to be ordered to fully incorporate (R1) and (R3) into the Rule.

[160] Mr. Lukács submits that it is common knowledge that cash or equivalent, which constitutes legal tender, is more valuable than any kind of coupons or vouchers, which can be used only for payment at a specific business or from a service provider. He notes that vouchers, as acknowledged by Porter, are subject to restrictions imposed by Porter (including an expiry date), while legal tender is not subject to these restrictions.

[161] Mr. Lukács maintains that the conditions on the offering of travel vouchers in lieu of denied boarding compensation set out in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013 mitigate these disadvantages, and it is important to bear in mind that the restrictions were imposed by the Agency precisely for the purpose of mitigating the disadvantage to passengers.

The reference to “reconfirmation requirements” in Proposed Tariff Rule 20

[162] Mr. Lukács argues that the reference to “reconfirmation requirements” renders Proposed Tariff Rule 20 unclear and/or unreasonable for the following reasons:

1. Porter’s general conditions of carriage state that: “3. Reconfirmation of flights is not required [...]”. Thus, Proposed Tariff Rule 20 appears to be incorporating a non-existent requirement, which creates substantial confusion and lack of clarity, at the very least;
2. The word/term “reconfirmation” is nowhere defined in Porter’s Tariff;

3. Reconfirmation of reservations is an outdated requirement that has been abandoned by the industry, given that the standard practice is to issue confirmed reservations; and,
4. It is virtually impossible for a passenger to prove that they reconfirm their reservation.

[163] Mr. Lukács maintains, therefore, that conditioning the payment of denied boarding compensation on some sort of reconfirmation would effectively deprive passengers of their right to be paid denied boarding compensation.

Analysis and findings

[164] The Agency finds that paragraphs (a) to (d) under “Method of Payment” in Proposed Tariff Rule 20 do not fully incorporate the restrictions imposed by Decision No. 342-C-A-2013 (R1 to R5). Specifically, R3 is not fully incorporated into paragraph (c) because it only requires Porter to obtain a written agreement from the passenger to accept vouchers in lieu of cash or cheque payment, but omits the requirement to obtain written confirmation that the passengers were provided with the information required under (R1) and (R2). Also, R1 is not reflected in Proposed Tariff Rule 20. The Agency finds that the failure to fully reflect the conditions associated with the issuance of travel vouchers, set out in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013, fails to strike a balance between the passengers’ rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter’s statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

[165] The Agency also finds that the reference to “reconfirmation requirements” makes Proposed Tariff Rule 20 unclear for the reasons set out by Mr. Lukács. The Agency therefore finds that the Rule is stated in such a way as to create reasonable doubt, ambiguity and uncertain meaning as to the Rule’s application.

[166] Furthermore, the Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács’ submission that requiring reconfirmation fails to strike a balance between the passengers’ rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter’s statutory, commercial and operational obligations.

[167] Therefore, the Agency finds that Proposed Tariff Rule 20 would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), if filed with the Agency.

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

With respect to Porter’s Existing Tariff Rules

Issue 1

[168] The Agency has determined that the absence from Porter’s Tariff of all of the elements of the Code of Conduct does not render the Tariff unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Issue 2

[169] The Agency has determined that the definition of “Event of Force Majeure” in Existing Tariff Rule 1.1 is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations). 192

Issue 3

[170] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and are unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Issue 4

[171] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rule 18(c) is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Issue 5

[172] The Agency has determined that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and is unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

With respect to Porter’s Proposed Tariff Rules

Issue 1

[173] The Agency has determined that the definition of “Credit Shell” in Proposed Tariff Rule 1.1 would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 2

[174] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii)(b) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 3

[175] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 4

[176] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), if filed with the Agency. 193

Issue 5

[177] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), if filed with the Agency.

Issue 6

[178] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) if filed with the Agency.

Issue 7

[179] The Agency has determined that Proposed Tariff Rule 20 would be found unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) and unclear, contrary to section 122 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), if filed with the Agency.

ORDER

[180] The Agency, pursuant to section 113 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), disallows the following provisions of Porter's Tariff:

- the definition of "Event of Force Majeure" in Existing Tariff Rule 1.1;
- Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15;
- Existing Tariff Rule 18(c); and,
- Existing Tariff Rule 20.

[181] The Agency orders Porter, by February 28, 2014, to amend its Tariff to conform to this Order and the Agency's findings set out in this Decision in the following manner:

Adopt Proposed Tariff Rules 1.1, 15, 18 and 20 with the following amendments:

1. Delete (a) and (c) from the definition of "Credit Shell" in Proposed Tariff Rule 1.1.

2. Amend Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iii) to read: a refund of the fare paid by the passenger for each unused segment, and, subject to Rule 15(c), for segments already flown if they no longer serve the purpose for which the passenger undertook the travel.

3. Delete Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(v), and delete Proposed Tariff Rule 15(a)(iv) should Porter choose not to include the additional provisions under Proposed Tariff Rule 20 set out below in (6).

4. Amend Proposed Tariff Rule 15(c) to read:

If the Carrier demonstrates that

1. the Schedule Irregularity occurred for reasons beyond its control, and
2. it took all reasonable measures to avoid the Schedule Irregularity or that it was impossible for the Carrier to take such measures, then the Carrier shall not be required to refund passengers for segments already travelled, regardless of whether they serve the purpose for which the passenger undertook such travel.

5. Amend Proposed Tariff Rule 18(c) by replacing “best efforts” with “undertake”.

6. Amend the provision in Proposed Tariff Rule 20 appearing as the first bullet under the heading “Compensation for Involuntary Denied Boarding” by deleting the word “reconfirmation”; and should Porter choose to retain a “Credit Shell” as a form of compensation, add the following conditions under the heading “Method of Payment”:

- Carrier must inform passengers of the amount of cash compensation that would be due and the passenger may decline travel vouchers, and receive cash or equivalent.
- Carrier must obtain the signed agreement of the passenger, confirming that the passenger was provided with the aforementioned information, prior to providing travel vouchers in lieu of compensation.

[182] Pursuant to paragraph 28(1)(b) of the CTA, the disallowance of Existing Tariff Rules 1.1, 3.4, 15, 18(c) and 20 shall come into force when Porter complies with the above or on February 28, 2014, whichever is sooner.

APPENDIX

EXISTING TARIFF RULES

RULE 1. DEFINITIONS AND INTERPRETATION

1.1 Definitions

Event of Force Majeure means an event, the cause or causes of which are not attributable to the willful misconduct or gross negligence of the Carrier, including, but not limited to (i) earthquake, flood, hurricane, explosion, fire, storm, epidemic, other acts of God or public enemies, war, national emergency, invasion, insurrection, riots, strikes, picketing, boycott, lockouts or other civil disturbances, (ii) interruption of flying facilities, navigational aids or other services, (iii) any laws, rules, proclamations, regulations, orders, declarations, interruptions or requirements of or interference by any government or governmental agency or official thereof, (iv) inability to procure materials, accessories, equipment or parts from suppliers, mechanical failure to the aircraft or any part thereof, damage, destruction or loss of use of an aircraft, confiscation, nationalization, seizure, detention, theft or hijacking of an aircraft, or (v) any other cause or circumstances whether similar or dissimilar, seen or unforeseen, which the Carrier is unable to overcome by the exercise of reasonable diligence and at a reasonable cost.

RULE 3. RATES AND CHARGES – INTERNATIONAL SERVICE 195

3.4 Carrier Cancellation, Change, and Refund Terms

The Carrier reserves the right to cancel or change the planned departure, schedule, route, aircraft or stopping places of any flight for which fares in respect of a International Service have been paid, at any time and from time to time, for any reason, without notice to any passengers affected thereby and, in connection therewith, the Carrier shall not be liable to any passenger in respect of such cancellation or change, whether or not resulting from an Event of Force Majeure; provided that, the Carrier may and reserves the right, at its sole discretion, to provide any passengers affected by such cancellation or change with:

a. a credit, valid for one year from the original ticket issuance date, towards the provision of a fare relating to a future flight, which credit shall be equal to the original fare (s) which was/were cancelled. When redeeming the credit toward a future booking, passenger may apply the credit toward the base fare, airlines surcharges, change fees, and government taxes and fees. Credit can be used one time only. If the total cost of the transaction to which the credit is applied is less than the value of the credit, the residual value left from its use is forfeited. Bookings using credit must be in the name of the owner of the credit. Credit may be transferred to another traveler one time only, and the credit's original expiration date shall continue to apply after any such transfer; or
b. to otherwise refund to such passenger, an amount which shall not be greater than the fare paid by that passenger in respect of that flight or flights if booked as a round trip and the originating sector is cancelled.

RULE 15. CARRIER CANCELLATION, CHANGE, AND REFUND TERMS

The Carrier reserves the right to cancel or change the planned departure, schedule, route, aircraft or stopping places of any flight for which fares have been paid, at any time and from time to time, for any reason, in connection therewith, the Carrier shall not be liable to any passenger in respect of such cancellation or change, whether or not resulting from an Event of Force Majeure; provided that, the Carrier may and reserves the right, at its sole discretion, to provide any passengers affected by such cancellation or change with:

a. a credit, valid for one year from the original ticket issuance date, towards the provision of a fare relating to a future flight, which credit shall be equal to the original fare which was cancelled. When redeeming the credit toward a future booking, passenger may apply the credit toward the base fare, airlines surcharges, change fees, and government taxes and fees. Credit can be used one time only. If the total cost of the transaction to which the credit is applied is less than the value of the credit, the residual value left from its use is forfeited. Bookings using credit must be in the name of the owner of the credit. Credit may be transferred to another traveler one time only, and the credit's original expiration date shall continue to apply after any such transfer; or
b. to otherwise refund to such passenger, an amount which shall not be greater than the fare paid by that passenger in respect of that flight.

RULE 18. RESPONSIBILITY FOR SCHEDULES AND OPERATIONS

196

[...]

(c) Passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes. In the event of a delay or schedule change, the carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform the passengers of delays and schedule changes, and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them.

RULE 20. DENIED BOARDING COMPENSATION

General

For the purposes of this Rule 20, “alternate transportation” means air transportation with a confirmed reservation at no additional charge (by a scheduled airline licensed by Canada or another appropriate country), or other transportation accepted and used by the passenger in the case of denied boarding.

If a passenger has been denied a reserved seat in case of an oversold flight on Porter Airlines:

a. where the flight originates in Canada, the Carrier will:
    i. refund the total fare paid for each unused segment; or
    ii. arrange reasonable alternate transportation on its own services; or
    iii. if reasonable alternate transportation on its own services is not available, the Carrier will make reasonable efforts to arrange transportation on the services of another carrier or combination of carriers on a confirmed basis in the same comparable, or lower booking code; and
b. where the flight originates in the United States, the Carrier will provide denied boarding compensation as set forth in this Rule 20 below.

Volunteers and Boarding Priorities

If a flight is oversold (more passengers hold confirmed reservations than there are seats available), no one may be denied boarding against his/her will until the Carrier’s personnel first ask for volunteers who will give up their reservations willingly, in exchange for such compensation as the Carrier may choose to offer. If there are not enough volunteers, other passengers may be denied boarding involuntarily, in accordance with the Carrier’s boarding priority.

In determining boarding priority, the Carrier will consider the following factors:

- whether a passenger is traveling due to death or illness of a member of the passenger’s family, or,
- age of a passenger, or
- whether a passenger is an unaccompanied minor, or
- whether a passenger is a person with a disability, or
- the fare class purchased and/or fare paid by a passenger

Compensation for Involuntary Denied Boarding (Applicable only on flights originating in the United States)

If you are denied boarding involuntarily on a flight originating in the United States, you are entitled to a payment of “denied boarding compensation” from Carrier unless: 197

- you have not fully complied with the Carrier’s ticketing, check-in and reconfirmation requirements, or you are not acceptable for transportation under the Carrier’s usual rules and practices; or
- you are denied boarding because the flight is cancelled; or
- you are denied boarding because a smaller capacity aircraft was substituted for safety or operational reasons; or
- you are offered accommodations in a section of the aircraft other than specified in your ticket, at no extra charge, (a passenger seated in a section for which a lower fare is charged must be given an appropriate refund); or
- Carrier is able to place you on another flight or flights that are planned to reach your final destination within one hour of the scheduled arrival of your original flight.

Amount of Denied Boarding Compensation

Passengers traveling from the United States to Canada with a reserved seat on Porter Airlines who are denied boarding involuntarily from an oversold flight originating at a U.S. airport are entitled to:

a. No compensation if the Carrier offers alternate transportation that is planned to arrive at the passenger’s destination or first stopover not later than one hour after the planned arrival time of the passenger’s original flight;
b. 200% of the fare to the passenger’s destination or first stopover, with a maximum of $650 USD, if the Carrier offers alternate transportation that is planned to arrive at the passenger’s destination or first stopover more than one hour but less than four hours after the planned arrival time of the passenger’s original flight; and
c. 400% of the fare to the passenger’s destination or first stopover, with a maximum of $1,300 USD, if the Carrier does not offer alternate transportation that is planned to arrive at the airport of the passenger’s destination or first stopover less than four hours after the planned arrival time of the passenger’s original flight.

0 to 1 hour arrival delay – No compensation.

1 to 4 hour arrival delay – 200% of one-way fare (but no more than $650 USD).

Over 4 hours arrival delay – 400% of one-way fare (but no more than $1,300 USD).

For the purpose of calculating compensation under this Rule 20, the “fare” is the one-way fare for the flight including any surcharge and air transportation tax, minus any applicable discounts. All flights, including connecting flights, to the passenger’s destination or first 4-hour stopover are used to compute the compensation.

Method of Payment

Except as provided below, the Carrier must give each passenger who qualifies for denied boarding compensation a payment by cheque or draft for the amount specified above, on the day and place the involuntary denied boarding occurs. However, if the Carrier arranges alternate transportation for the passenger's convenience that departs before the payment can be made, the payment will be sent to the passenger within 24 hours. Carrier may offer free or discounted transportation vouchers in place of cash or cheque payment. The passenger may, however, insist on the cash/cheque payment or refuse all compensation and bring private legal action.

Passenger's Option

Acceptance of the compensation relieves the Carrier from any further liability to the passenger caused by the failure to honour the confirmed reservation. However, the passenger may decline the payment and seek to recover damages in a court of law or in some other manner.

PROPOSED TARIFF RULES

RULE 1. DEFINITIONS AND INTERPRETATION

1.1 Definitions

Credit Shell means a record with a payment but no flight used to hold a credit or credits for future flights, which (a) shall be valid for one year from the original ticket issuance date, towards the provision of a fare relating to a future flight, (b) may be applied toward the base fare, airlines surcharges, change fees, and government taxes and fees, (c) can be used one time only, whereby if the total cost of the transaction to which the Credit Shell is applied is less than the value of the Credit Shell, the residual value left from its use is forfeited, (d) may be used exclusively toward bookings in the name of the owner of the Credit Shell, provided however that a Credit Shell may be transferred to another traveler one time only, and the Credit Shell's original expiration date shall continue to apply after any such transfer;

Event of Force Majeure: Deleted

RULE 3. RATES AND CHARGES – INTERNATIONAL SERVICE

3.4 Carrier Cancellation, Change and Refund Terms

Refer to Rule 15. Carrier Cancellation, Change and Refund Terms for applicable terms and conditions.

RULE 15. CARRIER CANCELLATION, CHANGE, AND REFUND TERMS

a. If the passenger's journey is interrupted due to overbooking, a flight cancellation or an advancement of a flight's scheduled departure by more than the minimum period for the passenger to check in pursuant to Rule 21 of this Tariff (each a "Schedule Irregularity"), the Carrier will offer the passenger the choice of accepting one or more of the following remedial choices:
    i. alternative transportation, within a reasonable time and without additional charge, to the passenger's intended destination;

ii. return transportation to the passenger's point of origin within a reasonable time and without additional charge;
iii. a refund of the fare and charges paid by the passenger for each unused segment, and for the segments already flown if (a) they no longer serve the purpose for which the passenger undertook such travel, and (b) the Schedule Irregularity was within the control of the Carrier;
iv. a Credit Shell in the amount described in sub-section (iii) above; and
v. a monetary payment to the passenger for any amounts to which the passenger may be entitled pursuant to Rule 18 of this Tariff.

b. In defining the remedy or remedies appropriate in each case arising under Rule 15(b) above, the Carrier:
i. will consider, to the extent they are known to the Carrier, the transportation needs of the passenger and/or other relevant circumstances of the passenger affected by the Schedule Irregularity;
ii. will not limit itself to considering its own services or the services of carriers with which it has interline or code-sharing agreements; and
iii. will make a good faith effort to fairly recognize, and appropriately mitigate, the impact of the Schedule Irregularity upon the passenger.

c. The provisions of this Rule are not intended to make the Carrier responsible in all cases for acts of nature or for the acts of third parties that are not deemed servants and/or agents of the Carrier under applicable law or international conventions, and all the rights set forth herein are subject to the following exception, namely, that the Carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by a Schedule Irregularity if the Carrier, and its employees and agents, took all reasonable steps that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or if it was impossible to take such measures.

d. The rights of a passenger against the Carrier in the event of overbooking and cancellation is, in most cases of international carriage, governed by the Montreal Convention. Article 19 of that Convention provides that an air carrier is liable for damage caused by delay in the carriage of passengers and goods unless it proves that it took all reasonable measures to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it to take such measures. There are some exceptional cases of international carriage in which the rights of passengers are not governed by an international convention. In such cases, only a court of competent jurisdiction can determine which system of laws must be consulted to determine what those rights are.

RULE 18. RESPONSIBILITY FOR SCHEDULES AND OPERATIONS

a. The Carrier will endeavor to transport the passenger and baggage with reasonable dispatch, but times shown in timetables or elsewhere are not guaranteed.

b. The agreed stopping places are those places shown in the carrier's timetable as scheduled stopping places on the route. The Carrier may, without notice, substitute alternative carriers or aircraft and, if necessary, may alter or omit stopping places shown in the timetable.

c. Passengers have a right to information on flight times and schedule changes. In the event of a delay or schedule change, the carrier will make reasonable efforts to inform the passengers of delays and schedule changes, and, to the extent possible, the reasons for them, including that the Carrier will make best efforts to inform passengers of advancements of scheduled flight departures.

d. If a delay occurs after passengers have boarded the aircraft, the Carrier will offer drinks and snacks if it is safe, practical and timely to do so. If the delay exceeds 90 minutes and circumstances permit, the Carrier will offer passengers the option of disembarking from the aircraft until it is time to depart.

18.1 Passenger Expenses Resulting from Delays and Flight Advancements

For the purposes of this Sub-Rule 18.1, “Flight Advancement” shall mean an advancement of the scheduled flight departure by more than the minimum period for the passenger to check in pursuant to Rule 21 of this Tariff.

Passengers will be entitled to reimbursement from the Carrier for reasonable expenses incurred as a result of a delay or a Flight Advancement, subject to the following conditions:

i. The Carrier shall not be liable for any damages, costs, losses or expenses occasioned by delays or a Flight Advancements if it, and its employees and agents, took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or if it was impossible for the Carrier and its employees or agents to take such measures;
ii. Any passenger seeking reimbursement for expenses resulting from delays or a Flight Advancements must provide the Carrier with (a) written notice of his or her claim, (b) particulars of the expenses for which reimbursement is sought and (c) receipts or other documents establishing to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier that the expenses were incurred; and
iii. The Carrier may refuse or decline any claim, in whole or in part, if:
    A. the passenger has failed or declined to provide proof or particulars establishing, to the reasonable satisfaction of the Carrier, that the expenses claimed were incurred by the passenger and resulted from a delay or Flight Advancement for which compensation is available under this Rule 18; or
    B. the expenses for which reimbursement is claimed, or any portion thereof, are not reasonable or did not result from the delay or Flight Advancement, as determined by the Carrier, acting reasonably.

In any case, the Carrier may, in its sole discretion, issue meal, hotel and/or ground transportation vouchers to passengers affected by a delay or a Flight Advancement.

RULE 20. DENIED BOARDING COMPENSATION

General

If a passenger has been involuntarily denied a reserved seat in case of an oversold flight on Porter Airlines, the Carrier will provide the passenger with:

a. a remedy or remedies in accordance with Rule 15 above; and
b. denied boarding compensation as set forth in this Rule 20 below.

Volunteers and Boarding Priorities

201

If a flight is oversold (more passengers hold confirmed reservations than there are seats available), no one may be denied boarding against his/her will until the Carrier's personnel first ask for volunteers who will give up their reservations willingly, in exchange for such compensation as the Carrier may choose to offer. If there are not enough volunteers, other passengers may be denied boarding involuntarily, in accordance with the Carrier's boarding priority.

In determining boarding priority, the Carrier will consider the following factors:

- whether a passenger is traveling due to death or illness of a member of the passenger's family, or,
- age of a passenger, or
- whether a passenger is an unaccompanied minor, or
- whether a passenger is a person with a disability, or
- the fare class purchased and/or fare paid by a passenger

Compensation for Involuntary Denied Boarding

If you are denied boarding involuntarily on a flight, you are entitled to a payment of "denied boarding compensation" from Carrier unless:

- you have not fully complied with the Carrier's ticketing, check-in and reconfirmation requirements, or you are not acceptable for transportation under the Carrier's usual rules and practices; or
- you are denied boarding because the flight is cancelled; or
- you are denied boarding because a smaller capacity aircraft was substituted for safety or operational reasons, and the events prompting such substitution were beyond the Carrier's control and the Carrier took all reasonable measures to avoid the substitution or it was impossible for the Carrier to take such measures; or
- you are offered accommodations in a section of the aircraft other than specified in your ticket, at no extra charge, (a passenger seated in a section for which a lower fare is charged must be given an appropriate refund); or
- Carrier is able to place you on another flight or flights that are planned to reach your final destination within one hour of the scheduled arrival of your original flight.

Amount of Denied Boarding Compensation

Passengers with a reserved seat on Porter Airlines who are denied boarding involuntarily from an oversold flight are entitled to:

a. No compensation if the Carrier offers alternate transportation that is planned to arrive at the passenger's destination or first stopover not later than one hour after the planned arrival time of the passenger's original flight;
b. No less than 200% of the fare to the passenger's destination or first stopover, with a maximum of $650 USD, if the Carrier offers alternate transportation that is planned to arrive at the passenger's destination or first stopover more than one hour but less than four hours after the planned arrival time of the passenger's original flight; and
c. No less than 400% of the fare to the passenger's destination or first stopover, with a maximum of

$1,300 USD, if the Carrier does not offer alternate transportation that is planned to arrive at the airport of the passenger's destination or first stopover less than four hours after the planned arrival time of the passenger's original flight. 202

0 to 1 hour arrival delay – No compensation

1 to 4 hour arrival delay – At least 200% of one-way fare (but no more than $650 USD)

Over 4 hours arrival delay – At least 400% of one-way fare (but no more than $1,300 USD)

For the purpose of calculating compensation under this Rule 20, the "fare" is the one-way fare for the flight including any surcharge and air transportation tax, minus any applicable discounts. All flights, including connecting flights, to the passenger's destination or first 4-hour stopover are used to compute the compensation.

Method of Payment

Except as provided below, the Carrier must give each passenger who qualifies for denied boarding compensation a payment by cheque or draft for the amount specified above, on the day and place the involuntary denied boarding occurs. However, if the Carrier arranges alternate transportation for the passenger's convenience that departs before the payment can be made, the payment will be sent to the passenger within 24 hours. The Carrier may offer free or discounted transportation vouchers in place of cash or cheque payment, provided:

a. the value of such voucher(s) is no less than 300% of the value of the cash compensation to which the passenger would otherwise have been entitled;
b. the Carrier has disclosed to the passenger all material restrictions applicable to the use of such vouchers;
c. the passenger agrees in writing to accept vouchers in lieu of cash or cheque payment; and
d. The passenger may in any event refuse to accept such vouchers and insist on the cash/cheque payment, including that any passenger who accepts vouchers in lieu of cash or cheque payment at the time of involuntary denied boarding may, within 30 days, elect to exchange such vouchers for the cash or cheque payment she would have been entitled to receive had the passenger not accepted vouchers, provided that the vouchers have not been redeemed by the passenger in whole or in part.

Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended

111(1) All tolls and terms and conditions of carriage, including free and reduced rate transportation, that are established by an air carrier shall be just and reasonable and shall, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions and with respect to all traffic of the same description, be applied equally to all that traffic.

122. Every tariff shall contain

[...]

(c) the terms and conditions of carriage, clearly stating the air carrier's policy in respect of at least the following matters, namely, 203

[...]

Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules for International Carriage by Air – Montreal Convention

Article 19 – Delay

The carrier is liable for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage by air of passengers, baggage or cargo. Nevertheless, the carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it or them to take such measures.

Article 26 – Invalidity of contractual provisions

Any provision tending to relieve the carrier of liability or to fix a lower limit than that which is laid down in this Convention shall be null and void, but the nullity of any such provision does not involve the nullity of the whole contract, which shall remain subject to the provisions of this Convention.

Member(s)

Sam Barone
Geoffrey C. Hare

Back to rulings

Date modified:
2014-01-31

This is Exhibit "6" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

205

Decision No. 28-A-2004

January 16, 2004

January 16, 2004

APPLICATION by Air Transat A.T. Inc. carrying on business as Air Transat for an exemption from subsection 115(1) of the Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, as amended, to file with the Canadian Transportation Agency a new international scheduled services tariff on less than statutory notice; and IN THE MATTER OF a new international scheduled services tariff applicable to Air Transat A.T. Inc. carrying on business as Air Transat.
File No. M4110/A328-1

APPLICATION

On January 15, 2002, Air Transat A.T. Inc. carrying on business as Air Transat (hereinafter Air Transat) applied to the Canadian Transportation Agency (hereinafter the Agency) for an exemption from subsection 115(1) of the Air Transportation Regulations (hereinafter the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations)) to file a new international scheduled services tariff on less than statutory notice.

Pursuant to subsection 29(1) of the Canada Transportation Act, S.C., 1996, c. 10 (hereinafter the CTA), the Agency is required to make its decision no later than 120 days after the application is received unless the parties agree to an extension. In this case, Air Transat has agreed to an indefinite extension of the deadline.

BACKGROUND

After numerous exchanges of correspondence between staff of the Agency and Air Transat concerning certain issues arising from the proposed international scheduled services tariff, the Agency, by Decision No. LET-A-359-2002 dated December 10, 2002, advised Air Transat that the Agency was satisfied with Air Transat's proposed international scheduled services tariff, in general, but that certain amendments should be made to make the tariff fully acceptable to the Agency. These amendments concerned the following provisions, respectively: refusal to transport, fare guarantee, schedule irregularity, refunds in cases of schedule irregularity, advancement of flight times, and the introduction of more restrictive conditions/increases in charges.

On February 25, 2003, Air Transat, in response to Decision No. LET-A-359-2002, filed on statutory notice a new international scheduled services tariff, designated CTA(A) No. 4, for effect April 24, 2003. Air Transat advised the Agency that it had considered the amendments proposed by the Agency, and had attempted to address these concerns through a multitude of changes to tariff provisions. Air Transat also advised the Agency that it was unable to accept the Agency's proposal that a full refund be provided should a passenger wish to cancel a reservation for a flight that has been delayed for more than six hours due to a schedule irregularity. In Air Transat's view, such a provision would have a major and perhaps crippling financial impact, given that Air Transat is a non-network, non-connecting and non-interlining carrier that carries primarily origin/destination traffic.

Following additional exchanges of correspondence between Agency staff and Air Transat respecting certain matters not addressed by the carrier in relation to Decision No. LET-A-359-2002, Air Transat filed amendments to its tariff on April 22, 2003 for effect April 24, 2003.

AGENCY ANALYSIS AND FINDINGS

The Agency's jurisdiction in matters respecting international tariffs is set out, in part, in section 26 of the CTA, and sections 111 and 113 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Pursuant to section 26 of the CTA, the Agency may require a person to do or refrain from doing any thing that the person is or may be required to do or is prohibited from doing under any Act of Parliament that is administered in whole or in part by the Agency.

Subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) provides that:

> All tolls and terms and conditions of carriage, including free and reduced rate transportation, that are established by an air carrier shall be just and reasonable and shall, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions and with respect to all traffic of the same description, be applied equally to all that traffic.

Further, section 113 of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations) provides that the Agency may:

> (a) suspend any tariff or portion of a tariff that appears not to conform with subsections 110(3) to (5) or section 111 or 112, or disallow any tariff or portion of a tariff that does not conform with any of those provisions; and(b) establish and substitute another tariff or portion thereof for any tariff or portion thereof disallowed under paragraph (a).

By Decision No. LET-A-112-2003 dated May 12, 2003, the Agency advised Air Transat that in order to make the tariff provisions filed by the carrier fully acceptable, further amendments would be required to Rule 5.2 (Responsibility for schedules and operations) and Rule 6.3 (Liability for refusal to transport and for failure to operate on schedule). These tariff provisions provide that:

207

5.2 Responsibility for schedules and operations:(a) The Carrier will endeavor to transport passengers and baggage with reasonable dispatch. Times shown in schedules, scheduled contracts, tickets, air waybills or elsewhere are not guaranteed. Flight times are subject to change without notice. The Carrier assumes no responsibility for making connections.(b) Schedules are subject to change without notice. The Carrier is not responsible or liable for failure to make connections, or for failure to operate any flight according to schedule, or for a change to the schedule of any flight. Under no circumstances shall the Carrier be liable for any special, incidental or consequential damages arising directly or indirectly from the foregoing (including the carriage of baggage) whether or not the Carrier had knowledge that such damages might be incurred. Notwithstanding, the Carrier will undertake to notify passengers reasonably in advance through means it deems appropriate of any schedule changes resulting in the advancement of flight departure times.(c) Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Carrier cannot guarantee that a passenger's baggage will be carried on the flight if sufficient space is not available as determined by the Carrier.(d) Subject to the Convention, the Carrier will not provide or reimburse passengers for expenses incurred due to delays or cancellations of flights.(e) In the event of an involuntary re-routing of a flight, the Carrier will undertake to ensure that the passenger is routed or transported to his/her ultimate destination, as per the contract of carriage, within a reasonable period of time and at no extra cost.6.3 Liability for refusal to transport and for failure to operate on scheduleThe Carrier is not liable for its refusal to transport any passenger in accordance with Rule 6. Subject to Rule 5.3.1, where a passenger incurs a schedule irregularity of not less than six (6) hours involving a flight operated by the Carrier:(a) The Carrier will transport the passenger without stopover on its next flight on which space is available and in the same class of service as his original flight.(b) If the Carrier is unable to provide reasonable alternative transportation on its services, the Carrier will arrange transportation on the services of other carriers or combination of carriers with whom the Carrier has interline traffic agreements for such transportation. In such cases, the passenger will be transported without stopover and at no additional costs to himself, in the same class of service as applied to his original outbound flight on the Carrier.(c) In the event that space on the Carrier is only available and used in a lower class of service than applied to the passenger's original flight(s), the difference in fares will be refunded.(d) Where the flight is cancelled after the initial delay, the Carrier will provide a full refund of the fare paid.

In Decision No. LET-A-112-2003, the Agency noted that Rule 5.2 includes a provision that states that Air Transat will undertake to ensure that the passenger is routed or transported to his/her destination, as per the contract of carriage, within a reasonable period of time and at no extra cost. The Agency stated that this provision may not be just and reasonable as it does not provide the passenger with any recourse should such passenger find the anticipated time or the alternate travel arrangements provided by the carrier to reach the passenger's ticketed destination unacceptable. The Agency expressed the view that, in such circumstances, Air Transat should, at the request of the passenger, provide a refund.

The Agency also noted that Rule 5.2(b) is devoid of any provision relating to the notification of passengers in the event of a flight delay. As such, the Agency stated that this provision may not be just and reasonable. The Agency advised Air Transat that it should undertake to notify passengers of all schedule irregularities, not just flight advancements. 208

With respect to Rule 6.3, the Agency noted that this rule includes a provision which states that where passengers incur a schedule irregularity of not less than six hours involving a flight operated by Air Transat, and the flight is cancelled after the initial delay, Air Transat will provide a full refund. The Agency stated that this provision may not be just and reasonable in that it does not provide adequate options to passengers affected by a schedule irregularity, and does not protect passengers from events that are beyond the passengers' control. The Agency therefore advised Air Transat that it should include a provision that provides a refund, at the request of the passenger, should a flight be delayed for more than a certain period of time, e.g., 12 hours, whether or not a flight is cancelled.

The Agency further noted that Air Transat has removed its liability to passengers who do not concur with the alternate travel arrangements in Rule 6.3 of the tariff. Such liability appeared in Air Transat's tariff previously on file with the Agency. The Agency stated that the current provision may not be just and reasonable, as it does not include a requirement that the passenger agree to the alternate travel arrangements. The Agency also advised Air Transat that it should include a provision that provides for a refund in the event a passenger finds the alternate travel arrangements unsatisfactory.

With respect to flight advancement, the Agency stated that the six hour criterion to qualify as a schedule irregularity, set out in Rule 6.3, may not be just and reasonable. The Agency expressed the opinion that, in the event of a flight advancement, the consumer should be offered alternate travel options immediately. In addition, the Agency stated that it would be beneficial if Air Transat included a provision that provides for a refund, at the request of the passenger, if such passenger should wish to cancel a reservation for a flight that has been advanced.

The Agency therefore provided Air Transat with the opportunity to show cause why the Agency should not (i) pursuant to paragraph 113(a) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), disallow the aforementioned tariff provisions as being unjust and unreasonable, thereby contravening subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), and (ii) pursuant to paragraph 113(b) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), substitute another tariff or portion thereof to make the tariff acceptable to the Agency.

On May 20, 2003, Air Transat requested an extension until June 19, 2003 to respond to the Agency's letter. By Decision No. LET-A-122-2003 dated May 26, 2003, the Agency granted this extension. On May 29, 2003, Air Transat filed its response, in which it advised that the Agency's proposal respecting refund provisions in cases of flight delays of more than a certain period of time, or if the passenger finds alternative travel arrangements to be unsatisfactory, may constitute an undue financial burden. Air Transat asked the Agency to reconsider its proposal for amendments to the aforementioned tariff provisions.

Concerning the Agency's proposal that the consumer be offered alternative travel options and refunds in the event of any scheduled flight time advancement, Air Transat advised that this is unreasonable, as the advancement may be the result of circumstances beyond the carrier's control, such as the airport authority altering pre-authorized slot times as a result of congestion. Air Transat also advised that by eliminating any minimum threshold for a flight time advancement, it would have to offer alternative travel arrangements or refunds for a 15 minute change. The carrier further stated that by undertaking to notify all passengers in the event of a flight advancement of six hours or less and generally treating all other such schedule changes as irregularities, Air Transat has struck a reasonable and fair balance.

With respect to a provision allowing for refunds where an involuntary routing is invoked and the anticipated time or the alternate travel arrangements are deemed unacceptable to the passenger, Air Transat stated that this is unfair and imbalanced, given that a rerouting can often be caused by reasons beyond Air Transat's control.

Concerning passenger notification for all schedule irregularities, the carrier suggested that airport notification is sufficient, except where a delay of at least three hours becomes known a minimum of six hours in advance of the scheduled departure time, in which case Air Transat would undertake to advise affected passengers, normally by telephone.

By Decision No. LET-A-166-2003 dated August 7, 2003, the Agency advised Air Transat that it was not satisfied that Air Transat had shown cause as to why the Agency should not, pursuant to paragraph 113(b) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), substitute another tariff or portion thereof to make the tariff acceptable to the Agency. The Agency advised Air Transat that Rule 6.3 of Air Transat's tariff was not just and reasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), in that it does not provide adequate options to passengers affected by a schedule irregularity, and does not protect passengers from events that are beyond the passengers' control, and, therefore, does not allow passengers any recourse if they are unable to connect to other air carriers or alternate modes of transportation such as cruise ships or trains. The Agency also advised Air Transat that the Agency found that the six hour criterion to qualify as a schedule irregularity set out in the rule was not reasonable in the event of a flight advancement. The Agency further advised Air Transat that the passengers should have some recourse if a flight is advanced beyond the check-in requirement.

With respect to involuntary rerouting and passenger notification, the Agency advised Air Transat that the Agency found paragraphs (b) and (e) of Rule 5.2 to be not just and reasonable, as they do not provide the passenger with any recourse if the carrier can not arrange any reasonable transportation in the event of an involuntary rerouting. The Agency also noted that Rule 5.2(b) was devoid of any provision relating to the notification of passengers if a flight is delayed or cancelled.

In view of the foregoing, the Agency provided Air Transat with the opportunity to show cause as to why the Agency should not:

1. pursuant to paragraph 113(a) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), disallow Rule 6.3 (Liability for refusal to transport and for failure to operate on schedule), appearing on First Revised Page 16; Rule 1 (Definitions) as it pertains to the definition of "Schedule Irregularity", appearing on First Revised Page 7; and paragraphs (b) and (e) of Rule 5.2 (Responsibility for schedules and operations), appearing on First Revised Page 10 of Air Transat's International Scheduled Services Tariff, CTA(A) No. 4, for being unjust and unreasonable, thereby contravening subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), and
2. pursuant to paragraph 113(b) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), substitute the wording of these provisions with certain prescribed wording. 210

Regarding passenger notification in the event of a flight delay, the Agency advised Air Transat that the carrier's position, as described in its May 29, 2003 letter, was acceptable, and requested Air Transat to provide the Agency with proposed wording, for consideration.

On September 3, 2003, Air Transat filed its response, indicating that it was prepared to accept the Agency's proposed changes to Rule 5.2(b) and to the definition of "Schedule Irregularity" contained in Rule 1. With respect to Rule 6.3, Air Transat advised the Agency that it was not prepared to accept the proposed amendment to paragraph (d) because, as previously stated, the carrier believes that this could have a major financial impact on its operation.

On September 30, 2003, Air Transat further advised the Agency that it was prepared to accept the principle of refunding the unused portion of a ticket in the event of a delay exceeding a certain amount of time, i.e., 36 hours.

The Agency has carefully considered the submissions filed by Air Transat with respect to this matter, and is satisfied, in general, with the tariff provisions filed by Air Transat. However, the Agency is of the opinion that Air Transat has not proven to the Agency's satisfaction, that it is reasonable to have a time limit in the event of a delay of 36 hours or more, after which Air Transat would refund the unused ticket or portion thereof.

CONCLUSION

Based on the above findings, the Agency has determined that the terms and conditions relating to liability for refusal to transport and failure to operate on schedule, as set out in Rule 6.3(d) of Air Transat's International Scheduled Services Tariff, CTA (A) No. 4, are not just and reasonable, and are therefore contrary to subsection 111(1) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations).

Accordingly, the Agency, pursuant to paragraph 113(a) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), hereby disallows Rule 6.3(d) of Air Transat's International Scheduled Services Tariff, CTA (A) No. 4, and, pursuant to paragraph 113(b) of the ATR (Air Transportation Regulations), hereby substitutes the following provision:

> 6.3(d) If the Carrier is unable to provide reasonable alternative transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time, then it will refund the unused ticket or portions thereof.

Pursuant to section 28 of the CTA, this disallowance and substitution are effective 10 (ten) days from the date of this Decision.

Back to rulings

This is Exhibit "7" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

WHO'SWHOLEGAL

213

AVIATION PRACTICE AREA REVIEW

SEPTEMBER 2013

Carlos Martins of Bersenas Jacobsen Chouest Thomson Blackburn outlines recent developments in aviation law in Canada.

There have been a number of developments in Canada in the realm of aviation law that promise to make for interesting times in the months ahead. In this review, we will consider some of these decisions, their implications and how they may play out in the coming year.

Warsaw/Montreal Liability

On the airline liability front, the Supreme Court of Canada will hear the appeal of the Federal Court of Appeal's decision in Thibodeau v Air Canada, 2012 FCA 246. This case involves a complaint by Michel and Lynda Thibodeau, passengers on a series of Air Canada flights between Canada and the United States in 2009. On some of the transborder legs of those journeys, Air Canada was not able to provide the Thibodeaus with French-language services at check-in, on board the aircraft or at airport baggage carousels. The substantive aspect of the case is of limited interest to air carriers because the requirement that air passengers be served in both official languages applies only to Air Canada as a result of the Official Languages Act (Canada), an idiosyncratic piece of legislation that continues to apply to Air Canada even though it was privatised in 1988.

However, from the perspective of other air carriers, the most notable facet of the Supreme Court's decision will be whether that Court will uphold the Federal Court of Appeal's "strong exclusivity" interpretation of the Warsaw/Montreal Conventions. If it does, it will incontrovertibly bring the Canadian law in line with that of the United States and the United Kingdom – meaning that passengers involved in international air travel to which either of the Conventions apply are restricted to only those remedies explicitly provided for in the Conventions. At present, the Federal Court of Appeal's decision in Thibodeau provides the most definitive statement to date that "strong exclusivity" is the rule in Canada.

YQ Fares Class Action

The battle over "YQ Fares" is expected to continue in a British Columbia class action. The case relates to the practice of several air carriers identifying the fuel surcharge levied on their tickets in a manner that may cause their passengers to believe that these charges are taxes collected on behalf of a third party when, in fact, fuel surcharges are collected by the air carrier for its own benefit. In the British Columbia action, the plaintiffs complain that this practice contravenes the provincial consumer protection legislation which provides that service providers shall not engage in a "deceptive act or practice".

Last year, an issue arose as to whether air carriers can be subject to the provincial legislation given that, in Canada, matters relating to aeronautics are in the domain of the federal government. Most recently, in Unlu v Air Canada, 2013 BCCA 112, the British Columbia Court of Appeal held that the complaint should be allowed to proceed on the basis that, among other things, there was no operational conflict between the workings of the provincial legislation and the regime imposed under the federal Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, that deal with airfare advertising. Leave to appeal the Court of Appeal's decision to the Supreme Court of Canada was denied in August 2013.

Regulatory/Passenger Complaints

In the consumer protection landscape, for the last several years, the field has largely been occupied by Gabor Lukács, a Canadian mathematician who has taken an interest in challenging various aspects of the tariffs filed by air carriers with the regulator, the Canadian Transportation Agency (the Agency). The majority of Mr Lukács' complaints centre on the clarity and reasonableness of the content of the filed tariffs, as well as the extent to which air carriers are applying their tariffs, as filed, in the ordinary course of business.

Mr Lukács' efforts have created a significant body of jurisprudence from the Agency – to the extent that his more recent decisions often rely heavily upon principles enunciated in previous complaints launched by him.

Since 2012, Mr Lukács has been involved in complaints arising from, among other things:

- air carriers' online and airport communications to the public as to the extent to which baggage claims involving "wear and tear" must be paid (Lukács v United Airlines, CTA Decision Nos. 182/200-C-A-2012);

- lack of compliance of tariff liability provisions with the Montreal liability regime (Lukács v Porter Airlines, CTA Decision No. 16-C-A-2013);

• the reasonableness of imposing releases of liability as a precondition for the payment of compensation provided for in a tariff (Lukács v WestJet, CTA Decision No. 227-C-A-2013);

• the reasonableness of air carriers engaging in overselling flights for commercial reasons (Lukács v Air Canada, CTA Decision No. 204-C-A-2013);

• the amount of denied boarding compensation to be paid to involuntarily bumped passengers in the event of a commercial overbooking (Lukács v Air Canada, CTA Decision No. 342-C-A-2013);

• the amount of compensation to be paid to passengers who miss their flight as a result of an early departure (Lukács v Air Transat, CTA Decision No. 327-C-A-2013); and

• the use of cameras by passengers onboard aircraft (Lukács v United Airlines, CTA Decision No. 311-C-A-2013)

It is expected that, in 2014, Mr Lukács will continue in his quest to ensure that air carrier tariffs are reasonable, clear and faithfully applied.

Although it may not be initiated by Mr Lukács, we expect that, in 2014, the Agency will consider the issue of whether air carriers should be able to charge a fee for booking a specific seat for a child travelling with a parent or guardian.

Regulatory/ Notices to Industry

Wet Leasing

On 30 August 2013, the Agency released its new policy on wet leasing of foreign aircraft. It applies to operators who wet lease foreign aircraft for use on international passenger services for arrangements of more than 30 days. The key changes are that, in order for the Agency to approve such an arrangement:

• the number of aircraft leased by an operator is capped at 20 per cent of the number of Canadian-registered aircraft on the lessees' Air Operator Certificate at the time the application was made;

• small aircraft are excluded from the number of Canadian-registered aircraft described above; and

• small aircraft is defined as an aircraft equipped for the carriage of passengers and having a certificated maximum carrying capacity of not more than 39 passengers.

In addition to the above, the lessee is required to provide a rationale as to why the wetlease arrangement (or its renewal) is necessary. The Agency has stated that it:

• will not deny an application solely on the basis of the rationale for the use of foreign aircraft with flight crew, as long as the cap is not exceeded; and

• may renew approvals of wet-lease applications of more than 30 days as long as the cap is not exceeded.

There is some flexibility for short-term arrangements and where unexpected events require an exception.

All-Inclusive Fare Advertising

In December 2012, the Agency approved new regulations with respect to all-inclusive fare advertising. Initially, the regulations were enforced through a "proactive and collaborative educational approach". The Agency has recently released a notice to the industry advising that it will now take a firmer stance in ensuring compliance. It has recently issued administrative monetary penalties (AMPs) against two online travel retailers for not advertising the total all-inclusive price on their online booking systems. In one case, the AMP amounted to $40,000 due to the lack of initial response from the retailer. In another, the AMP was $8,000 in a situation where that retailer complied in the case of booking through its main website, but not with respect to booking on its mobile website.

Baggage Rules

The Agency has recently completed a consultation process with the industry and with the public with respect to the issue of baggage rules. The issues under contemplation include à la carte pricing, regulatory change and carriers' attempts to further monetize the transportation of baggage. At present, there are two regimes being used in Canada: one of which was adopted by the International Air Transport Association (Resolution 302) and the other by way of recently promulgated regulations to be enforced by the United States Department of Transportation (14 CFR part 399.87). The Agency has gone on the record to state that it expects to make a decision on the appropriate approach to apply for baggage being transported to/from Canada in the fall of 2013.

Defining the Boundaries of Regulation

In the arena of business aviation, the Appeal Panel of the Transportation Appeal Tribunal of Canada is expected to revisit the extent to which the Canadian Transportation Agency should regulate business-related aviation in Canada. The facts arise from the practice of a casino based in Atlantic City, New Jersey, offering voluntary air transfers to the casino to some of its most valued clients. In evidence that has already been led in these proceedings, the casino has asserted that the complimentary flights are at the sole discretion of the casino; no customer was entitled to such a service; and the provision of the flights is not based on the amount spent by the customers at the casino.

The core of the issue is whether the casino requires a licence from the Agency in order to offer this benefit to its customers. Under the applicable legislation, those who offer a “publicly available air service” in Canada require such a licence and are subject to all of the requirements imposed on licensees. In Marina District Development Company v Attorney General of Canada, 2013 FC 800, the Federal Court was asked by the casino, on a judicial review, to overturn the Appeal’s panel’s previous finding that the casino’s air service did, in fact, trigger the Agency’s oversight. The Federal Court found that the legal test imposed by the Appeal Panel for determining whether an air service was publicly available bordered on tautological but declined to answer the question itself. The matter was sent back to the Appeal Panel for reconsideration. A new decision is expected in 2014. In our view, it is likely that the matter will be sent back to the Federal Court, possibly before the end of 2014 as well, regardless of which party prevails.

This is Exhibit "8" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Federal Court of Appeal | Cour d'appel fédérale

Date: 20200303

Docket: A-311-19

Ottawa, Ontario, March 3, 2020

Present: NEAR J.A.

BETWEEN:

INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION, AIR TRANSPORTATION ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA DBA AIRLINES FOR AMERICA, DEUTSCHE LUFTHANSA AG, SOCIÉTÉ AIR FRANCE, S.A., BRITISH AIRWAYS PLC, AIR CHINA LIMITED, ALL NIPPON AIRWAYS CO., LTD., CATHAY PACIFIC AIRWAYS LIMITED, SWISS INTERNATIONAL AIRLINES LTD., QATAR AIRWAYS GROUP Q.C.S.C., AIR CANADA, PORTER AIRLINES INC., AMERICAN AIRLINES INC., UNITED AIRLINES INC., DELTA AIR LINES INC., ALASKA AIRLINES INC., HAWAIIAN AIRLINES, INC. and JETBLUE AIRWAYS CORPORATION

Appellants

and

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY and THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondents

and

DR. GÁBOR LUKÁCS

Intervener

ORDER

WHEREAS Dr. Gábor Lukács moves for an order permitting him to intervene in this appeal;

AND WHEREAS the Court has read the proposed intervener's motion record, the appellants' responding motion record in response to the motion to intervene, correspondence from the respondent Canadian Transportation Agency, and the proposed intervener's reply;

AND WHEREAS the appellants oppose the proposed intervener's motion, and the respondents take no position;

AND WHEREAS the Court has considered the factors relevant to granting leave to intervene under rule 109 of the Federal Courts Rules, SOR/98-106;

AND WHEREAS the Court is of the view that the case engages the public interest, that the proposed intervener would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties cannot, that the interests of justice favour allowing the proposed intervention in the appeal, and that the proposed intervention would be of assistance to the Court in deciding the appeal;

AND WHEREAS the Court is nevertheless of the view that the proposed intervention in the motion for a stay is not in the interests of justice, and would not be of assistance to the Court;

THIS COURT ORDERS that:

1. Dr. Lukács's motion to intervene in this appeal is granted in part. Dr. Lukács may intervene in the appeal subject to the terms described below. Dr. Lukács may not intervene in the motion for a stay.

2. The style of cause shall be amended by including Dr. Lukács as an intervener as appears in this Order, and shall be used on all further documents in this appeal.

3. Dr. Lukács's intervention in the appeal shall be subject to the following terms:

    i. Dr. Lukács may serve and file a memorandum of fact and law of no more than twenty (20) pages with respect to the appeal within twenty (20) days of the service of the Respondents' memoranda;

    ii. Dr. Lukács shall have the right to make oral submissions at the hearing of the appeal for no more than twenty (20) minutes; and

    iii. Dr. Lukács may not seek costs, nor shall costs be awarded against him.

"D. G. Near"

J.A.

This is Exhibit "9" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Deficiencies of the Proposed Air Passenger Protection Regulations

by Air Passenger Rights

Submissions to the Canadian Transportation Agency

February 2019

Halifax, NS • AirPassengerRights.ca • lukacs@AirPassengerRights.ca

Table of Contents

About Air Passenger Rights

Air Passenger Rights (APR) is an independent nonprofit network of volunteers, devoted to empowering travellers through education, advocacy, investigation, and litigation.

APR is in a unique position to comment on the regulations to be made under s. 86.11 of the Canada Transportation Act on behalf of the public interest:

- Experience based. APR's submissions are based on the expertise and experience accumulated through assisting passengers daily in enforcing their rights.
- Independence. APR accepts no government or business funding.
- No business interest. APR has no business interest in the regulations to be made.

APR's presence on the social media includes the Air Passenger Rights (Canada) Facebook group, with over 9,900 members, the Air Passenger Rights Facebook page, and the @AirPassRightsCA Twitter feed.

APR was founded and is coordinated by Dr. Gábor Lukács, a Canadian air passenger rights advocate, who volunteers his time and expertise for the benefit of the travelling public.

Gábor Lukács, PhD (Founder and Coordinator)

Since 2008, Dr. Lukács has filed more than two dozen successful complaints[1] with the Canadian Transportation Agency (the Agency), challenging the terms, conditions, and practices of air carriers, resulting in orders directing them to amend their conditions of carriage and offer better protection to passengers.

Dr. Lukács has appeared before courts across Canada, including the Federal Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada,[2] in respect of air passenger rights. He successfully challenged the Agency's lack of transparency and the reasonableness of the Agency's decisions.

In 2013, the Consumers' Association of Canada awarded Dr. Lukács its Order of Merit for singlehandedly initiating legal action resulting in the revision of Air Canada's unfair practices regarding overbooking. Dr. Lukács's advocacy in the public interest and his expertise and experience in the area of passenger rights have been recognized by the transportation bar,[3] the academic community,[4] the judiciary,[5] and the legislature.

---

1 See Appendix A.
2 Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2.
3 Carlos Martins: Aviation Practice Area Review (September 2013), WHO'SWHOLEGAL.
4 Air Passenger Rights Advocate Dr. Gabor Lukacs lectures at the IASL, Institute for Air and Space Law, October 2018.
5 Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 140 at para. 1; Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 269 at para. 43; and Lukács v. Canada, 2016 FCA 174 at para. 6.

Executive Summary

Canada has fallen behind the rest of the Western world in terms of consumer protection for air passengers. In 2006, the European Union's Regulation (EC) 261/2004 came into force. It has since become known as the gold standard of air passenger rights. No similar laws have been passed in Canada. Regrettably, this is not going to change any time soon. Canada will continue to lag behind.

The proposed Air Passenger Rights Regulations [Proposed Regulations] undermine the rights of air passengers travelling within, to, and from Canada in some key areas (Figure 1), while largely regifting existing rights in other areas. It is for this reason that more than 8,000 emails protesting against the shortcomings of the Proposed Regulations have been sent to the Canadian Transportation Agency.

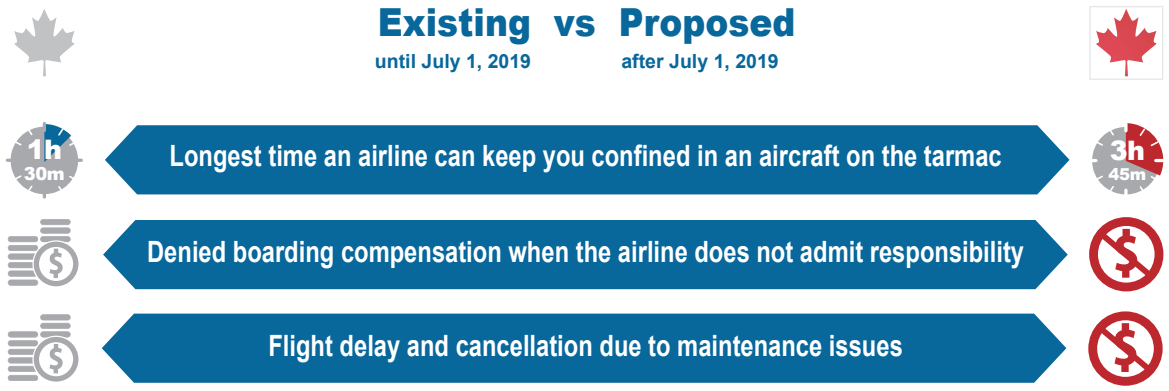

Figure 1. Existing (until July 1, 2019) vs. Proposed (after July 1, 2019)

The Proposed Regulations leave the impression of an instrument written by the airlines to ensure that in most cases, airlines will have to pay no compensation to passengers, while creating the facade of a consumer protection legislation.

APR has identified the following key areas where the Proposed Regulations are fundamentally flawed:

1. Tarmac Delay. The Proposed Regulations purport to permit airlines to keep passengers confined in an idling aircraft on the tarmac for up to 3 hours and 45 minutes. APR is of the view that these provisions are: (1) inhumane, causing significant suffering and hardship to passengers with disabilities and to families travelling with young children; (2) unlawful, conflicting with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and (3) unacceptable.

   APR believes that no passenger should be kept on the tarmac for more than 90 minutes, as the Senate recommended in March 2018.

2. No Entitlement to Denied Boarding Compensation in Most Cases. The Proposed Regulations define "denied boarding" much more narrowly than the commonly used definition, established in Regulation (EC) 261/2004 (Figure 2). The proposed definition is so narrow that it deprives passengers from being entitled to compensation in many if not most cases. This challenge is compounded by the requirement that passengers seeking denied boarding compensation establish facts that are within the airlines' exclusive knowledge, such as the number of passengers who checked in.

   APR believes that Canada should adopt the commonly used definition of denied boarding established in Regulation (EC) 261/2004.

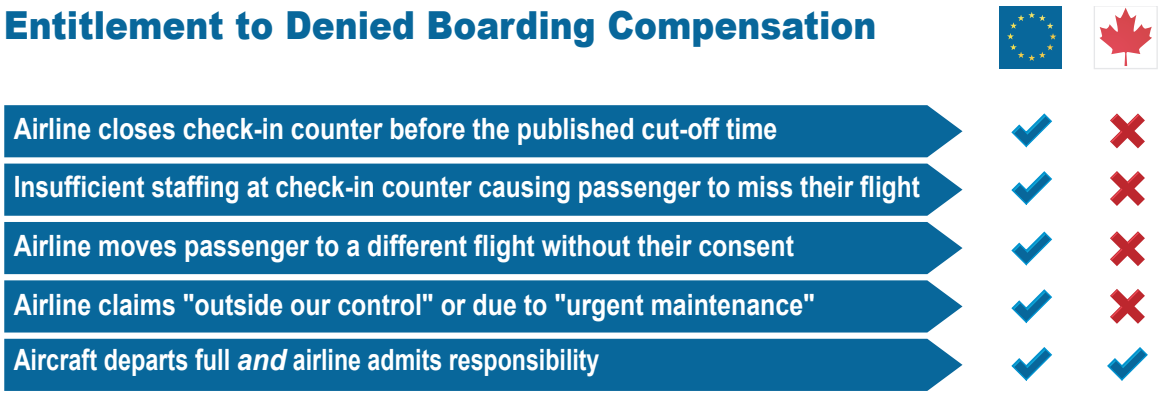

Figure 2. Denied Boarding Compensation: EU vs. Proposed Regulations

3. No Entitlement to Monetary Compensation in Most Cases. The Proposed Regulations establish lack of compensation as the norm in the case of flight delay, cancellation, and denial of boarding, and payment of compensation as the exception. Passengers who seek monetary compensation will have to establish that the event was "within the carrier's control" and was not required for safety purposes. In practice, passengers can neither verify nor prove these, because they have no access to the airlines' crew assignment databases, operation centre databases, and aircraft maintenance log books; therefore, unlike in the European Union, where the burden of proof is on the airlines and not the passengers, in Canada, passengers will receive no monetary compensation in most cases.

   APR believes that Canada should adopt the principle established in Regulation (EC) 261/2004 that payment of compensation is the norm, and the airlines must prove any extenuating circumstance.

4. No Compensation for Passengers Who Do Not Complain within 120 Days. The Proposed Regulations do not require airlines to proactively compensate passengers for flight delay or cancellation. Instead, passengers are required to complain to the airline and ask for compensation. If they fail to do so within 120 days, they lose their right to compensation.

   APR is of the view that imposing a 120-day deadline on passengers is unreasonable and serves only the airlines' private interests.

5. No Meals or Hotel in Most Cases. Under the Proposed Regulations, if the airline notifies passengers about a delay or cancellation at least 12 hours in advance, then the airline is not required to provide meals or accommodation, even if the delay or cancellation is "within the carrier's control." This means that passengers may be left fending for themselves away from their homes, possibly in a foreign country, without any right to assistance from the airline—as long as the airline provided a 12-hour notice.

   APR is of the view that passengers affected by a flight delay or cancellation within the carrier's control must always be provided with meals and overnight accommodation, regardless of how much advance notice the airline provided.

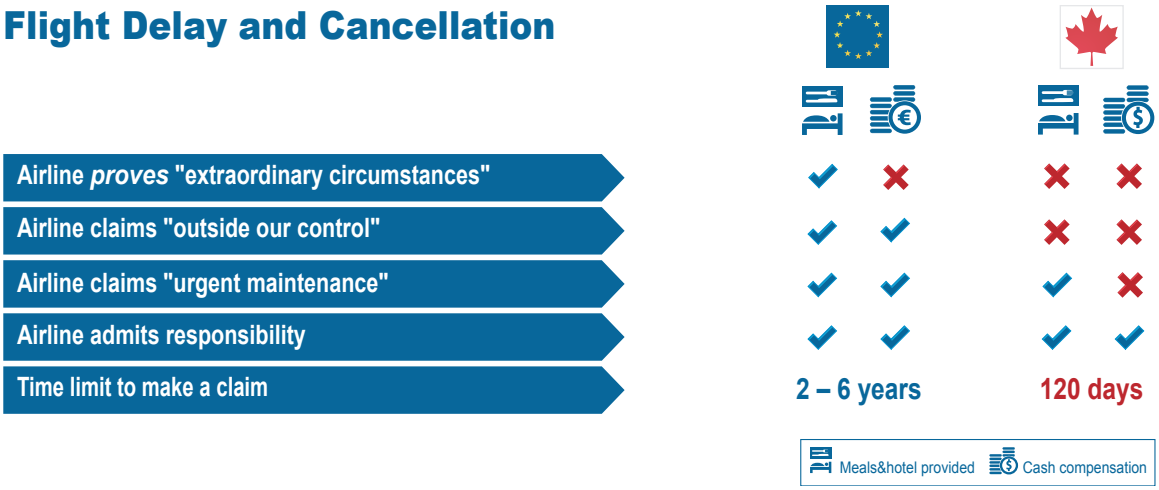

Figure 3. Flight Delay and Cancellation: EU vs. Proposed Regulations

6. Shortchanging Passengers Booked on "Small" Carriers. The Proposed Regulations provide substantially fewer rights and a fraction of the compensation amounts to passengers travelling on "small" carriers, including on airlines operating large aircraft such as Flair or Swoop (wholly owned by WestJet).

   APR is of the view that this distinction is unlawful, unfair to passengers, and inconsistent with the objective of uniformity stated in Parliament by Transport Minister Marc Garneau.

7. Important Issues Not Addressed. The Proposed Regulations fail to address the following issues: (1) right to a refund of the unused portion of a ticket in the case of delay, cancellation, and denial of boarding "outside the carrier's control;" (2) boarding priorities and the obligation to seek volunteers in the case of denial of boarding "outside the carrier's control;" and (3) "flight advancement," that is, when the carrier changes the departure time to a time earlier than it appears on the passenger's original ticket with the consequence that the passenger misses their flight.

   APR is of the view that the regulations must address these issues.

Summary of Recommended Amendments

Tarmac delay

1. Delete the words "at an airport in Canada" from subsection 9(1) of the Proposed Regulations.

2. Delete subsection 9(2) of the Proposed Regulations.

3. Replace section 9 of the Proposed Regulations with:

    (1) No person directly or indirectly in control of an aircraft with passengers on board, including but not limited to a carrier or a licensee, shall permit the aircraft to remain on the tarmac for more than 90 minutes.

    (2) Within 90 minutes of its door being closed, an aircraft with passengers on board must either take off or return to a position that permits passengers to disembark.

    (3) Within 90 minutes of landing at an airport, an aircraft with passengers on board must either take off or taxi to a position that permits passengers to disembark.

    (4) A carrier that allows passengers to disembark must, if feasible, give passengers with disabilities and their support person, service animal or emotional support animal, if any, the opportunity to disembark first.

    (5) This section does not apply if the person invoking this subsection proves that providing an opportunity for passengers to disembark is not possible for reasons that are beyond the carrier's control, including reasons related to safety and security or to air traffic or customs control.

Definition of "denied boarding"

4. Replace subsection 1(3) of the Proposed Regulations with:

    1(3) For the purpose of these Regulations, "denied boarding" means a refusal to carry passengers on a flight, if

    (1) the passenger held a confirmed reservation on the flight concerned, and

    (2) the passenger presented themselves for check-in as stipulated and at the time indicated in advance in writing (including by electronic means) by the carrier, or if no time indicated, no later than 45 minutes before the published departure time, except if the carrier proves that there were reasonable grounds to refuse to carry the passenger, such as reasons of health, safety or security, or inadequate travel documentation.

Burden of proof

5. Replace subsection 1(1) with:

1 (1) The following definitions apply in Part II of the Act.

mechanical malfunction means a mechanical problem that reduces the safety of passengers but does not include:

(i) a problem that is identified further to scheduled maintenance undertaken in compliance with legal requirements; or

(ii) a problem that has previously been identified and whose repair has been deferred pursuant to sections 605.07-605.10 of the Canadian Aviation Regulations.

(défaillance mécanique)

required for safety purposes means legally required in order to reduce risk to passengers but does not include:

(i) scheduled maintenance in compliance with legal requirements; or

(ii) repair of a problem that has previously been identified and whose repair has been deferred in accordance with sections 605.07-605.10 of the Canadian Aviation Regulations.

(nécessaire par souci de sécurité)

6. Replace subsection 10(1) with:

10 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding that the carrier proves to be exclusively due to situations outside the carrier's control, including

7. Replace subsection 11(1) with:

11 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding that the carrier fails to prove to be outside the carrier's control, but proves that it is required solely for safety purposes.

8. Replace subsection 12(1) with:

12 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding unless the carrier proves circumstances referred to in subsection 10(1) or 11(1).

Limitation and prescription periods

9. Replace subsection 19(3) of the Proposed Regulations with a provision mirroring s. 39 of the Federal Courts Act: (1) provincial limitation statutes apply to claims arising in a province; and (2) a six-year period applies to claims arising otherwise than in a province.

"Large" vs. "small" carriers

10. Delete subsections 1(2), 17(1)(b), 18(b), 19(1)(b), and 19(5) and delete the words "in the case of a large carrier" in subsections 17(1)(a), 18(a), and 19(1)(a) of the Proposed Regulations.

11. Alternatively, replace "one million" with "one hundred thousand" in subsection 1(2)(a) of the Proposed Regulations, and append immediately after subsection 1(2)(b):

> (c) operates at least one aircraft having a certificated maximum carrying capacity of more than 39 passengers.

Right to rebooking on another carrier

12. Replace the phrase "departs within nine hours" with "scheduled to arrive at the passenger's destination within four hours" in subparagraph 17(1)(a)(i) of the Proposed Regulations.

13. Replace "paragraph (a)" with "subparagraph (i)" in subparagraph 17(1)(a)(ii) of the Proposed Regulations.

Right to meals and hotel

14. Correct paragraphs 12(2)(b) and 12(3)(b) of the Proposed Regulations to match the intent stated in the Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement, to read:

> ~~if a passenger is informed of the [...] less than 12 hours before the departure time on their original ticket,~~ provide the treatment set out in section 14.

15. Replace paragraphs 11(2)(b) and 11(3)(b) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> provide the treatment set out in section 14.

Form of payment

16. Replace paragraph 21(1)(a) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> compensation in the other form has a monetary value of at least 300% of the minimum monetary value of the compensation that is required under these Regulations;

Seating of children

17. Replace the first sentence of section 22(1) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> In order to seat children who are under 14 years of age in close proximity to a parent, guardian or tutor in accordance with subsection (2), a carrier shall

18. Append the following subparagraph immediately after subparagraph 22(1)(b)(iv):

> (v) if no passenger volunteers to change seats before take-off, involuntarily change the seats of passengers on board before take-off.

19. Replace subsection 22(2) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> 22(2) The carrier shall assign to a child who is under 14 years of age by offering, at no additional charge,
>
> (a) in the case of a child who is under 12 years of age, a seat that is adjacent to their parent, guardian or tutor's seat;
>
> (b) in the case of a child who is 12 or 13 years of age, a seat that is in a row that is separated from the row of their parent, guardian or tutor's seat by no more than one row.

Clarification of the scope

20. Replace subsection 2(1) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> All carriers carrying a passenger, including but not limited to the marketing carrier, operating carrier, contracting carrier, and actual carrier, are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to the passenger with respect to the obligations set out in these Regulations or, if they are more favourable, the obligations set out in the applicable tariff.

Right to a refund of unused portion of ticket

21. Renumber section 18 as 18(1) of the Proposed Regulations, and append the following provision immediately after it:

> (2) If the alternate travel arrangements offered in accordance with subsection (1) do not accommodate the passenger's travel needs, the carrier must instead refund the unused portion of the ticket.

Boarding priorities

22. Append the following paragraph to subsection 10(2):

> (d) in the case of a cancellation or a denial of boarding, deny boarding in accordance with section 15.

23. Replace subsection 15(1) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> 15 (1) ~~If paragraph 11(4)(b) or 12(4)(b) applies in respect of a~~ A carrier~~, it~~ must not deny boarding unless it has asked if any passenger is willing to give up their seat.

Flight advancement

24. Append the following subsection immediately after subsection 1(3) of the Proposed Regulations:

> 1(4) For the purposes of these Regulations, a flight whose departure time was brought forward compared to the time appearing on the original ticket, with the consequence that the passenger misses that flight, shall be considered a flight on which the passenger has been denied boarding.

Lack of Integrity and Institutional Bias in the Regulation-Making

APR is deeply concerned that the regulation-making process has been compromised by lack of integrity and institutional bias at the Canadian Transportation Agency in favour of the airline industry and against the travelling public. APR is of the view that the issues described below have created a reasonable apprehension of institutional bias, which undermines the integrity and credibility of the present regulation-making process.

APR is particularly troubled by what transpires as undue influence of the International Air Transport Association [IATA] on the Agency's regulation and decision making. IATA is the trade association for the world's airlines, representing some 290 airlines,[6] including most commercial airlines flying within, to, and from Canada.

A. Private consultations with IATA prior to June 2017

According to the affidavit sworn by Ms. Nicola Colville, Area Manager, Canada and Bermuda for IATA, on June 16, 2017:

> The Agency has sought IATA's input with regard to the regulations it will draft. IATA is actively participating in the consultation process with Transport Canada and the Agency on this topic.[7]

The private "consultation" between IATA and the Canadian Transportation Agency took place before June 2017, at which time Bill C-49 had neither been studied nor passed into law by Parliament; yet, the Agency engaged in these private, confidential discussions with IATA about the content of the regulations that would be made. Notably, the Canadian public and the consumer advocacy community were excluded from these private discussions.

APR is struggling to understand why the Agency communicated with IATA in private about the regulations to be made in private in 2017 (or earlier), given that public consultations about the regulations commenced only a year later, in 2018.

These circumstances, and the Agency's failure to publicly disclose all of its communications with IATA in relation to the regulations, including the communications referenced in Ms. Colville's affidavit, create the impression that the past and current "public consultation" is a sham, a dog and pony show, serving the sole purpose of lending an air of legitimacy to regulations. APR can only conclude that the Agency decided to develop the regulations based on its private communications with IATA.

---

6 "About us", IATA's official website (retrieved: August 9, 2018).

7 Affidavit of Nicola Colville, Affirmed June 16, 2017, filed on behalf of IATA in Supreme Court of Canada File No. 37276, at para. 25.

B. Member MacKeigan's marriage to IATA's assistant general counsel

Member J. Mark MacKeigan, a duly appointed quasi-judicial decision-maker of the Agency, is married to the assistant general counsel of the International Air Transportation Association [IATA].[8]

IATA has been recognized by the Agency as a stakeholder in the current regulation-making process, and has made detailed submissions on the subject.[9]

The failure of Member MacKeigan to recuse himself from all involvement in the regulation-making process creates a reasonable apprehension of bias and institutional bias.

[8] Leslie Lugo, Mark MacKeigan, July 30, 2017, New York Times.
[9] IATA's submissions to the Agency, dated August 28, 2018.

1. Tarmac Delay: 3 Hours and 45 Minutes is Inhumane and Unlawful

APR is of the view that provisions of the Proposed Regulations that purport to permit airlines to keep passengers confined to an aircraft idling on the tarmac for up to 3 hours and 45 minutes are inhumane, unreasonable, and unlawful:

> 9 (1) If a flight is delayed on the tarmac at an airport in Canada for more than three hours after the aircraft doors have been closed for take-off or the flight has landed, the carrier must provide an opportunity for passengers to disembark.
>
> (2) A carrier is not required to provide an opportunity for passengers to disembark in accordance with subsection (1) if take-off is likely in less than 45 minutes and the carrier is able to provide the treatment referred to in section 8 until take-off.[10]

In addition, APR is of the view that the limitation of the scope of subsection 9(1) to "an airport in Canada" is inconsistent with Parliament's direction.

Unfortunately, paragraph 86.11(1)(f) of the Act, passed by the Trudeau Government, limits the Agency's powers with respect to the making of regulations to tarmac delays of "over 3 hours." Consequently, the aforementioned objective cannot be achieved by regulations alone, and the Agency must also use its broad adjudicative powers under ss. 67.2(1) and 86(1)(h) of the Canada Transportation Act and s. 113 of the Air Transportation Regulations to fulfill its consumer protection mandate.

APR believes that under the fundamentally flawed framework of Bill C-49,[11] the best the Agency can do in terms of regulations relating to tarmac delays over three hours is imposing a complete prohibition. APR proposes the following specific provisions:

> (1) No person directly or indirectly in control of an aircraft with passengers on board, including but not limited to a carrier or a licensee, shall permit the aircraft to remain on the tarmac for more than three hours.
>
> (2) Within three hours of its door being closed, an aircraft with passengers on board must either take off or return to a position that permits passengers to disembark.
>
> (3) Within three hours of landing at an airport, an aircraft with passengers on board must either take off or taxi to a position that permits passengers to disembark.

APR further submits that, based on the constitutional considerations explained below, the Agency may and should replace "three hours" with "90 minutes."

---

[10] Proposed Regulations, ss. 9(1) and 9(2) (emphasis added).

[11] "That is doubling the time airlines can stay on the tarmac, and it can cause severe problems for persons with disabilities," said Mr. Terrance Green, Transportation Committee Co-Chair, Council of Canadians with Disabilities. Proceedings of the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications, Issue No. 32 - Evidence - March 20, 2018.

A. Inconsistency with the parent statute

The Agency is enacting the Proposed Regulations, including the requirement to pay compensation in certain limited cases, based on powers delegated to it by Parliament in subparagraph 86.11(1)(f) of the Act:

> 86.11 (1) The Agency shall, after consulting with the Minister, make regulations in relation to flights to, from and within Canada, including connecting flights,
>
> ⋮
>
> (f) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of tarmac delays over three hours, including the obligation to provide timely information and assistance to passengers, as well as the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet; [...][12]

Contrary to Parliament's express language requiring the making of regulations in relation to flights "to, from and within Canada," subsection 9(1) of the Proposed Regulations applies only to flights that are "at an airport in Canada." The Agency thus failed to carry out Parliament's will.

APR submits that the Agency must comply with the express language of Parliament, and is required to enact regulations that govern not only flights located "at an airport in Canada," but all flights to Canada, even if the tarmac delay takes place outside Canada.

B. Lack of data supporting the "imminent take-off" provision

Subsection 9(2) purports to allow airlines to keep passengers on the tarmac not only for 3 hours, but up to 3 hours and 45 minutes if "take off is likely."

The "imminent take-off" argument is a logical fallacy. One could equally make the same argument after 3 hours and 45 minutes, or after 4 hours, or 5 hours. Accepting an argument of this nature without actual data about the statistical distribution of the length of tarmac delays would be tantamount to accepting that airlines can keep passengers on the tarmac indefinitely. This clearly was not Parliament's intent.

On January 17, 2019, the Agency's representatives acknowledged that there is no evidence or data capable of supporting the assumption that if a flight did not take off for 3 hours, then there is a reasonable chance that it will be able to take off in the 45-minute window after the 3-hour deadline.

APR therefore submits that subsection 9(2) should be deleted.

---

[12] Canada Transportation Act, s. 86.11 (emphasis added).

C. Conflict with the Charter

Canada is a signatory to the Tokyo Convention.[13] Pursuant to Chapter III of the Tokyo Convention, the "aircraft commander" represents state authority on board the aircraft "from the moment when all its external doors are closed following embarkation until the moment when any such door is opened for disembarkation." Much in the same vein, the Criminal Code includes pilots in command in the definition of a "peace officer."

Thus, when the aircraft is stranded on the tarmac with its doors closed and the passengers unable to disembark, the aircraft's captain ("pilot in command" or "aircraft commander") represents state authority on board. As such, their actions are subject to provisions of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms [Charter]. The Charter provides that:

> 7. Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of the person and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice.
>
> 9. Everyone has the right not to be arbitrarily detained or imprisoned.[14]

When passengers board an aircraft, they do so voluntarily for the specific purpose of being transported to their destinations, and consent to being kept on the aircraft for the duration of the flight. The passengers' consent is inherently tied to the purpose for which it was given, and does not encompass being kept on the tarmac for hours.

As the Quebec Court of Appeal confirmed,[15] once a passenger has expressed their desire to leave, that passenger cannot lawfully be confined to the aircraft. The person in control of the aircraft must conduct themselves in such a matter as to allow and facilitate the passenger disembarking if such an action is possible at all.

When an aircraft is stranded on the tarmac, the passengers are kept on board for a purpose different than the one for which their consent was given. As such, they are entitled to withdraw their consent to being kept on the aircraft, and disembark. Keeping passengers on the aircraft against their will, after they have withdrawn their consent to being kept on the aircraft, is forcible confinement,[16] and is a breach of the passengers' rights guaranteed by the Charter.

APR therefore submits that section 9 of the Proposed Regulations is unlawful and violates the rights guaranteed by the Charter in that it purports to permit airlines and pilots in command to keep passengers confined to the aircraft for an extended period of time without their consent.

---

[13] Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft, Tokyo, 14 September 1963, Can. T.S. 1970/5.
[14] The Constitution Act, 1982, ss. 7 and 9 (emphasis added).
[15] R. c. Tremblay, 1997 CanLII 10526 (QC CA).
[16] R. v. Gratton (1985), 18 C.C.C. (3d) 462 (Ont. C.A.); leave to appeal ref'd: [1985] 1 S.C.R

APR is of the view that the 90-minute limit on tarmac delays that has been the Canadian standard since 2008 strikes the balance between the right of passengers to withdraw their consent to being kept on the aircraft and the operational realities of an aircraft requiring to taxi from the gate to the de-icing pad and then to the runway.

Recommended Amendments

1. Delete the words "at an airport in Canada" from subsection 9(1) of the Proposed Regulations.

2. Delete subsection 9(2) of the Proposed Regulations.

3. Replace section 9 of the Proposed Regulations with:

    (1) No person directly or indirectly in control of an aircraft with passengers on board, including but not limited to a carrier or a licensee, shall permit the aircraft to remain on the tarmac for more than 90 minutes.

    (2) Within 90 minutes of its door being closed, an aircraft with passengers on board must either take off or return to a position that permits passengers to disembark.

    (3) Within 90 minutes of landing at an airport, an aircraft with passengers on board must either take off or taxi to a position that permits passengers to disembark.

    (4) A carrier that allows passengers to disembark must, if feasible, give passengers with disabilities and their support person, service animal or emotional support animal, if any, the opportunity to disembark first.

    (5) This section does not apply if the person invoking this subsection proves that providing an opportunity for passengers to disembark is not possible for reasons that are beyond the carrier's control, including reasons related to safety and security or to air traffic or customs control.

2. Definition of "Denied Boarding": Deprives Passengers of Compensation

APR is concerned that the proposed regulations define "denied boarding" so narrowly that it deprives passengers from being entitled to compensation in many if not most cases:

> 1(3) For the purpose of these Regulations, there is a denial of boarding when a passenger is not permitted to board an aircraft because the number of passengers who
>
> (1) checked in by the required time,
>
> (2) hold a confirmed reservation and valid travel documentation and
>
> (3) are present at the boarding gate in time for boarding
>
> is greater than the number of seats available on the flight.[17]

This definition imposes a burden of proof on passengers that cannot be met, depriving them from compensation in cases where the Agency had previously recognized that compensation was owing. It also unlawfully displaces Parliament's intended broad meaning of "denied boarding" with the narrow meaning of "denial of boarding as a result of overbooking" in the existing Air Transportation Regulations.

A. Imposition of a burden of proof that cannot be met

The Proposed Regulations require a passenger who seeks denied boarding compensation to prove three facts that are within the airline's exclusive knowledge:

(a) the number of passengers who checked in by the required time, held a confirmed reservation and valid travel documents, and were present at the boarding gate in time for boarding;

(b) the number of seats available on the flight (which depends on the model and configuration of the aircraft); and

(c) the reason that they were denied boarding is because the number identified in (a) is greater than the number identified in (b), and no other reason.

Given that passengers have no access to the airlines' reservation and departure control systems, the Proposed Regulations create conditions for payment of denied boarding compensation that passengers are unable to verify, and in practice cannot prove. "The imposition of a test that can never be met could not be what Parliament intended" when it conferred upon the Agency the powers to make regulations governing denied boarding compensation.[18]

---

[17] Proposed Regulations, s. 1(3) (emphasis, formatting, and numbering added).
[18] Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2 at para 17.

B. Comparison with the outcome-based definition in Regulation (EC) 261/2004

In sharp contrast, Regulation (EC) 261/2004 defines denied boarding based on facts that are within the passenger's knowledge:

> 2(j) "denied boarding" means a refusal to carry passengers on a flight, although they have presented themselves for boarding under the conditions laid down in Article 3(2), except where there are reasonable grounds to deny them boarding, such as reasons of health, safety or security, or inadequate travel documentation;
>
> 3(2) Paragraph 1 shall apply on the condition that passengers:
>
> (a) have a confirmed reservation on the flight concerned and, except in the case of cancellation referred to in Article 5, present themselves for check-in,
>
> — as stipulated and at the time indicated in advance and in writing (including by electronic means) by the air carrier, the tour operator or an authorised travel agent,
>
> or, if no time is indicated,
>
> — not later than 45 minutes before the published departure time; or
>
> (b) have been transferred by an air carrier or tour operator from the flight for which they held a reservation to another flight, irrespective of the reason.

In other words, under the European regulations, a passenger who is refused transportation has to prove only that they held a "confirmed reservation" and that they "presented themselves for check-in" on time. Both of these are within the knowledge of a passenger and can reasonably be proven.

C. A step backward compared to the existing jurisprudence

In Nawrots v. Suwning, the Agency held that passengers who present themselves for check-in on time but are unable to travel due to the airline's failure to adequately staff its check-in counters are entitled to denied boarding compensation:

> [84] Where a carrier fails to check in passengers because of the absence of personnel at the counter prior to the cut-off time for check in, the Agency is of the opinion that it is reasonable that compensation be tendered:
>
> - when passengers holding confirmed and ticketed reservations can demonstrate that they presented themselves at the ticket counter prior to the cut-off time for check in; and,
>
> - when the ticket counter was closed.

> [85] For greater clarity, where such passengers present themselves for boarding before the cut-off time, only to discover that the check-in counter has been closed, the carrier cannot avoid paying denied boarding compensation, regardless of whether or not the flight is fully booked, nor can it avoid liability by closing the check-in counter early.[19]

Under the narrow definition in the Proposed Regulations, such situations will no longer be recognized as "denied boarding," because the number of passengers who "are present at the boarding gate in time for boarding" is not greater than the number of seats available on the flight. Passengers caught in such situations will not be eligible for denied boarding compensation, and will be left without any remedy.

In Janmohamed v. Air Transat, the Agency coined the notion of de facto or constructive denied boarding, and confirmed passengers' entitlement to compensation in such situations:

> [19] The Agency agrees with the applicants that the affected passengers had previously confirmed space on a flight, and then were subsequently denied seats on that flight because of a lack of available seats on the aircraft. According to Air Transat, Flight No. TS246 departed with only one empty seat, and Flight No. TS247 departed with no empty seats. The fact that Air Transat notified the passengers in advance about having moved them to other flights does not relieve Air Transat of the obligation to pay denied boarding compensation. The fact is that there were insufficient seats to accommodate the applicants, despite the fact that they had previously confirmed seats, and that they were involuntarily moved to another flight. This is a case of de facto or constructive denied boarding.
>
> [20] The Agency appreciates that this situation may be unique, and not a typical case of denied boarding that normally occurs at the gate. However, effectively, the applicants were involuntarily denied boarding on their original flight because Air Transat elected, unilaterally, to give preference to other passengers who had been moved to their flight with the effect that the flight became oversold, resulting in prejudice to the applicants. Rather than wait for the applicants to arrive at the airport and deny them boarding at that time, they were instead moved, without their consent, to another flight in advance. The effect is the same. The applicants were not permitted to board their original flight because there was no longer room for them. It was oversold and they were "bumped".[20]

Under the narrow definition in the Proposed Regulations, de facto or constructive denied boarding will no longer be recognized as "denied boarding," because the unilateral change to the passengers' itinerary happens in advance and not at the airport, and the number of passengers present at the boarding gate is not greater than the number of seats available. Consequently, passengers who are de facto or constructively denied boarding will not be eligible for denied boarding compensation, and will be left without remedy.

To summarize, the narrow definition of "denied boarding" in the Proposed Regulations will deprive passengers from receiving denied boarding compensation in cases where such compensation would be owed under existing jurisprudence developed by the Agency.

---

[19] Nawrots v. Sunwing, Decision 432-C-A-2013, paras. 84-85 (emphasis added).
[20] Janmohamed v. Air Transat, Decision No. 95-C-A-2016, paras. 19-20 (emphasis added).

D. Invalidity due to inconsistency with the parent statute

Subparagraph 86.11(1)(b)(i) of the Canada Transportation Act [Act] requires the Agency to make regulations governing compensation for "denial of boarding":

> 86.11 (1) The Agency shall, after consulting with the Minister, make regulations in relation to flights to, from and within Canada, including connecting flights,
>
> ⋮
>
> (b) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding, including
>
> (i) the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet and the minimum compensation the carrier is required to pay for inconvenience when the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding is within the carrier's control,[21]

The legislature is presumed to have knowledge of laws existing at the time of enactment of new legislation. In particular, Parliament is presumed to have been aware of provisions of the Air Transportation Regulations [ATR] that require domestic and international carriers to set out in their tariffs:

> (iii) compensation for denial of boarding as a result of overbooking,[22]

Thus, Parliament was aware that the term "denial of boarding as a result of overbooking" already existed on the law books, yet it chose not to use such a restrictive, caused-based language, but rather chose to expand the protection offered to air travellers by directing the Agency to make regulations with respect to compensation for "denial of boarding."

Consequently, the intended meaning of "denial of boarding" in subparagraph 86.11(1)(b)(i) of the Act is different and broader than the meaning of "denial of boarding as a result of overbooking" in the ATR. To put it differently, Parliament's intent was that the Agency develop regulations governing compensation for all forms of denied boarding, not just for those that are "as a result of overbooking" as the Proposed Regulations do.

The Proposed Regulations are therefore inconsistent with the Act and defeat its purpose by taking away or restricting rights that Parliament intended to confer on the travelling public.

It is trite law that a regulation is invalid and cannot stand if it is inconsistent with its parent statute.[23] Hence, subsection 1(3) of the Proposed Regulations is invalid.

---

[21] Canada Transportation Act, s. 86.11 (emphasis added).

[22] Air Transportation Regulations, ss. 107(1)(n)(iii) and 122(c)(iii) (emphasis added).

[23] Booth v. R., 1915 CanLII 596 (SCC), [1915] 21 D.L.R. 558 (S.C.C.); The Grand Truck Pacific Railway Co. v. The City of Fort William, 1910 CanLII 51 (SCC), 43 S.C.R. 412; and Morine v. L & J Parker Equipment Inc, 2001 NSCA 53 at para. 49.

Recommended Amendments

4. Replace subsection 1(3) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> 1(3) For the purpose of these Regulations, "denied boarding" means a refusal to carry passengers on a flight, if
>
> (1) the passenger held a confirmed reservation on the flight concerned, and
>
> (2) the passenger presented themselves for check-in as stipulated and at the time indicated in advance in writing (including by electronic means) by the carrier, or if no time indicated, no later than 45 minutes before the published departure time,
>
> except if the carrier proves that there were reasonable grounds to refuse to carry the passenger, such as reasons of health, safety or security, or inadequate travel documentation.

3. Burden of Proof that Passengers Cannot Meet

The Proposed Regulations improperly establish lack of compensation as the norm, and payment of compensation as the exception to the norm:

> 12 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding that is
>
> (i) within the carrier's control and
> (ii) that is not referred to in subsection 11(1).[24]

Subsection 11(1), referenced in 12(1), states that:

> 11 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding that is within the carrier's control but is required for safety purposes.[25]

The Agency's longstanding position has been that passengers bear the burden of proving facts necessary to establish that the airline failed to comply with its obligations:

> When a complaint such as this one is filed with the Agency, the complainant must, on a balance of probabilities, establish that the air carrier has failed to apply, or has inconsistently applied, terms and conditions of carriage appearing in the applicable tariff.[26]

This means that passengers seeking to enforce their rights to compensation under section 12 will need to prove, on balance of probabilities, that:

(i) the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding was indeed within the carrier's control; and
(ii) was not required for safety purposes.

Determining whether an event was "within the carrier's control" requires access to information and data within the carrier's exclusive knowledge and control: crew assignment databases, operations centre databases, and aircraft maintenance log books at the bare minimum.

Given that passengers have no access to any of these, the Proposed Regulations create conditions for payment of compensation that passengers are unable to verify, and in practice cannot prove. "The imposition of a test that can never be met could not be what Parliament intended" when it conferred upon the Agency the powers to make regulations governing compensation for flight delay, cancellation, and denial of boarding.[27]

---

[24] Proposed Regulations, s. 12(1) (emphasis and roman numbering added).
[25] Proposed Regulations, s. 11(1) (emphasis added).
[26] Nawrots v. Sunwing, Decision 432-C-A-2013, para. 38 (emphasis added).
[27] Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2 at para 17.

A. Inconsistency with the Montreal Convention and the Carriage by Air Act

The Proposed Regulations are also inconsistent with the principles of the Carriage by Air Act, which create a presumption of liability and payment of compensation as the norm. The carrier can exonerate itself from liability and paying compensation only if it establishes an affirmative defence:

> Article 19 - Delay
>
> The carrier is liable for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage by air of passengers, baggage or cargo. Nevertheless, the carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it or them to take such measures.[28]

The principle that the burden of proof to establish extenuating circumstances is on the carrier and not the passenger is the law not only in Canada,[29] but also in the more than 130 signatory states to the Montreal Convention, an international treaty governing the rights of passengers travelling on international itineraries. Drafters of the Montreal Convention recognized that it is the carrier that is in the best position to present evidence on the circumstances of a delay or cancellation and any facts that may relieve it from liability.

APR submits that the Proposed Regulations should incorporate the same principle: it is the carrier, and not the passenger, that must establish that an event was outside the carrier's control and/or was required for safety purposes.

B. Comparison with Regulation (EC) 261/2004

Regulation (EC) 261/2004 of the European Union is based on the same principle, established by the Montreal Convention, that payment of compensation is the norm, while the airline has to establish exceptional circumstances to exonerate itself from the obligation to compensate passengers:

> 3. An operating air carrier shall not be obliged to pay compensation in accordance with Article 7, if it can prove that the cancellation is caused by extraordinary circumstances which could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.
>
> 4. The burden of proof concerning the questions as to whether and when the passenger has been informed of the cancellation of the flight shall rest with the operating air carrier.[30]

---

[28] Carriage by Air Act, Schedule VI ("Montreal Convention"), Article 19 (emphasis added).
[29] Carriage by Air Act, s. 2(2.1).
[30] Regulation (EC) 261/2004, Articles 5(3) and 5(4).

C. The definitions of "mechanical malfunction" and "required for safety purposes" are vague

The Proposed Regulations provide that:

> 1 (1) The following definitions apply in Part II of the Act.
>
> mechanical malfunction means a mechanical problem that reduces the safety of passengers but does not include a problem that is identified further to scheduled maintenance undertaken in compliance with legal requirements. (défaillance mécanique)
>
> required for safety purposes means legally required in order to reduce risk to passengers but does not include scheduled maintenance in compliance with legal requirements. (nécessaire par souci de sécurité)[31]

APR submits that these definitions fail to be clear, and overlooks ss. 605.07-605.10 of the Canadian Aviation Regulations [CAR], governing Minimum Equipment List [MEL], and the Master Minimum Equipment List / Minimum Equipment List Policy and Procedures Manual established by Transport Canada.

It is a common misconception to believe that the inoperability of any component makes an aircraft inoperable. In fact, many aircraft carry passengers with numerous components inoperable. It is the MEL that specifies the conditions under which an aircraft can be operated with a particular component inoperable, and the maximum number of days in which the defect must be repaired.

Consequently, while the repair of an inoperable component may "reduce risk to passengers" (as arguably having all components operative is the safest state of an aircraft), such repairs are often not immediately required by law, and can be deferred in accordance with the applicable MEL and the CAR.

APR is concerned that the vague definition of "required for safety purposes" can and will be abused by carriers as a smokescreen by choosing to perform a repair that could be deferred as per MEL at times when a flight would have to be delayed or cancelled due to circumstances within the carrier's control, such as a missing crew member. The carrier will argue that the delay or cancellation was "required for safety purposes," and will conveniently omit to mention the missing crew member or other relevant circumstances.

APR submits that carriers should be encouraged to perform all repairs promptly, and should not be permitted to rely on deferring repairs under MEL as a way to avoid paying compensation. APR recommends amending the definition of "required for safety purposes" to incorporate the aforementioned information about MEL.

---

[31] Proposed Regulations, s. 1(1) (emphasis is in the original).

Recommended Amendment

5. Replace subsection 1(1) with:

1 (1) The following definitions apply in Part II of the Act.

mechanical malfunction means a mechanical problem that reduces the safety of passengers but does not include:

(i) a problem that is identified further to scheduled maintenance undertaken in compliance with legal requirements; or

(ii) a problem that has previously been identified and whose repair has been deferred pursuant to sections 605.07-605.10 of the Canadian Aviation Regulations.

(défaillance mécanique)

required for safety purposes means legally required in order to reduce risk to passengers but does not include:

(i) scheduled maintenance in compliance with legal requirements; or

(ii) repair of a problem that has previously been identified and whose repair has been deferred in accordance with sections 605.07-605.10 of the Canadian Aviation Regulations.

(nécessaire par souci de sécurité)

6. Replace subsection 10(1) with:

10 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding that the carrier proves to be exclusively due to situations outside the carrier's control, including

7. Replace subsection 11(1) with:

11 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding that the carrier fails to prove to be outside the carrier's control, but proves that it is required solely for safety purposes.

8. Replace subsection 12(1) with:

12 (1) This section applies in respect of a carrier when there is delay, cancellation or denial of boarding unless the carrier proves circumstances referred to in subsection 10(1) or 11(1).

4. 120-Day Limitation Period for Making Claims: Unlawful and Unreasonable

APR is concerned that the Proposed Regulations condition the payment of compensation on passengers making a complaint, and unlawfully impose a 120-day statutory limitation period for making a claim:

> 19 (3) To receive the compensation referred to in paragraph (1) or (2), a passenger must file a request for compensation with the carrier within 120 days after the day on which the flight delay or flight cancellation occurred.[32]

It is submitted that this provision is ultra vires of the Agency's regulation-making powers, unconstitutional, and unreasonable.

A. Parliament did not confer on the Agency the power to enact limitations

By virtue of the rule of law principle, all exercises of public authority must find their source in law.[33] The Agency, created by its enabling legislation, the Canada Transportation Act [Act], must exercise only those powers that were assigned to it by Parliament and in the manner intended by Parliament. The Agency is enacting the Proposed Regulations, including the requirement to pay compensation in certain limited cases, based on powers delegated to it by Parliament in subparagraph 86.11(1)(b)(i) of the Act:

> 86.11 (1) The Agency shall, after consulting with the Minister, make regulations in relation to flights to, from and within Canada, including connecting flights,
>
> ⋮
>
> (b) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding, including
>
> (i) the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet and the minimum compensation the carrier is required to pay for inconvenience when the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding is within the carrier's control,[34]

The words of the Act clearly and unambiguously reflect the legislature's intent that the regulations deal with the "carrier's obligations." The Act contains no similar language to authorize the Agency to enact regulations regarding the passengers' obligations. The Act confers no power on the Agency to make regulations whose effect is to impose limitations on passenger claims for compensation owed to passengers. Thus, it is submitted that subsection 19(3) of the Proposed Regulations is ultra vires of the Agency.

---

[32] Proposed Regulations, s. 19(3) (emphasis added).
[33] Dunsmuir v. New Brunswick, 2008 SCC 9 at para. 28.
[34] Canada Transportation Act, s. 86.11 (emphasis added).

B. Enacting statutory limitations is within the exclusive provincial legislative competence

Action for damages for personal injury fall within the exclusive provincial legislative competence in relation to property and civil rights.[35] On the other hand, aeronautics is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal Parliament,[36] which allows Parliament to enact laws and delegate legislative powers to the Agency to regulate airlines and impose on airlines obligations as a condition for being permitted to operate within, to, and from Canada.

The "pith and substance" of subsection 19(3) of the Proposed Regulations cannot be legitimately said to relate to aeronautics. The leading feature of this provision is prescription and limitation on claims, and not aeronautics. Its effect relates to tort law (or contract law), which falls squarely within the provincial legislative competence.

Subsection 19(3) severely encroaches on provincial jurisdiction by preventing passengers from making a claim after 120 days, while provincial limitation statutes provide for a longer period. A limitation provision is not "truly necessary" or "essential" to the scheme of the Proposed Regulations,[37] and is severable from the rest of the Proposed Regulations.

It is therefore submitted that it would be unconstitutional for the Agency to enact regulations with respect to prescription and limitation periods such as subsection 19(3) of the Proposed Regulations.

Parliament recognized that, in the absence of an explicit provision in a statute, provincial limitation statutes must be applied in relation to claims arising within a provincial territory, even if the subject matter falls within federal jurisdiction.

> 39 (1) Except as expressly provided by any other Act, the laws relating to prescription and the limitation of actions in force in a province between subject and subject apply to any proceedings in the Federal Court of Appeal or the Federal Court in respect of any cause of action arising in that province.
>
> (2) A proceeding in the Federal Court of Appeal or the Federal Court in respect of a cause of action arising otherwise than in a province shall be taken within six years after the cause of action arose.[38]

It is submitted that the same principles should apply to claims that may arise under the Proposed Regulations: Since Parliament did not enact any legislation to expressly provide prescription and limitation periods for claims under the Proposed Regulations, the provincial limitation statutes should apply to actions arising in a province, and the six-year period should apply to claims arising otherwise than in a province.

---

[35] The Constitution Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict, c. 3, ss. 92(13) and 92(14).
[36] Re: Aeronautics, [1932] A.C. 54.
[37] General Motors of Canada Ltd. v. City National Leasing, [1989] 1 SCR 641.
[38] Federal Courts Act, s. 39 (emphasis added).

C. Proposed subsection 19(3) is unreasonable

Prescription and limitation provisions deprive claimants from enforcing their rights after the passage of a certain amount of time, while they protect defendants from the risk of having to defend against claims arising from decades-old incidents, where the evidence may no longer be available. As such, establishing limitation periods requires the balancing of competing interests.

It is submitted that proposed section 19(3) serves only the airlines' private interests while ignoring the interests of the travelling public, and is inconsistent with international norms; as such, it is unreasonable. First, 120 days is a small fraction (16.438%) of the two-year limitation period set by the Carriage by Air Act:

> Article 35 - Limitation of actions
>
> 1. The right to damages shall be extinguished if an action is not brought within a period of two years, reckoned from the date of arrival at the destination, or from the date on which the aircraft ought to have arrived, or from the date on which the carriage stopped.[39]

The two-year limitation period is the law not only in Canada,[40] but also in the more than 130 signatory states to the Montreal Convention, an international treaty governing the rights of passengers travelling on international itineraries.

Second, imposing a special and substantially shorter limitation period on claims arising under the Proposed Regulations would put Canada significantly behind the European Union, where limitation of claims under Regulation (EC) 261/2004 is governed by state law,[41] and ranges from 2 years in many civil law states to 6 years in the UK.

Third, given that airlines may be sued for delay in the transportation of passengers for up to two years under the Montreal Convention, airlines are anyway required to retain evidence for at least two years. Thus, proposed subsection 19(3) deprives passengers of compensation without conferring any benefit on the airlines in terms of abbreviating the retention period for evidence.

Recommended Amendments

9. Replace subsection 19(3) of the Proposed Regulations with a provision mirroring s. 39 of the Federal Courts Act: (1) provincial limitation statutes apply to claims arising in a province; and (2) a six-year period applies to claims arising otherwise than in a province.

---

[39] Carriage by Air Act, Schedule VI ("Montreal Convention"), Article 35.
[40] Carriage by Air Act,s. 2(2.1).
[41] Moré v. KLM, European Court of Justice, Case C-139/11.

5. Shortchanging Passengers Booked on "Small" Carriers: Unlawful and Unfair

The Proposed Regulations provide substantially fewer rights and a fraction of the compensation amounts to passengers travelling on "small" carriers:

> large carrier means
>
> (a) a carrier that transported one million passengers or more during each of the two preceding calendar years; or
>
> (b) a carrier that is, under a commercial agreement with a carrier referred to in paragraph (a), operating a flight or carrying passengers on behalf of that carrier. (gros transporteur)
>
> small carrier means any carrier that is not a large carrier. (petit transporteur)[42]

It follows from the definition that airlines operating "large aircraft" within the meaning of the Air Transportation Regulations, such as Flair or Swoop (wholly owned by WestJet), would nevertheless be considered "small" for a number of years.

Passengers travelling on "small" carriers are adversely affected and shortchanged compared to the rest of the travelling public in two respects:

(a) "small" carriers will be required to pay only a small fraction of the compensation normally owed for flight delays and cancellations;[43] and

(b) unlike "large carriers," the "small" carriers will not be required to rebook passengers on flights of competitor airlines.[44]

APR submits that these provisions of the Proposed Regulations are unlawful, unfair to passengers, and unreasonable.

A. Invalidity due to inconsistency with the parent statute

By virtue of the rule of law principle, all exercises of public authority must find their source in law.[45] The Agency, created by its enabling legislation, the Canada Transportation Act [Act], must exercise only those powers that were assigned to it by Parliament and in the manner intended by Parliament. The Agency

---

[42] Proposed Regulations, s. 1(2) (emphasis is in the original).
[43] Proposed Regulations, s. 19.
[44] Proposed Regulations, ss. 17(1) and 18
[45] Dunsmuir v. New Brunswick, 2008 SCC 9 at para. 28.

is enacting the Proposed Regulations, including the requirement to pay compensation in certain limited cases, based on powers delegated to it by Parliament in paragraph 86.11(1)(b) of the Act:

> 86.11 (1) The Agency shall, after consulting with the Minister, make regulations in relation to flights to, from and within Canada, including connecting flights,
>
> ⋮
>
> (b) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding, including
>
> (i) the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet and the minimum compensation the carrier is required to pay for inconvenience when the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding is within the carrier's control,
>
> (ii) the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet when the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding is within the carrier's control, but is required for safety purposes, including in situations of mechanical malfunctions,
>
> (iii) the carrier's obligation to ensure that passengers complete their itinerary when the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding is due to situations outside the carrier's control, such as natural phenomena and security events,[46]

The legislative objective expressed in subparagraph 86.11(1)(b)(i) of the Act is to require carriers to compensate passengers "for inconvenience" caused by flight delay, cancellation, or denial of boarding. There is no causal link between the inconvenience suffered by passengers and the type of carrier they were booked on. A passenger booked on Air Canada suffers the same inconvenience as a passenger booked on Flair or Swoop if they are delayed for 9 hours.

Parliament did not authorize the Agency to distinguish between passengers, and discriminate against those who travel on so-called "small" carriers. Paragraph 86.11 of the Act was enacted to create a uniform regime, as the Minister of Transport acknowledged:

> I believe that when passengers purchase an airline ticket, they expect and deserve the airline to fulfill its part of the transaction. When that agreement is not fulfilled, passengers deserve clear, transparent, and enforceable standards of treatment and compensation. Under this proposed legislation, Canadians would benefit from a uniform, predictable, and reasonable approach. [47]

The distinction between so-called "small" and "large" carriers is introduced in the Proposed Regulations without any statutory mandate to do so, and it violates the stated policy objective of uniformity.

---

[46] Canada Transportation Act, s. 86.11 (emphasis added).
[47] Hansard, Volume 148, Number 187, 1st Session, 42nd Parliament (June 5, 2017), p. 12071.

While Parliament provided three categories of events that provide passengers with a different set of rights, Parliament chose not to distinguish between passengers based on the size of the carrier or the number of passengers transported by the carrier on which the passengers are travelling. Thus, the distinction between "small" and "large" carriers introduced in the Proposed Regulations is inconsistent with the objective of its parent statute to create a uniform regime.

It is trite law that a regulation is invalid and cannot stand if it is inconsistent with its parent statute.[48] Hence, the distinction between "small" and "large" carriers in the Proposed Regulations is invalid.

B. The definition of a "small" carrier is unreasonable

Even if one were to accept that Parliament authorized making a distinction between "small" and "large" carriers, it is submitted that the current definition is unreasonable and detached from the reality of airline operations in Canada.

The Proposed Regulations would classify, for example, not only Flair but also Swoop as a "small" carrier even though it is fully owned by WestJet, which is clearly a "large" carrier, and operates the same type and size of aircraft as WestJet does. In so doing, the Proposed Regulations create an uneven playing field and provide a competitive advantage for certain airlines over others. APR submits that this could not have been Parliament's intent, and it is clearly unfair to passengers who pay approximately the same airfare, but would be deprived of the same compensation for the sole reason that their carrier is classified as "small."

At the same time, it might not be unreasonable to relieve carriers operating only small aircraft from some of the financial burden imposed by the Proposed Regulations. For example, it might not be desirable to hold bush pilots operating a small aircraft with 4 or 8 seats to the same standard as commercial airlines.

It is therefore submitted that the definition of a "small" carrier should be adjusted to be consistent with the economic reality and terminology developed in the Air Transportation Regulations.

Recommended Amendments

10. Delete subsections 1(2), 17(1)(b), 18(b), 19(1)(b), and 19(5) and delete the words "in the case of a large carrier" in subsections 17(1)(a), 18(a), and 19(1)(a) of the Proposed Regulations.

11. Alternatively, replace "one million" with "one hundred thousand" in subsection 1(2)(a) of the Proposed Regulations, and append immediately after subsection 1(2)(b):

> (c) operates at least one aircraft having a certificated maximum carrying capacity of more than 39 passengers.

[48] Booth v. R., 1915 CanLII 596 (SCC), [1915] 21 D.L.R. 558 (S.C.C.); The Grand Truck Pacific Railway Co. v. The City of Fort William, 1910 CanLII 51 (SCC), 43 S.C.R. 412; and Morine v. L & J Parker Equipment Inc, 2001 NSCA 53 at para. 49.

6. Limiting the Right to Rebooking on Another Carrier to Delays Longer than 9 Hours

In 2012, the Agency issued five decisions requiring Air Canada, Air Transat, and WestJet to rebook passengers on flights of other airlines in the event of a flight disruption within the carrier's control.[49] In these five proceedings, the Agency concluded, based on the provisions and principles of the Montreal Convention, that carriers have a concomitant obligation to take all reasonable measures to prevent delay to passengers. Such reasonable measures include rebooking passengers on flights of other airlines with whom the carrier has no interline agreement. The five decisions from 2012 did not limit the right of passengers to be rebooked on another carrier to delays of a specific length.

Paragraph 17(1)(a) of the Proposed Regulations require carriers to rebook passengers on flights of another carrier with whom it has no commercial agreement if it is unable to rebook the passenger on its own network on a flight that departs within nine hours of the departure time on the original ticket:

> 17 (1) If paragraph 11(2)(c), (3)(c) or (4)(c) or 12(2)(c), (3)(c) or (4)(c) applies in respect of a carrier, it must provide the following free of charge to ensure that passengers complete their itinerary as soon as possible:
>
> (a) in the case of a large carrier
>
> (i) a confirmed reservation on the next available flight that is operated by the original carrier, or a carrier with which the original carrier has a commercial agreement, and that is on any route to the destination on the passenger's original ticket and departs within nine hours of the departure time on the original ticket, or
>
> (ii) a confirmed reservation on a flight operated by any carrier on any route to the destination on the passenger's original ticket if the carrier cannot provide a confirmed reservation that complies with paragraph (a);

While APR welcomes the codification in regulations of the existing obligations that were established in 2012, APR is concerned by the restrictive language introduced in subparagraph 17(1)(a)(i).

First, the relevant time for the purpose of rerouting passengers should be the scheduled arrival time of the alternative transportation being offered, and not the scheduled departure time as subparagraph 17(1)(a)(i) currently reads. This distinction has a significant impact on passengers with connecting flights, for example, from Montreal to Frankfurt via Toronto. APR believes that the intent of the Proposed Regulations is to mitigate the passenger's delay on arrival at Frankfurt, and not simply to encourage the airline to put the passenger on a flight from Montreal to Toronto while stranding the passenger in Toronto for 24 hours.

[49] Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 250-C-A-2012; Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 251-C-A-2012; Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 248-C-A-2012; Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 249-C-A-2012; and Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 252-C-A-2012.

APR thus submits that the word "departs" should be replaced with "arrives" or "scheduled to arrive" in subparagraph 17(1)(a)(i) of the Proposed Regulations.

Second, on January 17, 2019, the Agency's representatives acknowledged that there is no evidence or data capable of supporting the choice of nine hours as the timeframe to rebook on the carrier's own network, nor were they able to explain the rationale for choosing this figure.

Third, APR is of the view that allowing carriers to rebook passengers on their own network instead of another carrier as long as the new flight departs within nine hours is unreasonably long, to the point that it would defeat the purpose of the travel for many passengers. In practical terms, this would mean that a passenger booked on an 8 am flight could be rebooked on a 5 pm flight, or a passenger booked on a 9 pm flight could be rebooked on a 6 am flight the next day.

APR submits that the requirement to rebook passengers on flights of other carriers should be imposed if the carrier is unable to reroute the passenger on a flight that arrives at the final destination within four hours of the original arrival time. This figure represents one half of a normal 8-hour working day, and ensures that passengers can still substantially benefit from the purpose of their travel.

Recommended Amendments

12. Replace the phrase "departs within nine hours" with "scheduled to arrive at the passenger's destination within four hours" in subparagraph 17(1)(a)(i) of the Proposed Regulations.

13. Replace "paragraph (a)" with "subparagraph (i)" in subparagraph 17(1)(a)(ii) of the Proposed Regulations.

7. No Meals or Hotel for Passengers Notified at Least 12 Hours in Advance

Section 14 of the Proposed Regulations creates the impression that carriers are required to provide meals and overnight accommodation for passengers affected by flight delay or cancellation that are within the carrier's control.

This is, however, not the case. Subsection 14(1) of the Proposed Regulations starts with the phrase:

> If paragraph 11(2)(b) or (3)(b) or 12(2)(b) or (3)(b) applies in respect of a carrier [...][50]

Each one of paragraphs 11(2)(b), 11(3)(b), 12(2)(b), and 12(3)(b) reads as follows:

> if a passenger is informed of the [...] less than 12 hours before the departure time on their original ticket, provide the treatment set out in section 14;[51]

It follows that passengers who are informed about the delay or cancellation at least 12 hours in advance are not entitled to hotel or accommodation under the Proposed Regulations.

APR submits that these provisions are inconsistent with the text of the Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement, inconsistent with the principles of the Montreal Convention, and are unreasonable.

A. Inconsistency with the Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement

The regulatory impact analysis states that:

> The proposal establishes minimum standards of treatment for all flight delays and cancellations that are either (1) within the carrier's control, or (2) within the carrier's control but required for safety purposes, where the passenger has been informed of the delay fewer than 12 hours before departure time.[52]

Based on the regulatory impact analysis statement, there was no intent to impose the 12-hour advance notice limitation in the case of delays and cancellations that are within the carrier's control and are not required for safety purposes. The intent was to impose this limitation only with respect to delays and cancellations that are required for safety purposes.

Thus, the texts of paragraphs 12(2)(b) and 12(3)(b) were intended to be different than paragraphs 11(2)(b) and 11(3)(b), but in the Proposed Regulations they are identical due to a copy-paste error.

---

[50] Proposed Regulations, s. 14(1) (emphasis added).
[51] Proposed Regulations, ss. 11(2)(b), 11(3)(b), 12(2)(b), and 12(3)(b) (emphasis added).
[52] Proposed Regulations, Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement (emphasis added).

B. Inconsistency with the Montreal Convention and the Carriage by Air Act

The Carriage by Air Act imposes a strict liability on carriers for damages incurred by passengers due to delay in transportation by air:

> Article 19 - Delay
>
> The carrier is liable for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage by air of passengers, baggage or cargo. Nevertheless, the carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it or them to take such measures.[53]

This is the law not only in Canada,[54] but also in the more than 130 signatory states to the Montreal Convention, an international treaty governing the rights of passengers travelling on international itineraries.

The Canadian Transportation Agency's longstanding and considered view has been that terms and conditions applicable to travel within Canada must conform to the principles of the Montreal Convention.[55] APR agrees with this view, and believes that provisions of the regulations applicable to travel where the Montreal Convention does not apply, such as travel entirely within Canada, should nevertheless be consistent with the legal principles of the Montreal Convention to achieve uniformity and clarity.

Sections 11 and 12 prescribe the rights of passengers in the case of delays and cancellations causing delay in transportation by air that are "within the carrier's control," and as such, clearly trigger liability under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention.

Yet, the effect of the 12-hour notice restriction in paragraphs 11(2)(b), 11(3)(b), 12(2)(b), and 12(2)(c) of the Proposed Regulations is that the carrier is not required to provide meals and accommodation if it provides sufficient advance notice in situations where the carrier is clearly liable for the passengers' expenses under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention.

To put it differently, these provisions of the Proposed Regulations are inconsistent with the principles of the Montreal Convention.

APR submits that the Agency should not incorporate terms and conditions in the Proposed Regulations that would have been found to be unreasonable by the Agency due to their inconsistency with the principles of the Montreal Convention. In particular, the "12-hour advance notice" limitation should be removed from paragraphs 11(2)(b), 11(3)(b), 12(2)(b), and 12(3)(b) of the Proposed Regulations.

---

[53] Carriage by Air Act, Schedule VI ("Montreal Convention"), Article 19 (emphasis added).
[54] Carriage by Air Act, s. 2(2.1).
[55] See, for example: Decision No. 181-C-A-2007 at para. 36; Decision No. 483-C-A-2010 at para. 32 (leave to appeal to FCA denied: 10-A-42); Decision No. 251-C-A-2012 at para. 19; and Decision No. 344-C-A-2013 at para. 23.

C. Adverse impact on passengers

The purpose of section 14 of the Proposed Regulations is to offer basic protection (food and shelter) for passengers who find themselves stranded far away from their homes, possibly in a foreign country, for reasons that are within the carrier's control (whether or not due to "safety reasons"). To put it simple, passengers in such situations should not have to go hungry or be forced to sleep at the airport or on the street.

A mere 12-hour notice before the scheduled flight does not afford passengers a reasonable opportunity to book accommodation at an affordable rate; instead, it will force passengers to incur significant expenses for hotels at last-minute rates—if they can at all afford it. Not every passenger can.

Therefore, it is submitted that all passengers affected by a flight delay or cancellation within the carrier's control should be provided with meals and overnight accommodation as needed, regardless of whether they were given an advance notice.

Recommended Amendments

14. Correct paragraphs 12(2)(b) and 12(3)(b) of the Proposed Regulations to match the intent stated in the Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement, to read:

> ~~if a passenger is informed of the [...] less than 12 hours before the departure time on their original ticket,~~ provide the treatment set out in section 14.

15. Replace paragraphs 11(2)(b) and 11(3)(b) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> provide the treatment set out in section 14.

8. Form of Payment: A Step Backward

Subsection 21(1) of the Proposed Regulations governs the form of payment:

> 21 (1) If a carrier is required by these Regulations to provide compensation for inconvenience to a passenger, the carrier must offer the amount required in monetary form. However, the compensation may be made in another form if
>
> (a) compensation in the other form has a greater monetary value than the minimum monetary value of the compensation that is required under these Regulations;
>
> (b) the passenger has been informed in writing of the monetary value of the other form of compensation;
>
> (c) the compensation does not expire; and
>
> (d) the passenger confirms in writing that they have been informed of their right to receive monetary compensation and have chosen the other form of compensation.

APR is of the view that subsection 21(1) is a step backward compared to the Agency's existing jurisprudence that prescribes a 1:3 ratio for compensation offered by way of travel vouchers (i.e., at least $3 of travel vouchers must be tendered for every $1 of cash compensation owed).

In Lukács v. Air Canada, the Agency held:

> [49] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács' submission that passengers must be afforded ample opportunity to determine whether they wish to choose travel vouchers in lieu of a cash payment as denied boarding compensation, and that this choice should only be made after Air Canada fully informs passengers of the conditions attached to those vouchers. The Agency finds that, in light of the ratio applicable to cash compensation versus values of travel vouchers for international carriage, the ratio of 1:3 proposed by Mr. Lukács is reasonable.
>
> [50] In light of the foregoing, the Agency finds that the restrictions that Mr. Lukács proposes be imposed on the issuance of vouchers are reasonable, with the exception of the one-year period proposed by Mr. Lukács for persons to exchange travel vouchers for cash. The Agency is of the opinion that the proposed period is excessive, and finds that a one-month period for an exchange is more reasonable.[56]

Subsequently, in Lukács v. Porter, the Agency reaffirmed these findings:

> [80] The Agency finds that Existing Tariff Rule 20 is unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR because of the absence of provisions that provide for the following:

[56] Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 342-C-A-2013, paras. 49-50 (emphasis added).

- denied boarding compensation must be tendered in the form of cash, cheque, credit to a passenger's credit card, or any other form acceptable to the passenger;
- the passenger must be fully informed of the restrictions that may apply to alternative forms of compensation;
- in the event that a passenger opts for travel vouchers as compensation, the passenger must be able to change their mind within a reasonable amount of time, and exchange their vouchers for cash;
- if the carrier offers travel vouchers, the restrictions set out in Decision No. 342-C-A-2013 must apply.[57]

The legislature is presumed to have knowledge of these decisions, and there is no indication that Parliament intended to alter the law they have created. Thus, it is unclear why the Agency chose to claw back the 1:3 ratio that has been the Agency's longstanding considered view.

APR submits that rather than unreasonably clawing back the existing rights of passengers, the regulations should simply reflect the Agency's longstanding considered view articulated in the above-noted decisions.

Recommended Amendments

16. Replace paragraph 21(1)(a) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> compensation in the other form has a monetary value of at least 300% of the minimum monetary value of the compensation that is required under these Regulations;

[57] Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014, para. 80.

9. Seating of Children

While APR strongly supports enshrining in regulations the rights of children to be seated next to an accompanying adult, APR is concerned that the Proposed Regulations fail to impose clear and enforceable obligations and constitute a step backward compared to the existing policies of some airlines.

A. Failure to impose clear and enforceable obligations

APR is of the view that section 22 of the Proposed Regulations, concerning the seating of children, suffers from a number of flaws that make it unclear and unenforceable.

First, section 22 uses the verb "facilitate," whose common and ordinary meaning is "to make easier" or "help bring about." The use of such vague phrases instead of "shall" could, and likely would, be interpreted as stating a desired or recommended outcome rather than imposing a strict legal obligation.[58]

Second, there appears to be a conflict between paragraphs 22(1)(a) and 22(1)(b):

> 22 (1) In order to facilitate the seating of a child who is under the age of 14 years in close proximity to a parent, guardian or tutor in accordance with subsection (2), a carrier must
>
> (a) assign seats before check-in at no additional charge to a child under the age of 14 and their parent, guardian or tutor; and
>
> (b) if the carrier does not assign seats in accordance with paragraph (a), do the following: [...][59]

If the obligation imposed by paragraph 22(1)(a) is to assign seats before check-in, then it is difficult to understand the purpose of paragraph 22(1)(b) concerning the case where the carrier violated its obligation under paragraph 22(1)(b), and did not assign a seat. If the intent is to impose a legal obligation, then the consequence of failing to comply with paragraph 22(1)(a) must first and foremost be a penalty imposed on the airline.

Third, paragraph 22(1)(b) fails to address the situation if no volunteers are found on board:

> 22(1)(b) if the carrier does not assign seats in accordance with paragraph (a), do the following:
>
> (i) advise passengers before check-in that the carrier will facilitate seat assignment of the child in close proximity to a parent, guardian or tutor at no additional charge at the time of check-in or at the boarding gate,

[58] Interpretation Act, s. 11.
[59] Proposed Regulations, s. 22(1) (emphasis added).

(ii) assign seats at the time of check-in, if possible,

(iii) if it is not possible to assign seats at the time of check-in, request that other passengers volunteer to change seats at the time of boarding, and

(iv) if it is not possible to assign seats at the time of check-in and no passenger volunteers to change seats at the time of boarding, request that other passengers volunteer to change seats before take-off.[60]

Paragraph 22(1)(b) is based on the assumption that volunteers will be found before take-off. But if no one volunteers, will a young child be seated apart from their accompanying adult?

APR submits that this outcome would be contrary to the purpose for which s. 86.11(1)(d) of the Canada Transportation Act was enacted. It is further submitted that if no volunteers are found, airlines must change the seats of passengers to ensure that children are seated next to an accompanying adult.

B. A step backward compared to Air Canada's existing rules

Air Canada's Domestic/International Tariff Rule 10(C)(1) provides:

> Note: The Carrier has a supplemental seating policy (and related procedures) for passengers under the age of 12 travelling with a parent or guardian traveler to ensure that reasonable efforts are made by the Carrier prior to check-in, at time of check-in and by airport and in-flight agents to seat the child next to their parent or guardian traveler, free of charge.
>
> ⋮
>
> Children under age 8 must be accompanied by an adult age 16 or older when travelling. The accompanying adult must occupy a seat in the same cabin and be seated adjacent to the young child.[61]

Section 22(2) of the Proposed Regulations is a step backward compared to this existing standard:

> 22(2) The carrier must facilitate the assignment of a seat to a child who is under the age of 14 years by offering, at no additional charge,
>
> (a) in the case of a child who is 4 years of age or younger, a seat that is adjacent to their parent, guardian or tutor's seat;
>
> (b) in the case of a child who is 5 to 11 years of age, a seat that is in the same row as their parent, guardian or tutor's seat, and that is separated from that parent, guardian or tutor's seat by no more than one seat; and [60] Proposed Regulations, s. 22(1)(b) (emphasis added).

[61] Air Canada's Domestic Tariff, Rule 10(C)(1) (emphasis added).

(c) in the case of a child who is 12 or 13 years of age, a seat that is in a row that is separated from the row of their parent, guardian or tutor's seat by no more than one row.[62]

APR submits that the rules should be simplified by expanding the existing rule of adjacent seating to children under the age of 12.

Recommended Amendments

17. Replace the first sentence of section 22(1) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> In order to seat children who are under 14 years of age in close proximity to a parent, guardian or tutor in accordance with subsection (2), a carrier shall

18. Append the following subparagraph immediately after subparagraph 22(1)(b)(iv):

> (v) if no passenger volunteers to change seats before take-off, involuntarily change the seats of passengers on board before take-off.

19. Replace subsection 22(2) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> 22(2) The carrier shall assign to a child who is under 14 years of age by offering, at no additional charge,
>
> (a) in the case of a child who is under 12 years of age, a seat that is adjacent to their parent, guardian or tutor's seat;
>
> (b) in the case of a child who is 12 or 13 years of age, a seat that is in a row that is separated from the row of their parent, guardian or tutor's seat by no more than one row.

[62] Proposed Regulations, s. 22(2) (emphasis added).

10. Scope: Further Clarity is Needed

APR warmly welcomes the intent of subsection 2(1) of the Proposed Regulations:

> 2 (1) All carriers carrying a passenger are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to the passenger with respect to the obligations set out in these Regulations or, if they are more favourable, the obligations set out in the applicable tariff.[63]

At the same time, APR is concerned that the phrase "carrying a passenger" may lead to ambiguity and to unnecessary litigation. APR submits that additional language would be necessary to ensure that the provision is clear and unambiguous.

Recommended Amendments

20. Replace subsection 2(1) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> All carriers carrying a passenger, including but not limited to the marketing carrier, operating carrier, contracting carrier, and actual carrier, are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to the passenger with respect to the obligations set out in these Regulations or, if they are more favourable, the obligations set out in the applicable tariff.

[63] Proposed Regulations, s. 2(1) (emphasis added).

11. Important Issues not Addressed

APR is deeply concerned about the omission of a number of important issues from the Proposed Regulations. This state of affairs creates the incorrect impression that airlines are free to do as they please in these areas. APR strongly believes this was not Parliament's intent.

A. Right to a refund of unused portion of ticket in events "outside the carrier's control"

Section 18 of the Proposed Regulations, governing the rights of passengers in events that are "outside the carrier's control," is silent about the rights of passengers to cancel their travel and receive a refund. This is to be contrasted with subsection 17(2), which provides for such rights in events that are "within the carrier's control."

As a result, the Proposed Regulations create the incorrect impression that passengers cannot cancel their tickets in the case of events that are "outside the carrier's control" delaying their travel. APR submits that this was not Parliament's intent in enacting paragraph 86.11(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act [Act]. The legislature is presumed to have knowledge of laws existing at the time of enactment of a new legislation, including the case law. In particular, Parliament is presumed to have been aware of the Agency's jurisprudence on the right of passengers to cancel their travel and receive a refund regardless of whether the flight delay or cancellation prompting them to do so is within the carrier's control.

> [...] the Agency is of the opinion that Air Transat has not proven to the Agency's satisfaction, that it is reasonable to have a time limit in the event of a delay of 36 hours or more, after which Air Transat would refund the unused ticket or portion thereof.[64]

Ultimately, the Agency substituted Air Transat's International Tariff Rule 6.3(d) with:

> 6.3(d) If the Carrier is unable to provide reasonable alternative transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time, then it will refund the unused ticket or portions thereof.[65]

In Lukács v. Sunwing, the Agency reaffirmed passengers' "fundamental right" to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier cannot transport them within a reasonable amount of time:

> [15] In terms of passengers' right to refunds, in Decision No. 28-A-2004, the Agency recognized the fundamental right of passengers to be refunded for the unused portions of their tickets if the carrier is unable to provide transportation on its services or on the services of other carrier(s) within a reasonable period of time.[66]

---

[64] Re: Air Transat, Decision No. 28-A-2004 (emphasis added).
[65] Ibid.
[66] Lukács v. Sunwing, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013 at para. 15 (emphasis added).

In Lukács v. Porter, the Agency reinforced this conclusion:

> [33] The Agency finds that as they allow Porter to refuse the tendering of refunds when a flight is cancelled for reasons outside the passenger's control, Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR. The Agency finds that the Rules fail to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Porter's statutory, commercial and operational obligations.[67]

In a subsequent Lukács v. Porter case, the Agency held:

> [88] The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács, and finds that it is unreasonable for Porter to refuse to refund the fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond Porter's control.[68]

As these decisions of the Agency demonstrate, passengers do have a fundamental right to a refund of their fares if the carrier is unable to transport them for any reason that is outside the passengers' control.

There is no indication that Parliament intended to alter the law in this area. Parliament clearly did not intend to force passengers to fly at a time later than stated on their tickets if they no longer desire to do so, nor did Parliament intend to deprive passengers from the option of cancelling their travel and receiving a refund for the unused portion of their tickets.

On January 17, 2019, the Agency's representatives expressed concern about the lack of delegated legislative authority to make regulations giving effect to the rights that are deeply rooted in the jurisprudence.

APR submits that the Agency's concerns are ill-founded for the following reasons.

First, paragraph 86(1)(n) of the Act provides that the Agency may make regulations:

> (n) generally for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this Part.

Ensuring that the regulations enacted unambiguously state the rights of passengers is clearly consistent with the Agency "carrying out the purposes and provisions" of Part II of the Act.

Second, pursuant to subparagraph 86.11(b)(1)(iv), the Agency may require carriers to inform passengers about their right to cancel their travel and receive a refund in the event of a delay or cancellation outside the carrier's control.

---

[67] Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014 at para. 33 (emphasis added).
[68] Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013 at para. 88 (emphasis added).

Third, paragraph 86.11(1)(g) of the Act provides that the Agency shall make regulations:

> 86.11 (1) The Agency shall, after consulting with the Minister, make regulations in relation to flights to, from and within Canada, including connecting flights,
>
> ⋮
>
> (g) respecting any of the carrier's other obligations that the Minister may issue directions on under subsection (2).[69]

Thus, the Agency may, and in the circumstances of this case, should ask the Minister to issue directions under subsection 86.11(2) of the Act for enacting regulations that remove this ambiguity.

B. Boarding priorities and the obligation to seek volunteers in events "outside the carrier's control"

The Proposed Regulations are silent about the obligation of carriers to seek volunteers and to follow certain boarding priorities in the event of denial of boarding due to circumstances "outside the carrier's control." This is to be contrasted with section 15 of the Proposed Regulations, which imposes such obligations in events that are "within the carrier's control."

This suggests that under the Proposed Regulations, the carrier may even deny boarding to a passenger who is already on the aircraft if it claims that it is doing so due to circumstances "outside the carrier's control."

On January 17, 2019, the Agency's representatives expressed concern about the lack of delegated legislative authority to enact provisions similar to section 15 for denial of boarding "outside the carrier's control."

APR respectfully disagrees.

In addition to the Agency's authority under paragraph 86(1)(n) and 86.11(1)(g) of the Act, the Agency may also enact under paragraph 170(1)(c) of the Act, regulations to ensure that vulnerable passengers are not left stranded even in circumstances that are "outside the carrier's control."

C. Flight advancement

"Flight advancement" occurs when the carrier changes the departure time of its flight to a time earlier than it appears on the passenger's original ticket. Flight advancement has the same effect on passengers as denial of boarding, causing them to miss or be unable to take the flight they had paid for.

---

[69] Canada Transportation Act, s. 86.11(1)(g).

In Re: Air Transat, the Agency held that:

> The Agency is of the opinion that, in the event of a flight advancement, the consumer should be offered alternate travel options immediately. In addition, the Agency feels it would be beneficial if Air Transat includes a tariff provision that provides for a refund, at the request of the passenger, if such passenger should wish to cancel a reservation for a flight that has been advanced.[70]

The Agency reached the same conclusion in Lipson v. Air Transat.[71] In Lukács v. Air Transat, it was held that:

> [28] With regard to the matter of flight advancements, the Agency is of the opinion that such advancements may impact as negatively on those passengers as is the case with passengers whose flight is delayed, and that affected passengers should be able to avail themselves of the same remedies as those available to passengers whose flight is delayed. Therefore, the Agency finds that the absence of protection for all passengers affected by flight advancements fails to strike a balance between a passenger's right to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and Air Transat's statutory, commercial and operational obligations. As such, Proposed Rule 21(2)(i) would not be considered reasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR if it were included in the Tariff on file with the Agency.[72]

In spite of these findings of the Agency, the Proposed Regulations are silent about the issue of flight advancement.

On January 17, 2019, the Agency's representatives expressed concern about the lack of delegated legislative authority to enact provisions relating to flight advancement.

APR respectfully disagrees.

The effect of flight advancement is the same as denial of boarding or delay: for no fault of their own, the passenger is unable to take the flight for which they had previously paid for, and as a result they are delayed in reaching or unable to reach their destination.

Thus, flight advancement is no more than a sophisticated form of denial of boarding, performed by changing the departure time of the passenger's flight in a manner that the passenger is prevented from being able to present themselves for check-in on time.

APR therefore submits that flight advancement should be recognized as a form of denial of boarding and affected passengers should have the same protection and rights accordingly.

---

[70] Re: Air Transat, Decision No. LET-A-112-2003 (emphasis added).
[71] Lipson v. Air Transat, Decision No. LET-C-A-59-2003.
[72] Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 327-C-A-2013 at para. 28 (emphasis added).

Recommended Amendments

21. Renumber section 18 as 18(1) of the Proposed Regulations, and append the following provision immediately after it:

> (2) If the alternate travel arrangements offered in accordance with subsection (1) do not accommodate the passenger's travel needs, the carrier must instead refund the unused portion of the ticket.

22. Append the following paragraph to subsection 10(2):

> (d) in the case of a cancellation or a denial of boarding, deny boarding in accordance with section 15.

23. Replace subsection 15(1) of the Proposed Regulations with:

> 15 (1) ~~If paragraph 11(4)(b) or 12(4)(b) applies in respect of a~~ A carrier~~, it~~ must not deny boarding unless it has asked if any passenger is willing to give up their seat.

24. Append the following subsection immediately after subsection 1(3) of the Proposed Regulations:

> 1(4) For the purposes of these Regulations, a flight whose departure time was brought forward compared to the time appearing on the original ticket, with the consequence that the passenger misses that flight, shall be considered a flight on which the passenger has been denied boarding.

12. Enforcement: Turning a Blind Eye to Violations

APR is profoundly concerned that the regulations will remain dead letter due to the lack of enforcement by the Canadian Transportation Agency. APR is of the view that:

- Airlines should have a positive duty to pay compensation, without a demand from the passenger. Section 19(3) of the Proposed Regulations violates this principle and improperly conditions payment of compensation on the passenger complaining to the airline.
- The Canadian Transportation Agency must adopt a zero tolerance policy with respect to contraventions of the regulations, and direct its enforcement officers to issue an Administrative Monetary Penalty in each and every case that an airline fails to comply with the regulations.
- The Canadian Transportation Agency must cease and desist its unlawful practice of issuing "formal warnings" instead of Administrative Monetary Penalties.

A. A leading example

In late 2017, numerous CBC reports revealed that WestJet systematically misled passengers whose flights were cancelled. WestJet falsely claimed that the destination airports were closed as a result of hurricane damage. Based on this false claim, WestJet refused to rebook passengers on flights of other airlines that were available to these destinations.[73,74,75] According to the Canadian Transportation Agency's website:

> Results of an investigation initiated on December 19, 2017 by a designated enforcement officer of the Canadian Transportation Agency indicate that WestJet made public statements contrary to and resulting in a contravention of subsection 18(b) of the Air Transportation Regulations.
>
> Such public statements, to passengers, were made in relation to scheduled flights being cancelled due to apparent airport closures in but not limited to the areas of Santa Clara, Cuba and Turks and Caicos Islands when in fact the airports in question were in an open status.[76]

Although contravention of subsection 18(b) is punishable by an Administrative Monetary Penalty [AMP] of up to $25,000, no such action was taken against WestJet. Instead of issuing a notice of violation and a penalty, a mere "formal warning" was issued without any statutory authorization to do so. Unfortunately, this case is not an isolated incident of the Agency failing to enforce the law against airlines.

---

[73] "'This is bunk': WestJet apologizes for misleading passengers about why it cancelled flights," CBC News (Nov. 18, 2017).
[74] "'It hurts us': Air Canada, WestJet under fire for their reasons behind Puerto Rico flight cancellations," CBC News (Nov. 26, 2017).
[75] "WestJet once again gives passengers 'erroneous information' about why it cancelled flights," CBC News (Dec. 17, 2017).
[76] Summary of enforcement action, Canadian Transportation Agency's website (emphasis added).

B. Specific areas of lack of enforcement

The Canadian Transportation Agency may designate provisions of the Canada Transportation Act and regulations made under the Act as a provision that may be enforced by way of Administrative Monetary Penalties of up to $25,000.[77] The Schedule to the Canadian Transportation Agency Designated Provisions Regulations lists all such "designated" provisions and the maximum penalty that a designated enforcement officer of the Canadian Transportation Agency may impose for contravention of the provisions.[78]

Unlawfully issuing "formal warnings" instead of Administrative Monetary Penalties

Since 2013, designated enforcement officers of the Canadian Transportation Agency have issued 232 "formal warnings" instead of notices of violation and Administrative Monetary Penalties without any statutory authorization to do so. When the legislature intends to authorize a person to issue warnings, it does so explicitly in the enabling legislation.[79] The Canada Transportation Act does not authorize designated enforcement officers to issue "formal warnings," but only to issue notices of violation with Administrative Monetary Penalties.[80]

Failure to apply the terms and conditions in the tariff (AMP: $10,000/violation)

Subsection 110(4) of the Air Transportation Regulations requires an international licence holder to apply the terms and conditions set out in its tariff. Subsection 110(4) is a "designated provision," the contravention of which carries an Administrative Monetary Penalty of up to $10,000. In a large number of cases, no notice of violation nor Administrative Monetary Penalty was issued, notwithstanding the Canadian Transportation Agency's finding that the airline contravened subsection 110(4).[81]

Making publicly a false or misleading statement about services (AMP: $25,000/violation)

Subsection 18(b) of the Air Transportation Regulations prohibits carriers from making a false or misleading statement about their services. Subsection 18(b) is a "designated provision," the contravention of which carries an Administrative Monetary Penalty of up to $25,000. While airlines were found by the Canadian Transportation Agency to have contravened this provision,[82] nevertheless, there is no record of a notice of violation or an Administrative Monetary Penalty ever being issued for such a violation.

---

[77] Canada Transportation Act, s. 177.
[78] Ibid., s. 180.
[79] See, for example, Agriculture and Agri-Food Administrative Monetary Penalties Act, SC 1995, c. 40.
[80] Canada Transportation Act., s. 180.
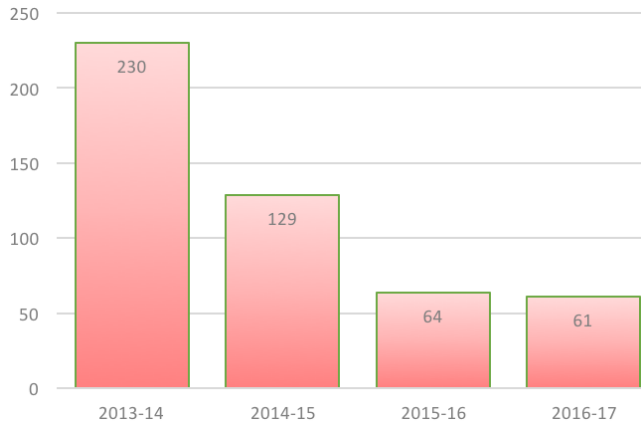
[81] Decision No. 239-C-A-2013 at para. 78; Decision No. 284-C-A-2013 at para. 17; Decision No. 55-C-A-2014 at para. 42; Decision No. 244-C-A-2014 at para. 22; Decision No. 330-C-A-2015 at para. 20; Decision No. 209-C-A-2015 at para. 23; Decision No. 373-C-A-2016 at para. 30; Decision No. 95-C-A-2016 at para. 24; Decision No. 111-C-A-2016 at para. 17; Decision No. 193-C-A-2016 at para. 16; Decision No. 17-C-A-2017 at para. 16; Decision No. 27-C-A-2017 at para. 23; Decision No. 61-C-A-2017 at para. 34; Decision No. 63-C-A-2017 at para. 4; Decision No. 69-C-A-2017 at para. 36; Decision No. 73-C-A-2017 at para. 30; Decision No. 15-C-A-2018 at para. 25; Decision No. 8-C-A-2018 at para. 29; Decision No. 18-C-A-2018 at para. 28; Decision No. 24-C-A-2018 at para. 22; Decision No. 33-C-A-2018 at para. 23; Decision No. 36-C-A-2018 at para. 33; Decision No. 43-C-A-2018 at para. 24; and Decision No. 44-C-A-2018 at para. 34.
[82] See, for example, Decision No. 335-C-A-2012 at para. 12, and Decision No. 105-C-A-2017 at paras. 48-49.

C. The Canadian Transportation Agency's dismal record

Implementation of the existing consumer-protection laws, regulations, and regulatory decisions has been thwarted by lack of enforcement and financial consequences for airlines that breach the rights of passengers. This anomaly is readily visible in the published statistics of the Agency: since 2013, the number of complaints received by the Agency has quadrupled, while enforcement actions have seen a near four-fold decrease:[83]

Complaints Against Airlines



Enforcement Actions by the Agency

Our understanding is that the number of complaints against airlines in 2017-2018 was even higher, exceeding 5,500. APR believes that the substantial decline in the enforcement actions may have contributed to the soaring number of complaints.

[83] Agency's Statistics 2016-17, Canadian Transportation Agency's website (September 3, 2017).

Appendix

A. Final Decisions Arising from Dr. Lukács's Successful Complaints (Highlights)

1. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 208-C-A-2009;
2. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 313-C-A-2010;
3. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 477-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-41);
4. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 483-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-42);
5. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 291-C-A-2011;
6. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 418-C-A-2011;
7. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 182-C-A-2012;
8. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 250-C-A-2012;
9. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 251-C-A-2012;
10. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 248-C-A-2012;
11. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 249-C-A-2012;
12. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 252-C-A-2012;
13. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 467-C-A-2012;
14. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 16-C-A-2013;
15. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 204-C-A-2013;
16. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 227-C-A-2013;
17. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2013;
18. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013;
19. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 327-C-A-2013;
20. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 342-C-A-2013;
21. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013;
22. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 10-C-A-2014;
23. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014;
24. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2014;
25. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 420-C-A-2014; and
26. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 49-C-A-2016.

This is Exhibit "10" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

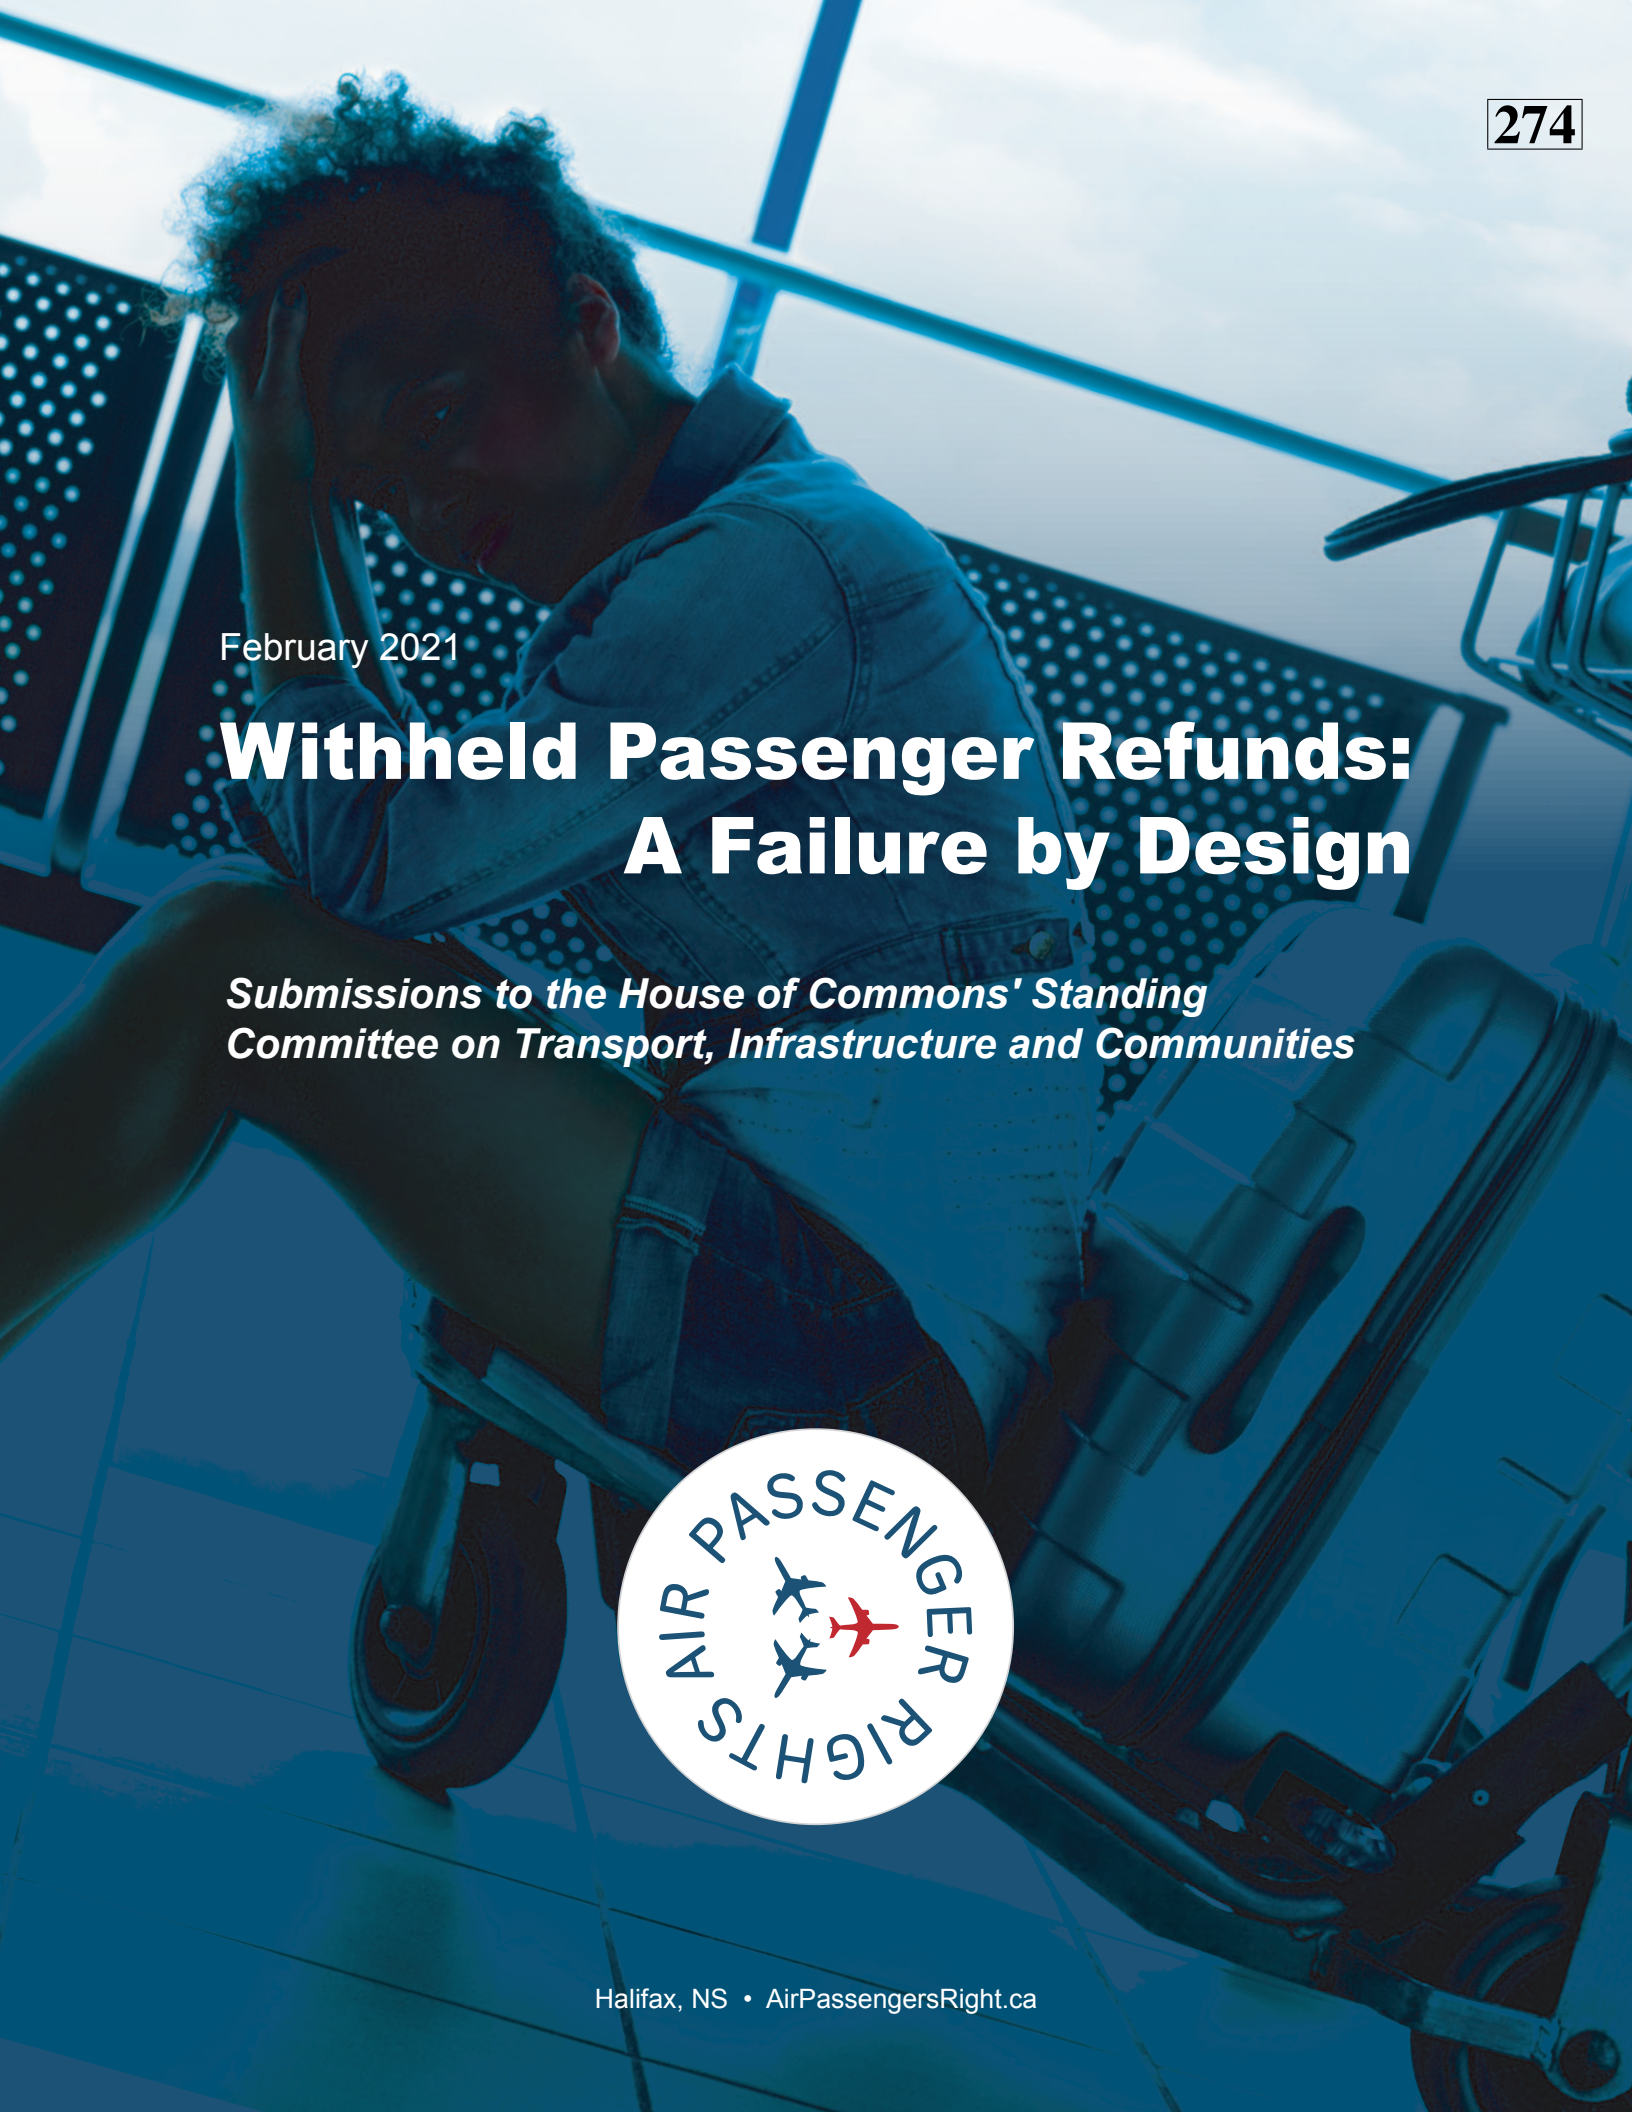
affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature



February 2021

Withheld Passenger Refunds: A Failure by Design

Submissions to the House of Commons' Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

Halifax, NS • AirPassengersRight.ca

Table of Contents

About Air Passenger Rights

Air Passenger Rights [APR] is an independent nonprofit organization of volunteers, devoted to empowering travellers through education, advocacy, investigation, and litigation. APR is in a unique position to comment on behalf of the public interest on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on air travel:

- Experience based. APR's submissions are based on the expertise and experience accumulated through assisting passengers daily in enforcing their rights.
- Independence. APR takes no government or business funding.
- No business interest. APR has no business interest in the aviation sector.

APR's presence on social media includes the Air Passenger Rights (Canada) Facebook group, with over 38,700 members, and the @AirPassRightsCA Twitter feed.

APR was founded and is led by Dr. Gábor Lukács, a Canadian air passenger rights advocate, who volunteers his time and expertise for the benefit of the travelling public.

Gábor Lukács, PhD (President)

Since 2008, Dr. Lukács has filed more than two dozen successful complaints[1] with the Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency], challenging the terms, conditions, and practices of air carriers, resulting in orders directing them to amend their conditions of carriage and offer better protection to passengers.

Dr. Lukács's advocacy in the public interest and his expertise and experience in the area of passenger rights have been recognized by the transportation bar,[2] the academic community,[3] and the judiciary.[4] Dr. Lukács has appeared before courts across Canada, including the Federal Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada,[5] in respect of air passenger rights. He successfully challenged the Agency's lack of transparency and the reasonableness of the Agency's decisions. In 2020, the Federal Court of Appeal allowed Dr. Lukács to intervene in the airlines' challenge to the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, noting that he "would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties cannot."[6]

In 2013, the Consumers' Association of Canada awarded Dr. Lukács its Order of Merit for singlehandedly initiating legal action resulting in the revision of Air Canada's unfair practices regarding overbooking.

---

1 See Appendix A.
2 Carlos Martins: Aviation Practice Area Review (September 2013), WHO'SWHOLEGAL.
3 Air Passenger Rights Advocate Dr. Gabor Lukacs lectures at the IASL, Institute for Air and Space Law, October 2018.
4 Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 140 at para. 1; Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 269 at para. 43; and Lukács v. Canada, 2016 FCA 174 at para. 6.
5 Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2.
6 Order of the Federal Court of Appeal (Near, J.A.), dated March 3, 2020 in File No. A-311-19.

1. Fundamental Right: Refund for Cancelled Flights

It is settled law that passengers whose flights were cancelled by the airline are entitled to a refund of all amounts paid. A "refund" means return of all monies paid in the original form payment. This principle, coined a "fundamental right,"[7] is deeply rooted in the common law and provincial and federal legislation.

The fundamental right to a refund does not apply to passengers whose flight did operate, but who nevertheless chose not to travel ("no show"). A "non-refundable ticket" means that if the passenger is a "no show," the airline may not have to refund their ticket; however, if it is the airline that cancels a flight, then there are no "no show" passengers, and therefore all tickets must be refunded.

General Principles. A key element of consumer contracts is "consideration": goods or services received by the consumer in exchange for the money the consumer had paid. If a supplier does not deliver for any reason, the supplier must refund the consumer all monies the consumer had paid. A refund of monies paid is separate and apart from compensation for damages caused by the supplier's failure to deliver: force majeure is a defence to a claim for compensation, but it is not a defence for a claim for a refund.

A consumer contract that purports to allow a supplier to keep monies received for goods or services that were not delivered is illusory. Provisions purporting to grant such a broad relief from liability reduce the contract to "a mere declaration of intent."[8]

Provincial Legislation. Most Canadian provinces have codified these principles in their respective consumer protection statutes, which guarantee consumers the right to cancel contracts and receive a full refund in the event the supplier does not deliver the goods or services the consumer had paid for. British Columbia, Newfoundland and Labrador, and Quebec have such provisions for distance sales contracts, while Ontario has provisions for future performance contracts.[9] Alberta, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and Saskatchewan have codified these principles for goods and services purchased using the Internet.[10]

These provincial legislation not only reaffirm the norm that suppliers must refund consumers all monies paid for goods or services not delivered, regardless of the reasons for the non-delivery,[11] but also provide passengers with an additional layer of protection. Indeed, while airlines are federally regulated, they are nevertheless subject to provincial laws of general applicability.[12]

---

7 Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013 at para. 15.

8 Suisse Atlantique Societe d'Armament v. NV Rotterdamsche Kolen Centrale, [1967] 1A.C. 361 at 432 (per Lord Wilberforce).

9 Business Practices and Consumer Protection Act, SBC 2004, c. 2, ss. 49(1)(d) and 50; Consumer Protection and Business Practices Act, SNL 2009, c. C-31.1, ss. 32-33; Consumer Protection Act, CQLR c. P-40.1, ss. 54.9-54.13; and Consumer Protection Act, 2002, SO 2002, c 30, Sch A, ss. 26 and 92-96.

10 Internet Sales Contract Regulation, Alta Reg 81/2001, ss. s. 6(2)(b) and 10(1); Consumer Protection Act, CCSM c C200, ss. 130(1) and 133(1)(b); Internet Sales Contract Regulations, NS Reg 91/2002, ss. 6(c)(ii) and 7 and Consumer Protection Act, RSNS 1989, c. 92, s. 21AC(1); and The Consumer Protection Act, SS 1996, c C-30.1, ss. 75.61(2)(b) and 75.72(1).

11 The only exception being when the consumer evades delivery.

12 Bank of Montreal v. Marcotte, 2014 SCC 55 at para. 84.

Federal Legislation. Passengers' fundamental right to a refund had already been established well before the much spoken of Air Passenger Protection Regulations [APPR]. The legislative provisions giving effect to this right are found in the Canada Transportation Act and the Air Transportation Regulations.

Every air carrier operating an air service within, to, and from Canada must establish a "tariff,"[13] setting out clearly the airlines' policies with respect to certain enumerated matters, including:

> refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,[14]

The tariff operates as the contract of carriage between the air carrier and passengers. The terms and conditions set out in the tariff are legally binding on the air carrier.[15] The terms and conditions are subject to the statutory requirement that they must be just and reasonable.[16]

In 2004, some 15 years before the APPR, the Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency] recognized that the aforementioned legislative provisions give rise to a right to a refund for passengers whose flights were cancelled by the airline for any reason.[17] In 2013, the Agency reaffirmed this right, and held that:

> [...] it is unreasonable for [the airline] to refuse to refund the fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond [the airline's] control.[18]

In subsequent decisions, the Agency reaffirmed this right again, and coined it a "fundamental right."[19]

At the time the APPR were drafted, we expressed serious concerns about the APPR's silence on passengers' fundamental right to a refund.[20] Regrettably, the Canadian Transportation Agency failed to follow APR's recommendation to consolidate this right into the APPR, claiming lack of statutory mandate.

The omission of passengers' fundamental right to a refund from the APPR does not negate that right, because the APPR is not a complete statutory code. The provisions of the Canada Transportation Act and the Air Transportation Regulations giving rise to passengers' fundamental right to a refund were not amended or negated by the Transportation Modernization Act nor by the APPR, and remain in full force.

Therefore, passengers' fundamental right to a refund remains the law and part of the parties' contracts.

---

[13] Canada Transportation Act, s. 67(1); Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, s. 110(1).
[14] Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, ss. 107(1)(n)(xii) and 122(c)(xii) (emphasis added).
[15] Canada Transportation Act, s. 67(3); Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, s. 110(4).
[16] Canada Transportation Act, s. 67.2(1); Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, s. 111(1).
[17] Re: Air Transat, Decision No. 28-A-2004.
[18] Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013 at para. 88 (emphasis added).
[19] Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013 at para. 15; and Lukács v. Porter, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014 at paras. 33 and 137.
[20] Deficiencies of the Proposed Air Passenger Protection Regulations, pp. 42-44 (February 2019).

2. Withheld Refunds: Magnitude and Impact

Since March 2020, Canadian air passengers have witnessed an unprecedented assault on their private property and the collapse of consumer protection. Airlines whose revenues were decimated by the pandemic have helped themselves to passengers' money, and pocketed airfares paid in advance without providing any services in return.

Airlines helping themselves to passengers' money to make up for lost income has been a global problem. What sets Canada apart from other western countries is the response of the state authorities. On March 18, 2020, the European Commission issued interpretive guidelines reaffirming passengers' fundamental right to a refund.[21] On April 3, 2020, the US Department of Transportation issued an enforcement notice, reminding airlines that "passengers should be refunded promptly when their scheduled flights are cancelled or significantly delayed."[22] On May 15, 2020, the UK Civil Aviation Authority reminded airlines that "under the law, consumers are entitled to receive a refund for their cancelled flights, despite the challenges the industry is currently facing."[23] In July 2020, the European Commission commenced legal action against 10 of its member states to enforce passengers' fundamental right to a refund.[24]

In sharp contrast, the Government of Canada took no steps to hold airlines accountable criminally or otherwise for their actions, which may well amount to theft.[25] On the contrary, the government has been aiding and abetting the airlines in their efforts to misappropriate passengers' money.

Instead of protecting consumers, the Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency] mounted a disinformation campaign on Twitter and on its own website. On March 25, 2020, the Agency published its "Statement on Vouchers" that told the public, without any basis or authority, that airlines do not have to refund cancelled flights, but may provide an I-owe-you instead.

The Agency has been advancing pseudolegal propositions that conflate a "refund" with "compensation for inconvenience." First, the Agency says that an airline can cancel a flight for "reasons outside the carrier's control" and keep passengers' money so long as the ticket was marked "non-refundable." Second, the Agency blames lawmakers for ostensibly tying its hands and taking away its power to order airlines to refund passengers.

The Agency's contentions are devoid of any merit. The Transportation Modernization Act imposed additional obligations on airlines to pay "compensation for inconvenience" for flight cancellations that are "within the carrier's control," but it did not alter passengers' fundamental right to a refund.

---

[21] Interpretative Guidelines on EU passenger rights regulations in the context of the developing situation with Covid-19.
[22] Enforcement Notice Regarding Refunds by Carriers Given the Unprecedented Impact of the COVID-19 Public Health Emergency on Air Travel, US Department of Transportation (April 3, 2020).
[23] "UK Civil Aviation Authority reviewing airline refunds" (May 15, 2020).
[24] "Coronavirus: EU launches legal action against 10 countries over cancelled flights compensation," Euronews (July 3, 2020).
[25] Criminal Code, RSC 1985, c. C-46, s. 322.

The Agency conceded that the "Statement on Vouchers" was not legally binding and did not alter passengers' rights to a refund only after it was directed to explain itself by the Federal Court of Appeal. Yet, the Agency continues to display an amended version of the "Statement on Vouchers" on its website.

The Agency's conduct has undermined consumers' confidence in the Canadian travel industry and the government to respect private property and protect consumer rights. Not only the airlines but also travel agents, credit card issuers, and even travel insurers used the Agency's statement as an excuse to deprive passengers of refunds for flights the airlines themselves cancelled.

The Minister of Transport or the Cabinet could have put an end to the Agency's and the airlines' running amok by promptly issuing policy directions under s. 43 of the Canada Transportation Act, making an order under s. 47, or issuing a ministerial direction under s. 86.11(2). Instead, Minister Marc Garneau washed his hands, and told the COVI Committee that the Agency "has ruled" on the refunds controversy.[26]

The Agency's callous conduct encouraged airlines to upgrade their cashgrab scheme to a full-fledged "bait-and-switch": Drumming up demand contrary to federal health guidance,[27] selling tickets on flights the airlines do not genuinely intend to operate, and then canceling the flights later without any consequences, while keeping passengers' cash, free and clear. For example, over 80% of the flights scheduled in July-September 2020 were cancelled by the airlines.[28]

While the number of victims of the airlines withholding refunds owed to passengers is within the airlines' exclusive knowledge, APR's conservative estimate is that as of September 30, 2020, 3,870,000 passengers were affected.[29] The refunds controversy has therefore affected a significant portion of consumers.

Canadian airlines have demonstrated economic short-sightedness, and have done a disservice to themselves, to the entire Canadian travel industry, and to the Canadian population by alienating their customers and the public. The harm may well outlive the pandemic.

APR believes that sooner or later the airlines will have to be brought into compliance with the law, including honouring passengers' fundamental right to a refund, and returning the monies the airlines have misappropriated from the travelling public. The longer this process takes, the greater the long-term economic damage for the sector, damage that is entirely caused by loss of consumer confidence and goodwill.

---

[26] "[...] the Canadian Transportation Agency has ruled on this issue and has ruled that, in the present circumstances and in a non-binding way, it is acceptable for airlines to offer credits for up to two years. In the case of Air Canada, the credit has no expiry date." – COVI Committee, Evidence (43rd Parl., 1st Sess., No. 013), p. 14 (emphasis added).

[27] "Air Canada hires influencers to promote vacation travel even as federal guidelines urge people to stay home" (Globe and Mail, January 5, 2021).

[28] Consultation paper on requested temporary adjustments to the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, Annex "A" (APR disputes the accuracy and completeness of the data).

[29] This estimate is based on Air Canada reportedly holding $2.322 billion in advance ticket sales (Air Canada's Third Quarter 2020 Interim Unaudited Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements and Notes, p. 2.), while having an (over)estimated market share of 60%, and an overestimated average round-trip ticket cost of $1,000. If Air Canada's market share is only 50% and the average round trip ticket costs only $800, then the estimate would be 5,805,000 affected passengers.

3. Captured Regulator: Canadian Transportation Agency

Lawmakers entrusted the The Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency] with administering the regulatory scheme created by the Canada Transportation Act, including numerous consumer protection provisions. In respect of air travel, the Agency has two main roles: (i) as a quasi-judicial tribunal, it adjudicates consumer disputes between passengers and carriers; and (ii) as the economic regulator, it regulates entrants into the air travel industry through its statutory powers to issue operating licenses or permits to airlines.[30]

Organizational Structure. The Agency is composed exclusively of its appointed members, appointed by the Governor in Council. Appointed members exercise the powers conferred upon the Agency by its enabling statute.[31] Appointed members of the Agency are assisted by a roster of civil service staff, who are supervised directly or indirectly by the appointed members.[32] Civil service staff are not appointed members, and have no authority act on the Agency's behalf. It is the Agency's appointed members who are ultimately responsible for the Agency's actions and the work performed by the civil service staff.

Code of Conduct for the Agency's Members. As a quasi-judicial body, the Agency's appointed members are held to a high standard of professional and ethical conduct, akin to judicial members of a court. The Agency's Code of Conduct further reinforces the standard statutory and common law rules with specific safeguards of the members' independence, and prohibitions against outside influence and conduct that might create an apprehension of bias:

> (39) Members shall not communicate with political actors or officials of other federal departments and agencies, provincial or foreign governments, or international organizations regarding a matter that is, was, or could be before the Agency.
>
> (40) Members shall not publicly express an opinion about any past, current, or potential cases or any other issue related to the work of the Agency, and shall refrain from comments or discussions in public or otherwise that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias.[33]

The Agency's "Statement on Vouchers" violates the Code of Conduct, because it is a public expression of an opinion on a matter that "could be before the Agency" and also on "potential cases"; indeed, on the face of the "Statement on Vouchers" the Agency contemplates that it would receive consumer complaints about airlines withholding refunds owed to passengers.

The Agency initially claimed that there was no evidence that its appointed members approved, supported, or otherwise endorsed the "Statement on Vouchers;"[34] however, the opposite is the truth. On October 5, 2020, a Transport Canada policy adviser confirmed to MP Nathaniel Erskine-Smith that the "Statement on

---

[30] Lukács v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2014 FCA 76 at paras. 50-52.
[31] Canada Transportation Act, ss. 7(2) and 16.
[32] Canada Transportation Act, s. 19.
[33] Code of Conduct for Members of the Agency, paras. 39 and 40 (emphasis added).
[34] Air Passengers Rights v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2020 FCA 92 at para. 35.

Vouchers" was issued in the name of the Agency, with the approval of the Agency's members.[35] On December 1, 2020, Mr. Scott Streiner, the Agency's Chairperson, testified before this Committee. In response to a question about Mr. Streiner's involvement with the Statement on Vouchers, he replied, "as head of the organization, I am always involved, of course."[36] Mr. Streiner stated that the Statement on Vouchers was also "reviewed by senior members of the organization."[37] Redacted Agency records disclosed on December 23, 2020 under the Access to Information Act [ATIA] strongly support an inference that at least the chairperson and vice-chairperson approved the "Statement on Vouchers" prior to its issuance.

APR is challenging the "Statement on Vouchers" before the Federal Court of Appeal on the grounds that, among other things, it gives rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias. Two justices of that court have already confirmed that this ground presents a serious issue to be tried on its merits.[38]

The Agency's "Statement on Vouchers" also raises concerns and runs afoul of the Code of Conduct in that the Agency was not acting independently, but had input from the airlines and Transport Canada during the drafting process. On March 11, 2020, an individual from WestJet's "Government Relations and Regulatory Affairs" team sent a lengthy email to Ms. Marcia Jones, the Agency's Chief Strategy Officer, with the subject line "by way of example," which was circulated within the Agency as part of the drafting of the Statement on Vouchers.[39] On March 12, 2020, Mr. George Petsikas, Air Transat's Senior Director of Government and Industry Affairs, emailed Ms. Jones with the subject line "APPR Guidelines - COVID-19," thanked her for a verbal discussion "re the above-mentioned matter" earlier that morning, and urged the Agency to issue guidance to assist Air Transat in dealing with passenger refunds and protecting employment levels. On the morning of March 22, 2020, the Agency held an "EC" (Executive Committee) meeting. At 2:22pm on the same day, Transport Canada's manager for national air services policy commenced an email chain with the Agency using the subject line "CTA announcement tomorrow," which continued until March 24, 2020.[40] The "Statement on Vouchers" was issued on March 25, 2020.

APR believes that the Agency's drafting, issuance, and wide dissemination of the misleading "Statement on Vouchers" create the perception and support the conclusion that the Agency has abdicated its consumer protection mandate, given up even the appearance of independence and impartiality, and instead has become beholden to the industry it is supposed to regulate, doing its bidding.

APR recommends that the Committee not only ask the Agency to produce all records in respect of the "Statement on Vouchers," including but not limited to emails, meeting agendas, meeting minutes, notes, draft documents, and memos, but more broadly inquire into its cozy relationship with the airlines.

---

[35] Email exchange between Ms. Blake Oliver and MP Nathaniel Erskine-Smith, dated October 5, 2020.

[36] TRAN Committee, Evidence (43rd Parl., 2nd Sess., No. 008), p. 11.

[37] Ibid.

[38] Air Passengers Rights v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2020 FCA 92 at para. 17; and Air Passengers Rights v. Canada (Transportation Agency), 2020 FCA 155 at para. 33.

[39] In the copy disclosed under the ATIA, the Agency redacted the entire content of that email save for one line.

[40] This heavily redacted email chain was disclosed by the Agency under the ATIA, as part of a response to a request for records relating to the drafting of the Statement on Vouchers.

4. Airline Bankruptcy: Reality Check

The possibility of bankruptcy of Canadian airlines has been regularly floated in the media as an excuse for withholding refunds owed to passengers. It has also been argued that in the event of such bankruptcy, passengers would be left with nothing as unsecured creditors. APR believes these concerns are ill-founded.

The publicly available financial data suggest that Canadian airlines do have cash reserves, and are nowhere near insolvency.[41]

Withholding refunds owed to passengers does not assist airlines to avert insolvency or escape being petitioned into bankruptcy. If an airline is unable to or fails to meet its financial obligations, including its obligations to refund passengers, then the airline is insolvent in the eyes of the law.[42]

In the unlikely event that a Canadian airline would become insolvent, it would most likely apply for and be granted creditor protection under the CCAA[43] to allow it to restructure, while maximizing returns for creditors and preserving both jobs and the airline's value as a functioning business. Unlike the current chaotic situation, a CCAA proceeding is carried out under the supervision of a superior court justice, who ensures that all creditors, including passengers, are treated fairly. In many cases, this would be an improvement over the status quo.

It might be easier for passengers to get their refunds in the event of the creditor protection or a bankruptcy. In many cases, monies paid in advance for services to be performed in the future must be held in trust, and the supplier (airline) is deemed to be the trustee.[44] A creditor protection or a bankruptcy could ensure that the funds held in trust are promptly returned to their rightful owners (passengers). Furthermore, if the airline helped itself to the trust funds or if it obtained funds by false pretenses,[45] then debts and liabilities arising from these acts would survive the creditor protection or a bankruptcy.[46]

While APR hopes that no airline will have to be put through a CCAA proceeding or be petitioned into bankruptcy to enforce compliance with its obligations to passengers, such court-supervised proceedings would likely bring much-needed transparency into the airlines' finances and a rapid closure to the refunds controversy.

---

41 Air Canada's Third Quarter 2020 Interim Unaudited Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements and Notes, p. 2.
42 Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, RSC 1985, c B-3, s. 2.
43 Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act, RSC 1985, c. C-36.
44 Consumer Protection Act, CQLR c P-40.1, s. 256.
45 Such as misrepresenting its intent to operate flights that were never meant to take off.
46 Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act, RSC 1985, c. C-36, ss. 19(2)(c) and 19(2)(d); and Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, RSC 1985, c. B-3, ss. 178(1)(d) and 178(1)(e).

5. Path to Recovery: Restoring Consumer Confidence

Consumer confidence and goodwill is the lifeblood for every airline and the travel industry as a whole, which depends on consumers paying in advance for services to be rendered at a later date. Consumers will pay for services in advance only if they have confidence that they will receive the services they had paid for, or, if the services are not provided, a full refund of their hard-earned money. In the absence of such assurances, consumers will vote with their wallets: travel less, or whenever possible, take their business to airlines based in jurisdictions that do offer such guarantees, such as the US or the EU.

In the past eleven months, Canadian airlines and their travel industry partners have squandered their most precious assets: consumer confidence and goodwill. The Government of Canada's actions and omissions, and in particular those of the Canadian Transportation Agency, have compounded the loss by eroding consumers' confidence in the government's willingness to protect private property and consumer rights.

APR is of the view that this loss of confidence will slow the entire sector's recovery. To mitigate the long-term economic harm, it is therefore imperative to enact measures that guarantee that money the public pays in advance to airlines would never be misappropriated again. In addition, the serious shortcomings of enforcement of passengers' rights and the regulatory capture of the Canadian Transportation Agency by the industry it is supposed to regulate must also be remedied.

APR therefore recommends the following measures:

1. Passing a declaratory legislation, such as Bill C-249, to reaffirm passengers' right to a refund, in the original form of payment, for cancelled flights—regardless of the reason for the cancellation.

   Legislation by Parliament is necessary to protect this fundamental right, because otherwise the Canadian Transportation Agency or Cabinet could attempt to negate these rights at their whim by issuing regulatory exemptions, as we have recently seen with respect to certain provisions of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations.[47]

2. Passing a legislation similar to s. 256 of the Quebec Consumer Protection Act, requiring all airlines to hold all advance ticket sales in a trust account.

3. Studying the regulatory capture of the Canadian Transportation Agency by the airline industry.

   The Canadian Transportation Agency's conduct during the pandemic, and the issuance of the controversial "Statement on Vouchers" in particular, confirm that the Agency has lost its independence, and its consumer protection activities have been compromised. This must be remedied.

   Strict and consistent enforcement of passenger rights, while unpopular with airlines in the short-term, is vital for the Canadian travel industry's long-term prosperity.

[47] See Determination No. A-2020-42 and Determination No. A-2020-47.

Appendix

A. Final Decisions Arising from Dr. Lukács's Successful Complaints (Highlights)

1. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 208-C-A-2009;
2. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 313-C-A-2010;
3. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 477-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-41);
4. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 483-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-42);
5. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 291-C-A-2011;
6. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 418-C-A-2011;
7. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 182-C-A-2012;
8. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 250-C-A-2012;
9. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 251-C-A-2012;
10. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 248-C-A-2012;
11. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 249-C-A-2012;
12. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 252-C-A-2012;
13. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 467-C-A-2012;
14. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 16-C-A-2013;
15. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 204-C-A-2013;
16. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 227-C-A-2013;
17. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2013;
18. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013;
19. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 327-C-A-2013;
20. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 342-C-A-2013;
21. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013;
22. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 10-C-A-2014;
23. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014;
24. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2014;
25. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 420-C-A-2014; and
26. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 49-C-A-2016.

This is Exhibit "11" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

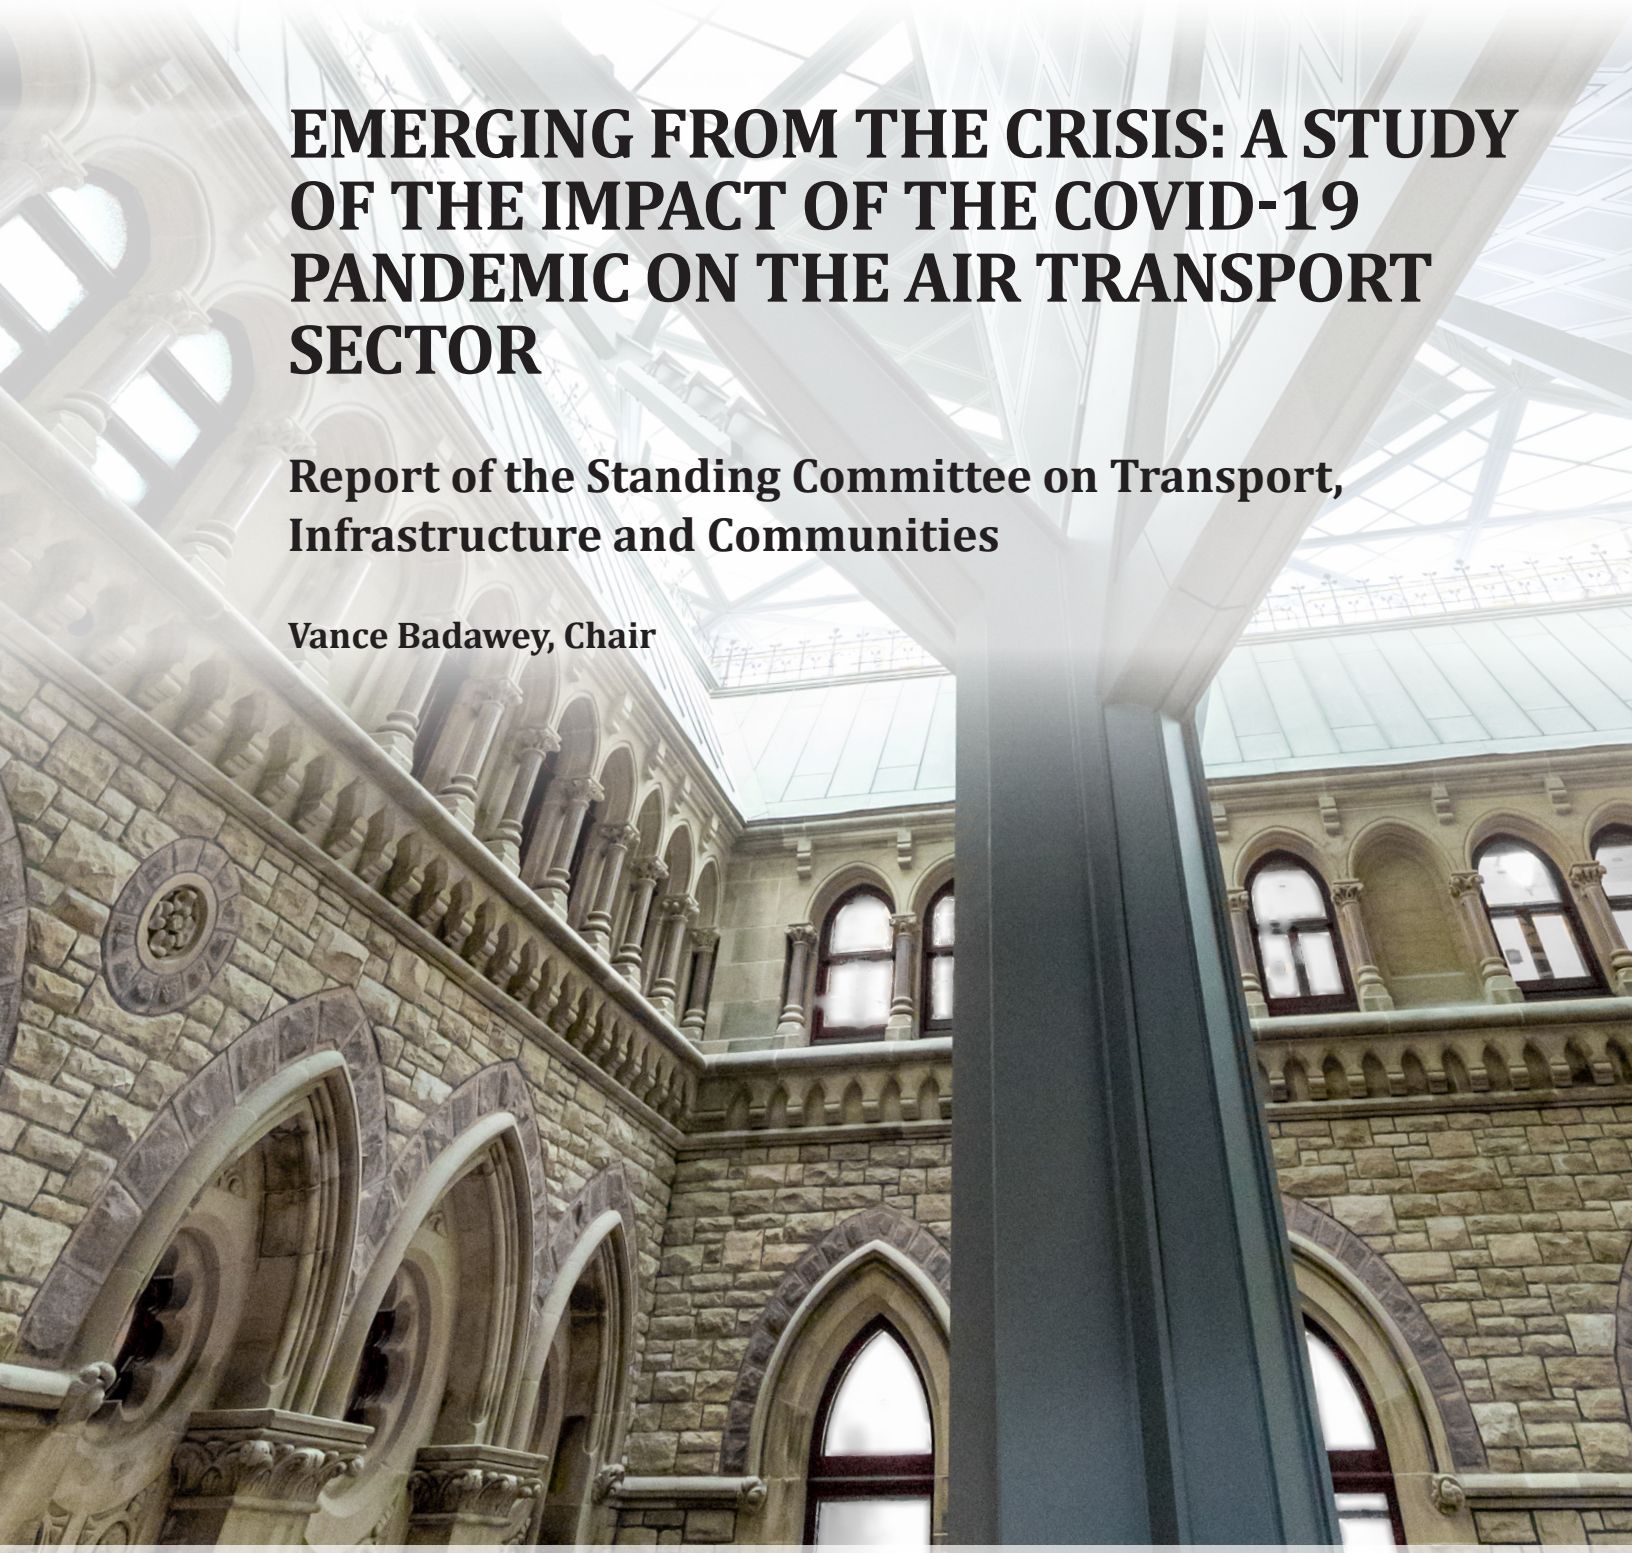
affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

HOUSE OF COMMONS
CHAMBRE DES COMMUNES
CANADA

287



EMERGING FROM THE CRISIS: A STUDY OF THE IMPACT OF THE COVID-19 PANDEMIC ON THE AIR TRANSPORT SECTOR

Report of the Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

Vance Badawey, Chair

JUNE 2021
43rd PARLIAMENT, 2nd SESSION

EMERGING FROM THE CRISIS: A STUDY OF THE IMPACT OF THE COVID-19 PANDEMIC ON THE AIR TRANSPORT SECTOR

Report of the Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

Vance Badawey
Chair

JUNE 2021

43rd PARLIAMENT, 2nd SESSION

NOTICE TO READER

Reports from committee presented to the House of Commons

Presenting a report to the House is the way a committee makes public its findings and recommendations on a particular topic. Substantive reports on a subject-matter study usually contain a synopsis of the testimony heard, the recommendations made by the committee, as well as the reasons for those recommendations.

STANDING COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORT, INFRASTRUCTURE AND COMMUNITIES

CHAIR

Vance Badawey

VICE-CHAIRS

Stephanie Kusie
Xavier Barsalou-Duval

MEMBERS

Taylor Bachrach
Fayçal El-Khoury
Angelo Iacono
Helena Jaczek
Michael Kram
Soraya Martinez Ferrada
Churence Rogers
Doug Shipley
Gerald Soroka

OTHER MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT WHO PARTICIPATED

Chris Bittle
Richard Cannings
Ron Liepert
Brian Masse
Elizabeth May
Maninder Sidhu
Mark Strahl

CLERK OF THE COMMITTEE

Michael MacPherson

LIBRARY OF PARLIAMENT

Parliamentary Information, Education and Research Services

Geneviève Gosselin, Analyst

Alexandre Lafrenière, Analyst

THE STANDING COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORT, INFRASTRUCTURE AND COMMUNITIES has the honour to present its

THIRD REPORT

Pursuant to its mandate under Standing Order 108(2), the committee has studied the impact of COVID-19 on the aviation sector and has agreed to report the following:

TABLE OF CONTENTS

SUMMARY

Canada is a vast country with diverse communities scattered from coast to coast. An efficient and affordable air transportation system is essential to connect these communities to each other, to major cities and to the rest of the world. Furthermore, some Canadian communities rely on air travel for work, medical appointments and supply.

Since international travel restrictions were implemented in March 2020, Canadian airlines have cancelled most of their international flights and significantly curtailed their scheduled domestic flights. The decrease in air traffic also had a significant impact on the revenues of air carriers, airports, airport service providers and aerospace companies. This unprecedented crisis led to many temporary and permanent layoffs in the aviation sector and left some regions of the country more isolated.

It is in this context that the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities undertook its study on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the Canadian air transport sector. The witnesses who appeared before the Committee proposed various solutions to ensure the survival and recovery of the sector while prioritizing the health and safety of workers, passengers and the Canadian public.

While most witnesses said that the financial assistance provided to date by the Government of Canada was a good first step, they also agreed that it was not enough, given the scale of the crisis Canada’s air transport sector is experiencing. Many of them called for more financial assistance, commensurate with pandemic losses, to ensure the future competitiveness of the industry internationally.

Some witnesses pointed out that the Government of Canada's support measures must be fair to all stakeholders in the sector, large and small. They mentioned that financial assistance was needed to keep certain regional routes operating, but that it should not go only to the large air carriers.

On the topic of promoting recovery in the sector, many witnesses said it was vital to rebuild passenger confidence to ensure that passengers continue to view air travel as a safe and secure mode of transportation. Witnesses also pointed out that travellers should be given a refund for flights cancelled due to the pandemic to help restore their trust.

Lastly, given that the aviation industry cannot operate without its workers, and given that these workers have skills and expertise that are highly sought after by other sectors within Canada and around the world, the assistance measures implemented by the government should ensure maximum employee retention.

LIST OF RECOMMENDATIONS

As a result of their deliberations committees may make recommendations which they include in their reports for the consideration of the House of Commons or the Government. Recommendations related to this study are listed below.

Recommendation 1 — Encourage Competition

That the Government of Canada focus on measures to encourage competition in the air sector.

Recommendation 2 — Health and Safety of Workers

That the Government of Canada take meaningful steps to improve the safety of the working environments for airline workers, including recognizing the right to refuse unsafe work.

Recommendation 3 —Definition of "Crew" in Regulations

That the Government of Canada act to clarify definitions of "crew" in regulations to support the movement of airline workers and pilots through travel restrictions.

Recommendation 4 —Workforce Issues at NAV CANADA

That the Government of Canada act to address chronic understaffing and lack of trainees at multiple NAV CANADA locations through its representation within NAV CANADA governance and the Minister of Transportation's safety mandate.

Recommendation 5 – Flight Controller Fatigue

That the Government of Canada consider modernizing fatigue regulations for flight controllers as it did recently for pilots.

Recommendation 6 —Recovery Strategy (protect jobs)

That the Government of Canada work with industry and labour groups to devise a recovery plan for the aviation sector that includes measures to protect jobs in the wider aerospace sector.

Recommendation 7 — NAV CANADA's Service Level Reviews (safety and economic concerns)

That the Government of Canada recognize the safety and economic concerns raised by witnesses concerning the proposed service reductions to NAV CANADA Air Traffic Control Towers and Area Control Centres, and further, that the government never compromise on safety in the aerospace sector, including ensuring that safety is not compromised as part of any service level adjustments by NAV CANADA.

Recommendation 8 — NAV CANADA's Service Level Reviews (the role of the Minister of Transport)

That the Government of Canada undertake to provide new powers to the Minister of Transport that would allow them to shield NAV CANADA towers from a service review.

Recommendation 9 — Recovery Strategy

That the government of Canada work with public health, the industry and labour groups to establish an aviation re-start strategy, to be in place as soon as possible, that reflects science-based and data-based decision making with respect to testing and quarantine measures, and which will enable a phased re-opening of international air travel and provide a clear path forward for the re-opening of domestic travel.

Recommendation 10 — Duration of Quarantine

That the Government of Canada, in consultation with public health and the airline industry, review the relationship between screening and quarantine of passengers to determine if it would be feasible to reduce the length of quarantine to 10 or 7 days instead of 14 days.

Recommendation 11 — Rapid Tests

That the Government of Canada, in collaboration with public health, airport authorities and air sector workers, consider further integration of rapid testing of passengers at airports before boarding.

Recommendation 12 — Strengthen Quarantine Requirements

That the Government of Canada improve the standards for hotel quarantine and ensure robust quarantine requirements for all arriving international air passengers.

Recommendation 13 — Pilot Projects

That the Government of Canada, with direction from public health officials, apply learnings from rapid testing pilot projects to all Canadian airports.

Recommendation 14 — Conditions for Financial Support

That the Government of Canada extend support to the air sector as soon as possible but on condition that (a) airlines reimburse customers who were unable to complete their itineraries due to pandemic; (b) regional routes are restored in order to reconnect communities who lost air service during the pandemic; (c) contracts are honoured with Canadian aerospace companies; (d) independent travel agents are not penalized by losing their commissions when airline passengers are reimbursed; (e) any financial support received is not used for any enhanced executive compensation; stock buy-backs; or dividends for shareholders; (f) financial relief is directly tied to protecting jobs and re-hiring workers and (g) the maintenance of Canadian airlines' aircraft takes place in Canada.

Recommendation 15 — Equity Stake in Canadian Airlines

That the Government of Canada consider acquiring an equity stake in any Canadian airlines that receive public money to better mandate activities in the public interest.

Recommendation 16 — Protect Jobs

That any financial relief provided by the Government of Canada to the aviation sector, as part of its restart strategy, be directly tied to protecting jobs and re-hiring workers.

Recommendation 17 — Involvement of Unions

That the Minister of Transport work closely with union representatives in devising and negotiating sectoral support for the aviation industry.

Recommendation 18 — Extension of the Wage Subsidy

That the government of Canada extend the wage subsidy to the air sector beyond June to reflect the reality that it will take some time for the sector to recover even after mass vaccination.

Recommendation 19 — Rent Relief

That the Government of Canada consider extending rent relief for large and medium-sized airports beyond 2020-21, until the airline industry has recovered from the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Recommendation 20 — Review of the Legislative Framework

That the Government of Canada amend air passenger protection legislation and regulations to make explicit passengers' pre-existing right to receive reimbursement in circumstances where the airlines are unable to complete the client's itinerary in a reasonable period of time, even in cases beyond the control of the airlines (such as a major public health emergency).

Recommendation 21 — Prevent Regulatory Capture at the Canadian Transportation Agency

That the Canadian Transportation Agency be required to explain what measures it takes to prevent regulatory capture.

Recommendation 22 — Recognition of Passengers' Rights to a Refund

That the Government of Canada recognize that a fundamental right to a refund for passengers of cancelled flights exists beyond the protections found in the Air Passenger Protection Regulations.

Recommendation 23 — Full Refunds

That the Government of Canada immediately require that all Canadian airlines fully refund passengers for flights they were unable to take due to the pandemic.

Recommendation 24 — Bill C-249

That the Committee recommend to the House of Commons that Bill C-249 be considered as soon as possible with a view to its speedy passage to ensure the protection of passengers' rights to a refund.

Recommendation 25 — Support for Regional Routes

That the Government of Canada ensure that remote and northern regions have access to reliable, efficient and affordable air service, and that financial and structural support for air carriers is equitable and allows smaller players to compete with larger ones.

Recommendation 26 — Equity in Financial Support

That any financial relief provided by the Government of Canada to the aviation sector be proportional and fair amongst all airline carriers to provide help to small and regional carriers.

Recommendation 27 — Financial Support to Small and Regional Airports

That the Government of Canada explore means to provide financial support to small and regional airports who have seen revenue reductions due to flight suspensions.

Recommendation 28 — Development of a National Aerospace Strategy

That the Government of Canada work in partnership with the aerospace industry to develop a national aerospace strategy that addresses the civil, military and space sectors, with a specific focus on retaining and developing skilled workers and assisting in the transition to new technologies, including sustainable, low carbon technologies.

Recommendation 29 — Emergency Funding for NAV CANADA

That the Government of Canada consider providing emergency funding to NAV CANADA to allow it to continue operations through the pandemic until flights return to previous levels.

Recommendation 30 — Alternative Methods of Funding for NAV CANADA

That the Government of Canada explore alternative methods of funding NAV CANADA operations that provide greater stability in the event of declines in passenger traffic, preserve access for essential flights, and provide greater accountability of decision making, including by restricting the circumstances under which NAV CANADA may reduce staff levels or worker compensation.

Recommendation 31 — Reflect on Lessons Learned

That Transport Canada draft a "lessons learned" report with recommendations on how to respond in the event of future emergency situations like the COVID-19 crisis which lead to extended restrictions on travel.

EMERGING FROM THE CRISIS: A STUDY OF THE IMPACT OF THE COVID-19 PANDEMIC ON THE AIR TRANSPORT SECTOR

INTRODUCTION

Following the worldwide implementation of travel restrictions in March 2020, commercial airlines have experienced significant decreases in passenger traffic and revenue. The International Air Transport Association (IATA) estimates that air traffic fell by 66% in 2020 compared with 2019, "by far the sharpest traffic decline in aviation history."[1]

Since 13 March 2020, the Government of Canada has advised travellers to avoid all non-essential travel outside of Canada to limit the introduction and spread of COVID-19 within the country.[2] Canadian airlines have cancelled most of their international flights and significantly curtailed their scheduled domestic flights; some companies suspended their operations either temporarily or indefinitely.

This substantial reduction in aviation activity brought with it major upheavals in employment in the sector. Airlines resorted to temporary or permanent layoffs, or reductions in salary or hours. The decrease in air traffic also significantly affected airport revenues and airport service providers, such as NAV CANADA. Anticipating a drop in demand for their products, many aerospace companies also reduced their workforces.

In this context, the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities (the Committee) adopted the following motion on 29 October 2020:

> That, pursuant to Standing Order 108(2), the committee undertake a broad study on the impact of COVID-19 on the aviation sector; and that no fewer than eight meetings be set aside for this study, and that the impact of the Air Transat sale on the sector be the first item considered as part of the study.

1 International Air Transport Association [IATA], 2020 Worst Year in History for Air Travel Demand, News release, 3 February 2021.

2 Global Affairs Canada, Government of Canada advises Canadians to avoid non-essential travel abroad, 13 March 2020.

As part of this study, the Committee held 12 meetings, heard 60 witnesses and received 8 briefs. The study was already underway when, on 8 November 2020, the Minister of Transport announced plans to roll out a package of assistance to Canadian airlines, airports and the aerospace sector.[3] This assistance would be subject to strict conditions, including reimbursing airfares for cancelled flights and maintaining regional connectivity.

AN UNPRECEDENTED CRISIS

> "Last year [2020] was a catastrophe. There is no other way to describe it. What recovery there was over the Northern hemisphere summer season stalled in autumn and the situation turned dramatically worse over the year-end holiday season, as more severe travel restrictions were imposed in the face of new outbreaks and new strains of COVID-19."
>
> Alexandre de Juniac
> Director General and CEO, International Air Transport Association

Travel Restrictions

On 25 March 2020, the federal Minister of Health announced a 14-day mandatory self-isolation order for people entering Canada, whether or not they are showing symptoms of COVID-19.[4] Since 7 January 2021, air travellers entering Canada must also provide proof of a negative laboratory test result for COVID-19 to their airline.[5]

In addition to these measures, all flights from Canadian air carriers flying to and from Mexico and the Caribbean were suspended as of 31 January 2021.[6] The Government of Canada also suspended all commercial and private passenger flights from Pakistan and

3 Transport Canada, Statement by Minister Garneau on measures to protect Canadians from the impacts of COVID-19 on the air travel sector, Statement, 8 November 2020.

4 Minimizing the Risk of Exposure to COVID-19 in Canada Order (Mandatory Isolation), 2020-0175.

5 Transport Canada, New pre-departure COVID-19 testing requirements come into effect for all air travellers flying into Canada, News release, 6 January 2021.

6 At the time it was announced, on 29 January 2021, this measure was scheduled to remain in effect until 30 April 2021. Government of Canada, Government of Canada introduces further restrictions on international travel, News release, 29 January 2021.

India as of 22 April 2021.[7] As a further precaution, all international flights to Canada since 3 February 2021 can land only at the Toronto, Montreal, Calgary and Vancouver international airports.[8] Lastly, since 22 February 2021, air travellers arriving in Canada must take a COVID-19 test upon arrival, in addition to the pre-arrival testing requirement. Travellers must also reserve a room in a Government of Canada-approved hotel for three nights while awaiting their test results. The test and the hotel stay are at their own cost. If the result is negative, travellers can finish their quarantine period at home. If the result is positive, they are directed to a public health centre designated by the federal government.

Since March 2020, some provinces and territories have also implemented their own travel restrictions. For example, the Atlantic provinces agreed to establish an Atlantic travel "bubble" between 3 July and 23 November 2020: residents could move freely between the four provinces and people entering the bubble from another region were subject to screening.[9] Every person entering the bubble was required to quarantine for 14 days, with no exceptions. The restrictions within these provinces have changed since then, but interprovincial travellers are still subject to entry restrictions.

Protecting Air Passengers and Workers

As of 20 April 2020, Transport Canada has required passengers on flights departing or arriving at Canadian airports to demonstrate they have a non-medical mask or face covering during the boarding process.[10] Travellers over the age of two are required to cover their faces when they are unable to keep two metres of separation between them. On 3 June 2020, the Minister of Transport unveiled new regulations requiring employees in the aviation sector, including airline agents and airport screening officers, to wear a non-medical face mask or covering in the restricted areas of an airport.[11]

---

7 At the time it was announced, on 22 April 2021, this measure was scheduled to remain in effect for 30 days. Transport Canada, Government of Canada suspends flights from India and Pakistan, News release, 22 April 2021.

8 The airports in question are the Toronto Pearson International Airport, the Montreal Pierre-Elliott-Trudeau International Airport, the Calgary International Airport and the Vancouver International Airport.

9 Prince Edward Island, PEI to participate in Atlantic travel bubble starting July 3, News release, 24 June 2020.

10 Transport Canada, New measures introduced for non-medical masks or face coverings in the Canadian transportation system, News release, 17 April 2020.

11 Transport Canada, Backgrounder: New measures introduced for the use of face coverings in the Canadian transportation sector.

On 14 August 2020, the federal government announced Canada's Flight Plan for Navigating COVID-19, the foundation for Canada's current and future efforts to reduce the public health risks of COVID-19 while travelling by air.[12] This plan outlined a series of safety measures, including the following:

- temperature screening at the busiest Canadian airports and at points of origin for all incoming flights to Canada;
- restricted services and passenger movement during flights; and
- enhanced cleaning and sanitation protocols and practices.[13]

Various stakeholders in the Canadian airline sector introduced their own health and sanitation initiatives. For example, when Air Canada and WestJet representatives appeared before the Committee, they mentioned that they had developed policies and programs that sometimes exceeded the minimum federal requirements in order to protect the health and safety of passengers and crew.[14] However, Wesley Lesosky, President of the Air Canada Component of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, believes the Government of Canada should "better protect the rights of airline workers to a healthy and safe work environment, including the right to refuse unsafe work." He made the following point about the early months of the pandemic:

> Our members went through hell in the early months of the pandemic, and we had a regulator that refused to act when we tried to push for protections to make our jobs safer.

12 Transport Canada, Canada's Flight Plan for Navigating COVID-19.

13 Transport Canada, Government of Canada releases Canada's Flight Plan for safe air travel, News release, 14 August 2020.

14 Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities [TRAN], Evidence, 2nd Session, 43rd Parliament: David Rheault (Managing Director, Government Affairs and Community Relations, Air Canada); and Andy Gibbons (Director, Government Relations and Regulatory Affairs, WestJet Airlines Ltd. [WestJet]).

A Sector That Connects Canadians to Each Other and the Wider World

> "If you turn off the tap on aviation, you don't want to unintentionally turn off the supply chain of vital goods to Canadians, including mail, personal protective equipment, pharmaceuticals and other goods."
>
> Rob Giguère
> Chief Executive Officer, Air Canada Pilots Association

Canada is a vast country with a scattered population stretching from coast to coast. It needs an efficient air transport network connected to major cities, not only to enable Canadians to travel within the country, but also to ensure that Canadians can travel abroad and international travellers can visit Canada. Many remote and Northern communities rely on air transport to get workers to job sites, as is the case in the mining industry, or to ship essential goods, such as food and medicine.[15] At certain times of the year, air transport can be the only viable way to supply some regions of the country.[16]

According to IATA, the air transport sector supports 633,000 direct and indirect jobs in Canada.[17] It estimates that 3.2% of the country's GDP (approximately US$49 billion) is generated by the air transport sector if spending by foreign tourists is included.

Domestically, Air Canada and its subsidiaries account for 54% of available seat kilometres (ASKs), while WestJet accounts for 32% of ASKs.[18] Air Transat and Sunwing Airlines are the two biggest leisure carriers in Canada, offering flights primarily to sun destinations. The busiest airports in terms of passenger volumes are the Toronto (Pearson), Vancouver, Montreal (Trudeau) and Calgary airports.

When he appeared before the Committee, Mike Mueller, Senior Vice-President at the Aerospace Industries Association of Canada, emphasized that Canada is a world leader

---

15 TRAN, Evidence: Julian Roberts (President and Chief Executive Officer, Pascan Inc. [Pascan]).

16 TRAN, Evidence: Lawrence Hanson (Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy, Department of Transport [Transport Canada]).

17 IATA, The Importance of Air Transport to Canada, IATA Economics.

18 Transport Canada. Transportation in Canada 2019: Statistical Addendum, 2020. Note that the 2019 Statistical Addendum is available only on request.

in the aerospace industry. Most aerospace manufacturing jobs are located in Quebec (51%) and Ontario (30%), while most aerospace maintenance, repair and overhaul jobs (commonly referred to as MRO services) are in the Western provinces (41%).[19]

Reduced Air Traffic and Its Effects

> "Operations are at levels 80% to 90% lower than one year ago. Some operators have suspended operations altogether. Tens of thousands of jobs have been lost. There's hardly enough revenue to meet our short-term obligations."
>
> John McKenna
> President and Chief Executive Officer, Air Transport Association of Canada

Following the border closures in March 2020, Level I air carriers[20] saw a 97% drop in the number of passengers carried in the month of April 2020 compared with April 2019.[21] Demand for air travel increased slightly during the summer, although it was still well below 2019 levels, and then stalled in the fall.

19 Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada and the Aerospace Industries Association of Canada [AIAC], State of Canada's Aerospace Industry 2019 Report.

20 Level I air carriers transport at least 2 million revenue passengers or at least 400,000 tonnes of cargo per year.

21 Statistics Canada, Monthly civil aviation statistics, December 2020, 25 February 2021.

Figure 1—Indexes of Passengers Carried and Air Carrier Movements, Domestic and International, January to December 2020

Source: Statistics Canada, Monthly civil aviation statistics, December 2020, 25 February 2021.

Some witnesses reported that passenger volumes had decreased by roughly 90% since the beginning of the pandemic.[22] As an example, Hillary Marshall, Vice-President of Stakeholder Relations and Communications at the Greater Toronto Airports Authority (GTAA), explained that passenger traffic at Toronto Pearson was down 88% in the third quarter of 2020 compared with the third quarter of 2019. Revenues dropped 63% as a result, which led the GTAA to reduce its workforce by 27% in July 2020. It also dramatically decreased its operating and capital expenditures.

22 TRAN, Evidence: Brian Grant (Chair, Regional Community Airports of Canada [RCAC]); Daniel-Robert Gooch (President, Canadian Airports Council [CAC]); John McKenna (President and Chief Executive Officer, Air Transport Association of Canada [ATAC]); Hillary Marshall (Vice-President, Stakeholder Relations and Communications, Greater Toronto Airports Authority [GTAA]); Hanson (Transport Canada); and Chorus Aviation inc., Brief.

Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister of Policy at the Department of Transport, pointed out that the Canadian air transport sector has traditionally operated under a user-pay system. Therefore, in the current context, airports and airlines must continue to pay significant fixed costs while they have had little or no off-setting revenue since March 2020. Gerry Bruno, Executive Advisor to the President and Chief Executive Officer at the Vancouver Airport Authority, said that the Vancouver Airport Authority has reduced expenses as much as possible, but it still had to secure a $600-million loan to ensure it could continue operating for the next two years. He said the airport was operating "on borrowed money."

With the arrival of COVID-19 variants in Canada and the introduction of new quarantine and testing measures for travellers entering the country in early 2021, it is difficult to predict when the aviation sector will return to 2019 air traffic levels. The IATA estimated that demand in 2021 would be 43% of 2019 demand.[23] Some witnesses mentioned that it may take three to five years for air traffic to return to 2019 volumes.[24] Andy Gibbons, Director of Government Relations and Regulatory Affairs at WestJet Airlines Ltd., said that WestJet would need six and a half years to achieve its 2019 bookings, but he reminded the Committee that it is difficult to predict the future in the current context.

Uncertainty About the Fate of Workers

> "Around three-quarters of our members are currently laid off, and wondering if there will even be an industry to return to once the pandemic dust settles. Needless to say, it has been a difficult year for us."
>
> Wesley Lesosky
> President, Air Canada Component of the Canadian Union of Public Employees

23 IATA regularly updates its predictions for 2021 based on the progression of the public health crisis. The analysis mentioned above was released on 21 April 2021. IATA, Reduced Losses but Continued Pain in 2021, News release, 21 April 2021.

24 TRAN, Evidence: Rheault (Air Canada); Gooch (CAC); Ray Bohn (President and Chief Executive Officer, NAV CANADA); and Derek Ferguson (Representative, Grand Lodge, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in Canada [IAMAW Canada]).

Because of the sharp decline in air traffic and the need to cut spending, aviation sector employers – including airport authorities, airlines and aerospace companies – have laid off employees either temporarily or permanently and reduced wages. Air Canada said it had laid off over 20,000 employees since the beginning of the pandemic, while WestJet informed the Committee that it had 5,600 active employees remaining, with 1,000 on leave and another 4,000 that had left permanently since the beginning of the pandemic.[25] Christopher Rauenbusch, President of the Canadian Union of Public Employees – Local 4070 and a WestJet flight attendant for 19 years, told the Committee he had narrowly avoided being laid off. He said that, as of 26 January 2021, no WestJet flight attendants with fewer than 17 years of service were actively flying.

Some witnesses expressed concerns about the fact that pilots have been on leave for several months; some thought that it could get harder to recruit new pilots if jobs are no longer guaranteed.[26] This would exacerbate the severe pilot shortage the industry was experiencing before the COVID-19 pandemic.[27] Witnesses were also worried about how furloughed or inactive pilots would maintain their skills. Similar concerns were raised about air traffic controllers and electronics technologists.

NAV CANADA, the private not-for-profit provider of civil air navigation services in Canada, has cut more than 720 positions, representing 14% of its workforce, since the pandemic began.[28] According to Doug Best, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, air traffic controllers were short-staffed by 13% before the pandemic hit, and NAV CANADA was paying over $100 million in overtime. Debi Daviau, President of the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada (PIPSC), added that, even though air traffic has decreased significantly, the workload has not changed for active employees, who “have to work that much harder” to make up for the staff shortage. In addition to cutting positions, NAV CANADA also terminated most of its trainees. This move could have long-term consequences, given that it takes two to three years of training to become an air traffic controller.[29]

---

25 TRAN, Evidence: Rheault (Air Canada); and Gibbons (WestJet).

26 TRAN, Evidence: Rob Giguere (Chief Executive Officer, Air Canada Pilots Association [ACPA]); Captain Tim Perry (President, Air Line Pilots Association Canada, Air Line Pilots Association International); and Jerry Dias (National President, Unifor).

27 TRAN, Supporting Canada’s Flight Schools, 29th Report, April 2019.

28 Bohn (NAV CANADA).

29 TRAN, Evidence: Doug Best (President and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Air Traffic Control Association [CATCA]); and Association des pilotes et des propriétaires de hangar de Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, Brief.

Similarly, Matt Wayland, Executive Assistant to the International Vice-President and Canadian Director of Government Relations at the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, informed the Committee that electronics technologists who were laid off by NAV CANADA could be recruited to work in other sectors in Canada and around the globe since their skills and expertise are in high demand. Similar concerns were raised by representatives of the aerospace industry, who pointed out that one of the industry's top competitive advantages is its highly skilled workforce.[30]

NAV CANADA and Level of Service Reviews

> "An important reality for all members of Parliament … to consider is that air traffic control in Canada has only one provider, NAV CANADA. Responsibility over air traffic control is not done by any other entity in Canada. NAV CANADA has no counterparts, no competitors."
>
> Debi Daviau
> President, Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada

In addition to providing air traffic control and flight information services from coast to coast, NAV CANADA provides communications, navigation and surveillance infrastructure, as well as 24/7 advanced air traffic management systems.[31] NAV CANADA is subject to the Civil Air Navigation Services Commercialization Act and covers its operating costs with service charges paid by its customers: airlines and aircraft operators. Given that air traffic in Canada has plummeted by roughly 90% since March 2020, NAV CANADA's revenues dropped considerably as well.[32] In response, the corporation cut spending, reduced the size of its workforce and increased its service charges by approximately 30% for the 2021 fiscal year.

Witnesses made a point of mentioning NAV CANADA's excellent safety record, but were concerned about how workforce reductions and reduced capacity would affect safety when air traffic picks up again.[33] NAV CANADA launched level of service studies for 30 TRAN, Evidence: Mike Mueller (Senior Vice-President, Aerospace Industries Association of Canada [AIAC]); and Andrew Petrou (Chairman of the Board, Downsview Aerospace Innovation and Research).

31 TRAN, Evidence: Bohn (NAV CANADA).

32 TRAN, Evidence: Bohn (NAV CANADA).

33 TRAN, Evidence: Joseph Sparling (President, Air North); Paul Cameron (Business Manager and Financial Secretary, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers [IBEW]); Matt Wayland (Executive Assistant to

seven control towers, and employees received letters of vulnerability indicating their jobs could potentially be at risk if service levels were to decrease.[34] To protect jobs and ensure safety in Canadian airspace, some witnesses, including the Association des pilotes et propriétaires de hangar de l'Aéroport de Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, are in favour of suspending these studies and any closures of air traffic control towers until further notice.[35]

David Rheault, Managing Director of Government Affairs and Community Relations for Air Canada, said that losing a control tower could make operations more complex, cause more diversions to other airports and increase costs for carriers.

Ray Bohn, President and Chief Executive Officer of NAV CANADA, argued that the level of service studies for control towers are based on air traffic levels seen before the pandemic and expected after the pandemic. He also assured the Committee that safety would remain at the forefront, no matter the result of these reviews.[36] Michael Keenan, Deputy Minister at the Department of Transport, stated that NAV CANADA could not change its service levels unless "Transport Canada reviews the proposed change and concurs that it doesn't sacrifice safety."[37]

Concern for Isolated Regions

> "The COVID-19 pandemic has inflicted debilitating effects on passenger traffic and business sustainability in all sectors of aviation, particularly on the regional components of the system."
>
> Brian Grant
> Chair, Regional Community Airports of Canada

the International Vice-President and Canadian Director of Government Relations, IBEW); Debi Daviau (President, Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada [PIPSC]); Best (CATCA); and Dias (Unifor).

34 TRAN, Evidence: Best (CATCA); and Bohn (NAV CANADA).

35 TRAN, Evidence: Best (CATCA); and Wayland (IBEW).

36 TRAN, Evidence: Bohn (NAV CANADA).

37 On 15 April 2021, NAV CANADA announced that it would maintain air traffic control service to some Canadian communities, including Fort McMurray, Whitehorse and Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu. NAV CANADA, Air traffic control services to continue for Canadian communities, News release, 15 April 2021.

While most witnesses who participated in the Committee's study agreed that it was important for a country as large as Canada to have an efficient and reliable regional air transport network, some were particularly concerned that the COVID-19 pandemic could have negative repercussions on regional connectivity in Canada.[38] Brian Grant, Chair of the Regional Community Airports of Canada, said that the vast majority of regional and municipal airports saw a loss of over 90% in passenger volumes and over 70% in revenues since the start of the pandemic. The decreased demand for inter-regional air transport led some air carriers, including Air Canada and WestJet, to temporarily or permanently suspend flights on some routes.[39] Porter Airlines, whose routes focus on business travel within Canada and between Canada and the United States, temporarily suspended all its flights on 21 March 2020.[40]

Monette Pasher, Executive Director of the Atlantic Canada Airports Association, explained that in recent months Atlantic airports have been drawing from their cash reserves, built up over two decades, to survive, when normally these funds would be earmarked for safety infrastructure projects. The situation is critical for some communities in the region, such as Sydney, Nova Scotia: it no longer has air service, and it is several hours by road to the nearest airport, in Halifax.[41]

Bruce Rodgers, Executive Director of the Canadian International Freight Forwarders Association, said that suspending passenger flights in remote regions also affects freight capacity, as approximately half of air cargo is transported in the belly hold of passenger aircraft.

Regular regional service helps connect remote communities to each other and connect passengers to major Canadian airports.[42] Large carriers are not necessarily in direct competition with small carriers at the regional level, because they offer different services that may be complementary. For this reason, many witnesses from the regional airline community stressed the importance of not forcing large carriers back into the region to compete with smaller carriers. Yani Gagnon, Vice-President and Chief Financial 38 TRAN, Evidence: Gooch (CAC); McKenna (ATAC), Mike McNaney (President and Chief Executive Officer, National Airlines Council of Canada [NACC]); Brian Grant (RCAC); Christopher Rauenbusch (President, Canadian Union of Public Employees – Local 4070 [CUPE, Local 4070]); Monette Pasher (Executive Director, Atlantic Canada Airports Association [ACAA]); and Ferguson (IAMAW).

39 TRAN, Evidence: Rheault (Air Canada); and Gibbons (WestJet).

40 TRAN, Evidence: Robert Deluce (Executive Chairman, Porter Airlines Inc. [Porter]).

41 TRAN, Evidence: Pasher (ACAA).

42 TRAN, Evidence: Serge Larivière (Director General, Coopérative de transport régional du Québec [TREQ]); Grant (RCAC); and Rauenbusch (CUPE, Local 4070).

Officer at Pascan Inc. said that "[s]ubsidizing Air Canada or other major air carriers, which will compete on regional markets, makes zero sense."

In addition, some witnesses pointed out that Air Canada has been part of the problem rather than part of the solution in regional air transportation in recent years. Serge Larivière, Director General of the Coopérative de transport régional du Québec, made the following comment about Air Canada:

> A business with $18 billion in annual sales need only start a price war and the competition is gone just like that. That's been the problem for the last 30 years.

Similarly, Mr. Larivière, agreed that the current crisis, combined with large carriers pulling out of some regions, could be an opportunity to rethink regional transport in eastern Canada. In his opinion, regional supply was low in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces well before the pandemic.[43]

Competitiveness of the Canadian Aviation Sector

> "[W]e have now begun to see foreign carriers that have received liquidity support from their governments taking international market share from Canadian operators. This is a direct threat to the future competitiveness of the sector and may roll back years of successful international expansion."
>
> Mike McNaney
> President and Chief Executive Officer, National Airlines Council of Canada

A number of witnesses pointed out that Canada is one of the only industrialized countries that has not yet put in place a specific national recovery plan for the aviation industry.[44] Some were concerned that foreign aviation companies that had received significant financial support from their governments would take international market share from Canadian companies.[45] Witnesses also pointed out the importance of 43 TRAN, Evidence: Larivière (TREQ), 3 December 1720.

44 TRAN, Evidence: Wesley Lesosky (President, Air Canada Component of the Canadian Union of Public Employees); Rauenbusch (CUPE, Local 4070); Dias (Unifor); Giguere (ACPA); Gibbons (WestJet); McNaney (NACC); Gerry Bruno (Executive Advisor to the President and Chief Executive Officer, Vancouver Airport Authority [YVR]); and Rheault (Air Canada).

45 TRAN, Evidence: Rheault (Air Canada); and McNaney (NACC).

Canadian airports being able to compete with American ones.[46] If Canadian operators lose market share, it will undermine the years of effort and billions of dollars they have invested to improve Canada's connections with the rest of the world.

Fearing a drop in research and technology spending, as well as an exodus of workers to foreign countries that are investing heavily in the sector, Andrew Petrou, Chairman of the Board of Downsview Aerospace Innovation and Research, explained his view that Canada's status as a leader in the aerospace industry is at risk. In his opinion, the Canadian aerospace industry will become less and less competitive, and the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic will only accelerate its decline, unless a massive investment is made in the sector. In the same vein, Mr. Mueller offered the following caution:

> While the government's emergency measures have been appreciated and helpful, they're just not enough, not when aviation and aerospace are facing unprecedented challenges, and not when other leading aerospace countries, our competitors, began taking action early on. … These countries … have positioned their sectors for the future. Canada needs to do the same. The future is bleak for aerospace if its customers, the airlines, can't buy its products and services.

Sale of Transat A.T. Inc.

> "If there isn't enough airline choice in Canada, and they are forced to choose between Air Canada and Air Canada, they risk going to an airline outside of Canada, which can result in a reduction in market share for Canadian companies."
>
> Jacob Charbonneau
> President and Chief Executive Officer, Late Flight Claim Canada Inc.

On 27 June 2019, Transat A.T. Inc. and Air Canada reached an agreement that Air Canada would acquire Transat. On 11 August 2019, it was announced that the transaction was valued at $720 million ($18 per share). On 10 October 2020, Transat announced that its board of directors had approved a revised transaction in which Air Canada would acquire Transat shares for $5 per share, which is $13 less than the agreement reached in 46 TRAN, Evidence: Bruno (YVR); and Marshall (GTAA).

August 2019.[47] Transat shareholders approved the revised transaction details on 15 December 2020.[48]

In his report on the transaction, the Commissioner of Competition (the Commissioner) stated that the transaction would likely lead to "substantial anti-competitive effects" due to the elimination of rivalry between the two carriers in certain parts of their networks.[49] Specifically, competition would be eliminated or reduced on 83 routes between Canada and Europe, Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean, Florida and South America. In addition, the two carriers were the only ones offering non-stop service on 22 of these 83 routes. The Commissioner found that the transaction would likely lead to increased prices, less choice, decrease in service, and a significant reduction in travel.

Echoing the Commissioner, some witnesses expressed concerns about how the proposed transaction between these two carriers would affect competition in the Canadian market.[50] During their appearances, Omar Alghabra, Minister of Transport, and representatives of Transport Canada informed the Committee that the department had taken into account the competition issues raised in the Commissioner's report before reaching its decision, and that other matters of public interest had also been considered. These factors included protecting jobs, maintaining a head office in Quebec and ensuring the financial health of the aviation sector.[51]

The Government of Canada announced on 11 February 2021 that it approved the transaction, subject to certain terms and conditions, including preserving the Transat A.T. head office and brand in Quebec.[52] However, after being advised that the European 47 Transat A.T. Inc., Transat A.T. Inc. Announces Revised Acquisition Transaction with Air Canada, News release, 10 October 2020.

48 Transat A.T. Inc., Transat's Shareholders Overwhelmingly Approve the Arrangement with Air Canada, News release, 15 December 2020.

49 Competition Bureau of Canada, "Report to the Minister of Transport and the Parties to the Transaction Pursuant to Subsection 53.2(2) of the Canada Transportation Act," Technical guidance documents, 27 March 2020.

50 TRAN, Evidence: Gibbons (WestJet); and Jacob Charbonneau (President and Chief Executive Officer, Late Flight Claim Canada Inc. [Late Flight Claim]).

51 TRAN, Evidence: Michael Keenan (Deputy Minister, Transport Canada).

52 Transport Canada, Government of Canada approves proposed purchase of Transat A.T. Inc. by Air Canada, News release, 11 February 2021.

Commission would not approve the transaction, Air Canada and Transat A.T. announced on 2 April 2021 that the agreement was being terminated by mutual consent.[53]

A PLAN TO ENSURE THE CANADIAN AVIATION INDUSTRY SURVIVES AND RECOVERS

> "Critical decisions must be made now if Canada's travel and tourism sector is to start recovery next summer, as we expect it will in other northern hemisphere countries. Summer 2021 simply cannot look like summer 2020."
>
> Daniel-Robert Gooch
> President, Canadian Airports Council

While witnesses proposed different measures to ensure the survival and recovery of the aviation sector based on their own priorities and circumstances, they all agreed that significant financial investment is needed in the sector. Many witnesses said it is important for the federal government to ensure that the assistance provided is equitable and goes to more than just the largest players in the industry.

A number of witnesses said that, regardless of the measures that have been taken – or will be taken – in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the health and safety of passengers, crew and the Canadian public should remain the top priority for the various stakeholders in the sector. Canadians must feel safe in airports and on planes before they will consider travelling again, and this requires a clear, consistent COVID-19 testing framework.[54]

53 Transat A.T. Inc., The parties having concluded that European Commission approval would not be obtained – The Arrangement Agreement between Transat and Air Canada is Terminated by Mutual Consent, News release, 2 April 2021.

54 TRAN, Evidence: Marshall (GTAA); Rauenbusch (CUPE, Local 4070); and Derrick Stanford (President, ACAA).

Finding a Balance Between Ensuring Public Health and Resuming Travel

> "[Canada must implement a] national, scientifically based COVID-19 testing regime. [The aviation sector] can't wait until all Canadians are vaccinated to restore travel. People need to feel that flying is safe."
>
> Chorus Aviation Inc., Brief

During her testimony, Brigitte Diogo, Vice President of the Health Security Infrastructure Branch at the Public Health Agency of Canada, explained that air travel is quite safe, particularly due to universal masking and ventilation.[55] According to Dr. Isaac Bogoch, Physician and Scientist with the Toronto General Hospital and University of Toronto, data indicates that the stages leading up to the flight and those following it are probably riskier from a transmission standpoint than the flight itself.

Like many witnesses from the aviation sector, Dr. Bogoch and Dr. Zain Chagla, Assistant Professor in the Division of Infectious Diseases at McMaster University's Faculty of Health Sciences, believe it is important to implement rapid testing in airports, using antigen tests that provide results in under one hour.[56] These tests could be given to passengers just before boarding.

In her testimony, Monique Frison, Acting Assistant Deputy Minister of Programs and Implementation at the Department of Health, indicated that rapid tests are not as accurate as lab-based tests, which are the gold standard, but other factors, such as ease of use, can compensate. Patrick Taylor, Global Business Development Director of New Markets at LuminUltra Technologies Ltd., informed the Committee that some portable PCR testing units can run samples in under two hours, making them an option for airports.[57]

---

55 These views are shared by Dr. Zain Chagla (Assistant Professor, Division of Infectious Diseases, Faculty of Health Sciences, McMaster University, [McMaster University]); and Patrick Taylor (Global Business Development Director, New Markets, LuminUltra Technologies Ltd.).

56 TRAN, Evidence: McKenna (ATAC); Gooch (CAC); Lesosky (Air Canada Component of CUPE); Dias (Unifor); Deluce (Porter); and Sparling (Air North).

57 PCR tests are also known as molecular diagnostic tests or nucleic acid tests. According to Health Canada, PCR tests are used by the Public Health Agency of Canada's laboratories and other labs around the world to diagnose COVID-19.

According to Dr. Chagla, another promising option is serial testing, such as the pilot project launched on 2 November 2020 at Calgary International Airport. International travellers and Canadians returning from abroad who participated in the pilot project were required to take a test at the airport. If they got a negative result (approximately 48 hours later), their mandatory quarantine period would be shortened, as long as they committed to taking a second test six or seven days later.[58] The pilot project was updated to release travellers from their quarantine only after they had obtained a negative result from the second test. The project was suspended on 21 February 2021 following the implementation of additional quarantine and testing measures by the federal government.

Meanwhile, Air Canada partnered with the Greater Toronto Airports Authority and McMaster HealthLabs to assess whether self-collection COVID-19 testing was effective and whether the quarantine period could safely be reduced for international travellers. The pilot project ran from 3 September to 14 November 2020. The interim results indicate that most positive cases of COVID-19 are identified upon arrival at the airport or within seven days.[59] However, Dr. Chagla said that "the rate of people who test positive at day seven who don't test positive on the day of arrival is still not insignificant."

When they appeared before the Committee, representatives from the Department of Transport and the Department of Health explained their roles as partners in the pilot projects, and clarified that the purpose of these projects was to gather science-based data that will inform the government and public health on how best to reopen borders.[60]

Some witnesses called for the relationship between testing and quarantine to be reviewed in order to determine whether quarantine times could be decreased to 10 or 7 days, similar to the pilot project at Calgary International Airport.[61] Mr. Gibbons

58 Government of Canada, Alberta COVID-19 Border Testing Pilot Program, News release, 22 October 2020.

59 McMaster HealthLabs, "Canadian International COVID-19 Surveillance Border Study," Interim Results Backgrounder, 17 November 2020.

60 TRAN, Evidence: Monique Frison (Acting Assistant Deputy Minister, Programs and Implementation, Department of Health); and Aaron McCrorie (Associate Assistant Deputy Minister, Safety and Security, Department of Transport).

61 TRAN, Evidence: Dr. Chagla (McMaster University); Dr. Isaac Bogoch (Physician and Scientist, Toronto General Hospital and University of Toronto, As an Individual); McKenna (ATAC); McNaney (NACC); Rheault (Air Canada); Dr. Jim Chung (Chief Medical Officer, Air Canada); Gibbons (WestJet); Dias (Unifor); and the Association of Canadian Independent Travel Advisors [ACITA], Brief.

suggested that the pilot project could be developed into a national policy and that funding for the transition could be included in the upcoming federal budget.

Financial Assistance on Par with Pandemic Losses

> "Canada depends on air transportation perhaps more than other countries in the world. It's in the public interest that the industry not only survives but is in a position to thrive when COVID is behind us. I think it should go without saying that an industry that has the capacity to invest in its future remain environmentally, socially and financially sustainable, and then is able to recover, is in everyone's interest."
>
> Captain Tim Perry
> President, Air Line Pilots Association Canada, Air Line Pilots Association International

On 8 November 2020, the Government of Canada announced that it planned to implement a package of assistance for airlines, airports and the aerospace sector.[62] The funding provided would include amounts for major airlines such as loans and other financial supports. However, this financial assistance would be conditional on Canadian travellers getting refunds for flights they booked but did not take because of the pandemic, and would ensure that "regional communities retain air connections to the rest of Canada, and that Canadian air carriers maintain their status as key customers of Canada's aerospace industry."

A number of witnesses were upset about the time required for the federal government to put an action plan in place specifically to rebuild and stimulate the aviation sector, given the time-sensitive nature of the industry's needs.[63] During his testimony, Minister Alghabra stressed his commitment to finding an arrangement as quickly as possible and assured the Committee that negotiations were underway with sector representatives.

62 Transport Canada, Statement by Minister Garneau on measures to protect Canadians from the impacts of COVID-19 on the air travel sector, News release, 8 November 2020.

63 TRAN, Evidence: Unifor, Brief; Gooch (CAC); Ferguson (IAMAW); Rauenbusch (CUPE, Local 4070); Lesosky (Air Canada Component of CUPE); Giguere (ACPA); McNaney (NACC); Bruno (YVR); Rheault (Air Canada); and McKenna (ATAC).

Financial Assistance Appreciated, But Insufficient

> "[T]he current financial aid available to all employers in and outside the aviation industry is proving to be inadequate. Consequently, Canada's air transportation industry is facing massive layoffs and even failure as the crisis continues."
>
> Unifor, Brief

Since the start of the pandemic, the federal government has announced a number of assistance measures specific to the aviation sector, including $191.3 million for remote communities that depend on air transport, as well as rent relief for the 21 airport authorities that have ground leases with the federal government.[64] In the Fall Economic Statement 2020, the government announced additional financial support of approximately $1.1 billion for the aviation sector, to be allocated through several programs, including $186 million for the Airports Capital Assistance Program (ACAP), $206 million to create the Regional Air Transportation Initiative and $500 million for safety, security and transit infrastructure in large airports.[65]

A number of employers in the aviation sector also applied for programs that were available to all economic sectors, such as the Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy (CEWS) and the Large Employer Emergency Financing Facility (LEEFF). During his appearance before the Committee, Minister Alghabra said that the aviation sector alone had collected between $1.7 billion and $1.8 billion from the wage subsidy.

Most witnesses told the Committee that the programs put in place by the federal government since the beginning of the pandemic were greatly appreciated. However, they also agreed that most programs were insufficient, given the extent of the crisis for the air transport industry and the expected slow recovery.

64 TRAN, Evidence: The Hon. Omar Alghabra (Minister of Transport).

65 Department of Finance Canada, Supporting Canadians and Fighting COVID-19, Fall Economic Statement 2020, p. 32.

During his appearance before the Committee, Daniel-Robert Gooch, President of the Canadian Airports Council, commented on the suite of measures for airports outlined in the Fall Economic Statement 2020. In his opinion, the $500 million earmarked for safety, security and public transit infrastructure is inadequate, given the extent of the sector's needs. However, he was pleased that $206 million would be invested in the new Regional Air Transportation Initiative and hoped for more details. He also pointed out that ACAP funding is valuable for small airports, but expressed concern about how they will be able to use these funds if they cannot pay their share, considering they have run down their cash reserves.[66] Similarly, noting that small airports are not eligible for most assistance programs, Mr. Grant called for permanent funding for rural and regional airports and a $95-million annual increase to the ACAP for small airports.[67]

With regard to rent relief, Mr. Gooch was disappointed that the largest airports were granted only a deferral on 2021 rent, which they will then have to repay over 10 years, beginning in 2024. He also argued that the rent relief for mid-sized (2021) and small airports (2021–2023) should be extended, given that recovery will take several years. In his opinion, airports with federal leases should not have to pay rent beyond 2020, until the sector recovers. Ms. Marshall explained to the Committee that the Greater Toronto Airports Authority has been asking for months for its 2021 rent to be waived. As for the many small airports that do not pay rent, Mr. Gooch called for interest-free loans or direct operational support. Lastly, several other witnesses called for the government to address cash flow problems across the industry, with measures for airports of all sizes, small and large airlines, and service providers.[68]

For his part, Joseph Starling, President of Air North, said he was satisfied with the funding programs that were outlined in the Fall Economic Statement for essential air services in the North. In his opinion, Air North and other Northern carriers would not need as much support from the federal government if they could increase their passenger numbers, which would mean streamlining market capacity in the North. He believes that financial assistance should not go to pay for empty seats, which is what is 66 Funding through the Airports Capital Assistance Program (ACAP) is determined based on the amount of airport activity. For example, the percentage of ACAP funding for an airport that receives between 225,000 and 249,999 passengers annually is 60%. Transport Canada, Information for ACAP applicants.

67 The current figure is $38 million annually. Transport Canada, Airports Capital Assistance Program, General information.

68 TRAN, Evidence: McNaney (NACC); McKenna (ATAC); Grant (RCAC); Lesosky (Air Canada Component of CUPE); Dias (Unifor); Giguere (ACPA); Stanford (ACAA); Deluce (Porter); Unifor, Brief; and NACC, CAC, ATAC, AIAC and ACAA, Brief.

happening now. His proposal, to introduce interline agreements between carriers, is addressed later in this report, in the section on regional air transport.

Some witnesses were critical of assistance programs that were available to all sectors, as they did not address issues specific to the aviation sector. Mr. Gooch gave the example of the Highly Affected Sectors Credit Availability Program (HASCAP), announced in the Fall Economic Statement 2020. In his view, the $1 million cap means that it fails to meet the needs of many airports.

Likewise, Mr. McNaney thought that the LEEFF program implemented by the federal government did not take into account the challenges in the aviation sector. Its conditions, particularly the high interest rate, make it less attractive for a sector with a slow road to recovery ahead.[69] In its brief, Unifor expressed similar views, saying that the industry needs access to long-term loans at low interest rates, which would be "an improvement over the LEEFF."

Some witnesses recognized that the CEWS was a lifeline for many employees and employers in the aviation sector in the spring of 2020.[70] However, some indicated that employers are using the program to pay for active employees, not to keep inactive employees on the payroll, which is not in keeping with the intended purpose of the CEWS.[71] Mr. Grant expressed disappointment that many small airports under the jurisdiction of provincial, territorial or municipal governments are not eligible for the wage subsidy. He believes the CEWS eligibility criteria should be amended to include airports, no matter how they are governed.

Derek Ferguson, Representative of the Grand Lodge of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in Canada (IAMAW Canada), noted that the CEWS was beneficial to IAMAW Canada members early on, but over time most employers stopped paying the 25% top-up and used the program only for active employees.[72] According to Mr. Lesosky, the federal government should change the terms and 69 The Large Employer Emergency Financing Facility has an interest rate of 5%, which increases to 8% after one year, and by a further 2% per annum each year thereafter. Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada, Large Employer Emergency Financing Facility, Factsheet.

---

70 TRAN, Evidence: Mueller (AIAC); Ferguson (IAMAW); Gibbons (WestJet); Rheault (Air Canada); Rauenbusch (CUPE, Local 4070); McNaney (NACC).

71 TRAN, Evidence: Lesosky (Air Canada Component of CUPE); and Ferguson (IAMAW).

72 The maximum wage subsidy for active employees is 75%. Government of Canada, Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy (CEWS).

conditions of the CEWS so that employers using it for active employees are also required to use it for inactive, laid-off and furloughed employees.

Financial Assistance That Is Not a Blank Cheque

> "[G]overnment financial assistance is genuinely welcome by airlines and other travel businesses. Ensuring that airlines like Porter, and others that are much smaller, are in a position to contribute to economic recovery, sustain regional connections and provide competition is a benefit to the entire country."
>
> Robert Deluce
> Executive Chairman, Porter Airlines Inc.

Beyond financial assistance, some witnesses mentioned that the aviation sector and government officials need to work together to rebuild passenger confidence so they are comfortable flying in the future. In their opinion, it is important to ensure that passengers view air travel as safe and secure and also that passengers get reimbursed for flights that were cancelled because of the COVID-19 pandemic.[73]

When asked about executive compensation and returns to shareholders, Jerry Dias, National President of Unifor, said they should not benefit financially from federal assistance measures. While acknowledging the importance of having a strong airline industry to ensure a post-pandemic economic recovery in Canada, he emphasized that the funding must go to putting people to work.[74]

---

73 TRAN, Evidence: Gábor Lukács (President, Air Passenger Rights); Ian Jack (Vice-President, Public Affairs, Canadian Automobile Association [CAA]); John Lawford (Executive Director and General Counsel, Public Interest Advocacy Centre); Sylvie De Bellefeuille (Lawyer, Budget and Legal Advisor, Option consommateurs); Ian Clarke (Chief Financial Officer, GTAA); and Chorus Aviation Inc., Brief.

74 As of 29 April 2021, the Government of Canada had reached financing agreements with Air Canada and Transat A.T. Inc. The two agreements are different, but include similar conditions, such as refunds for plane tickets and restrictions on executive compensation. Air Canada, Air Canada and Government of Canada Conclude Agreements on Liquidity Program, News release, 12 April 2021. Transat A.T. Inc, Transat secures $700 million in funding from the Government of Canada, News release, 29 April 2021.

Refunding Consumers for Services Not Rendered

On 25 March 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA), the independent body responsible for enforcing Canadian transportation regulations, released a statement indicating that airlines would be meeting their obligations under Canadian law if they offered passengers affected by cancellations vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as they do not expire in an unreasonably short time.[75] However, the CTA noted that it would examine any specific situation brought before it on its merits. On 22 April 2020, the CTA provided additional clarifications, stating that Canadian law requires only that airlines ensure passengers can complete their itineraries, and it does not obligate airlines to issue refunds if a flight is cancelled or delayed for reasons beyond their control.[76]

According to Gábor Lukács, President of Air Passenger Rights, the message of 25 March 2020 misled members of the public about their rights. He said it is unacceptable for the CTA to have issued a public statement on a matter (refunds) that is so contested. In its brief, the organization Air Passenger Rights argued that airlines, travel agencies, credit card issuers and travel insurers used the CTA's statement as an excuse to deprive passengers of refunds for flights the airlines chose to cancel. When he appeared before the Committee, Scott Streiner, Chair and CEO of the CTA, said that the statement does not change the obligations of the airlines or the rights of passengers; it simply gave suggestions and should not be interpreted as a binding decision. Mr. Lukács and Jacob Charbonneau, President and Chief Executive Officer of Late Flight Claim Canada Inc., both expressed concerns that the CTA favours airline companies over consumers.

With regard to the obligations of airlines, Mr. Streiner expressed the following opinion:

> Because the statutory framework does not include a general obligation around refunds for flight cancellations beyond airlines' control, any passenger entitlements in this regard depend on the wording of each airline's applicable tariff.

Some witnesses stated that the current legislative framework, particularly the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR), does not do enough to protect consumers.[77] According to Mr. Charbonneau, the complexity of the current protection regime opens the door to a number of interpretations and protects airline companies more than consumers. In a move to help address this situation, the Minister of Transport issued a 75 Canadian Transportation Agency [CTA], Statement on Vouchers.

76 CTA, FAQs: Statement on Vouchers.

77 TRAN, Evidence: Charbonneau (Late Flight Claim); and Jack (CAA).

ministerial directive on 17 December 2020, directing the CTA to make a regulation respecting air carriers' obligations to refund passengers when flights are cancelled because of situations outside their control.[78] However, in a news release issued on 21 December 2020, the Minister of Transport specified that the new regulation would address future flight cancellations.[79]

While he believes the APPR lacks detail on the matter of refunds, Mr. Lukács does not think there is anything in the legislation that would contradict the "fundamental right [of passengers] to a refund."[80] Similarly, Sylvie De Bellefeuille, Lawyer and Budget and Legal Advisor for Option consommateurs, asserted that other statutes, including the Canada Transportation Act and its regulations, outline obligations for air carriers and give authorities the power to act. In its brief, Option consommateurs explained its view that, while transportation activities fall under federal jurisdiction, airline company contracts are also subject to provincial legislation on consumer protection.

A number of witnesses, as well as Minister Alghabra, supported refunding plane tickets for Canadian consumers.[81] Some also argued that travel credits or vouchers are not equivalent to a refund.[82] For example, Ms. De Bellefeuille explained that travel credits do not guarantee future prices and may not be enough to cover the cost of a future trip. According to John Lawford, Executive Director and General Counsel at the Public Interest Advocacy Centre, if the federal government plans to bail out airlines, it must ensure that passengers get refunded for flight cancellations. Otherwise, they will be penalized twice: once as a passenger and once as a taxpayer.

---

78 Direction Respecting Flight Cancellations for Situations Outside of a Carrier's Control, SOR/2020-283, 17 December 2020, in the Canada Gazette, Part II, 6 January 2021.

79 Transport Canada, Minister Garneau directs the Canadian Transportation Agency to develop a new regulation to address future large-scale flight cancellations, Statement, 21 December 2020.

80 Mr. Lukács was referring to the Canada Transportation Act and the Air Transportation Regulations.

81 TRAN*, Evidence*: Lukács (Air Passenger Rights); De Bellefeuille (Option consommateurs); Lawford (Public Interest Advocacy Centre); Jack (CAA); Charbonneau (Late Flight Claim); Dias (Unifor); Yani Gagnon (Vice-President and Chief Financial Officer, Pascan Inc.); Gibbons (WestJet); Rheault (Air Canada); Deluce (Porter); and ACITA, Brief.

82 TRAN*, Evidence*: De Bellefeuille (Option consommateurs); Lawford (Public Interest Advocacy Centre); and Lukács (Air Passenger Rights).

In addition, some witnesses pointed out that the adoption of Bill C-249 would be a good way to address the current situation of non-refundable tickets by airlines[8384]. Mr. Lukács offered the following opinion on Bill C-249:

> Bill C-249 is going to fix just the basics. The most important principle in every commercial transaction, that if you don't receive what you paid for, you get your money back, is a vital step for the entire sector's recovery.

In its brief, the Association of Canadian Independent Travel Advisors (ACITA) said it supports consumer refunds, but called on the federal government to protect travel agents from commissions being returned, as commissions are their sole source of income. The brief explains that, when an airline refunds a passenger, they first notify the travel agent who booked the trip, if applicable, and the agent must return their commission in order for the consumer to receive a refund. ACITA indicated that, in the current context, returning commissions would have undesirable outcomes, as most travel agencies would not be able to survive the blow. Furthermore, as noted by Ian Jack, Vice-President of Public Affairs at the Canadian Automobile Association, travel agents did their work and deserve to keep the commission they were paid. As ACITA explained, travel agents "worked on the trip, sold the airline's product to the consumer and received a commission for the sale."

During their testimony, Mr. Rheault and Mr. Gibbons said they were aware that mandatory refunds could affect the commissions of travel agents. Minister Alghabra and Transport Canada officials confirmed that this issue was being addressed in their discussions with the major air carriers regarding a package of assistance.[85]

Boosting Regional Air Transport

Many witnesses agreed that it was important for remote and Northern regions to have access to reliable, efficient and affordable air service. As mentioned above, a number of witnesses argued that it was important for federal government assistance for the aviation sector to be fair for all stakeholders, large and small. Given that major airlines like Air Canada and WestJet suspended many domestic flights in March 2020 owing to a drop in passenger volumes, some witnesses questioned what regional air transport would look like in the future.

83 Bill C-249, An Act to amend the Canada Transportation Act (refund – cancelled air service), 43rd Parliament, 2nd Session.

84 TRAN, Evidence: De Bellefeuille (Option consommateurs); Lukács (Air Passenger Rights); and Lawford (Public Interest Advocacy Centre).

85 TRAN, Evidence: Keenan (Transport Canada); and Hanson (Transport Canada).

In a statement issued on 8 November 2020, the federal government indicated that financial support for Canadian airlines would include conditions ensuring that regional communities maintain their connectivity.[86] However, according to Mr. Larivière and Mr. Gagnon, the government should not force large air carriers to serve outlying regions when smaller carriers are ready to fill the gap. Mr. Larivière believes that the government's role is to "maintain healthy market conditions."

To illustrate the role of small carriers in the Canadian market, Robert Deluce, Executive Chairman of Porter Airlines Inc., said that historically airfares drop by 60% or more when Porter enters a market, particularly when these markets were previously served by only one airline. Ms. Pasher stated that, prior to the pandemic, the Atlantic provinces were served by a number of companies of different sizes, including Air Canada, WestJet, Porter and PAL Airlines, and that competition and fares in the region were "good." She mentioned that small regional carriers are important and that the biggest issue is collaborating with national carriers to connect the Atlantic provinces to the rest of Canada and the world.

When they appeared before the Committee, representatives of WestJet and Air Canada said they hope to re-establish services that have been suspended because of the pandemic.[87] However, they pointed out that they need more passengers before they can restore service, which means that some travel restrictions would have to be lifted first.

According to Mr. Sparling, the large air carriers offer limited services in Northern regions, as the smaller connections are often served by small carriers. To ensure that small carriers survive and to maintain the essential services they provide to remote communities, he suggested that the federal government should temporarily limit mainline carrier capacity in Northern gateway markets. He believes that, given the current lack of passenger volume, the federal government should not be subsidizing multiple carriers flying the same routes.

In the future, Mr. Sparling would like to see more interline agreements, which are mutually beneficial arrangements between the large carriers and smaller ones. In its brief, Air North explained the advantages of these agreements for passengers, such as being able to make a single booking with flights offered by multiple carriers and being able to make connections without having to collect their bags between each flight. Mr. Sparling believes the federal government should mandate that airlines link themselves together, which would ensure more communities across Canada are connected.

86 Transport Canada, Statement by Minister Garneau on measures to protect Canadians from the impacts of COVID-19 on the air travel sector, Statement, 8 November 2020.

87 TRAN, Evidence: Rheault (Air Canada); and Gibbons (WestJet).

Ensuring the Competitiveness of the Canadian Aerospace Industry

As mentioned above, witnesses representing Canada's aerospace industry were concerned about the future competitiveness of the sector internationally. To reverse the downward trend, Mr. Mueller called on the federal government to invest significantly in the sector so it can be part of Canada's economic recovery.[88] This assistance should also help industries transition to new technologies for a greener future. In his view, a national strategy is needed to secure the future of the aerospace sector. He explained that the national strategy should cover the civil, defence and space sectors.

Likewise, Samantha Anderton, Executive Director of Downsview Aerospace Innovation and Research, called on the federal government to adopt a top-down approach to supporting commercial airlines. This would mean support would flow through the supply chain, including to aircraft maintenance companies. Like Mr. Mueller, she would like to see the federal government support research and development, particularly for sustainable technologies.

With regard to aircraft maintenance, Mr. Ferguson called for a repatriation plan to secure the jobs of Canadian aircraft maintenance and technical operations workers. Many Canadian airlines have aircraft that were grounded outside the country, which means the maintenance is being done outside of Canada as well, but he believes it should be done in Canada by Canadian workers. Mr. Rheault assured the Committee members that many Air Canada aircraft were being maintained in Canada.

Supporting NAV CANADA Financially

As mentioned above, one of the measures NAV CANADA took to address its significant drop in revenue resulting from the decline in air traffic was to increase its service charges by approximately 30% for the 2021 fiscal year. When he appeared before the 88 In Budget 2021, the Government of Canada proposes to provide $2 billion in support for Canada's aerospace sector. This includes $1.75 billion through the Strategic Innovation Fund and $250 million over three years for regional development agencies to deliver an Aerospace Regional Recovery Initiative. Department of Finance Canada, A Recovery Plan for Jobs, Growth, and Resilience, Budget 2021, p. 135.

Committee, Mr. Bohn explained that NAV CANADA's requests for financial assistance from the federal government had not been successful to date.

In a letter to the Committee, several organizations in the aviation sector argued that the user-pay model for service providers such as NAV CANADA is not appropriate in the current context to "adequately fund and maintain infrastructure and services," given that it will take years for passenger volumes to recover. They suggested temporarily suspending this model and providing financial assistance to NAV CANADA.

Some witnesses representing NAV CANADA workers believe the government should provide $750 million in funding over two years to the corporation so that its jobs, services and excellent safety record can be maintained.[89] According to Ms. Daviau, funding should be subject to a moratorium on layoffs.

CONCLUSION

Throughout the Committee's study, witnesses from various sectors of the Canadian aviation industry called on the Government of Canada to implement an industry-specific assistance plan so they could contribute to Canada's economic recovery. They also highlighted the importance of air transport for regions across Canada, particularly remote and Northern communities that rely on air transport not only to travel, but also to have essential supplies delivered.

Some witnesses were concerned about the future competitiveness of the industry and the fate of workers, as many of them have been inactive for months without knowing whether or when they will return to work. While they agreed that the health and safety of Canadian workers, passengers and the public were the top priority, they also agreed that the industry's current financial situation is not viable in the long run.

89 TRAN, Evidence: Best (CATCA); Wayland (IBEW); and Daviau (PIPSC).

APPENDIX A LIST OF WITNESSES

The following table lists the witnesses who appeared before the committee at its meetings related to this report. Transcripts of all public meetings related to this report are available on the committee's webpage for this study.

Organizations and Individuals	Date	Meeting
Canadian Transportation Agency	2020/12/01	8
Marcia Jones, Chief Strategy Officer
Valérie Lagacé, Senior General Counsel and Secretary
Scott Streiner, Chair and Chief Executive Officer
Department of Health	2020/12/01	8
Monique Frison, Acting Assistant Deputy Minister Programs and Implementation
Department of Transport	2020/12/01	8
Christian Dea, Director General Transportation and Economic Analysis and Chief Economist
Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister Policy
Aaron McCrorie, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister Safety and Security
Nicholas Robinson, Director General Civil Aviation
Colin Stacey, Director General Air Policy
Public Health Agency of Canada	2020/12/01	8
Brigitte Diogo, Vice President Health Security Infrastructure Branch
Air Transport Association of Canada	2020/12/03	9
John McKenna, President and Chief Executive Officer
Canadian Airports Council	2020/12/03	9
Daniel-Robert Gooch, President

Organizations and Individuals	Date	Meeting
Coopérative de transport régional du Québec	2020/12/03	9
Serge Larivière, Director General
National Airlines Council of Canada	2020/12/03	9
Mike McNaney, President and Chief Executive Officer
Regional Community Airports of Canada	2020/12/03	9
Brian Grant, Chair
Air North	2020/12/08	10
Joseph Sparling, President
Air Passenger Rights	2020/12/08	10
Gábor Lukács, President
Canadian Automobile Association	2020/12/08	10
Ian Jack, Vice-President Public Affairs
Jason Kerr, Senior Director Government Relations
Late Flight Claim Canada Inc.	2020/12/08	10
Jacob Charbonneau, President and Chief Executive Officer
Option consommateurs	2020/12/08	10
Sylvie De Bellefeuille, Lawyer, Budget and Legal Advisor
Public Interest Advocacy Centre	2020/12/08	10
John Lawford, Executive Director and General Counsel
As an individual	2020/12/10	11
Dr. Isaac I. Bogoch, Physician and Scientist Toronto General Hospital and University of Toronto
Dr. Zain Chagla, Assistant Professor, Division of Infectious Diseases, Faculty of Health Sciences McMaster University
LuminUltra Technologies Ltd.	2020/12/10	11
Patrick Taylor, Global Business Development Director New Markets
Air Canada Component of the Canadian Union of Public Employees	2021/01/26	12
Wesley Lesosky, President

Organizations and Individuals	Date	Meeting
Air Line Pilots Association International	2021/01/26	12
Tim Perry, President Air Line Pilots Association Canada
Canadian Union of Public Employees—Local 4070	2021/01/26	12
Christopher Rauenbusch, President
International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers	2021/01/26	12
Paul Cameron, Business Manager and Financial Secretary
Matt Wayland, Executive Assistant to the International Vice-President and Canadian Director of Government Relations
Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada	2021/01/26	12
Debi Daviau, President
Emily Watkins, Senior Advisor to the President
Unifor	2021/01/26	12
Jerry Dias, National President
Kaylie Tiessen, National Representative Research Department
Aerospace Industries Association of Canada	2021/01/28	13
Mike Mueller, Senior Vice-President
Air Canada Pilots Association	2021/01/28	13
Rob Giguere, Chief Executive Officer
Atlantic Canada Airports Association	2021/01/28	13
Monette Pasher, Executive Director
Derrick Stanford, President
Canadian Air Traffic Control Association	2021/01/28	13
Doug Best, President and Chief Executive Officer
International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers	2021/01/28	13
Derek Ferguson, Representative Grand Lodge
Vancouver Airport Authority	2021/01/28	13
Gerry Bruno, Executive Advisor to the President and Chief Executive Officer

Organizations and Individuals	Date	Meeting
Canadian International Freight Forwarders Association	2021/02/02	14
Julia Kuzeljevich, Public Affairs Manager
Bruce Rodgers, Executive Director
Downsview Aerospace Innovation and Research	2021/02/02	14
Samantha Anderton, Executive Director
Andrew Petrou, Chairman of the Board
Greater Toronto Airports Authority	2021/02/02	14
Ian Clarke, Chief Financial Officer
Hillary Marshall, Vice-President Stakeholder Relations and Communications
Nav Canada	2021/02/02	14
Jonathan Bagg, Director Stakeholder and Industry Relations
Ray Bohn, President and Chief Executive Officer
Pascan inc.	2021/02/02	14
Yani Gagnon, Vice-President and Chief Financial Officer
Julian Roberts, President and Chief Executive Officer
Porter Airlines Inc.	2021/02/02	14
Robert J. Deluce, Executive Chairman
Air Canada	2021/02/04	15
Jim Chung, Chief Medical Officer
David Rheault, Managing Director Government Affairs and Community Relations
WestJet Airlines Ltd.	2021/02/04	15
Andy Gibbons, Director Government Relations and Regulatory Affairs

Organizations and Individuals	Date	Meeting
Department of Transport	2021/02/18	17
Hon. Omar Alghabra, C.P., M.P., Minister of Transport
Kevin Brosseau, Assistant Deputy Minister Safety and Security
Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister Policy
Michael Keenan, Deputy Minister
Anuradha Marisetti, Assistant Deputy Minister Programs

APPENDIX B
LIST OF BRIEFS

The following is an alphabetical list of organizations and individuals who submitted briefs to the committee related to this report. For more information, please consult the committee's webpage for this study.

Aerospace Industries Association of Canada

Air North

Air Passenger Rights

Air Transport Association of Canada

Association des Pilotes et des Propriétaires de Hangar de Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu

Association of Canadian Independent Travel Advisors

Atlantic Canada Airports Association

Canadian Airports Council

Chorus Aviation Inc.

National Airlines Council of Canada

Option consommateurs

Unifor

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Pursuant to Standing Order 109, the committee requests that the government table a comprehensive response to this Report.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings (Meetings Nos. 8–15, 17 and 34–36) is tabled.

Respectfully submitted,

Vance Badawey
Chair

Supplementary Opinion of the Bloc Québécois on the Out of the Crisis report: a study of the impact of COVID-19 in the air transport sector

June 10, 2021

Introduction

First of all, the Bloc Québécois salutes the members of the Committee as well as the staff of the Library of Parliament for the professionalism they have shown and the work they have accomplished throughout this study and thanks all the witnesses and citizens who fueled the debate on what needs to be done to enable the air transport sector to emerge from the crisis.

However, it is the opinion of the Bloc Québécois that this report has omitted certain crucial elements which would have made it possible to clearly define what must be done to put in place a healthy environment for consumers and workers in the air transport sector at the end of this long troubled period.

The next few lines will serve to outline what we believe should have appeared in this report in addition to what is already there. First, a request for a firm commitment from the federal government to work with the government of Quebec and its municipalities to set up an air transport service for the regions of Quebec. Second, we should see a clear desire to strengthen protections against the anti-competitive actions of some players in the industry. And ultimately a real consideration for the issue of the sale of Air Transat.

Work with Quebec, a concept absent from consideration

It is deplorable to note that the report completely omits the need to work in collaboration with Quebec, particularly in air transport in the regions. While Quebecers living in the regions are the ones who know best what they need most in terms of air transport, this report once again vividly demonstrates the propensity of federalist parties to "Ottawa knows best".

The Quebec government and municipalities formed a task force on the revival of regional air services in Quebec to study the problems caused by the abandonment of Air Canada's regional services and provide recommendations. However, the federal government seems to completely ignore these actions taken by the people directly affected by the current crisis and prefers to act, or not to act in many cases, unilaterally and solely on the basis of what he considers good or not.

The least thing would have been to recommend that the government work in collaboration with the Government of Quebec and the municipalities to put in place solutions that really meet the needs of the community. Unfortunately, no consideration has been given to this issue.

Strengthen the fight against anti-competitive actions, an emergency for the regions of Quebec

During the committee's studies, many witnesses from Quebec highlighted Air Canada's anti-competitive practices in the regions. Although the report mentions these concerns, particularly from Mr. Yani Gagnon (Pascan), and Mr. Serge Larivière (TREQ[1]), no recommendation directly addresses this issue.

Admittedly, the committee expressed the wish that the government create a competitive environment in the air transport sector, but let us recall that before the pandemic, the Government of Canada had let Air Canada make rain or shine in the regions of Quebec and this for several years. To name only one of anti-competitive practices of Air Canada, when a competitor enters the market, Air Canada "is dumping" until said competitor is forced to leave the market. Once the result achieved, Air Canada is quick to bring its prices to a prohibitive level for many citizens in the regions.

As this situation continued for several decades [2], it would have been important for the committee to adopt a clear recommendation to ban such practices. It is to the federal government to intervene to put an end to this situation. The action could be articulated around several measures such as strengthening the powers of the Commissioner of Competition so that he can intervene quickly when this kind of situation arises or even foresee serious consequences for carriers doing so.

In short, it seems obvious to us that the committee erred in failing to include recommendations on this subject in its report. Once again, this is a situation where the reality of Quebec is ignored by Ottawa.

Lack of interest from federalist parties in the sale of Air Transat

The wording of the study motion reads as follows: "That, pursuant to order 108 (2), the Committee undertake a comprehensive study of the effects of Covid-19 on the airline industry; that at least eight meetings be scheduled for this study; that the impact of Air Transat's sale on the sector be the first point examined in the context of this study."

Unfortunately, this last portion of the motion never materialized, as the federalist parties present at the committee preferred to evade the issue as much as possible. On each occasion that the subject was raised during the various meetings of the committee, we were given a host of excuses to avoid getting to the bottom of things, for not discussing the subject or to not handing over relevant documents to the committee. However, the sale of this Quebec flagship represented a key issue in Quebec. So, it does not make sense, in our opinion, that the committee did not take this seriously into consideration.

As part of this transaction, thousands of jobs, a major head office and even competition in the market were at stake. Unfortunately, the Liberals and Conservatives have made every effort to ensure that the subject is never studied, preferring to protect the Minister of Transport so that he can make his own decision, without us having been able to get hold of all the information he had in his possession.

In our democracy, the role of the opposition is to hold the government to account for its decisions. This role is based on a principle of transparency which is crucial for public confidence in our institutions. By refusing to carefully consider the issue as part of the study, the committee has failed in one of its main objectives: to provide a space for accountability on the part of the government on the issues entrusted to it.

Faced with this observation, we can only be critical of the functioning of the Government of Canada where the Liberal and Conservative parties are only exchanging power without ever taking into consideration what matters to Quebec. This ongoing situation since the beginning of the confederation is only one more reason for Quebec to leave Canada in order to be able to look after its own interests without having to depend on a political system that only exists to perpetuate itself. The Air Transat sale case in this study is just one more example of this situation.

Conclusion

Finally, this report will have neglected three important elements in the context of this study, thus demonstrating Canada's lack of consideration towards Quebec for many issues which are dear to

it. Quebec's interests in these matters would have been better served by an independent Quebec that would not have ignored these important issues.

However, we owe it to ourselves to highlight the other elements of the report which provide recommendations that we believe to be sound, particularly regarding the reimbursement of airline tickets and aid to the air and aerospace sector. Consequently, we now wish to see the government act to enable air transport to recover from this crisis and respond favourably to the elements of this report and of this supplementary opinion.

Recommendations of the Bloc Québécois

That the Government of Canada works in collaboration with the Government of Quebec to establish priorities for solid regional air transport containing a significant amount of competition.

That the Government of Canada intervenes to prevent Air Canada and other large carriers from engaging in practices that undermine regional air competition.

This is Exhibit "12" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From the Ground Up: Revamping Canada's Air Passenger Protection Regime

Submissions to the House of Commons' Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

December 2022

Halifax, NS • AirPassengerRights.ca

Table of Contents

About Air Passenger Rights

Air Passenger Rights [APR] is an independent nonprofit organization of volunteers, devoted to empowering travellers through education, advocacy, investigation, and litigation. APR is in a unique position to comment on behalf of the public interest on revamping Canada's air passenger protection regime:

- Experience based. APR's submissions are based on the expertise and experience accumulated through assisting passengers daily in enforcing their rights.
- Independent. APR takes no government or business funding.
- No business interest. APR has no business interest in the aviation sector.

APR's presence on social media includes the Air Passenger Rights (Canada) Facebook group, with over 90,600 members, and the @AirPassRightsCA Twitter feed.

APR was founded and is led by Dr. Gábor Lukács, a Canadian air passenger rights advocate, who volunteers his time and expertise for the benefit of the travelling public.

Gábor Lukács, PhD (President)

Since 2008, Dr. Lukács has filed more than two dozen successful complaints[1] with the Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency], challenging the terms, conditions, and practices of air carriers, resulting in orders directing them to amend their conditions of carriage and offer better protection to passengers. In 2013, the Consumers' Association of Canada awarded Dr. Lukács its Order of Merit for singlehandedly initiating legal action resulting in the revision of Air Canada's unfair practices regarding overbooking.

Dr. Lukács's advocacy in the public interest and his expertise and experience in the area of passenger rights have been recognized by the transportation bar,[2] the academic community,[3] and the judiciary.[4] Dr. Lukács has appeared before courts across Canada, including the Federal Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada,[5] in respect of air passenger rights. He successfully challenged the Agency's lack of transparency and the reasonableness of the Agency's decisions. In 2020, the Federal Court of Appeal allowed Dr. Lukács to intervene in the airlines' challenge to the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, noting that he "would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties cannot."[6]

---

1 See Appendix A.
2 Carlos Martins: Aviation Practice Area Review (September 2013), WHO'SWHOLEGAL.
3 Air Passenger Rights Advocate Dr. Gabor Lukacs lectures at the IASL, Institute for Air and Space Law, October 2018.
4 Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 140 at para. 1; Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 269 at para. 43; and Lukács v. Canada, 2016 FCA 174 at para. 6.
5 Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2.
6 Order of the Federal Court of Appeal (Near, J.A.), dated March 3, 2020 in File No. A-311-19; see also International Air Transport Association v. Canadian Transportation Agency, 2022 FCA 211 at para. 8.

Executive Summary

In 2017, the air passenger protection framework created by the Transportation Modernization Act [TMA] was predicted to "double the amount of compensation that passengers are not going to receive."[7]

By 2022, that prediction has proven to be an underestimate. The soaring backlog of 30,000 passenger complaints at the Canadian Transportation Agency [CTA][8] shows that the TMA's framework is incapable of providing Canadians with meaningful protection comparable to the European Union's gold standard.[9]

The Air Passenger Protection Regulations [APPR], promulgated to implement the TMA's framework, create an undue hurdle for passengers seeking compensation and require a complex evidentiary record whose consideration consumes disproportionately large resources compared to the amounts at stake. Barriers to access to justice that the APPR creates have been aptly identified by the Nova Scotia Small Claims Court:

> 2. When consumer protection is the intended outcome of a regulatory regime, it should be assumed the regime will be in plain language, easy to understand and supports a simple claims process. The APPR, which was intended to accomplish enhanced passenger rights, accomplishes none of these. The language is complex and legalistic; one needs detailed or specific knowledge to invoke the claims system; and the process to seek compensation, once invoked, does not lend itself to quick resolution. This case illustrates that complexity, as lengthy pre-hearing processes involved the issuance of subpoenas to obtain detailed records from the Defendant about aircraft fleet information, maintenance records and other matters to support the Claim.
>
> 3. Few individuals would undertake such efforts to seek a few hundred dollars in compensation. Even if they wanted to, fewer could undertake such a claim. Close to 1000 pages of paper were exchanged, in a $400 claim.[10]

These design flaws of the APPR, which largely emanate from the TMA's misguided framework, make determining whether compensation is owed to a passenger unnecessarily labour-intensive, and have also contributed to the CTA's soaring backlog of passenger complaints in spite of substantial additional temporary funds announced in the 2022 budget and reduced travel during the pandemic.[11] In addition, the CTA's systemic failure to use its existing powers to impose meaningful Administrative Monetary Penalties (fines) on airlines that disobey the APPR make violating passengers' rights more profitable than obeying the law.

The status quo is untenable. The TMA's framework should be harmonized with the European Union's passenger protection regime, which has been tested and proven to work for more than 16 years.

---

7 Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Sep. 14, 2017) at 1905 (emphasis added).
8 Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Nov. 28, 2022) at 1605.
9 Regulation (EC) 261/2004.
10 Geddes v. Air Canada, 2021 NSSM 27 at paras. 2-3 (emphasis added); aff'd: 2022 NSSC 49.
11 Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Nov. 28, 2022) at 1545.

Simple Criteria for Automatic Standardized Compensation. Parliament should adopt the EU's classification for flight disruptions and reduce the number of categories from three to two: (1) ordinary disruptions; and (2) disruptions caused by extraordinary circumstances not inherent to the normal exercise of the airline's activity and beyond the airline's control, which could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.

Ordinary disruptions should include those caused by circumstances that were known or should have reasonably been known to the airline before the ticket was sold, all crew shortages, and all aircraft maintenance and/or safety issues except those caused by acts of sabotage or terrorism or by a manufacturing defect in an aircraft identified by the aircraft's manufacturer or a competent state authority.

In the event of an ordinary disruption, the airline should pay affected passengers a standardized compensation for their inconvenience automatically, without the passengers having to make a claim.

Clear Burden of Proof. Parliament should seal the debate on burden of proof under the APPR by declaring that it is the airline and not the passenger that has to prove all facts relating to the reasons for a flight's delay or cancellation, or denial of boarding. Canada's Carriage by Air Act, which incorporates international treaties such as the Montreal Convention, and the EU's Regulation (EC) 261/2004 both place the onus on the airline to prove extenuating circumstances to relieve itself from compensating passengers. Indeed, common sense and fairness dictate that it is the airline that should be required to present evidence of this nature, which is normally within the airline's exclusive control. It should be clarified that the law is the same with respect to the APPR.

Common Sense Definitions. Parliament should define the terms "flight cancellation" and "denial of boarding" in a manner that comports to common sense and harmonizes with the EU's Regulation (EC) 261/2004. The APPR restricts the meaning of "denial of boarding" to situations caused by overbooking, leaving passengers denied boarding for no fault of their own but for reasons other than overbooking unprotected. Furthermore, some airlines mislead passengers by referring to flight cancellations as a "schedule change."

Right to a Refund. Parliament should enshrine in primary legislation passengers' fundamental right to a refund in the original form of payment of the unused portion of any itinerary a passenger chooses to forego due to a flight's cancellation or delay, or denial of boarding. The September 2022 amendments to the APPR backpedal on passengers' well-established right to a refund for flights cancelled by the airlines, which even the CTA had recognized for decades. The amendments appear to force passengers to accept alternate transportation even if doing so defeats the passengers' purpose for travel.

Enforcement by Administrative Monetary Penalties. Obeying the APPR, and more generally, provisions of the Canada Transportation Act, should be made more profitable than disobeying them. To achieve this objective, Parliament should introduce: (1) mandatory notices of violation and Administrative Monetary Penalties (fines) for violations instead of discretionary ones; (2) prescribed minimum penalties for violations; (3) higher maximum penalties; and (4) a higher, 36-month, limitation period.

Summary of Recommended Legislative Amendments

Criteria for Automatic Standardized Compensation and Right to Refund

1. Replace paragraph 86.11(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act with:

> (b) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding, including
>
> (i) the minimum standardized monetary compensation the carrier is required to pay to each affected passenger, promptly and without the passenger having to request payment, for inconvenience for ordinary delay, cancellation or denial of boarding, as defined in this Act;
>
> (ii) the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet, irrespective of the reasons for the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding;
>
> (iii) the carrier's obligation to provide timely information and assistance to passengers, irrespective of the reasons for the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding; and
>
> (iv) the carrier's obligation to refund in the original form of payment the cost of all unused services purchased in connection with a passenger's original ticket, irrespective of the reasons for the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding, if the passenger chooses not to travel;

2. Add the following definitions to section 55(1) of the Canada Transportation Act:

> ordinary delay, cancellation, or denial of boarding means a flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding that is not extraordinary;
>
> extraordinary delay, cancellation, or denial of boarding means a flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding that could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken, and is simultaneously:
>
> (1) caused in whole by extraordinary circumstances not inherent to the normal exercise of the airline's activity and beyond the airline's control; and
>
> (2) not caused, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, by one or more of
>
> i. acts or omissions of the carrier, its agents or servants, or any third party with whom the carrier has a contractual relationship;
>
> ii. crew shortage, including but not limited to missing crew members;
>
> iii. any circumstances that were known or should have reasonably been known to the carrier before the ticket was sold to the passenger; or

iv. aircraft maintenance and/or safety issues, except those due to acts of sabotage or terrorism or a manufacturing defect in an aircraft identified by the aircraft's manufacturer or a competent state authority;

Burden of Proof

3. Add subsection 86.11(1.1) to the Canada Transportation Act:

A flight delay, flight cancellation, or denial of boarding is deemed to be ordinary unless the carrier proves otherwise on a balance of probabilities.

Definitions

4. Add the following definitions to section 55(1) of the Canada Transportation Act:

ticket means a document entitling a passenger to transportation, or anything equivalent in paperless form, including electronic form, issued or authorized by the carrier or its authorized agent;

booking means the fact that the passenger has a ticket or other proof that indicates that the booking has been accepted by the carrier;

denied boarding means the refusal to carry a passenger on a flight on which the passenger previously held a booking, including the transfer of the passenger from the flight on which they previously held a booking to another flight, for reasons other than the passenger's failure to present themselves at the airport for check-in by the time prescribed in the applicable tariff, the passenger posing a health, safety, or security risk, or the passenger lacking adequate travel documents;

flight cancellation means the failure to operate a flight that was previously planned and on which at least one passenger previously held a booking;

Enforcement

5. Replace the words "the enforcement officer may issue" with "the enforcement officer shall issue" in section 180 of the Canada Transportation Act.

6. Replace the words "prescribe the maximum amount payable" with "prescribe the minimum and maximum amount payable" in subsection 177(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act.

7. Increase the maximum amount payable for each violation to $50,000 in the case of an individual and $250,000 in the case of a corporation, respectively, in section 174 and subsection 177(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act.

8. Replace the words "twelve months" with "thirty-six months" in sections 176 and 181 of the Canada Transportation Act.

1. Criteria for Compensation

Canada's APPR has been rightly criticized by the courts for its complex and legalistic language, the need for specific knowledge to invoke the claims system, and a labour- and evidence-intensive process requiring detailed records from the airline about fleet information and maintenance. Claims under the APPR do not lend themselves to quick resolution, and require disproportionately large resources compared to the amounts at stake, thereby also posing a barrier to access to justice[12] and wasting scarce judicial resources.

There is mounting evidence of airlines abusing the APPR's unnecessary complexity, vagueness, and its various loopholes to skirt their obligations to compensate passengers for travel disruptions that were foreseeable and could have been prevented had the airline exercised due diligence. Air Canada and WestJet have been arguing about travel disruptions caused by their own crew shortages, claiming that these disruptions are "outside the carrier's control" or were "for safety purposes," and therefore no standardized compensation was owed to affected passengers under the APPR. The incidents ultimately spawned expensive and time-consuming litigation, where the airlines square off with lay passengers in the Federal Court of Appeal about the APPR's interpretation.[13] These disputes would have been unlikely under the European Union's simple and clear eligibility criteria for compensation.

In contrast, the European Union's Regulation (EC) 261/2004 is a prominent example of a functional air passenger protection regime that does not suffer from the same shortcomings as the APPR does. It also highlights that the APPR's unnecessarily complicated classification of travel disruptions and eligibility criteria for compensation is partly responsible for the CTA's backlog of 30,000 passenger complaints,[14] which continues to soar in spite of substantial additional temporary funds the CTA has received.[15]

This point can be further illuminated by estimating how long it would take a team of 60 analysts or decision-makers to clear up the CTA's 30,000-complaint backlog. If the eligibility criteria are so complex that it takes 8 working hours (1 working day) on average to resolve a complaint, then clearing up the backlog will take 500 working days, which is almost two calendar years.[16] If the criteria were only moderately complex, requiring 2 working hours on average to resolve a complaint, then clearing up the backlog would take 125 working days, which is approximately six calendar months. If the criteria were so simple that a complaint could be resolved in 30 minutes on average, then the entire backlog could be cleared in less than 32 working days, which is less than seven calendar weeks.

Canada should harmonize its air passenger protection regime with that of the European Union. It has been tested and proven to work for more than 16 years.

---

[12] Geddes v. Air Canada, 2021 NSSM 27 at paras. 2-3; aff'd: 2022 NSSC 49.

[13] "Air Canada, WestJet launch legal battles to overturn orders to compensate passengers for cancelled flights," CBC News (Nov. 4, 2022).

[14] Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Nov. 28, 2022) at 1605.

[15] Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Nov. 28, 2022) at 1545.

[16] There are about 260 working days in a calendar year.

A. Eligibility for Standardized Compensation: European Union vs. Canada

Canada's APPR categorizes flight delay, cancellation, and denial of boarding into three categories that mirror subparagraphs 86.11(1)(i)-(iii) of the Canada Transportation Act, albeit in reverse order:

(i) due to situations outside the carrier's control (s. 10);
(ii) within the carrier's control but required for safety purposes (s. 11); and
(iii) within the carrier's control but not required for safety purposes (s. 12).

The airline must pay standardized monetary compensation to passengers only if the disruption falls in the residual category of "within the carrier's control but not required for safety purposes." This classification makes denial of compensation the norm—and payment of compensation the exception.

To conclude that compensation is owed, a passenger, analyst, or decision-maker must first rule out that the disruption was "due to situations outside the carrier's control," and then must rule out that it was "required for safety purposes." Doing so also requires considering potential knock-on effects of previous disruptions (APPR, ss. 10(2) and 11(2)). Addressing these alternatives requires voluminous evidence, such as historic weather information records, airline fleet information, and aircraft maintenance records. As the Nova Scotia Small Claims Court aptly observed:

> Few individuals would undertake such efforts to seek a few hundred dollars in compensation. Even if they wanted to, fewer could undertake such a claim. Close to 1000 pages of paper were exchanged, in a $400 claim.[17]

In contrast, Regulation (EC) 261/2004 requires the carrier to pay standardized compensation for denial of boarding irrespective of the cause, and establishes payment of compensation as the norm in the event of flight delay and flight cancellation. Under the EU's regime, the airline can avoid paying compensation only in exceptional cases where the airline proves that the flight delay or cancellation was caused by "extraordinary circumstances,"[18] a narrow concept reserved for events such as volcanic eruptions, and which excludes situations that are inherent to the normal exercise of the airline's activity.

Notably, under the EU's regime, aircraft maintenance and/or safety issues are not considered to be "extraordinary circumstances" unless they are caused by acts of sabotage or terrorism or a manufacturing defect identified by the manufacturer or a competent state authority.[19] Similarly, having crew members missing was held to be part of the normal exercise of the airline's activity and outside the narrow scope of "extraordinary circumstances."[20] In short, maintenance issues and crew shortages do not relieve airlines from paying passengers standardized compensation for the resulting travel disruptions in the EU or the United Kingdom, which adopted the EU's regime as its own following Brexit.

---

[17] Geddes v. Air Canada, 2021 NSSM 27 at para. 3; aff'd: 2022 NSSC 49.
[18] Regulation (EC) 261/2004, Article 5(3).
[19] Wallentin-Hermann v. Alitalia, European Court of Justice, Case C-549/07 at para. 26.
[20] Lipton & Anor v. BA City Flyer Ltd, [2021] EWCA Civ 454.

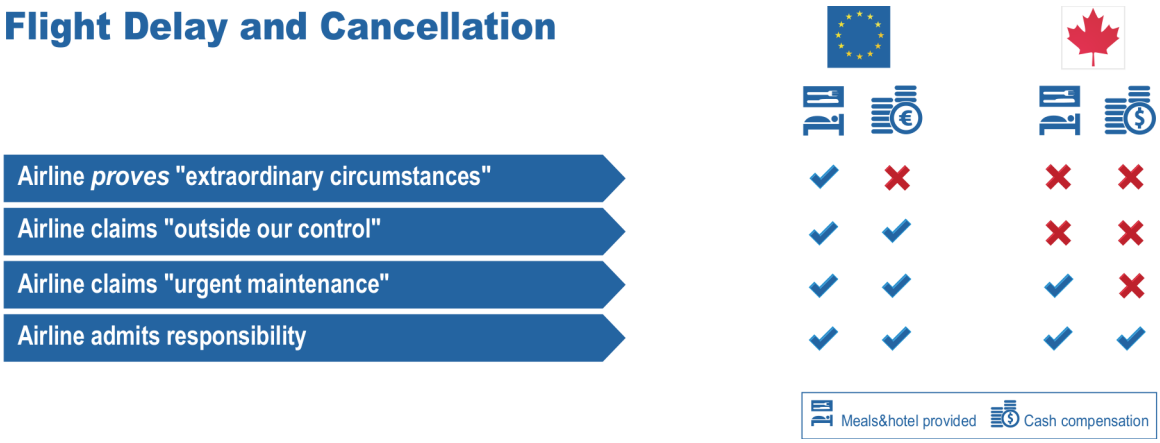

Figure 1. Flight Delay and Cancellation: European Union vs. Canada

To determine whether standardized compensation is owed to a passenger under Regulation (EC) 261/2004, in the vast majority of cases only limited information and minimal documentary evidence is required: the arrival time shown on the passenger's original ticket, the passenger's actual arrival time at their destination, and some publicly available information on the rare and exceptional events that could possibly fall within the narrow scope of "extraordinary circumstances."

Determinations of eligibility for compensation under the the EU's regime lend themselves to automatization. Indeed, unlike the APPR, Regulation (EC) 261/2004 requires airlines to pay passengers standardized compensation for flight delay and flight cancellation without the passenger having to submit a claim in writing to the airline.

B. A Case Study

Owen Lareau was originally scheduled to travel on WestJet flights from Regina to Ottawa via Toronto in July 2021. His flight from Regina to Toronto was cancelled on the day of departure because of a crew shortage. WestJet rebooked Mr. Lareau to travel the following day. He arrived at his destination 21 hours later than originally scheduled. WestJet refused to pay Mr. Lareau standardized compensation pursuant to the APPR on the basis that his flight was cancelled due to crew member availability, and that this cancellation was required for safety purposes.[21]

Ultimately, the CTA ordered WestJet to pay Mr. Lareau $1,000 standardized compensation owed under the APPR.[22] The CTA reasoned that "disruptions within the carrier's control but required for safety purposes should be limited to events that cannot be foreseen nor prevented or, in other words, that cannot be prevented by a prudent and diligent carrier."[23] The CTA went on to hold that:

[21] Lareau v. WestJet, CTA Decision No. 89-C-A-2022 at paras. 1-2.
[22] Ibid at para. 15.
[23] Ibid at para. 9 (emphasis added).

> The carrier must demonstrate that it could not have reasonably prevented the disruption despite proper planning. This includes not only contingency planning, but also advance planning to ensure that the carrier has enough staff available to operate the services it offers for sale, considering that various events can affect a carrier's day-to-day operations.
>
> [...] Nonetheless, if a crew shortage is due to the actions or inactions of the carrier, the disruption will be considered within the carrier's control for the purposes of the APPR. Indeed, a disruption caused by a crew shortage should not be considered "required for safety purposes" when it is the carrier who caused the safety issue as a result of its own actions.[24]

This reasoning undoubtedly reflects a fair common sense approach to passenger protection; nevertheless, Mr. Lareau is having to pay a high price for the legislative drafting omission of failing to spell out these basic principles in the Canada Transportation Act and the APPR.

WestJet applied for leave to appeal the CTA's decision to the Federal Court of Appeal. WestJet argued that the CTA erred in holding that the airline's own crew shortage falls outside the "within the carrier's control but required for safety purposes" category under the APPR and in expecting the airline to present evidence about its own crew situation. The court concluded that WestJet raised a fairly arguable case, and agreed to hear WestJet's appeal.[25] So, by the end of the day, Mr. Lareau, a lay passenger, has to square off with WestJet in the Federal Court of Appeal about the APPR's interpretation—over a $1,000 compensation.

C. Simplifying the Canadian Criteria and Compensation Process

Airline tickets are unique in that they are purchased days, weeks, and often months before the services' delivery date, and their price tends to increase as the travel date approaches. This means that a mere refund of an airfare paid months in advance is unlikely to cover the costs of purchasing alternate transportation or other consequences of a travel disruption that is discovered only a few days before or on the day of travel.

Requiring airlines to pay passengers standardized compensation for travel disruptions, being the only means to financially incentivize airlines to minimize loss of productivity to society caused by such disruptions, is an economically necessary mechanism to optimize the use of society's resources.

Optimal use of society's resources also includes considerations of judicial economy: how scarce and valuable judicial and quasi-judicial resources are being expended. Accordingly, the eligibility criteria and payment of standardized compensation must lend itself to quick resolution.

Determination of a passenger's entitlement to a $400 to $1,000 compensation should require only readily-available information and minimal documentary evidence, so as to permit a decision to be made within 30 minutes or less on average.

---

[24] Ibid at paras. 11-12 (emphasis added).
[25] Order of the Federal Court of Appeal (Oct. 12, 2022) in File No. 22-A-12.

Fortunately, Canada does not need to reinvent the wheel. The European Union's Regulation (EC) 261/2004, rightly dubbed a gold standard of air passenger protection, already meets the bill: it is simple, straightforward, and fair to both passengers and airlines. The strengths of the EU's regime were recognized by the United Kingdom's choice to retain and adopt that regime even in the strong post-Brexit EU-adverse political climate.[26]

We recommend that Canada follow course, and adopt key elements of the EU's regime. First, the number of categories for travel disruptions should be reduced from three to two: ordinary and extraordinary, with standardized compensation payable for ordinary disruptions.

Second, the delineation between ordinary and extraordinary disruptions should incorporate the European Union's common sense approach. Ordinary disruptions should include those caused by circumstances that were known or should have reasonably been known to the airline before the ticket was sold, all crew shortages, and all aircraft maintenance and/or safety issues except those caused by acts of sabotage or terrorism or by a manufacturing defect identified by the aircraft's manufacturer or a competent state authority. Extraordinary disruptions should only be those extraordinary circumstances that are not inherent to the normal exercise of the airline's activity and beyond the airline's control, and which could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.

Third, in the event of an ordinary disruption, the airline should pay affected passengers a standardized compensation for their inconvenience automatically, without the passengers having to make a claim.

Incorporating these sound principles into the Canada Transportation Act's legislative text would also nip in the bud expensive and time-consuming legal debates about statutory interpretation of the kind that Mr. Lareau has been caught up in with WestJet.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

1. Replace paragraph 86.11(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act with:

> (b) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding, including
>
> (i) the minimum standardized monetary compensation the carrier is required to pay to each affected passenger, promptly and without the passenger having to request payment, for inconvenience for ordinary delay, cancellation or denial of boarding, as defined in this Act;
>
> (ii) the minimum standards of treatment of passengers that the carrier is required to meet, irrespective of the reasons for the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding;

[26] Lipton & Anor v. BA City Flyer Ltd, [2021] EWCA Civ 454.

(iii) the carrier's obligation to provide timely information and assistance to passengers, irrespective of the reasons for the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding; and [...]

2. Add the following definitions to section 55(1) of the Canada Transportation Act:

ordinary delay, cancellation, or denial of boarding means a flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding that is not extraordinary;

extraordinary delay, cancellation, or denial of boarding means a flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding that could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken, and is simultaneously:

(1) caused in whole by extraordinary circumstances not inherent to the normal exercise of the airline's activity and beyond the airline's control; and

(2) not caused, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, by one or more of

i. acts or omissions of the carrier, its agents or servants, or any third party with whom the carrier has a contractual relationship;

ii. crew shortage, including but not limited to missing crew members;

iii. any circumstances that were known or should have reasonably been known to the carrier before the ticket was sold to the passenger; or

iv. aircraft maintenance and/or safety issues, except those due to acts of sabotage or terrorism or a manufacturing defect in an aircraft identified by the aircraft's manufacturer or a competent state authority;

2. Burden of Proof

The question of whether it is the passenger or the airline that has to prove the reasons for a flight delay, flight cancellation, or denial of boarding has been a source of confusion and a barrier to compensation for passengers. Since airlines normally have exclusive control over evidence of this nature, common sense, fairness, and international norms dictate that the burden of proof is on the airline to present such evidence. However, the Canada Transportation Act's and the APPR's failure to expressly address this salient point has turned the question of burden of proof into a central battleground.

Parliament should end this debate by harmonizing Canada's regime with international standards, and declaring that it is the airline and not the passenger that has to prove all facts relating to the reasons for a flight's delay or cancellation, or denial of boarding.

A. The Carriage by Air Act, the Montreal Convention, and Regulation (EC) 261/2004

Schedule VI to the the Carriage by Air Act, also known as the Montreal Convention, creates a presumption of liability for the airline and the obligation to compensate the passenger in the event of flight delays on most international itineraries to and from Canada. The airline can exonerate itself from liability and payment of compensation only if it establishes an affirmative defence:

> Article 19 - Delay
>
> The carrier is liable for damage occasioned by delay in the carriage by air of passengers, baggage or cargo. Nevertheless, the carrier shall not be liable for damage occasioned by delay if it proves that it and its servants and agents took all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damage or that it was impossible for it or them to take such measures.[27]

The principle that the burden of proof to establish extenuating circumstances is on the airline and not the passenger is the law not only in Canada,[28] but in all 139 signatory states to the Montreal Convention, an international treaty governing the rights of passengers travelling on international itineraries. Drafters of the Montreal Convention recognized that the carrier is in the best position to present evidence on the circumstances of a delay or cancellation and any facts that may relieve it from liability.

Regulation (EC) 261/2004 of the European Union is based on the same fundamental principle. Payment of compensation to passengers for travel disruption is the norm, while the airline has to establish exceptional circumstances to exonerate itself from the obligation to compensate passengers:

---

[27] Carriage by Air Act, Schedule VI ("Montreal Convention"), Article 19 (emphasis added).
[28] Carriage by Air Act, s. 2(2.1).

> 3. An operating air carrier shall not be obliged to pay compensation in accordance with Article 7, if it can prove that the cancellation is caused by extraordinary circumstances which could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.
>
> 4. The burden of proof concerning the questions as to whether and when the passenger has been informed of the cancellation of the flight shall rest with the operating air carrier.[29]

B. Burden of Proof Under the APPR

The CTA's longstanding position has been that passengers bear the burden of proving facts necessary to establish that the airline failed to comply with its obligations.[30] This could mean that passengers seeking compensation under the APPR need to prove, on balance of probabilities, that their travel disruption was not caused by reasons outside the carrier's control nor was it necessary for safety purposes.

The Nova Scotia Small Claims Court correctly recognized the unfairness caused by this state of affairs:

> It would not be fair, especially in interpreting legislation that is designed to provide consumer protection for airline passengers, for a claimant to be required prove anything about the reasons for a cancellation.[31]

In Lareau v. WestJet, the CTA held that "when a carrier claims that a disruption was within its control but required for safety purposes, or outside its control, it must establish this claim."[32] While this may be indicative of a shift in the CTA's approach to disputes of such nature, the Federal Court of Appeal's decision to hear WestJet's appeal on this point of law is indicative of the difficulty created by the Canada Transportation Act's and the APPR's silence on burden of proof.

We recommend that Parliament seal this debate by bringing burden of proof under the APPR in line with the existing and internationally accepted standards for burden of proof set out in the Carriage by Air Act, incorporating the Montreal Convention, and the European Union's regime.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

3. Add subsection 86.11(1.1) to the Canada Transportation Act:

> A flight delay, flight cancellation, or denial of boarding is deemed to be ordinary unless the carrier proves otherwise on a balance of probabilities.

---

[29] Regulation (EC) 261/2004, Articles 5(3) and 5(4).
[30] Nawrots v. Sunwing, Decision 432-C-A-2013, para. 38.
[31] Geddes v. Air Canada, 2021 NSSM 27 at para. 44; aff'd: 2022 NSSC 49.
[32] Lareau v. WestJet, CTA Decision No. 89-C-A-2022 at para. 7.

3. Definitions and Absence Thereof

Clear definitions that reflect common sense are essential to every regulatory regime. The Canada Transportation Act fails to define key concepts such as "flight cancellation" and "denial of boarding" at all. The APPR is also silent about the meaning of "flight cancellation" and represents a step backwards in defining "denial of boarding" unreasonably narrowly.

The lack of definition of "flight cancellation" enables airlines to mislead passengers about their rights by euphemistically referring to flight cancellations as a "schedule change." The unreasonably narrow definition of "denial of boarding" deprives passengers of compensation in many cases where compensation would have been owed prior to the APPR and continues to be owed under the European Union's regime.

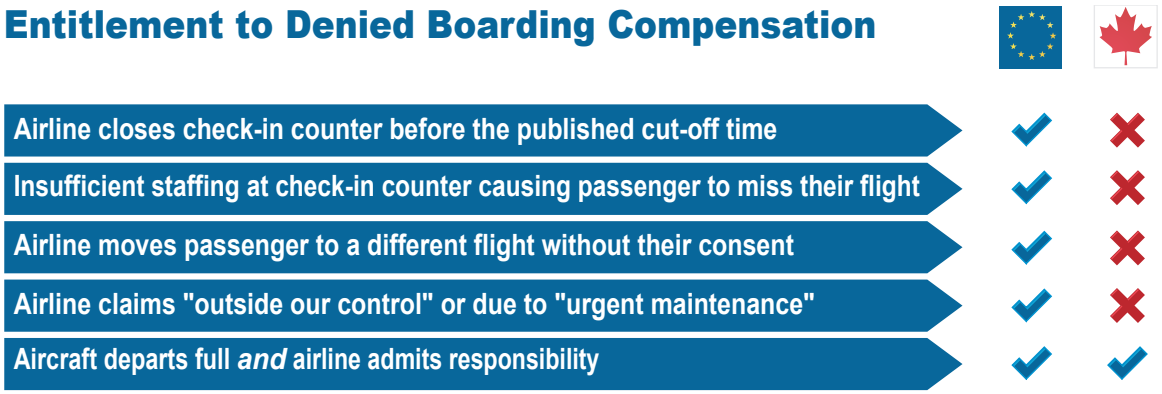

Figure 2. Denied Boarding Compensation: European Union vs. Canada

Canada should harmonize its definitions with those of the European Union, which are also more consistent with Canada's broader interpretation of denial of boarding prior to the APPR.

A. Denied Boarding Compensation Under Regulation (EC) 261/2004

In sharp contrast with the APPR, Regulation (EC) 261/2004 defines "denied boarding" as an outcome, based on simple facts that are within the passenger's knowledge, irrespective of causes that are within the airline's exclusive knowledge:

> 2(j) "denied boarding" means a refusal to carry passengers on a flight, although they have presented themselves for boarding under the conditions laid down in Article 3(2), except where there are reasonable grounds to deny them boarding, such as reasons of health, safety or security, or inadequate travel documentation;

> 3(2) Paragraph 1 shall apply on the condition that passengers:
>
> (a) have a confirmed reservation on the flight concerned and, except in the case of cancellation referred to in Article 5, present themselves for check-in,
>
> — as stipulated and at the time indicated in advance and in writing (including by electronic means) by the air carrier, the tour operator or an authorised travel agent,
>
> or, if no time is indicated,
>
> — not later than 45 minutes before the published departure time; or
>
> (b) have been transferred by an air carrier or tour operator from the flight for which they held a reservation to another flight, irrespective of the reason.

In other words, under the EU's regime, a passenger who is refused transportation does not have to prove that the flight was overbooked, but only has to prove that they held a "confirmed reservation" and that they "presented themselves for check-in" on time or that they "have been transferred" by the airline to a different flight. Both of these are within the knowledge of a passenger and can reasonably be proven.

B. Denied Boarding Compensation Before and Under the APPR

In 2013, before the Transportation Modernization Act [TMA] was enacted and the APPR was promulgated, the CTA held that:

> [84] Where a carrier fails to check in passengers because of the absence of personnel at the counter prior to the cut-off time for check in, the Agency is of the opinion that it is reasonable that compensation be tendered:
>
> - when passengers holding confirmed and ticketed reservations can demonstrate that they presented themselves at the ticket counter prior to the cut-off time for check in; and,
>
> - when the ticket counter was closed.
>
> [85] For greater clarity, where such passengers present themselves for boarding before the cut-off time, only to discover that the check-in counter has been closed, the carrier cannot avoid paying denied boarding compensation, regardless of whether or not the flight is fully booked, nor can it avoid liability by closing the check-in counter early.[33]

Similarly, in 2016, also before the TMA and the APPR, the CTA coined the notion of de facto or constructive denied boarding, and confirmed passengers' entitlement to compensation in such situations:

---

[33] Nawrots v. Sunwing, Decision 432-C-A-2013, paras. 84-85 (emphasis added).

> [19] The Agency agrees with the applicants that the affected passengers had previously confirmed space on a flight, and then were subsequently denied seats on that flight because of a lack of available seats on the aircraft. According to Air Transat, Flight No. TS246 departed with only one empty seat, and Flight No. TS247 departed with no empty seats. The fact that Air Transat notified the passengers in advance about having moved them to other flights does not relieve Air Transat of the obligation to pay denied boarding compensation. The fact is that there were insufficient seats to accommodate the applicants, despite the fact that they had previously confirmed seats, and that they were involuntarily moved to another flight. This is a case of de facto or constructive denied boarding.
>
> [20] The Agency appreciates that this situation may be unique, and not a typical case of denied boarding that normally occurs at the gate. However, effectively, the applicants were involuntarily denied boarding on their original flight because Air Transat elected, unilaterally, to give preference to other passengers who had been moved to their flight with the effect that the flight became oversold, resulting in prejudice to the applicants. Rather than wait for the applicants to arrive at the airport and deny them boarding at that time, they were instead moved, without their consent, to another flight in advance. The effect is the same. The applicants were not permitted to board their original flight because there was no longer room for them. It was oversold and they were "bumped".[34]

The APPR has substantially narrowed the definition of "denial of boarding" by superimposing the requirement that the flight is actually overbooked at the time of boarding:

> For the purpose of these Regulations, there is a denial of boarding when a passenger is not permitted to occupy a seat on board a flight because the number of seats that may be occupied on the flight is less than the number of passengers who have checked in by the required time, hold a confirmed reservation and valid travel documentation and are present at the boarding gate at the required boarding time.[35]

Under the APPR's narrow definition, de facto or constructive denied boarding are not considered "denied boarding" because the unilateral change to the passengers' itinerary happens in advance and not at the airport, and the number of passengers present at the boarding gate is not greater than the number of seats available. This provides a loophole for airlines and offers no protection to passengers in these situations.

A Case Study

Mia and Joel Mackoff held confirmed bookings on an Air Canada flight to Vancouver. Yet, when they presented themselves for check-in, they were refused boarding, because the airline's agent mistakenly believed that they did not meet some travel requirements. As a matter of fact, they were both eligible to travel. Air Canada refused to pay the Mackoffs denied boarding compensation under the APPR, because overbooking was not the reason for their denial of boarding.[36]

---

[34] Janmohamed v. Air Transat, Decision No. 95-C-A-2016, paras. 19-20 (emphasis added).
[35] APPR, s. 1(3) (emphasis added).
[36] Mackoff v. Air Canada, 2022 BCCRT 1121 at paras. 2 and 12-19.

Common sense would dictate that the Mackoffs should have been paid denied boarding compensation. Indeed, had the Mackoffs' case happened at an airport in the European Union, they would have undoubtedly been eligible for denied boarding compensation under Regulation (EC) 261/2004.

The British Columbia Civil Resolutions Tribunal [CRT], however, concluded that "denial of boarding" in the APPR can only be interpreted to mean denial of boarding due to overbooking, and agreed with Air Canada that no denied boarding compensation was owed to the Mackoffs under the APPR.[37]

The CRT's analysis demonstrates the significant tension between the APPR's terminology and common sense, which cries for Parliament's intervention.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

4. Add the following definitions to section 55(1) of the Canada Transportation Act:

> ticket means a document entitling a passenger to transportation, or anything equivalent in paperless form, including electronic form, issued or authorized by the carrier or its authorized agent;
>
> booking means the fact that the passenger has a ticket or other proof that indicates that the booking has been accepted by the carrier;
>
> denied boarding means the refusal to carry a passenger on a flight on which the passenger previously held a booking, including the transfer of the passenger from the flight on which they previously held a booking to another flight, for reasons other than the passenger's failure to present themselves at the airport for check-in by the time prescribed in the applicable tariff, the passenger posing a health, safety, or security risk, or the passenger lacking adequate travel documents;
>
> flight cancellation means the failure to operate a flight that was previously planned and on which at least one passenger previously held a booking;

[37] Ibid at paras. 26-29.

4. Right to a Refund

For close to twenty years, it has been settled law in Canada that passengers whose flights were cancelled by the airline for any reason are entitled to a refund of all amounts paid for unused services. This common sense principle, coined a "fundamental right,"[38] is deeply rooted in the common law and provincial and federal legislation, and has been expressly recognized in this Committee's recent report.[39]

Yet, passengers' fundamental right to a refund has not been consolidated in the APPR. The APPR's September 2022 amendments compound the confusion by purporting to backpedal on passengers' well-established right to a refund, and appearing to force passengers to accept alternate transportation even if doing so defeats the passengers' purpose for travel. This state of affairs not only creates confusion, but is also inconsistent with the standards of not only the European Union or the United States, but also of Israel, and even Turkey.

Parliament should bring Canada in line with other jurisdictions by codifying in primary legislation passengers' fundamental right to a refund in the original form of payment of the unused portion of any itinerary a passenger chooses to forego due to a flight's cancellation or delay, or denial of boarding.

A. The State of the Law Before and After the Original APPR

Passengers' fundamental right to a refund had already been established well before the APPR. The legislative provisions giving effect to this right are found in the Canada Transportation Act and the Air Transportation Regulations. Every air carrier operating an air service within, to, and from Canada must establish a "tariff,"[40] setting out clearly the airlines' policies with respect to certain enumerated matters, including:

> refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason,[41]

The tariff operates as the contract of carriage between the air carrier and passengers. The terms and conditions set out in the tariff are legally binding on the air carrier.[42] The terms and conditions are subject to the statutory requirement that they must be just and reasonable.[43]

---

[38] Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, CTA Decision No. 313-C-A-2013 at para. 15.
[39] Emerging from the Crisis: A Study of the Impact of the COVID-19 Pandemic on the Air Transport Sector, Report of the Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities (June 2021), p. 6, Recommendations 22-24.
[40] Canada Transportation Act, s. 67(1); Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, s. 110(1).
[41] Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, ss. 107(1)(n)(xii) and 122(c)(xii) (emphasis added).
[42] Canada Transportation Act, s. 67(3); Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, s. 110(4).
[43] Canada Transportation Act, s. 67.2(1); Air Transportation Regulations, SOR/88-58, s. 111(1).

In 2004, some 15 years before the APPR, the CTA already formally recognized that the aforementioned legislative provisions give rise to the right to a refund for passengers whose flights were cancelled by the airline for any reason.[44] In 2013, the CTA reaffirmed this right, and coined it a "fundamental right."[45] In a second decision from 2013, the CTA reaffirmed this right again, and held that:

> [...] it is unreasonable for [the airline] to refuse to refund the fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond [the airline's] control.[46]

In a subsequent 2014 decision, the CTA reinforced this conclusion:

> [33] The Agency finds that as they allow [the airline] to refuse the tendering of refunds when a flight is cancelled for reasons outside the passenger's control, Existing Tariff Rules 3.4 and 15 are unreasonable within the meaning of subsection 111(1) of the ATR. The Agency finds that the Rules fail to strike a balance between the passengers' rights to be subject to reasonable terms and conditions of carriage and [the airline's] statutory, commercial and operational obligations.[47]

At the time the APPR was drafted, we expressed serious concerns about the APPR's silence on passengers' existing fundamental right to a refund. We predicted that this omission would cause confusion and enable abuse by the airlines.[48] Regrettably, the CTA failed to follow our recommendation to consolidate this right into the APPR.

The omission of passengers' fundamental right to a refund from the APPR does not negate that right, because the APPR is not a complete code. The provisions of the Canada Transportation Act and the Air Transportation Regulations giving rise to passengers' fundamental right to a refund were not amended or negated by the TMA nor by the APPR, and remain in full force. In short, passengers' fundamental right to a refund has always been and remained the law, and part of the parties' contracts. Parliament should put to rest any confusion by enshrining the right to refund in primary legislation.

B. The Government's Disinformation Campaign About Passengers' Right to Refunds

At the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Government of Canada engaged in a calculated disinformation campaign to defeat passengers' fundamental right to a refund under federal and provincial legislation, and to thereby unlawfully secure financial benefits for airlines. For example, on March 18, 2020, Mr. Colin Stacey, the Director General of Air Policy at Transport Canada, wrote to Ms. Marcia Jones, the former Chief Strategy Officer at the CTA, that:

---

[44] Re: Air Transat, CTA Decision No. 28-A-2004.
[45] Lukács v. Sunwing, CTA Decision No. 313-C-A-2013 at para. 15.
[46] Lukács v. Porter, CTA Decision No. 344-C-A-2013 at para. 88 (emphasis added).
[47] Lukács v. Porter, CTA Decision No. 31-C-A-2014 at para. 33 (emphasis added).
[48] Deficiencies of the Proposed Air Passenger Protection Regulations, pp. 42-44 (February 2019).

> Air Transat are telling us that they are getting pressure from creditors who are pushing on the airlines for cash. They will request that we officially let them to provide vouchers to passengers instead of providing them cash because they literally do not have enough cash to give refunds.[49]

Subsequently, both Air Canada and Air Transat submitted lists of "asks" to the CTA that included the CTA stating publicly that passengers were not owed refunds for flights the airlines cancelled.[50]

On March 25, 2020, the CTA published its "Statement on Vouchers" that told the public, without any basis or authority, that airlines do not have to refund cancelled flights, but may provide an I-owe-you instead. The CTA advanced pseudolegal propositions that conflate a "refund" with "compensation for inconvenience." The CTA conceded that the "Statement on Vouchers" was not legally binding and did not alter passengers' rights to a refund only after it was directed to explain itself by the Federal Court of Appeal. Yet, the Agency continued to display an amended version of the "Statement on Vouchers" on its website.

In December 2020, the Government of Canada continued its disinformation campaign by stating that the COVID-19 pandemic highlighted a "gap" in the APPR,[51] and the Transport Minister directing the CTA to enact further regulations to close this purported gap.[52] These were nothing more than face-saving measures to excuse the government's failure to enforce passengers' fundamental right.

There was no gap in the laws of Canada nor in the obligations of airlines in terms of refunding passengers for flights cancelled by the airlines, irrespective of the reasons for the cancellation. These well-established obligations flow from provisions of the Canada Transportation Act and the Air Transportation Regulations, and were previously recognized by the CTA in multiple decisions.

C. The APPR's September 2022 Amendments Create Even More Confusion

The APPR's September 2022 amendments address flight delays and cancellations that are classified as being "outside the carrier's control." They require airlines to offer passengers the choice between a refund in the original form of payment and alternate transportation only if no alternate transportation is available within 48 hours.

The amended APPR offers no protection to passengers whose flight is cancelled due to reasons outside the carrier's control, but for whom travelling 6 or 12 or 24 hours later defeats the purpose of their travel. Instead, they create even more confusion. While passenger may be able to enforce their right to a refund in small claims courts, airlines will undoubtedly argue that the APPR's amendments permit the airline to keep passengers' money if they are able to offer alternate transportation departing within 48 hours.

---

[49] Mr. Stacey's Email dated March 18, 2020 at 2:57 PM (emphasis).
[50] Asks.docx, CTA disclosure dated July 21, 2022 in Federal Court File No. A-102-20.
[51] Consultation paper: Development of new airline refund requirements, CTA's website.
[52] Direction Respecting Flight Cancellations for Situations Outside of a Carrier's Control, SOR/2020-283.

i. Impact on Weekend Travel: Example

Alex lives in Toronto, and works during the week. With the exception of paid vacation days, weekends are Alex's only opportunity to travel. Alex booked a round-trip ticket, leaving from Toronto to Boston on Friday at 17:00, and leaving Boston on Sunday afternoon at 15:00.

On Friday, Alex's flight from Toronto to Boston is cancelled due to bad weather; it is clearly outside the airline's control. The airline offers Alex alternate transportation on a flight departing Toronto at 10:30 on Sunday morning and arriving in Boston at 12:15.

The itinerary no longer serves any purpose for Alex. By the time Alex arrives in Boston, Alex would have to check-in to the 15:00 return flight. Alex, who works five days a week, cannot defer the return flight until Tuesday.

The APPR, as amended, offers Alex no right to a refund, because the airline offered alternate transportation that departs within 48 hours of the departure time indicated on Alex's ticket.

ii. Impact on Holiday Travel: Example

Sam studies in Vancouver. Sam's family in Montreal booked a ticket for Sam to come home for New Year's Eve, departing Vancouver on December 30 at 23:20, and arriving in Montreal at 06:40 on December 31, the next day, and departing Montreal at 10:30 on January 2.

On December 30, Sam's flight is cancelled due to a snow storm; it is clearly outside the airline's control. The airline offers to transport Sam on January 1 at 15:00, arriving in Montreal at 22:30.

The itinerary no longer serves any purpose for Sam. If Sam were to accept the alternate itinerary, Sam would not be spending New Year's Eve and New Year's Day with their family, and would be spending a mere 12 hours in Montreal.

The APPR, as amended, does not provide Sam (or Sam's family) with a right to a refund, because the airline offered alternate transportation departing within 48 hours of the time indicated on Sam's ticket.

iii. Travel is Time-Sensitive

Alex and Sam are average passengers, who exemplify common time constraints present in the lives of virtually every person in a contemporary Western society. The travel of passengers attending a wedding, a funeral, a business meeting, a conference, or a court hearing is even more time-sensitive.

Canada's treatment of passengers' fundamental right to a refund is an outlier. Alex and Sam would have no difficulty obtaining a refund in the original form of payment not only in the European Union or the United States, but also in Israel or even Turkey.

D. Passengers' Fundamental Right to a Refund in Other Jurisdictions

Passengers' fundamental right to a refund for flights cancelled by airlines, irrespective of the reasons for the cancellation, is a universal commercial standard that is widely recognized outside Canada.

European Union. The key provisions of Regulation (EC) 261/2004 on passengers' fundamental right to a refund are as follows:[53]

- Eligibility: Flight is cancelled or delayed by more than 5 hours (irrespective of reasons).
- Rights: Refund and transportation to point of departure.
- Time Line for Refund: Within 7 days.
- Form of Refund: Cash, electronic bank transfer, bank orders or bank cheques or, with the signed agreement of the passenger, in travel vouchers and/or other services.

United States. The United States Department of Transportation's longstanding position has been that airlines must promptly refund tickets when the airline cancels the passenger's flight or makes a significant change in the schedule and the passenger chooses not to accept the alternative offered by the carrier:

> Since at least the time of an Industry Letter of July 15, 1996 [...] the Department's Aviation Enforcement Office has advised carriers that refusing to refund a non-refundable fare when a flight is canceled and the passenger wishes to cancel is a violation of 49 U.S.C. 41712 (unfair or deceptive practices) and would subject a carrier to enforcement action.[54]

On April 3, 2020, the United States Department of Transportation issued an Enforcement Notice reminding airlines of their obligation to promptly refund passengers for cancelled flights, reaffirmed the aforementioned principles,[55] and reinforced its position in a subsequently issued FAQ:

> Airlines and ticket agents are required to make refunds promptly. For airlines, prompt is defined as being within 7 business days if a passenger paid by credit card, and within 20 days if a passenger paid by cash or check.[56]

In November 2021, Air Canada agreed to pay a record US$4.5 million fine for having breached passengers' fundamental right to a refund in the United States.[57]

---

[53] Regulation (EC) 261/2004, Articles 5(1)(a), 6(1)(iii), 8(1)(a), and 7(3).

[54] Enhancing Airline Passenger Protections, 76 Fed. Reg. 23110-01, at 23129 (Apr. 25, 2011) (emphasis added).

[55] Enforcement Notice Regarding Refunds by Carriers Given the Unprecedented Impact of the COVID-19 Public Health Emergency on Air Travel, US DOT (April 3, 2020).

[56] Frequently Asked Questions Regarding Airline Ticket Refunds Given the Unprecedented Impact of the COVID-19 Public Health Emergency on Air Travel, US DOT (May 12, 2020) (emphasis added).

[57] Air Canada agrees to $4.5-million settlement over delayed U.S. passenger refunds, Financial Post (Nov. 22, 2021); see also Joint Motion for Approval of Proposed Settlement Agreement (Nov. 22, 2021).

The United States Department of Transportation is currently conducting consultations to not only codify passengers' fundamental right to a refund of flights that are cancelled or significantly delayed by the airline, but to include situations where a flight does operate on time but a passenger decides to forego travel due to circumstances related to a serious communicable disease.[58]

Israel. In 2012, Israel passed the Aviation Service Law (Compensation and Assistance for Flight Cancellation or Change of Conditions), 5772-2012 [ASL],[59] whose key provisions on passengers' fundamental right to a refund are as follows:

- Eligibility: Flight is cancelled or delayed by more than 8 hours (irrespective of reasons).
- Rights: Reimbursement of consideration (including fees, levies, taxes and other obligatory payments) or replacement ticket, at the passenger's choice.
- Time Line for Reimbursement: Within 21 days.
- Form of Reimbursement: Original form of payment.

Turkey. In 2012, Turkey adopted its Regulation on Air Passenger Rights (SHY-Passenger), which mirrors the European Union's Regulation 261/2004.[60]

We recommend that Parliament grant Canadian passengers the same rights and protections that European, American, Israeli, and even Turkish passengers have been enjoying for years.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

1.* Add to proposed paragraph 86.11(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act set out in Recommended Legislative Amendment No. 1:

> (b) respecting the carrier's obligations in the case of flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding, including
>
> [...]
>
> (iv) the carrier's obligation to refund in the original form of payment the cost of all unused services purchased in connection with a passenger's original ticket, irrespective of the reasons for the delay, cancellation or denial of boarding, if the passenger chooses not to travel;

---

[58] Airline Ticket Refunds and Consumer Protections, 87. Fed. Reg. 51550-01, at 51576-51579 (Aug. 22, 2022).

[59] Aviation Service Law (Compensation and Assistance for Flight Cancellation or Change of Conditions), 5772-2012 in English.

[60] SHY-Passenger in English, Articles 6(1)(a), 7(1)(3), and 9(1)(a).

5. Enforcement: Efficiency and Lack Thereof

In addition to the CTA's well-documented cozy relationship with the airline industry and well-founded concerns about its impartiality, the CTA is also caught in a "graveyard spiral" with respect to enforcement.

The CTA's enforcement actions are virtually nonexistent. The few notices of violation and the attached Administrative Monetary Penalties are merely symbolic, making it more profitable for airlines to systematically disobey the APPR rather than obeying it. Due to the systemic violations of the APPR, the CTA is overwhelmed with a ballooning number of passenger complaints. Soaring passenger complaints tie up more and more of the CTA's resources, thereby further undermining any real prospect of meaningful enforcement actions, and causing unnecessary waste of taxpayer dollars.

Parliament's intervention is sorely needed to break this vicious circle.

A. Requirements of an Effective Enforcement Mechanism

Statutes and regulations must be supported by effective enforcement mechanisms that not only correct non-compliance, but also create sufficient disincentives for disobeying the law to keep violations down to manageable levels. For example, if the only consequence for theft were having to return the stolen goods and only when caught, theft would become rampant and the police would be hopelessly overwhelmed.

This principle applies with greater force to regulatory legislation, whose purpose is to protect broad segments of the public, such as consumers, from the potentially adverse effects of otherwise lawful activity.[61] While stiffer penalties are known to have little to no effect in curbing crime, they are powerful tools in enforcing regulatory legislation.

When the objective of a regulatory regime is behaviour modification of profit-oriented activities, the disincentives for disobeying the law must be significant enough to make obeying the regime more profitable than risking being caught disobeying it. If the odds and the costs of being caught are too small compared to the cost of compliance, then it is more profitable to disobey the law and treat the penalties as merely the cost of doing business.

For example, if the cost of obeying the law is $4 per transaction and the odds of being caught disobeying the law is 2% (1 out of 50 transactions), then the penalty has to exceed 50 × $4 = $200 per violation to make obeying the law the more profitable option. While a penalty in excess of $200 may appear harsh at first sight in the context of a transaction where the cost of compliance is only $4, any lesser penalty makes unlawful behaviour a net cost saver, and incentivizes all rational actors who seek to maximize profits to disobey the law.

---

[61] R. v. Wholesale Travel Group Inc., [1991] 3 SCR 154 (per Cory, J.).

B. The Canada Transportation Act's Enforcement Provisions and Their Points of Failure

Contravening any provision of Canada Transportation Act [Act] and any regulation made under the Act, such as the APPR, is a summary conviction offence punishable by a fine of up to $5,000 in the case of an individual, and up to $25,000 in the case of a corporation (s. 174).

The CTA may also designate provisions of the Act and of regulations made under the Act as provisions the contravention of which may be dealt with by way of a notice of violation and an Administrative Monetary Penalty of up to $5,000 per violation in the case of an individual, and up to $25,000 per violation in the case of a corporation (s. 177). Once a provision has been designated, it is up to the discretion of a Designated Enforcement Officer of the CTA whether to issue a notice of violation and a corresponding penalty (s. 180).

Both enforcement mechanisms are discretionary, with no prescribed minimum but only maximum penalties, and proceedings must be commenced within twelve (12) months of the violation (ss. 176 and 181).

The vast majority of the APPR's provisions have been designated as provisions the contravention of which may be dealt with by way of a notice of violation and an Administrative Monetary Penalty of up to $5,000 for an individual and $25,000 for a corporation, per violation.[62] Yet, no notice of violation nor Administrative Monetary Penalty has ever been issued to any airline for contravening the APPR's key provisions about providing passengers with alternate transportation[63] or the payment of monetary compensation for inconvenience.[64]

The only marginally relevant notice of violation to date was issued to WestJet on September 13, 2022 for fifty-five (55) contraventions of subsection 19(4) of the APPR that all took place on January 18-30, 2022, for not providing prescribed compensation or an explanation as to why compensation was not payable within 30 days after receiving the passenger's request for compensation. WestJet was issued a $200 Administrative Monetary Penalty per violation, for a total of $11,000 for the 55 violations.[65]

WestJet's notice of violation is symptomatic of the points of failure of the Act's enforcement provisions. First, given that 55 contraventions were found within the 12-day period from January 18 to 30, 2022, these are likely a small fraction of WestJet's violations of just one provision of the APPR. Yet, because notices of violation are discretionary and proceedings must be commenced within twelve months of the violation, a large number of violations likely had no consequences for WestJet.

Second, and perhaps more importantly, the penalty of $200 is grossly inadequate for violations where the gain from disobeying the law is between $400 and $1,000 per violation, as it is in the case for failing to pay standardized compensation owed under the APPR.

---

[62] APPR, s. 32.
[63] APPR, s. 17(1).
[64] APPR, ss. 19(1)-(2) and 20(1).
[65] WestJet Contravention, Canadian Transportation Agency's Website.

As noted earlier, if the odds of the airline being caught and issued a notice of violation is 2% (1 out of 50 actual contraventions), then the penalty has to exceed 50 × $400 = $20,000 per violation to make obeying the APPR more profitable than refusing to compensate passengers. By the same logic, if the odds of being caught are lower, say 1% (1 out of 100 actual contraventions), then the penalty has to exceed 100 × $400 = $40,000 per violation. Notably, this is more than what the Act currently permits. Yet, any lesser penalty makes unlawful behaviour a net cost saver, and incentivizes airlines to disobey the APPR and pay the few Administrative Monetary Penalties that are actually issued.

The presence of a financial incentive for airlines to disobey the APPR is also evidenced by, and explains in part, the CTA's backlog of 30,000 passenger complaints,[66] which continues to soar in spite of substantial additional temporary funds the CTA has received.[67]

We are of the view that Parliament's intervention is needed to correct this state of affairs. First, issuance of notices of violation and Administrative Monetary Penalties for contraventions should be mandatory and not a matter of discretion. Second, minimum penalties should be introduced so that obeying provisions of the Act and regulations made under the Act is more profitable than disobeying them. Third, the maximum penalties should be raised to match the levels for violations of the Accessible Canada Act (s. 177(3)).

Lastly, bearing in mind that it currently takes 18-24 months from the filing of a complaint with the CTA until it is actually reviewed, the limitation period for commencing proceedings for violations should be raised to thirty-six (36) months.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

5. Replace the words "the enforcement officer may issue" with "the enforcement officer shall issue" in section 180 of the Canada Transportation Act.

6. Replace the words "prescribe the maximum amount payable" with "prescribe the minimum and maximum amount payable" in subsection 177(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act.

7. Increase the maximum amount payable for each violation to $50,000 in the case of an individual and $250,000 in the case of a corporation, respectively, in section 174 and subsection 177(1)(b) of the Canada Transportation Act.

8. Replace the words "twelve months" with "thirty-six months" in sections 176 and 181 of the Canada Transportation Act.

---

[66] Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Nov. 28, 2022) at 1605.
[67] Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Nov. 28, 2022) at 1545.

Appendix

A. Final Decisions Arising from Dr. Lukács's Successful Complaints (Highlights)

1. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 208-C-A-2009;
2. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 313-C-A-2010;
3. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 477-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-41);
4. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 483-C-A-2010
(leave to appeal denied, Federal Court of Appeal File No.: 10-A-42);
5. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 291-C-A-2011;
6. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 418-C-A-2011;
7. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 182-C-A-2012;
8. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 250-C-A-2012;
9. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 251-C-A-2012;
10. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 248-C-A-2012;
11. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 249-C-A-2012;
12. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 252-C-A-2012;
13. Lukács v. United Airlines, Decision No. 467-C-A-2012;
14. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 16-C-A-2013;
15. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 204-C-A-2013;
16. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 227-C-A-2013;
17. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2013;
18. Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines, Decision No. 313-C-A-2013;
19. Lukács v. Air Transat, Decision No. 327-C-A-2013;
20. Lukács v. Air Canada, Decision No. 342-C-A-2013;
21. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 344-C-A-2013;
22. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 10-C-A-2014;
23. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 31-C-A-2014;
24. Lukács v. Porter Airlines, Decision No. 249-C-A-2014;
25. Lukács v. WestJet, Decision No. 420-C-A-2014; and
26. Lukács v. British Airways, Decision No. 49-C-A-2016.

This is Exhibit "13" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Losing Ground: Erosion of Canada's Air Passenger Protection Regime

Submissions to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications

May 2023

Halifax, NS • AirPassengersRights.ca

Table of Contents

About Air Passenger Rights

Air Passenger Rights [APR] is an independent nonprofit organization of volunteers, devoted to empowering travellers through education, advocacy, investigation, and litigation.

APR has a track record of successfully predicting shortcomings and loopholes in legislation relating to air passenger rights.

- In 2017, APR appeared before the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities [TRAN] and submitted a brief, cautioning that the Transportation Modernization Act (Bill C-49) was inadequate.
- In 2018, APR appeared before the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications and submitted a brief, cautioning again that the Transportation Modernization Act was inadequate.
- In 2019, APR published a 52-page report entitled "Deficiencies of the Proposed Air Passenger Protection Regulations" about how airlines would exploit the APPR's shortcomings and loopholes.
- In 2020, APR appeared before the TRAN and in 2021 submitted a brief entitled "Withheld Passenger Refunds: A Failure by Design" on the refunding of flights cancelled by airlines.
- In November 2022, APR appeared before the TRAN and in December 2022, mere days before the 2022 holiday season air travel meltdown, APR submitted a 29-page brief entitled "From the Ground Up: Revamping Canada's Air Passenger Protection Regime" setting out detailed recommendations for legislative amendments.
- In 2023, following the 2022 holiday season air travel meltdown, APR appeared before the TRAN again as part of the study of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations.

APR's key predictions about the shortcomings and loopholes created by the Transportation Modernization Act and the Air Passenger Protection Regulations have been validated in the four years that have passed since the regulations came into force.

APR's success in predicting shortcomings and loopholes in consumer protection legislation in the air travel sector is grounded in three factors:

- Experience based. APR's predictions and submissions are based on the expertise and experience accumulated through assisting passengers daily in enforcing their rights.
- Independent. APR takes no government or business funding.
- No business interest. APR has no business interest in the aviation sector.

APR's presence on social media includes the Air Passenger Rights (Canada) Facebook group, with over 111,000 members, and the @AirPassRightsCA Twitter feed.

APR was founded and is led by Dr. Gábor Lukács, a Canadian air passenger rights advocate, who volunteers his time and expertise for the benefit of the travelling public.

Gábor Lukács, PhD (President)

Since 2008, Dr. Lukács has filed more than two dozen successful complaints with the Canadian Transportation Agency [Agency], challenging the terms, conditions, and practices of air carriers, resulting in orders directing them to amend their conditions of carriage and offer better protection to passengers. In 2013, the Consumers' Association of Canada awarded Dr. Lukács its Order of Merit for singlehandedly initiating legal action resulting in the revision of Air Canada's unfair practices regarding overbooking.

Dr. Lukács's advocacy in the public interest and his expertise and experience in the area of passenger rights have been recognized by the transportation bar,[1] the academic community,[2] and the judiciary.[3] Dr. Lukács has appeared before courts across Canada, including the Federal Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada,[4] in respect of air passenger rights. He successfully challenged the Agency's lack of transparency and the reasonableness of the Agency's decisions. In 2020, the Federal Court of Appeal allowed Dr. Lukács to intervene in the airlines' challenge to the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, noting that he "would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties cannot."[5]

---

1 Carlos Martins: Aviation Practice Area Review (September 2013), WHO'SWHOLEGAL.

2 Air Passenger Rights Advocate Dr. Gabor Lukacs lectures at the IASL, Institute for Air and Space Law, October 2018.

3 Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 140 at para. 1; Lukács v. Canada, 2015 FCA 269 at para. 43; and Lukács v. Canada, 2016 FCA 174 at para. 6.

4 Delta Air Lines Inc. v. Lukács, 2018 SCC 2.

5 Order of the Federal Court of Appeal (Near, J.A.), dated March 3, 2020 in File No. A-311-19; see also International Air Transport Association v. Canadian Transportation Agency, 2022 FCA 211 at para. 8.

Executive Summary

In 2017, the air passenger protection framework created by the Transportation Modernization Act [TMA] was predicted to "double the amount of compensation that passengers are not going to receive."[6]

By 2023, that prediction has proven to be an underestimate. The soaring backlog of 45,000 passenger complaints at the Canadian Transportation Agency [CTA][7] shows that the TMA's framework is incapable of providing Canadians with meaningful protection comparable to the European Union's gold standard.[8]

Today, it is clear to everyone that the status quo is untenable, and even the government acknowledges that Canada's air passenger protection regime needs to be substantially strengthened. The question is how.

In March 2023, MP Taylor Bachrach tabled the Strengthening Air Passenger Protection Act (Bill C-327), a private member's bill to harmonize Canada's air passenger protection regime with the European Union's gold standard. Bill C-327 has been endorsed by Canada's leading consumer protection organizations.

Instead of adopting the Strengthening Air Passenger Protection Act (Bill C-327) as a government bill and listening to thousands of Canadians who signed a House of Commons petition, the government has put forward legislative amendments in the Budget Implementation Act [BIA] that have the opposite effect.

Encroachment on Fundamental Rights. The BIA proposes to create a secretive, Star Chamber-like process for binding adjudication of consumer disputes between passengers and airlines, deeming all information used in the process confidential, and excluding public and media access (clause 459, s. 85.09). The proposed amendment infringes upon Canadians' freedom of expression and the open court principle guaranteed by s. 2(b) of the Charter. In addition, binding orders would be issued on the basis of mere "information" rather than evidence (clause 459, s. 85.06(1)), thereby violating the right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice, protected by s. 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

No Statutory Right of Appeal. The BIA unwittingly removes the existing statutory right of appeal from binding orders in consumer disputes between passengers and airlines (clause 459, s. 86.06(2)).

Bypassing the System of Checks and Balances: Henry VIII Clause. The BIA proposes to add a "Henry VIII clause" that allows the Agency to change the law in the guise of legally binding guidelines (clause 459, s. 85.12) while bypassing the system of checks and balances set out in the Statutory Instruments Act. The Agency will be able to make and modify overnight guidelines affecting Canadian passengers' rights overnight, without examination by the Clerk of the Privy Council and the Deputy Minister of Justice, without publication in the Canada Gazette, and without scrutiny by Parliament's committees.

---

6 Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, Evidence (Sep. 14, 2017) at 1905 (emphasis added).
7 "Customer satisfaction with Air Canada and WestJet falls below average, survey finds," Canadian Press (May 10, 2023).
8 Regulation (EC) 261/2004.

Perpetuation of Existing and Creation of New Loopholes. The "required for safety purposes" excuse for airlines to avoid paying passengers compensation is a made-in-Canada loophole that has unnecessarily and disproportionately complicated adjudication of disputes between passengers and airlines. The BIA retains this loophole (clause 459, ss. 85.07(2), 85.08, and 85.14(1)(iii)) and creates a new loophole that allows airlines that sign a so-called "compliance agreement" to avoid paying penalties for violating passengers' rights (clauses 467-470).

Summary of Recommended Legislative Amendments

Protection of Fundamental Rights

1. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, delete proposed ss. 85.09 and 85.14, and delete clause 462 of the Bill.

2. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, amend proposed s. 85.06(1) by replacing the word "information" with "evidence."

Retaining the Statutory Right of Appeal

3. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, amend proposed s. 85.06(2) to read:

> An order referred to in subsection (1) is an order of the Agency.

Maintaining the System of Checks and Balances

4. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, delete proposed s. 85.12, and in proposed s. 85.1 remove reference to s. 85.12. Alternatively, amend proposed s. 85.12(4) by replacing "does not apply" with "applies."

Closing Loopholes Without Creating New Ones

5. Amend clauses 465(1)-(3) of Bill C-47 to read as clauses 4(1)-(3) of Bill C-327.

6. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, amend proposed s. 85.07(2) to read as proposed s. 85.2 in clause 3 of Bill C-327:

> For greater certainty, the burden is on the carrier to establish, on a balance of probabilities, the cause of a flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding.

As a consequential amendment, delete clause 460 in Bill C-47.

7. Delete clauses 467-470 in Bill C-47.

1. Encroachment on Fundamental Rights

Clause 459 introduces a new process for adjudication of disputes between passengers and airlines that encroaches on two fundamental rights of Canadians: freedom of expression and the right to a fair hearing.

A. Freedom of Expression and the Open Court Principle

The century-old open court principle provides that legal proceedings are presumptively open to the public. Citizens and the media have the right to access court proceedings and the same evidence that the court relied on. The open court principle is a hallmark of a democratic society, which permits the public to discuss and put forward opinions and criticisms of legal practices and proceedings. The open court principle is inextricably tied to freedom of expression and the press guaranteed by section 2(b) of the Charter.[9]

Curtailment of public access to legal proceedings can only be justified where there is the need to protect social values of superordinate importance, such as if disclosure would subvert the ends of justice or unduly impair its proper administration, or to protect a vulnerable party from revictimization.[10] Generic privacy concerns, which do not rise to the level of posing a threat to a person's dignity or physical safety, are insufficient to displace the presumption of openness in legal proceedings.[11]

The open court principle was held to apply to tribunals engaged in adjudication of disputes between parties in an adversarial setting in the context of immigration, labour relations, automobile injuries, whistleblower protection, and human rights.[12] Ontario's Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act was found to infringe on s. 2(b) of the Charter and declared to have no force or effect to the extent it prevented public disclosure of adjudicative records of tribunals that adjudicate disputes in an adversarial setting.[13]

Currently, the Agency is required to follow the open court principle. Documents filed in the Agency in the course of adjudication of consumer disputes between passengers and airlines, such as submissions and evidence, are placed on the public record, unless the Agency makes a confidentiality order on the basis of the same strict legal test used by the courts. In 2015, the Federal Court of Appeal held that it was "impermissible" for the Agency to refuse to provide such documents to members of the public in the absence of a confidentiality order, on the mere basis of generic privacy concerns.[14]

---

[9] Canadian Broadcasting Corp. v. New Brunswick (Attorney General), [1996] 3 SCR 480 at paras. 21-23; and Named Person v. Vancouver Sun, 2007 SCC 43 at paras. 31-34.

[10] Toronto Star Newspapers Ltd. v. Ontario, 2005 SCC 41 at paras. 4-5; A.B. v. Bragg Communications Inc., 2012 SCC 46 at paras. 14 and 27; Sherman Estate v. Donovan, 2021 SCC 25 at para. 30.

[11] Sherman Estate v. Donovan, 2021 SCC 25 at para. 85.

[12] Southam Inc. v. Canada (Minister of Employment and Immigration), [1987] 3 FC 329; Tipple v. Deputy Head (Department of Public Works and Government Services), 2009 PSLRB 110; Germain v. Automobile Injury Appeal Commission, 2009 SKQB 106 at para. 104; El-Helou v. Courts Administration Service, 2012 CanLII 30713 (CA PSDPT) at paras. 59-60; Woodgate v. RCMP, 2022 CHRT 27 at para. 12.

[13] Toronto Star v. AG Ontario, 2018 ONSC 2586.

[14] Lukács v. Canada (Transport, Infrastructure and Communities), 2015 FCA 140 at para. 80.

Proposed section 85.09 in clause 459 of Bill C-47 creates a presumption of secrecy and covertness for the new process of adjudication of consumer disputes between passengers and airlines, contrary to s. 2(b) of the Charter. If s. 85.09(1) becomes law, all information provided by passengers and the airlines for adjudication would be confidential unless the party providing the information agrees otherwise.

The practical effect of s. 85.09 is a Star Chamber-like process, where the public and the media have no access to the evidence used by the decision maker to determine whether the airline owes compensation to the passenger, and even the reasons for the decision will remain secret. Instead, only bald bottom-line conclusions will be published pursuant to proposed s. 85.14. This, in turn, would shield from public scrutiny both the Agency's conduct in adjudicating disputes and the airlines' treatment of passengers.

Proposed s. 85.09 offends s. 2(b) of the Charter. While parties are at liberty to participate in mediation in private, binding adjudication of their disputes by a tribunal remains subject to the open court principle.

We ask the Senate to apply sober second thought, and not permit a provision that raises such constitutional concerns to become law.

B. Right to Fair Hearing in Accordance with the Principles of Fundamental Justice

Currently, disputes between passengers and airlines are adjudicated on the basis of evidence: documents and signed statements whose authenticity and veracity are capable of being tested. Passengers can also seek an order to compel airlines to answer questions and produce documents necessary for the adjudication.[15]

Proposed subsection 85.06(1) in clause 459 of Bill C-47 would permit binding decisions to be made in consumer disputes between passengers and airlines on the basis of mere "information" (i.e., an airline's say-so) instead of evidence. This will further lower the evidentiary threshold for airlines to avoid paying passengers compensation, and will violate passengers' right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice, guaranteed by s. 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

We recommend retaining the requirement that binding decisions are made on the basis of evidence.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

1. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, delete proposed ss. 85.09 and 85.14, and delete clause 462 of the Bill.

2. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, amend proposed s. 85.06(1) by replacing the word "information" with "evidence."

---

[15] Canadian Transportation Agency Rules (Dispute Proceedings and Certain Rules Applicable to All Proceedings), s. 24.

2. Removal of the Statutory Right of Appeal

A statutory right of appeal is an error-correction mechanism to ensure that passenger protection laws are applied fairly and consistently by administrative decision makers. In addition, it signals to the courts that decisions made under the statutory scheme must not only be reasonable, but also correct at law.[16]

Section 41 of the Canada Transportation Act provides a statutory right of appeal from any decision or order of the Agency to the Federal Court of Appeal [FCA] on questions of law and jurisdiction, subject to the requirement of being granted leave to appeal by the FCA, which operates as a screening mechanism.

Currently, the adjudication of disputes between passengers and airlines by the Agency are concluded with decisions and orders of the Agency, which are therefore subject to the aforementioned statutory right of appeal under s. 41 of the Canada Transportation Act.

Proposed subsection 85.06(2) in clause 459 of Bill C-47 provides that an order made under the newly minted adjudication process "is not an order or decision of the Agency" (emphasis added). The practical effect of proposed s. 85.06(2) is that it removes the statutory right of appeal from binding decisions and orders in consumer disputes between passengers and airlines.

If proposed s. 85.06(2) becomes law, passengers and airlines dissatisfied with an order may bring a judicial review application in the Federal Court, without the requirement of having to obtain leave first. The grounds of review will not be confined to questions of law and jurisdiction. The Federal Court will have to review the decision maker's findings of fact and law on the reasonableness standard instead of correctness.

Proposed s. 85.06(2) is therefore expected to result not only in an inconsistent application of passenger protection laws, but it may also open the floodgate for judicial review applications in the Federal Court. Given the imbalance of resources between airlines and passengers, this is likely to favour airlines that can afford the costs and risk of challenging unfavourable decisions in this way.

We recommend retaining the existing statutory right of appeal for decisions and orders in disputes between passengers and airlines by deeming an order under proposed s. 85.06(1) to be an order of the Agency. Doing so would also be consistent with and obviate proposed s. 85.07(3).

Recommended Legislative Amendments

3. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, amend proposed s. 85.06(2) to read:

> An order referred to in subsection (1) is an order of the Agency.

[16] Canada (MCI) v. Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65 at para. 37.

3. Bypassing the System of Checks and Balances: Henry VIII Clause

The rule of law requires that all legislation be enacted in the manner and form prescribed by law. Proposed section 85.12 is a Henry VIII clause-like provision that allows the executive branch to bypass the proper legislative process in amending passenger protection laws.

When Parliament delegates legislative power to the executive branch, the exercise of those powers is subject to the system of checks and balances set out in the Statutory Instruments Act [SIA]: proposed regulations must be examined by the Clerk of the Privy Council and the Deputy Minister of Justice (s. 3); regulations must be published in the Canada Gazette, (s. 11); and regulations stand permanently referred to any Committee of the House of Commons, of the Senate, or of both Houses of Parliament that may be established for the purpose of reviewing and scrutinizing statutory instruments (s. 19), which may make a report to revoke said regulations (s. 19.1).

Proposed section 85.12 allows the Agency to make and modify legally binding "guidelines" that de facto amend passenger protection laws overnight, and bypasses the system of checks and balances set out in the SIA. Pursuant to s. 85.12(1)(b), the guidelines would set out "the extent to which and the manner in which [...] any provision of the regulations applies with regard to complaints." Proposed s. 85.12(4) provides that the SIA does not apply to these "guidelines."

The practical effect of proposed s. 85.12 is that the Agency could change the law on whether airlines owe passengers compensation or refunds in certain circumstances without examination by the Clerk of the Privy Council and the Deputy Minister of Justice, without publication in the Canada Gazette, and without scrutiny by Parliament's committees.

While Henry VIII clauses are constitutionally objectionable,[17] they may not be unconstitutional in Canada, and the debate about the constitutional limits on delegation of power remains unsettled. Justice Côté's powerful and comprehensive dissent in References re Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act provides ample arguments in support of the proposition that legislature should avoid enacting Henry VIII clauses.[18]

We recommend retaining the existing regulation-making powers of the Agency that are subject to the SIA, and not conferring new Henry VIII clause-like guideline-making powers for amending substantive rights in a manner that bypasses the system of checks and balances set out in the SIA.

Recommended Legislative Amendments

4. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, delete proposed s. 85.12, and in proposed s. 85.1 remove reference to s. 85.12. Alternatively, amend proposed s. 85.12(4) by replacing "does not apply" with "applies."

[17] Dr. Paul Daly, University of Cambridge and Queens' College, Cambridge – Written evidence.
[18] References re Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act, 2021 SCC 11 at paras. 241-293.

4. Perpetuation of Existing and Creation of New Loopholes

"Required for Safety Purposes." The Transportation Modernization Act created a middle category of flight disruptions "within the carrier's control, but is required for safety purposes, including in situations of mechanical malfunctions." If a flight disruption falls within this category, the airline does not have to pay passengers lump sum compensation under the existing Canadian scheme.[19]

This made-in-Canada loophole has contributed to the undue hurdle of passengers seeking compensation. Deciding whether a disruption falls within this middle category requires a complex evidentiary record whose consideration consumes disproportionately large resources compared to the amounts at stake.[20] It has also given rise to specious claims that flight cancellations due to the airline's own crew shortage falls within the category of "required for safety purpose" because it is illegal to fly with insufficient crew.[21]

The emerging consensus is that Canada should close this loophole by harmonizing its regime with the European Union's gold standard embodied by Regulation (EC) 261/2004. The EU's regime establishes compensating passengers for flight disruptions as the norm, and allows airlines to avoid paying compensation only in narrowly construed extraordinary circumstances. The EU's regime is simple, straightforward, and fair to both passengers and airlines. The strengths of the EU's regime were recognized by the UK's choice to retain and adopt that regime even in the strong post-Brexit EU-averse political climate.[22]

In March 2023, MP Taylor Bachrach tabled the Strengthening Air Passenger Protection Act (Bill C-327), a private member's bill to harmonize Canada's air passenger protection regime with the European Union's gold standard. Bill C-327 has been endorsed by Canada's leading consumer protection organizations.

Unfortunately, contrary to the government's public promises to close the "required for safety purposes" loophole, Bill C-47 does not do so, and references the term "required for safety purposes" four times (in proposed ss. 85.07(2), 85.08, and 85.14(1)(iii)). Clauses 465(1)-(2) of Bill C-47, which will come into force later (clause 474(2)), relocate the exceptions to the obligation to compensate passengers from the primary legislation (Canada Transportation Act) to the regulations (Air Passenger Protection Regulations). Bill C-47 contains no provision to preclude the Agency from retaining the loophole's substance.

Burden of Proof. The question of whether it is the passenger or the airline that has to prove the reasons for a flight delay, flight cancellation, or denial of boarding has been a source of confusion and a barrier to compensation for passengers. Since airlines normally have exclusive control over evidence of this nature, common sense, fairness, and international norms dictate that the burden of proof is on the airline to present such evidence. However, the Canada Transportation Act's and the APPR's failure to expressly address this salient point has turned the question of burden of proof into a central battleground.

---

[19] Canada Transportation Act, s. 86.11(1)(b)(ii).
[20] Geddes v. Air Canada, 2021 NSSM 27 at paras. 2-3 (emphasis added); aff'd: 2022 NSSC 49.
[21] Lareau v. WestJet, CTA Decision No. 89-C-A-2022; and Crawford v. Air Canada, CTA Decision No. 107-C-A-2022.
[22] Lipton & Anor v. BA City Flyer Ltd, [2021] EWCA Civ 454.

Common sense dictates that the burden of proof to establish the cause of a flight disruption should always be on the carrier, regardless of the forum where the dispute is being adjudicated. Such a reverse onus already exists not only in the European Union's passenger protection scheme, but also in the laws of Canada. The Montreal Convention is an international treaty governing airline liability for flight delays on most international itineraries to and from Canada. The Montreal Convention is implemented as Schedule VI to the federal Carriage by Air Act. Article 19 of the Montreal Convention also imposes the burden of proof with respect to the circumstances of flight delays on the airline rather than the passenger.

While proposed subsection 85.07(2) in clause 459 aims to do the same, its scope is confined to the new process for adjudication of consumer disputes between passengers and airlines, and fails to address the burden of proof in claims advanced under the APPR in small claims courts, provincial superior courts, or the Federal Courts. This shortcoming will likely result in the waste of valuable judicial resources, because it may seriously hinder the use of class proceedings against airlines that systematically violate the APPR.

A New Loophole for Avoiding Administrative Monetary Penalties. Currently, ss. 177-181 of the Canada Transportation Act confer discretionary power on the Agency's designated enforcement officers to issue notices of violations and impose Administrative Monetary Penalties of up to $25,000 per violation on airlines that violate certain regulatory provisions, including the APPR.

Clauses 467-470 of Bill C-47 create a new loophole whereby an airline can avoid paying Administrative Monetary Penalties for violating the APPR if they sign a so-called "compliance agreement."

Compliance agreements may be a useful tool to foster cooperation and compliance in areas that require case-by-case consideration of a small number of complex cases, such as accommodation of disabilities; however, they are inappropriate and inefficient in matters involving a high volume of straightforward cases, where the reason for non-compliance is not lack of training or inexperience of the regulated entity, but rather a calculated economic decision (i.e., it is more profitable to break the law than to comply).

Recommended Legislative Amendments

5. Amend clauses 465(1)-(3) of Bill C-47 to read as clauses 4(1)-(3) of Bill C-327.

6. In clause 459 of Bill C-47, amend proposed s. 85.07(2) to read as proposed s. 85.2 in clause 3 of Bill C-327:

> For greater certainty, the burden is on the carrier to establish, on a balance of probabilities, the cause of a flight delay, flight cancellation or denial of boarding.

As a consequential amendment, delete clause 460 in Bill C-47.

7. Delete clauses 467-470 in Bill C-47.

This is Exhibit "14" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

World Health Organization

WHO Director-General's opening remarks at the media briefing on COVID-19 - 11 March 2020

11 March 2020

Good afternoon.

In the past two weeks, the number of cases of COVID-19 outside China has increased 13-fold, and the number of affected countries has tripled.

There are now more than 118,000 cases in 114 countries, and 4,291 people have lost their lives.

Thousands more are fighting for their lives in hospitals.

In the days and weeks ahead, we expect to see the number of cases, the number of deaths, and the number of affected countries climb even higher.

WHO has been assessing this outbreak around the clock and we are deeply concerned both by the alarming levels of spread and severity, and by the alarming levels of inaction.

We have therefore made the assessment that COVID-19 can be characterized as a pandemic.

Pandemic is not a word to use lightly or carelessly. It is a word that, if misused, can cause unreasonable fear, or unjustified acceptance that the fight is over, leading to unnecessary suffering and death.

Describing the situation as a pandemic does not change WHO's assessment of the threat posed by this virus. It doesn't change what WHO is doing, and it doesn't change what countries should do.

We have never before seen a pandemic sparked by a coronavirus. This is the first pandemic caused by a coronavirus.

And we have never before seen a pandemic that can be controlled, at the same time.

WHO has been in full response mode since we were notified of the first cases.

And we have called every day for countries to take urgent and aggressive action.

We have rung the alarm bell loud and clear.

===

As I said on Monday, just looking at the number of cases and the number of countries affected does not tell the full story.

Of the 118,000 cases reported globally in 114 countries, more than 90 percent of cases are in just four countries, and two of those – China and the Republic of Korea - have significantly declining epidemics.

81 countries have not reported any cases, and 57 countries have reported 10 cases or less.

We cannot say this loudly enough, or clearly enough, or often enough: all countries can still change the course of this pandemic.

If countries detect, test, treat, isolate, trace, and mobilize their people in the response, those with a handful of cases can prevent those cases becoming clusters, and those clusters becoming community transmission.

Even those countries with community transmission or large clusters can turn the tide on this virus.

Several countries have demonstrated that this virus can be suppressed and controlled.

The challenge for many countries who are now dealing with large clusters or community transmission is not whether they can do the same – it's whether they will.

Some countries are struggling with a lack of capacity.

Some countries are struggling with a lack of resources.

Some countries are struggling with a lack of resolve.

We are grateful for the measures being taken in Iran, Italy and the Republic of Korea to slow the virus and control their epidemics.

We know that these measures are taking a heavy toll on societies and economies, just as they did in China.

All countries must strike a fine balance between protecting health, minimizing economic and social disruption, and respecting human rights.

WHO's mandate is public health. But we're working with many partners across all sectors to mitigate the social and economic consequences of this pandemic.

This is not just a public health crisis, it is a crisis that will touch every sector – so every sector and every individual must be involved in the fight.

I have said from the beginning that countries must take a whole-of-government, whole-of-society approach, built around a comprehensive strategy to prevent infections, save lives and minimize impact.

Let me summarize it in four key areas.

First, prepare and be ready.

Second, detect, protect and treat.

Third, reduce transmission.

Fourth, innovate and learn.

I remind all countries that we are calling on you to activate and scale up your emergency response mechanisms;

Communicate with your people about the risks and how they can protect themselves – this is everybody's business;

Find, isolate, test and treat every case and trace every contact;

Ready your hospitals;

Protect and train your health workers.

And let’s all look out for each other, because we need each other.

===

There’s been so much attention on one word.

Let me give you some other words that matter much more, and that are much more actionable.

Prevention.

Preparedness.

Public health.

Political leadership.

And most of all, people.

We’re in this together, to do the right things with calm and protect the citizens of the world. It’s doable.

I thank you.

This is Exhibit "15" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Government of Canada / Gouvernement du Canada

Government of Canada advises Canadians to avoid non-essential travel abroad

From: Global Affairs Canada

News release

March 13, 2020 - Ottawa, Ontario - Global Affairs Canada

The Honourable François-Philippe Champagne, Minister of Foreign Affairs, today announced that Canada has issued an official global travel advisory to avoid non-essential travel abroad.

In an attempt to limit the spread of the coronavirus (COVID-19), many governments have implemented special entry and exit and movement restrictions for their territories. New restrictions could be imposed, and could severely disrupt Canadians' travel plans.

As a result, the Government of Canada is advising Canadians to avoid non-essential travel outside of Canada until further notice.

Canadians currently outside the country should find out what commercial options are still available and consider returning to Canada earlier than planned if these options are becoming more limited.

We encourage Canadians abroad to register with the Registration of Canadians Abroad service.

Canadians abroad in need of emergency consular assistance can call Global Affairs Canada's 24/7 Emergency Watch and Response Centre in Ottawa at +1 613-996-8885 (collect calls are accepted where available) or email sos@international.gc.ca.

Quotes

"We are monitoring the situation abroad to provide credible and timely information to Canadians to help them make well-informed decisions regarding their travel. We also continue to work around the clock to provide assistance and consular services to Canadians abroad affected by COVID-19."

- François-Philippe Champagne, Minister of Foreign Affairs

Associated links

- Travel Advice and Advisories
- Canadian travellers: Avoid all cruise ship travel due to COVID-19
- Coronavirus disease (COVID-19): Outbreak update
- Coronavirus disease (COVID-19): Resources for Canadian businesses

Contacts

Syrine Khoury
Press Secretary
Office of the Minister of Foreign Affairs
Syrine.Khoury@international.gc.ca

Media Relations Office
Global Affairs Canada
343-203-7700
media@international.gc.ca

Search for related information by keyword: GV Government and Politics |

400

Global Affairs Canada | Canada | Canada and the world | general public | news releases | Hon. François-Philippe Champagne

Date modified:
2020-03-13

This is Exhibit "16" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Canada closes borders, says people should stay at home to stop virus- PM Trudeau

REUTERS

REUTERS

March 16, 2020
2:06 PM EDT

Filed under
PMN Health

OTTAWA — Canada closed its borders to all foreign nationals, except U.S. citizens, on Monday, and Prime Minister Justin Trudeau urged people to stay at home to help stem the spread of the new coronavirus.

"We will be denying entry into Canada to people who are not Canadian citizens or permanent residents," Trudeau told reporters at a news conference outside his home, where he is under quarantine. (Reporting by Kelsey Johnson and David Ljunggren, writing by Steve Scherer Editing by Chizu Nomiyama)

RELATED STORIES:

Trudeau remaining in isolation longer despite wife recovering from COVID-19

Canada faces 'critical week' in coronavirus crisis, death toll jumps

Canada's Trudeau wants to recall MPs to back massive coronavirus aid package

This is Exhibit "17" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Route updates

March 22, 2020

We will continue to operate domestic and international flights with a reduced schedule for the month of April. Find below a full list of operating routes. The schedule is subject to change, as we continue to monitor demand and government restrictions on travel.

Our operating schedule from April 1 to April 30

North America

Within Canada

Route	Frequencies
Calgary - Castlegar	6 flights per week
Calgary - Edmonton	4 flights per day
Calgary - Fort McMurray	3 flights per day
Calgary - Grande Prairie	2 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
Calgary - Kelowna	1 flight per day
Calgary - Ottawa	1 flight per day
Calgary - Regina	2 flights per day
Calgary - Saskatoon	2 flights per day
Calgary - Winnipeg	2 flights per day
Deer Lake - Goose Bay	1 flight per day
Edmonton - Yellowknife	1 flight per day
Goose Bay - Gander	1 flight per day
Goose Bay - Wabush	1 flight per day
Halifax - Charlottetown	4 flights per day
Halifax - Fredericton	4 flights per day
Halifax - Goose Bay	1 flight per day

Route	Frequencies
Halifax - Moncton	3 flights per day
Halifax - St. John	4 flights per day
Halifax - St. John's	2 flights per day
Halifax - Sydney	2 flights per day
Montreal - Bagotville	1 flight per day
Montreal - Calgary	2 flights per day
Montreal - Charlottetown	1 flight per day
Montreal - Edmonton	2 flights per day
Montreal - Fredericton	2 flights per day
Montreal - Halifax	3 flights per day
Montreal - Moncton	2 flights per day
Montreal - Ottawa	5 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
Montreal - Quebec City	4 flights per day
Montreal - Sept Iles	1 flight per day
Montreal - St. John	2 flights per day
Montreal - St. John's	2 flights per day
Montreal - Toronto City	5 flights per day
Montreal - Vancouver	2 flights per day
Montreal - Winnipeg	1 flight per day
Ottawa - Edmonton	1 flight per day
Ottawa - Fredericton	6 flights per week
Ottawa - Halifax	2 flights per day
Sept Iles - Wabush	1 flight per day
St. John's - Deer Lake	3 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
St. John's - Gander	3 flights per day
St. John's - Goose Bay	1 flight per day
Toronto - Calgary	5 flights per day
Toronto - Edmonton	4 flights per day
Toronto - Halifax	4 flights per day
Toronto - London	3 flights per day
Toronto - Moncton	2 flights per day
Toronto - Montreal	9 flights per day
Toronto - Ottawa	8 flights per day
Toronto - Regina	2 flights per day
Toronto - Saskatoon	2 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
Toronto - Sault Ste. Marie	3 flights per day
Toronto - St. John's	2 flights per day
Toronto - Sudbury	1 flight per day
Toronto - Thunder Bay	2 flights per day
Toronto - Timmins	3 flights per day
Toronto - Vancouver	6 flights per day
Toronto - Windsor	3 flights per day
Toronto - Winnipeg	4 flights per day
Toronto - Quebec City	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Calgary	5 flights per day
Vancouver - Edmonton	4 flights per day
Vancouver - Fort St. John	2 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
Vancouver - Kelowna	4 flights per day
Vancouver - Nanaimo	3 flights per day
Vancouver - Ottawa	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Prince George	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Regina	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Saskatoon	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Terrace	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Victoria	5 flights per day
Vancouver - Whitehorse	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Winnipeg	1 flight per day
Winnipeg - Regina	1 flight per day

To U.S

Route	Frequencies
Montreal - Boston	3 flights per day
Montreal - Chicago	3 flights per day
Montreal - Fort Lauderdale	1 flight per day
Montreal - Houston	1 flight per day
Montreal - Los Angeles	1 flight per day
Montreal - New York/LaGuardia	3 flights per day
Montreal - Newark	2 flights per day
Montreal - Orlando	1 flight per day
Montreal - Washington/Dulles	1 flight per day
Montreal - Washington/National	2 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
Toronto - Boston	3 flights per day
Toronto - Chicago	3 flights per day
Toronto - Denver	2 flights per day
Toronto - Fort Lauderdale	1 flight per day
Toronto - Houston	2 flights per day
Toronto - Los Angeles	2 flights per day
Toronto - New York/LaGuardia	3 flights per day
Toronto - Newark	3 flights per day
Toronto - Orlando	1 flight per day
Toronto - San Francisco	2 flights per day
Toronto - Washington/Dulles	2 flights per day
Toronto - Washington/National	3 flights per day

Route	Frequencies
Vancouver - Denver	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Los Angeles	2 flights per day
Vancouver - San Francisco	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Seattle	3 flights per day

Atlantic

Route	Frequencies
Montreal - Frankfurt	7 flights per week
Montreal - London	3 flights per week
Montreal - Paris	7 flights per week
Toronto - Delhi	7 flights per week from April 1-19 5 flights per week from April 20-29

Route	Frequencies
Toronto - Frankfurt	7 flights per week
Toronto - London	7 flights per week
Vancouver - Delhi	6 flights per week from April 1-19 4 flights per week from April 20-29
Vancouver - London	4 flights per week

Pacific

Route	Frequencies
Vancouver - Hong Kong	3 flights per week
Vancouver - Tokyo/Narita	3 flights per week

Caribbean / Mexico

Route	Frequencies
Toronto - Barbados	2 flights per week
Toronto - Cancun	2 flights per week
Toronto - Mexico City	4 flights per week

We continue to adapt our schedule and capacity in response to COVID-19 and have postponed launches or extended the temporary suspension of several routes. Find below a full list of route updates.

Air Canada will continue to monitor this evolving situation closely in consultation with the Public Health Agency of Canada, Transport Canada and Global Affairs and will adjust its schedule as appropriate.

March 23 to 31 operating schedule and route suspensions

North America

Within Canada

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Kamloops	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Calgary - Nanaimo	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Calgary - Victoria	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Calgary - Yellowknife	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Edmonton – Fort McMurray	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Edmonton – Grande Prairie	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Edmonton – Kelowna	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Edmonton - Winnipeg	Remaining operations from Winnipeg: daily flights until March 31

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Halifax - Deer Lake	Remaining operations from Deer Lake: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Halifax - Gander	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Baie Comeau	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal – Bathurst	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal – London	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Windsor	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Montreal – Val d'Or – Rouyn-Noranda	Remaining operations from Val d'Or – Rouyn-Noranda: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Ottawa – Quebec City	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Ottawa - Moncton	Temporary suspension from March 20 until April 30
Ottawa - Winnipeg	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Ottawa – London	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Quebec City – Gaspé – Iles-de-la-Madeleine	Remaining operations from Gaspé – Iles-de-la-Madeleine: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Quebec City – Sept Iles	Remaining operations from Sept Iles: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto – Charlottetown	Remaining operations from Charlottetown: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Deer Lake	Remaining operations from Deer Lake: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - Fredericton	Remaining operations from Fredericton: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - Kelowna	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Kingston	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Mont-Tremblant	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - North Bay	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Sarnia	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - St. John	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Sydney, Nova Scotia	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Victoria	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Vancouver - Castlegar	Remaining operations from Castlegar: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Comox	Remaining operations from Comox: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Cranbrook	Remaining operations from Cranbrook: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Kamloops	Remaining operations from Kamloops: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Penticton	Remaining operations from Penticton: daily flights until March 31

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Prince Rupert	Remaining operations from Prince Rupert: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver – Sandpit	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Vancouver - Smithers	Remaining operations from Smithers: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Yellowknife	Remaining operations from Yellowknife: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30

To U.S

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Houston	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Kahului / Maui	Remaining operation from Kahului/Maui: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Calgary - Las Vegas	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Calgary - Los Angeles	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Calgary - Newark	Remaining operations from Newark: March 27, 28, 29, 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Calgary - Phoenix	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Calgary - Portland	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Calgary - San Francisco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Edmonton - San Francisco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Halifax - Boston	Remaining operations from Boston: March 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Halifax - Orlando	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Halifax - Tampa	Remaining operations from Tampa: March 23, 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Montreal - Baltimore-Washington	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Dallas-Fort Worth	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Fort Myers	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Montreal - Hartford	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Las Vegas	Temporary suspension from March

Affected route	Route update
	23 until April 30
Montreal - Miami	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Montreal - Philadelphia	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Phoenix	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Pittsburgh	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Raleigh–Durham	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - San Francisco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Tampa	Remaining operations from Tampa: March 23, 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Montreal - West Palm Beach	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Ottawa - Boston	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Ottawa - Fort Lauderdale	Remaining operations from Fort Lauderdale: March 23, 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Ottawa - Newark	Remaining operations from Newark: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Ottawa - Orlando	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Ottawa - Tampa	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Ottawa - Washington DC, Reagan Washinton National (DCA)	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Atlanta	Remaining operations from Atlanta: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Austin	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Baltimore-Washington	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Charlotte	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Cincinnati	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Cleveland	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Columbus	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Dallas-Fort Worth	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Detroit	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Fort Myers	Remaining operations from Fort Myers: March 23, 24, 25

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - Hartford	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Honolulu	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Toronto - Indianapolis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Kansas City	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Las Vegas	Remaining operations from Las Vegas: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - Memphis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Miami	Remaining operations from Miami: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Milwaukee	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Minneapolis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Nashville	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - New Orleans	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Palm Springs	Remaining operations from Palm Springs: March 23, 24, 25 Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - Philadelphia	Remaining operations from Philadelphia: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - Phoenix	Remaining operations from Phoenix: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Pittsburgh	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Raleigh–Durham	Remaining operations from Raleigh: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - San Diego	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Toronto - Sarasota	Remaining operations from Sarasota: March 23, 24, 25 Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - Savannah	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Seattle	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - St. Louis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Tampa	Remaining operations from Tampa: daily flights until March 31

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - West Palm Beach	Remaining operations from West Palm Beach: March 23, 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Vancouver - Chicago	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Vancouver - Dallas-Fort Worth	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Vancouver - Honolulu	Remaining operations from Honolulu: March 23, 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Vancouver - Kahului / Maui	Remaining operations from Kahului/Maui: March 23, 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Vancouver - Kona	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Vancouver - Las Vegas	Remaining operations from Las Vegas: daily flights until March 29

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Newark	Remaining operations from Newark: daily flights until March 30 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Palm Springs	Remaining operations from Palm Springs: March 23, 24, 25 Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Vancouver - Phoenix	Remaining operations from Phoenix: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Portland	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Vancouver - Sacramento	Remaining operations from Sacramento: March 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - San Diego	Remaining operations fromSan Diego: daily flights until March 30

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - San Jose, California	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Atlantic

Affected route	Route update
Calgary- Frankfurt	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Calgary - London	Remaining operation from London: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Montreal- Athens	Seasonal startup delayed until May 1
Montreal- Barcelona	Seasonal startup delayed until May 1
Montreal- Bordeaux	Full summer suspension

Affected route	Route update
Montreal- Brussels	Remaining operations from Brussels: March 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Montreal- Casablanca	Temporary suspension from March 17 until April 30
Montreal- Geneva	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Montreal- Lyon	Temporary suspension from March 15 until April 30
Montreal- Marseille	Full summer suspension
Montreal- Rome	Temporary suspension from March 9 until April 30
Montreal- Venice	Full summer suspension
Ottawa - London (Heathrow)	Temporary suspension from March 17 to April 30.
Toronto - Amsterdam	Remaining operations from Amsterdam: March 23, 25

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - Athens	Seasonal startup delayed until May 1
Toronto - Barcelona	Seasonal startup delayed until May 1
Toronto - Brussels	New route launch postponed to June 3
Toronto - Budapest	Seasonal startup delayed until May 2
Toronto - Copenhagen	Temporary suspension from March 17 until April 30
Toronto - Delhi	Temporary suspension from March 22 until March 27
Toronto - Dubai	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 4. Last flight from Dubai departs on March 23.
Toronto - Dublin	Remaining operations from Dublin: March 23, 26, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Toronto - Lisbon	Seasonal startup delayed until May 1

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Madrid	Temporary suspension from March 19 until April 30
Toronto - Milan	Seasonal startup delayed until June 4
Toronto - Mumbai	Temporary suspension from March 22 to March 28
Toronto - Munich	Remaining operations from Munich: March 23, 25, 27, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Toronto - Paris	Temporary suspension from March 18 until April 30
Toronto - Rome	Temporary suspension from March 11 until April 30
Toronto - Tel Aviv	Temporary suspension from March 18 until April 30
Toronto - Vienna	Temporary suspension from March 19 until April 30
Toronto - Zurich	Remaining operations from Zurich: March 23, 25, 27

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30
Vancouver- Delhi	Temporary suspension from March 22 until March 27

Pacific

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Shanghai	Temporary suspension from February 3 until April 30
Montreal - Tokyo (Narita)	Remaining operations from Tokyo (Narita): March 25, 27 Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30
Toronto - Beijing	Temporary suspension from February 3 until April 30
Toronto - Hong Kong	Temporary suspension from March 2 until May 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Seoul (Incheon)	Temporary suspension from March 17 until May 31
Toronto - Shanghai	Temporary suspension from February 3 until April 30
Toronto - Tokyo (Haneda)	Remaining operations from Tokyo (Haneda): March 24, 26, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Vancouver - Beijing	Temporary suspension from February 3 until April 30
Vancouver - Brisbane	Remaining operations from Brisbane: March 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Vancouver - Melbourne	Remaining operations from Melbourne: March 23, 25, 27, 29 Temporary suspension from March 30 until April 30
Vancouver - Seoul (Incheon)	Remaining operations from Seoul: March 23, 24, 27, 28, 30, 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver - Shanghai	Temporary suspension from February 3 until April 30
Vancouver - Sydney, Australia	Remaining operations from Sydney: March 23, 25, 26, 27, 28, 30, 31 and April 1-12. Temporary suspension from April 13 until April 30
Vancouver - Taipei	Remaining operations from Taipei: March 23, 24, 25, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30

South America

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Lima	Temporary suspension from March 18 until April 30
Santiago - Buenos Aires	Remaining operations from Buenos Aires: March 23, 25, 27 Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Bogotá	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Cartagena	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Toronto - Lima	Temporary suspension from March 17 until April 30
Toronto - Quito	Temporary suspension from March 16 until April 30
Toronto - Santiago / Buenos Aires	Remaining operations from Santiago / Buenos Aires: March 23, 25, 27 Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30
Toronto - São Paulo	Remaining operations from São Paulo: March 23, 24, 25, 26, 27 Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30

Caribbean / Mexico / Central America

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Calgary - Puerto Vallarta	Temporary suspension from March 17 until April 30
Calgary - San José del Cabo	Temporary suspension from March 17 until April 30
Halifax - Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Halifax - Cayo Coco	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Halifax - Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Montreal - Barbados	Remaining operation from Barbados: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Montreal - Cancun	Remaining operations from Cancun: March 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Montreal - Cayo Coco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Cozumel	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Montreal - Curaçao	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Montreal - Fort- de-France	Remaining operations from Fort-de-France: March 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Montreal - Holguín	Temporary suspension from March 20 until April 30
Montreal - Ixtapa	Remaining operation from Ixtapa: March 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Montreal - Liberia	Remaining operation from Liberia: March 25

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Montreal - Montego Bay	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Montreal - Nassau	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Montreal - Pointe-à-Pitre	Remaining operation from Pointe-à-Pitre: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Montreal - Providenciales	Temporary suspension from March 20 until April 30
Montreal - Puerto Plata	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Puerto Vallarta	Remaining operations from Puerto Vallarta: March 25, 27, 29 Temporary suspension from March 30 until April 30
Montreal - Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Samaná	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Montreal - San José	Remaining operation from San José: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Montreal - San Juan	Temporary suspension from March 16 until April 30
Montreal - San Salvador (Bahamas)	Temporary suspension from March 18 until April 27
Montreal - Santa Clara	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Montreal - Varadero	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Ottawa - Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Ottawa - Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Ottawa - Varadero	Temporary suspension from March 17 until April 30
Quebec City - Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Quebec City - Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 16 until April 30
Toronto - Antigua	Remaining operations from Antigua: March 24, 26 Temporary suspension from March 27 until April 30
Toronto - Aruba	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Barbados	Remaining operations from Barbados: March 23, 24, 25, 26, 28, 30, 31 Flights on Saturdays and Sundays in April
Toronto - Belize City	Remaining operation from Belize City: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Toronto - Bermuda	Temporary suspension from March 21

Affected route	Route update
	until April 30
Toronto - Cayo Coco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Cozumel	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Toronto - Curaçao	Remaining operations from Curaçao: March 29, 30 Temporary suspension from March 31 until April 30
Toronto - George Town	Remaining operation from George Town: March 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Toronto - Grand Cayman	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Toronto - Grenada	Remaining operations from Grenada: March 24, 26, 28, 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - Havana	Remaining operations from Havana: March 23, 24, 25

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - Holguín	Temporary suspension from March 21 until April 30
Toronto - Huatulco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Ixtapa	Remaining operation from Ixtapa: March 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Toronto - Kingston	Remaining operations from Kingston: March 23, 24, 25, 27 Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30
Toronto - Liberia	Remaining operations from Liberia: March 24, 25 Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - Montego Bay	Remaining operations from Montego Bay: March 24, 25 Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Nassau	Remaining operations from Nassau: March 23, 26, 27 Temporary suspension from March 28 until April 30
Toronto - Panama City	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Port of Spain	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Providenciales	Remaining operation from Providenciales: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Toronto - Puerto Plata	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30
Toronto - Puerto Vallarta	Remaining operations from Puerto Vallarta: daily flights until April 11 Temporary suspension from April 12 until April 30
Toronto - Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Samaná	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - San José del Cabo	Remaining operations from San José del Cabo: March 23, 25 Temporary suspension from March 26 until April 30
Toronto - San José	Remaining operations from San José: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - San Juan	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Santa Clara	Temporary suspension from March 20 until April 30
Toronto - St. Kitts	Remaining operation from St. Kitts: March 24 Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30
Toronto - St. Lucia	Remaining operations from St. Lucia: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - St. Maarten	Remaining operation from St. Maarten: March 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Toronto - St. Vincent	Remaining operations from St. Vincent: March 26 Temporary suspension from March 27 until April 30
Toronto - Varadero	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Vancouver - Cancun	Remaining operation from Cancun: March 23 Temporary suspension from March 24 until April 30
Vancouver - Ixtapa	Remaining operations from Ixtapa: March 25, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Vancouver- Mexico City	Remaining operations from Mexico City: daily flights until March 31 Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Puerto Vallarta	Remaining operations from Puerto Vallarta: March 24, 25, 27, 29

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver - San José del Cabo	Remaining operations from San José del Cabo: March 23, 26, 28 Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Winnipeg - Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30

More information

My flight has been cancelled. What are my options?

If your flight has been cancelled, and you want to travel in the next few days, please contact your travel agent or call us at 1-888-247-2262 (click here for international and other numbers). For Aeroplan redemption bookings, please call 1-800-361-5373.

I'm booked on a flight to/from one of the above destinations, but my flight has NOT been cancelled, can I rebook my flight or get a refund?

- Customers whose flights have been cancelled will be notified.
- If you wish to rebook, please contact your travel agent or call us at 1-888-247-2262 (click here for international and other numbers) to discuss your options. For Aeroplan redemption bookings, please call 1-800-361-5373.
- Details regarding refund eligibility and options can be found in your flight booking. Enter your information here to access it.

This is Exhibit "18" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Route updates

April 13, 2020

We're working hard to bring Canadians home safely.

The schedule is subject to change, as we continue to monitor this evolving situation closely in consultation with the Public Health Agency of Canada, Transport Canada and Global Affairs.

Special flights information

Air Canada, in collaboration with the Canadian Government, operates flights from Morocco, Ecuador, Peru, Algeria, Spain, Colombia and Argentina to bring Canadians back home. The details are:

Completed flights:

- Algiers-Montreal: March 31& April 4, 10
- Barcelona-Montreal: March 25
- Bogota-Toronto: April 3
- Buenos Aires-Toronto: April 5
- Casablanca-Montreal: March 21, 23, & 25
- Lima-Toronto: March 24, 26, 27 & April 1, 2, 4
- Quito-Toronto: March 25, 27, 29, & 31

Upcoming flights:

- Algiers-Montreal: April 17

- Lima-Toronto : April 16

We will continue to operate domestic and international flights with a reduced schedule. Find below a full list of operating routes until May 31, 2020. The schedule is subject to change, as we continue to monitor demand and government restrictions on travel.

Operating schedule until May 31

North America

Within Canada

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Calgary - Edmonton	1 flight per day	1 flight per day
Calgary - Fort McMurray	3 flights per week	4 flights per week
Calgary - Grande Prairie	3 flights per week	3 flights per week
Calgary - Regina		4 flights per week
Calgary - Saskatoon		4 flights per week

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Calgary - Winnipeg	3 flights per week	4 flights per week
Edmonton - Yellowknife	3 flights per week	4 flights per week
Goose Bay - Wabush		1 flight per day
Halifax - St. John's	4 flights per week	1 flight per day
Montreal - Calgary		1 flight per day
Montreal - Charlottetown	5 flights per week	1 flight per day
Montreal - Fredericton	1 flight per day	2 flights per day
Montreal - Halifax	5 flights per week	1 flight per day
Montreal - Ottawa	2 flights per day	3 flights per day
Montreal - Quebec City	1 flight per day	3 flights per day
Montreal - St. John's	5 flights per week	1 flight per day

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Montreal - Vancouver	5 flights per week	2 flights per day
Toronto - Calgary	2 flights per day	4 flights per day
Toronto - Edmonton	1 flight per day	2 flights per day
Toronto - Halifax	1 flight per day	2 flights per day
Toronto - Montreal	up to 5 flights per day	up to 7 flights per day
Toronto - Ottawa	up to 5 flights per day	up to 6 flights per day
Toronto - Quebec City		1 flight per day
Toronto - Regina	4 flights per week	1 flight per day
Toronto - Saskatoon	4 flights per week	1 flight per day
Toronto - St. John's	1 flight per day	1 flight per day
Toronto - Sudbury	up to 7 flights per week	1 flight per day

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Toronto - Thunder Bay	5 flights per week	5 flights per week
Toronto - Timmins	4 flights per week	4 flights per week
Toronto - Vancouver	up to 3 flights per day	up to 4 flights per day
Toronto - Winnipeg	1 flight per day	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Calgary	2 flights per day	3 flights per day
Vancouver - Edmonton	2 flights per day	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Kelowna	1 flight per day	3 flights per day
Vancouver - Nanaimo	1 flight per day	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Prince George	3 flights per week	4 flights per week
Vancouver - Regina	4 flights per week	1 flight per day

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Vancouver - Saskatoon	4 flights per week	1 flight per day
Vancouver - Terrace	4 flights per week	4 flights per week
Vancouver - Victoria	2 flights per day	2 flights per day
Vancouver - Whitehorse	3 flights per week	4 flights per week
Vancouver - Winnipeg	5 flights per week	6 flights per week

To U.S

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Montreal - Boston		1 flight per day
Montreal - Chicago	5 flights per week	1 flight per day
Montreal - Fort Lauderdale	3 flights per week	3 flights per week

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Montreal - Los Angeles		3 flights per week
Montreal - New York/LaGuardia		1 flight per day
Montreal - Newark		1 flight per day
Montreal - Orlando	3 flights per week	2 flights per week
Montreal - Washington/National		1 flight per day
Toronto - Boston	1 flight per day	2 flights per day
Toronto - Chicago	1 flight per day	2 flights per day
Toronto - Denver		1 flight per day
Toronto - Fort Lauderdale	3 flights per week	3 flights per week
Toronto - Houston	4 flights per	1 flight per day

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
	week
Toronto - Los Angeles	4 flights per week	1 flight per day
Toronto - New York/LaGuardia		1 flight per day
Toronto - Newark		1 flight per day
Toronto - Orlando	3 flights per week	3 flights per week
Toronto - San Francisco	3 flights per week	1 flight per day
Toronto - Washington/Dulles	1 flight per day	1 flight per day
Toronto - Washington/National		1 flight per day
Vancouver - Los Angeles	1 flight per day	10 flights per week

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Vancouver - San Francisco	1 flight per day	10 flights per week
Vancouver - Seattle	1 flight per day	1 flight per day

Atlantic

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Montreal - Brussels		4 flights per week
Montreal - Frankfurt	4 flights per week	1 flight per day
Montreal - London	2 flights per week	5 flights per week
Montreal - Paris	up to 7 flights per week	1 flight per day
Toronto - Frankfurt	7 flights per week	1 flight per day

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Toronto - London	7 flights per week	2 flights per day
Toronto - Zurich		4 flights per week
Vancouver - London	3 flights per week	4 flights per week

Pacific

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Toronto - Tokyo/Haneda		4 flights per week
Vancouver - Hong Kong	2 flights per week	5 flights per week
Vancouver - Seoul/Incheon		4 flights per week
Vancouver - Tokyo/Narita		5 flights per

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
		week

South America

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Toronto – Bogota		3 flights per week

Caribbean / Mexico

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies
Montreal - Fort- de-France		1 flight per week
Montreal - Pointe-à-Pitre		1 flight per week
Toronto - Barbados	1 flight per week	1 flight per week
Toronto - Mexico City	4 flights per week	1 flight per day

Route	April Frequencies	May Frequencies

We continue to adapt our schedule and capacity in response to COVID-19 and have postponed launches or extended the temporary suspension of several routes. Find below a full list of route updates.

Route suspensions

North America

Within Canada

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Castlegar	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Kamloops	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Kelowna	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Nanaimo	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Ottawa	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Calgary – Regina	Temporary suspension from April 2 until April 30
Calgary – Saskatoon	Temporary suspension from April 2 until April 30
Calgary - Victoria	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Yellowknife	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Edmonton - Fort McMurray	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Edmonton - Grande Prairie	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Edmonton - Kelowna	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Edmonton - Winnipeg	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Goose Bay – Deer Lake	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31
Goose Bay – Gander	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31
Goose Bay – Wabush	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31
Halifax - Deer Lake	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Halifax – Fredericton	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31
Halifax - Gander	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Halifax - Goose Bay	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Halifax – Moncton	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Halifax – St. John	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31
Halifax – Sydney	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Montreal – Bagotville	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Montreal - Baie Comeau	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Bathurst	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Montreal - Calgary	Temporary suspension from April 7 until April 30
Montreal – Edmonton	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Montreal - London	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal – Moncton	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Montreal – Sept-Îles	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Montreal – St. John	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Montreal – Toronto City (YTZ)	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Montreal - Val d'Or - Rouyn-Noranda	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Windsor	Temporary suspension from March 21 until May 31
Montreal - Winnipeg	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Ottawa - Edmonton	Temporary suspension from March 25 until May 31
Ottawa - Fredericton	Temporary suspension from March 20 until May 31
Ottawa - Halifax	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Ottawa - London	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Ottawa - Moncton	Temporary suspension from March 20 until May 31
Ottawa - Quebec City	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Ottawa - Winnipeg	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Quebec City - Gaspé - Iles-de-la-Madeleine	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Quebec City - Sept Iles	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Sept-Îles – Wabush	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
St. John's – Deer Lake	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31
St. John's – Gander	Temporary suspension from April 6 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
St. John's – Goose Bay	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Toronto - Charlottetown	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Toronto - Deer Lake	Temporary suspension from March 27 until May 31
Toronto - Fredericton	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Toronto - Kelowna	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Kingston	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – London	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Toronto - Moncton	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Toronto - North Bay	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Quebec City	Temporary suspension from March 26 to April 30
Toronto - Sarnia	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – Sault Ste. Marie	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Toronto - St. John	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Sydney	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Victoria	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – Windsor	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Vancouver - Castlegar	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Vancouver - Comox	Temporary suspension from March 31 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver - Cranbrook	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Vancouver – Fort St. John	Temporary suspension from April 2 until May 31
Vancouver - Kamloops	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Vancouver - Ottawa	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Vancouver - Penticton	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Vancouver - Prince Rupert	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Vancouver – Sandspit	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Vancouver - Smithers	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Vancouver - Yellowknife	Temporary suspension from March 31 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Winnipeg - Regina	Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30

To U.S

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Houston	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Kahului / Maui	Temporary suspension from March 24 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Calgary - Las Vegas	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Los Angeles	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - Newark	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Calgary - Phoenix	Temporary suspension from

Affected route	Route update
	March 22 until May 31
Calgary - Portland	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Calgary - San Francisco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Edmonton - San Francisco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Halifax - Boston	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Halifax - Orlando	Temporary suspension from March 23 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Halifax - Tampa	Temporary suspension from March 25 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 17
Montreal - Baltimore-Washington	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Montreal – Boston	Temporary suspension from April 6 until April 30
Montreal - Dallas-Fort Worth	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Denver	Temporary suspension from March 25 until May 31
Montreal - Fort Myers	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Montreal - Hartford	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Houston	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Montreal - Las Vegas	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal – Los Angeles	Temporary suspension from March 25 until April 30

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Miami	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Montreal - Newark	Temporary suspension from April 6 until April 30
Montreal - New York/LaGuardia	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Montreal - Philadelphia	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Phoenix	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Pittsburgh	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Raleigh–Durham	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - San Francisco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Montreal - Tampa	Temporary suspension from March 25 to April 30

Affected route	Route update
	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Montreal - Washington Dulles	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Montreal-Washington/National	Temporary suspension from April 6 to April 30
Montreal - West Palm Beach	Temporary suspension from March 23 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 26
Ottawa - Boston	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Ottawa - Fort Lauderdale	Temporary suspension from March 25 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Ottawa - Newark	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Ottawa - Orlando	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30

Affected route	Route update
	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Ottawa - Tampa	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 17
Ottawa - Washington DC, Reagan Washington National (DCA)	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Atlanta	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Toronto - Austin	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Baltimore-Washington	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Charlotte	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Cincinnati	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Cleveland	Temporary suspension from

Affected route	Route update
	March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Columbus	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Dallas-Fort Worth	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – Denver	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Toronto - Detroit	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Fort Myers	Temporary suspension from March 26 until June 3
Toronto - Hartford	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Honolulu	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 10
Toronto - Indianapolis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Kansas City	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Las Vegas	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Memphis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Miami	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Toronto - Milwaukee	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Minneapolis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Nashville	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - New Orleans	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – Newark	Temporary suspension from April 18 to April 30

Affected route	Route update
Toronto – New York/LaGuardia	Temporary suspension from April 6 until April 30
Toronto - Palm Springs	Temporary suspension from March 26 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 18
Toronto - Philadelphia	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Toronto - Phoenix	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Toronto - Pittsburgh	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Raleigh–Durham	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Toronto - San Diego	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Toronto - Sarasota	Temporary suspension from March 26 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Savannah	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Seattle	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - St. Louis	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto - Tampa	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Toronto – Washington/National	Temporary suspension from April 13 to April 30
Toronto - West Palm Beach	Temporary suspension from March 25 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Vancouver - Chicago	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Vancouver - Dallas-Fort Worth	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver – Denver	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Vancouver - Honolulu	Temporary suspension from March 25 until May 31
Vancouver - Kahului / Maui	Temporary suspension from March 25 until June 1
Vancouver - Kona	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
Vancouver - Las Vegas	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Vancouver - Newark	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Vancouver - Palm Springs	Temporary suspension from March 26 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Vancouver - Phoenix	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver - Portland	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Vancouver - Sacramento	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Vancouver - San Diego	Temporary suspension from March 31 until May 31
Vancouver - San Jose, California	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Atlantic

Affected route	Route update
Calgary - Frankfurt	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Calgary - London	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 31
Montreal - Athens	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Barcelona	Seasonal startup delayed until June 3
Montreal - Bordeaux	Full summer suspension
Montreal - Brussels	Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Montreal - Casablanca	Temporary suspension from March 17 until May 31
Montreal - Dublin	Seasonal startup delayed until June 2
Montreal - Geneva	Temporary suspension from March 21 until May 31
Montreal - Lyon	Temporary suspension from March 15 until May 31
Montreal - Lisbon	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Montreal - Marseille	Full summer suspension
Montreal - Nice	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Rome	Temporary suspension from March 9 until June 2
Montreal - Venice	Full summer suspension
Ottawa - London (Heathrow)	Temporary suspension from March 17 to May 31
Toronto - Amsterdam	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Toronto - Athens	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Toronto - Barcelona	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Toronto - Berlin	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Toronto - Brussels	New route launch postponed to June 3
Toronto - Budapest	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Toronto - Copenhagen	Temporary suspension from March 17 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Delhi	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Toronto - Dubai	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 1
Toronto - Dublin	Temporary suspension from March 29 until May 31
Toronto - Lisbon	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Toronto - Madrid	Temporary suspension from March 19 until May 31
Toronto - Manchester	Seasonal startup delayed until June 2
Toronto - Milan	Seasonal startup delayed until June 4
Toronto - Mumbai	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Toronto - Munich	Temporary suspension from March 29 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Paris	Temporary suspension from March 18 until May 31
Toronto - Prague	Seasonal startup delayed until June 3
Toronto - Rome	Temporary suspension from March 11 until May 31
Toronto - Tel Aviv	Temporary suspension from March 18 until May 31
Toronto - Venice	Seasonal startup delayed until June 3
Toronto - Vienna	Temporary suspension from March 19 until May 31
Toronto - Zurich	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 4
Vancouver - Dublin	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1
Vancouver - Delhi	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Vancouver - Frankfurt	Seasonal startup delayed until June 1

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver - Paris	Seasonal startup delayed until June 16

Pacific

Affected route	Route update
Montreal - Shanghai	Temporary suspension from February 3 until May 31
Montreal - Tokyo (Narita)	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Toronto - Beijing	Temporary suspension from February 3 until May 31
Toronto - Hong Kong	Temporary suspension from March 2 until May 31
Toronto - Seoul (Incheon)	Temporary suspension from March 17 until May 31
Toronto - Shanghai	Temporary suspension from February 3 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Tokyo (Haneda)	Temporary suspension from March 29 until April 30
Vancouver – Auckland	Temporary suspension from March 28 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes on November 28
Vancouver - Beijing	Temporary suspension from February 3 until May 31
Vancouver - Brisbane	Temporary suspension from March 29 until May 31
Vancouver - Melbourne	Temporary suspension from March 30 until April 30 Service resumes on November 27
Vancouver - Seoul (Incheon)	Temporary suspension from April 1 until April 30
Vancouver - Shanghai	Temporary suspension from February 3 until May 31
Vancouver - Sydney, Australia	Remaining operations from Sydney: April 1 to 6

Affected route	Route update
	Temporary suspension from April 7 until May 31
Vancouver - Taipei	Temporary suspension from March 29 until June 2
Vancouver – Tokyo/Narita	Temporary suspension from April 9 until April 30

South America

Affected route	Route update
Santiago - Buenos Aires	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 1
Toronto - Bogotá	Temporary suspension from March 23 until April 30
Toronto - Cartagena	Temporary suspension from March 22 until April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 12

Affected route	Route update
Toronto - Lima	Temporary suspension from March 17 until June 2
Toronto - Quito	Temporary suspension from March 16 until May 11 Winter seasonal service resumes December 2
Toronto - Santiago	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Toronto - São Paulo	Temporary suspension from March 29 until May 31

Caribbean / Mexico / Central America

Affected route	Route update
Calgary – Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 22 until June 5
Calgary – Puerto Vallarta	Temporary suspension from March 17 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31

Affected route	Route update
Calgary – San José del Cabo	Temporary suspension from March 17 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Halifax - Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 23 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 20
Halifax – Cayo Coco	Temporary suspension from March 21 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes February 5
Halifax – Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 19
Montreal – Barbados	Temporary suspension from March 24 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
Montreal – Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 29 until May 31
Montreal – Cayo Coco	Temporary suspension from March 23

Affected route	Route update
	until May 31
Montreal – Cozumel	Temporary suspension from March 21 until June 4
Montreal – Curaçao	Temporary suspension from March 21 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 18
Montreal – Fort- de- France	Temporary suspension from March 25 until May 2
Montreal – Holguín	Temporary suspension from March 20 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 29
Montreal – Ixtapa	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 19
Montreal – Liberia	Temporary suspension from March 26 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Montreal – Montego Bay	Temporary suspension from March 21 until June 2

Affected route	Route update
Montreal – Nassau	Temporary suspension from March 22 until June 5
Montreal – Pointe-à-Pitre	Temporary suspension from March 24 until May 1
Montreal – Providenciales	Temporary suspension from March 20 until June 6
Montreal – Puerto Plata	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 4
Montreal – Puerto Vallarta	Temporary suspension from March 30 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Montreal – Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 3
Montreal – Samaná	Temporary suspension from March 22 until May 31
Montreal - San José	Temporary suspension from March 24 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31

Affected route	Route update
Montreal – San Juan	Temporary suspension from March 16 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
Montreal – San Salvador (Bahamas)	Temporary suspension from March 18 until June 1
Montreal – Santa Clara	Temporary suspension from March 22 until June 2
Montreal – Varadero	Temporary suspension from March 22 until June 1
Ottawa – Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 21 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes November 6
Ottawa – Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Ottawa – Varadero	Temporary suspension from March 17 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 21

Affected route	Route update
Quebec City – Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 19
Quebec City – Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 16 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 20
Toronto – Antigua	Temporary suspension from March 27 until June 5
Toronto – Aruba	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 5
Toronto – Belize City	Temporary suspension from March 24 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 11
Toronto – Bermuda	Temporary suspension from March 21 until May 31
Toronto – Cancun	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Toronto – Cayo Coco	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – Cozumel	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Toronto – Curaçao	Temporary suspension from March 30 until June 6
Toronto - George Town	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Toronto – Grand Cayman	Temporary suspension from March 22 until June 5
Toronto – Grenada	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Toronto – Havana	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Toronto – Holguín	Temporary suspension from March 21 until June 2

Affected route	Route update
Toronto – Huatulco	Temporary suspension from March 23 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Toronto – Ixtapa	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Toronto – Kingston	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Toronto – Liberia	Temporary suspension from March 26 until June 1
Toronto – Montego Bay	Temporary suspension from March 26 until May 31
Toronto – Nassau	Temporary suspension from March 28 until May 31
Toronto – Panama City	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 2
Toronto – Port of Spain	Temporary suspension from March 23 until June 1

Affected route	Route update
Toronto – Providenciales	Temporary suspension from March 24 until June 5
Toronto – Puerto Plata	Temporary suspension from March 22 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 27
Toronto – Puerto Vallarta	Temporary suspension from April 12 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Toronto – Punta Cana	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31
Toronto – Samaná	Temporary suspension from March 23 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Toronto – San José del Cabo	Temporary suspension from March 26 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Toronto – San José	Temporary suspension from April 1 until June 2

Affected route	Route update
Toronto – San Juan	Temporary suspension from March 23 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Toronto – Santa Clara	Temporary suspension from March 20 until June 2
Toronto – St. Kitts	Temporary suspension from March 25 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Toronto – St. Lucia	Temporary suspension from March 24 until June 1
Toronto – St. Maarten	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
Toronto – St. Vincent	Temporary suspension from March 27 until June 3
Toronto – Varadero	Temporary suspension from March 23 until May 31

Affected route	Route update
Vancouver – Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 24 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 26
Vancouver – Ixtapa	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Vancouver- Mexico City	Temporary suspension from April 1 until May 31
Vancouver – Puerto Vallarta	Temporary suspension from March 30 until June 5
Vancouver – San José del Cabo	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 27
Winnipeg – Cancun	Temporary suspension from March 29 to April 30 Winter seasonal service resumes October 31

North America

Canada

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Bagotville - YBG	Temporary suspension until May 31
Baie Comeau - YBC	Temporary suspension until May 31
Bathurst - ZBF	Temporary suspension until May 31
Castlegar - YCG	Temporary suspension until May 31
Comox - YQQ	Temporary suspension until May 31
Cranbrook - YXC	Temporary suspension until May 31
Deer Lake - YDF	Temporary suspension until May 31
Fort St.John - YXJ	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Gander - YQX	Temporary suspension until May 31
Goose Bay - YYR	Temporary suspension until May 31
Gaspé - YGP	Temporary suspension until May 31
Îles-de-la-Madeleine -YGR	Temporary suspension until May 31
Kamloops - YKA	Temporary suspension until May 31
Kingston - YGK	Temporary suspension until May 31
London - YXU	Temporary suspension until May 31
Moncton - YQM	Temporary suspension until May 31
Mont Joli - YYY	Temporary suspension until May 31
North Bay - YYB	Temporary suspension until May 31
Penticton - YYF	Temporary suspension until May 31
Prince Rupert - YXS	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Rouyn-Noranda - YUY	Temporary suspension until May 31
Saint John - YSJ	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sandpit - YZP	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sarnia - YZR	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sault Ste Marie - YAM	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sept-Îles - YZV	Temporary suspension until May 31
Smithers - YYD	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sydney - YQY	Temporary suspension until May 31
Toronto Island - YTZ	Temporary suspension until May 31
Wabush - YWK	Temporary suspension until May 31
Windsor - YQG	Temporary suspension until May 31
Val d'Or - YVO	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Anchorage - ANC	Temporary suspension until May 31
Atlanta - ATL	Temporary suspension until May 31
Austin - AUS	Temporary suspension until May 31
Baltimore - BWI	Temporary suspension until May 31
Charlotte - CLT	Temporary suspension until May 31
Cincinnati - CVG	Temporary suspension until May 31
Cleveland - CLE	Temporary suspension until May 31
Columbus - CMH	Temporary suspension until May 31
Dallas Fort Worth - DFW	Temporary suspension until May 31
Detroit - DTW	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Denver - DEN	Temporary suspension until April 30
Fort Myers - RSW	Temporary suspension until May 31
Hartford - BDL	Temporary suspension until May 31
Honolulu - HNL	Temporary suspension until May 31
Indianapolis - IND	Temporary suspension until May 31
Kahului/Maui - OGG	Temporary suspension until May 31
Kansas City - MCI	Temporary suspension until May 31
Kona - KOA	Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
Las Vegas - LAS	Temporary suspension until June 1
Lihue - LIH	Winter seasonal service resumes December 17
Memphis - MEM	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Miami - MIA	Temporary suspension until May 31
Milwaukee - MKE	Temporary suspension until May 31
Minneapolis - MSP	Temporary suspension until May 31
Nashville - BNA	Temporary suspension until May 31
Newark - EWR	Temporary suspension from April 18 to April 30
New Orleans - MSY	Temporary suspension until May 31
New York - LGA	Temporary suspension until April 30
Palm Springs - PSP	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Philadelphia - PHL	Temporary suspension until May 31
Pittsburgh - PIT	Temporary suspension until May 31
Phoenix - PHX	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Portland - PDX	Temporary suspension until May 31
Providence - PVD	Temporary suspension until May 31
Raleigh Durham - RDU	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sacramento - SMF	Temporary suspension until May 31
San Diego - SAN	Temporary suspension until May 31
San Jose - SJC	Temporary suspension until May 31
Santa Ana - SNA	Temporary suspension until June 15
Savannah - SAV	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sarasota - SRQ	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
St Louis - STL	Temporary suspension until May 31
Tampa - TPA	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Washington - DCA	Temporary suspension from April 13 to April 30
West Palm Beach - PBI	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25

Atlantic

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Algiers - ALG	Temporary suspension until June 5
Amsterdam - AMS	Temporary suspension until June 1
Athens - ATH	Temporary suspension until June 1
Barcelona - BCN	Temporary suspension until June 1
Berlin - TXL	Temporary suspension until June 1
Brussels - BRU	Temporary suspension until May 2

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Bucharest - OTP	Temporary suspension until June 4
Budapest - BUD	Temporary suspension until June 1
Casablanca - CMN	Temporary suspension until June 1
Copenhagen - CPH	Temporary suspension until June 1
Delhi - DEL	Temporary suspension until June 1
Dubai - DXB	Temporary suspension until June 3
Dublin - DUB	Temporary suspension until June 1
Edinburgh - EDI	Temporary suspension until June 5
Geneva - GVA	Temporary suspension until June 1
Glasgow - GLA	Temporary suspension until June 13
Lisbon - LIS	Temporary suspension until June 1
Lyon - LYS	Temporary suspension until June 1

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Madrid - MAD	Temporary suspension until June 1
Manchester - MAN	Temporary suspension until June 2
Marseille - MRS	Temporary suspension until June 2021
Milan - MXP	Temporary suspension until June 4
Mumbai - BOM	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
Munich - MUC	Temporary suspension until June 1
Nice - NCE	Temporary suspension until June 1
Porto - OPO	Temporary suspension until June 19
Prague - PRG	Temporary suspension until June 3
Reykjavik - KEF	Temporary suspension until June 4
Rome - FCO	Temporary suspension until June 1

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Shannon - SNN	Temporary suspension until June 2021
Tel Aviv - TLV	Temporary suspension until June 1
Venice - VCE	Temporary suspension until June 3
Vienna - VIE	Temporary suspension until June 1
Warsaw - WAW	Temporary suspension until June 3
Zagreb - ZAG	Temporary suspension until June 4
Zurich - ZRH	Temporary suspension until May 5

Pacific

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Auckland - AKL	Winter seasonal service resumes November 29
Beijing - PEK	Temporary suspension until June 1

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Brisbane - BNE	Temporary suspension until June 2
Melbourne - MEL	Temporary suspension until November 28
Osaka - KIX	Temporary suspension until June 5
Seoul - ICN	Temporary suspension until May 1
Shanghai - PVG	Temporary suspension until May 31
Sydney - SYD	Temporary suspension until June 2
Taipei - TPE	Temporary suspension until June 2
Tokyo/Haneda - HND	Temporary suspension until May 1
Tokyo/Narita - NRT	Temporary suspension until April 30

South America

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Buenos Aires - EZE	Temporary suspension until June 1
Bogota - BOG	Temporary suspension until April 30
Cartagena - CTG	Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
Lima - LIM	Temporary suspension until June 2
Santiago - SCL	Temporary suspension until June 1
São Paulo - GRU	Temporary suspension until June 1
Quito - UIO	Winter seasonal service resumes November 28

Caribbean / Mexico / Central America

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Antigua - ANU	Temporary suspension until June 5

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Aruba - AUA	Temporary suspension until June 5
Belize - BZE	Temporary suspension until December 10
Bermuda - BDA	Temporary suspension until May 31
Cancun - CUN	Temporary suspension until May 31
Cayo Coco - CCC	Temporary suspension until May 31
Cozumel - CZM	Temporary suspension until June 4
Curacao - CUR	Temporary suspension until June 6
Fort-de-France - FDF	Temporary suspension until May 2
George Town - GGT	Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Grand Cayman Island - GCM	Temporary suspension until June 5
Grenada - GND	Temporary suspension until May 31

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Havana - HAV	Temporary suspension until May 31
Holguin - HOG	Temporary suspension until June 2
Huatulco - HUX	Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Ixtapa - ZIH	Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
Kingston - KIN	Temporary suspension until May 31
Liberia - LIR	Temporary suspension until June 1
Montego Bay - MBJ	Temporary suspension until May 31
Nassau - NAS	Temporary suspension until May 31
Panama City - PTY	Temporary suspension until June 2
Pointe-à-Pitre - PTP	Temporary suspension until May 1
Port of Spain - POS	Temporary suspension until June 1

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
Providenciales - PLS	Temporary suspension until June 5
Puerto Plata - POP	Temporary suspension until June 3
Puerto Vallarta - POP	Temporary suspension until June 5
Punta Cana - PUJ	Temporary suspension until May 31
Samana - AZS	Temporary suspension until May 31
San Jose - SJO	Temporary suspension until June 2
San Jose del Cabo - SJD	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
San Juan - SJU	Winter seasonal service resumes October 25
St.Kitts - SKB	Winter seasonal service resumes October 31
St.Lucia - UVF	Temporary suspension until June 1

Affected Airport	Operation Suspension Dates
St.Maarten - SXM	Winter seasonal service resumes December 12
St.Vincent - SVD	Temporary suspension until June 3
Santa Clara - SNU	Temporary suspension until June 2
Varadero - VRA	Temporary suspension until May 31

This is Exhibit "19" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Transat announces a gradual suspension of its flights

MONTREAL, March 18, 2020 /CNW Telbec/ - Transat A.T. Inc. announces today the gradual suspension of Air Transat flights until April 30.

This decision follows the Government of Canada's announcement that the country is closing its borders to foreign nationals, as well as similar decisions by several other countries where Transat operates.

Sales for departures until April 30 are suspended immediately from and to most destinations in Europe and the United States. Repatriation flights will still be operated during the next two weeks, in order to bring Transat customers back to their home country. So as to allow as many repatriations as possible, sales will, however, remain temporarily open in both directions between Montreal and Paris and Lisbon and between Toronto and London and Lisbon. A date for a full halt to operations will be announced soon.

Sales are also halted immediately from and to the Caribbean and Mexico. Again, flights will continue for a few more days in order to repatriate Transat customers to Canada. Transat is advising its Canadian customers who were scheduled to depart in the coming days to heed the government's recommendations and postpone their departure.

For domestic flights, clients are encouraged to check that their flight is maintained on the website.

Transat customers who are currently at destinations are asked to check the company's website, where necessary information for the organization of their return will be made available. There will be no booking fee and passengers will not have to pay any price difference. It is of the utmost importance to Transat to bring everyone back.

All customers who were unable to travel because their flight is cancelled will receive a credit for future travel, to be used within 24 months of their original travel date.

"This is an unprecedented situation, beyond our control, which is forcing us to briefly suspend all of our flights to contribute to the effort to fight the pandemic, protect our customers and employees and safeguard the company," said Transat President and Chief Executive Officer Jean-Marc Eustache. "We are doing everything we can so that this has as little impact as possible on our employees and customers, whom we make sure to bring back home."

In addition to the cost-cutting measures already implemented in recent weeks, we will be moving ahead in the coming days with measures to reduce staffing. These measures will include temporary layoffs and reduction of work time or salary that will unfortunately affect a significant portion of our employees. The company's senior executives and members of the Board of Directors are also taking pay cuts.

About Transat

Transat A.T. Inc. is one of the world's largest integrated tourism companies and Canada's holiday travel leader. It offers vacation packages, hotel stays and air travel under the Transat and Air Transat brands to some 60 destinations in more than 25 countries in the Americas and Europe. Transat is firmly committed to sustainable tourism development, as reflected in its multiple corporate responsibility initiatives over the past 12 years, and was awarded Travelife certification in 2018. Based in Montreal, the company has 5,000 employees (TSX: TRZ).

SOURCE Transat A.T. Inc.

Media: Christophe Hennebelle, Vice-President, Human Resources and Corporate Affairs, 514 987-1660, ext. 4584

522

Initiatives for a better world

Corporate Responsibility >

523

Corporate site

About Transat

Governance

Investors

Media

Careers

Corporate Responsibility

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion

Legal notice

Our terms & conditions

Conditions of use of the site

Privacy policy

Recruitment Privacy Policy

Choosing Transat

Our Sun Collections

Latest news

Travelife Certification

Travel info

Entry requirements by destination

Baggage fees

Flight schedules (arrivals & departures)

Fraud and prevention

Preventing fraud

Quick links

E-documents

Cheap packages

Cheap flights

Last minute deals

Electronic brochures

Hurricane policy

Travel gift certificates

Option Flex

Site map

For travel agents

Agent Direct access

Stay in touch

#ExperienceTransat

Newsletter

Air Transat App

Contact us

24 hours a day
7 days a week

Find a Transat Travel, Voyages Transat, Marlin Travel or Club Voyages agency

Prices for packages are per person, based on double occupancy.

This is Exhibit "20" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Travel advisory Latest updates

April 13, 2020 - CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

Due to the coronavirus pandemic, we are temporarily suspending our flights until May 31, 2020.

If you were unable to travel due to the cancellation of your flight, you will receive a credit for future travel to be used within 24 months of your original return dates. You do not need to contact us to obtain this credit, it will be automatically applied to your account.

Coronavirus (COVID-19)

Temporary suspension of our flights

Due to the coronavirus pandemic, we are temporarily suspending our flights until May 31, 2020.

If you were unable to travel due to the cancellation of our flights, we are providing a flight credit for travel within 24 months of your original return date.

These are extraordinary circumstances, when all airlines and travel companies have been forced to temporarily halt or drastically reduce their operations while governments have decided to close their borders.

This unprecedented situation is well beyond our control; we believe that the 24-month credit is an acceptable solution, and we are confident that our customers will be able to travel again in the near future, once the crisis passes.

FAQ - Answers to Your Questions (COVID-19)

Transat cancelled my flight/package. Will I get a refund?

No. Since the cancellation is the result of exceptional circumstances surrounding the COVID-19 pandemic, you will not get a refund. Instead, you will receive a credit for the value of your flight/package, applicable to your next trip with Transat.

526

- Your travel credit will be valid for 24 months after your original return date.
- You don't need to contact us to receive this credit; Transat will automatically apply a credit to all cancelled bookings.
- Processing the credit may take some time, as we have a lot of bookings to process.
- The credit may be processed in several steps: for instance, one passenger at a time, or your seat selection in a second step. But rest assured that the full amount of your booking will be credited.

If you booked directly with Transat (via www.airtransat.com or www.transat.com or our contact centre):

- You will receive a confirmation email as soon as your booking has been credited.

If you booked with a travel agent or via a website other than www.airtransat.com or www.transat.com:

- Your travel agent or Web intermediary will receive a confirmation email from Transat as soon as your booking has been credited, and they will then notify you.

Important: If you had a group booking for 10 people or more, the terms and conditions of the flexibility policy may differ. Contact our groups department or your travel agent.

I didn't show up at the airport for my Air Transat flight but didn't notify you in advance that I would not be taking my flight. Am I entitled to a refund or credit?

No. To be eligible for a travel credit, you had to notify us of your intention not to travel at least 24 hours before departure, in one of two ways:

- By calling us
- By filling out our online form

I notified you between March 12 and March 31 that I would not be travelling. Am I entitled to a refund or credit?

You're eligible for a travel credit (for your full trip or the unused portion of it)—valid for 24 months after your original return date—if you notified us of your intention not to travel at least 24 hours before departure, in one of two ways:

- By calling us
- By filling out our online form

527

I would like to cancel my trip scheduled for travel after May 31. What do I need to do?

At this time, our flights/packages scheduled for travel after May 31 remain valid. If you still decide to cancel your trip right now, our regular terms and conditions will apply.

As the situation is changing rapidly, we suggest that you wait a little before modifying your booking. Check our coronavirus web page regularly for updates.

Can I make a new booking for a later departure in 2020?

Yes, you can book with peace of mind for a later departure in 2020. We know that plans may change due to unforeseen events like COVID-19. That's why any new booking of a South package or flight to an Air Transat destination made between April 13 and 30 can be changed at no charge (only once), regardless of your travel dates. If you choose to cancel your trip and your ticket is non-refundable, you'll receive a travel credit for your next trip. The travel credit is valid for 12 months after your original return date.

See the terms and conditions of this flexibility policy and book with peace of mind.

You can make a booking on www.airtransat.com or www.transat.com, by calling our Contact Centre at 1-877-872-6728 or +1-514-636-3630, or through your travel agent.

How can I know if I travelled on the same flight as people infected with COVID-19?

For information on flights operated since March 15, 2020, that had confirmed cases of COVID-19 on board, please consult the official list published on the Government of Canada website.

528

I'm a Canadian still abroad and can't find a flight back to Canada. What can I do?

All Air Transat flights have been cancelled until May 31.

Canadians who are still abroad and require emergency assistance should contact Global Affairs Canada, open 24/7, in one of the following ways:

- By completing this form: https://travel.gc.ca/assistance/emergency-assistance/emergency-contact-form
- By calling one of these toll-free numbers: https://travel.gc.ca/assistance/emergency-assistance/toll-free-numbers
- By emailing sos@international.gc.ca

Canadians can also refer to the embassies and consulates directory (https://travel.gc.ca/assistance/embassies-consulates), which contains contact information for government offices that provide consular services to Canadians abroad.

I need cancellation confirmation for my insurance. How do I get it?

Check with your insurance company to find out exactly what type of document or confirmation you need. You can then request it by calling our contact center at 1-877-872-6728 or +1-514-636-3630 or through your travel adviser if you booked with a travel agency.

How do I redeem my travel credit for a new booking?

When you're ready to make the new reservation, simply mention your intention to apply the credit to your purchase. Have your initial booking number on hand as it will be used as for reference purposes.

- If you booked directly with Transat (on www.airtransat.com or www.transat.com, or through our Customer Contact Centre): please call our Customer Contact Centre at 1-877-872-6728 or +1-514-636-3630.
- If you booked with a travel agent or on a third-party website (other than www.airtransat.com or www.transat.com): please contact the travel agency you originally booked with.

529

About us

About Air Transat

About Transat A.T.

Travel Information

Our fleet

Baggage fees

Sustainable tourism

Awards and recognition

Careers

About our website

Site map

Web Accessibility

Legal notice

Conditions of carriage and tariffs

Conditions of sale

Privacy policy

Disruptions Recourses

Terms of use of the Air Transat sites

Fraudulent phone calls and e-mail messages

Passengers travelling to/from United States: Customer Service Plan and Tarmac Delay Plan

Baggage and optional services fees

CRS Booking & Ticketing Policy

Stay in touch

Air Transat App

Experience Transat Blog

Newsletter

Contact us

Media contacts

Quick links

Cheap flights

Cheap packages

Latest news

Contests

Hurricane policy

Contact Centre

Canada:
1-877-TRANSAT
(1-877-872-6728)

Other Countries:
+1-514-636-3630

4 a.m. - 8 p.m.
(EDT)
7 days a week

Air Transat has been named the 2019 World's Best Leisure Airline

Vote for us in 2020

This is Exhibit "21" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

COVID-19 Policies

Please note: at this time, we are only accepting calls from customers who are currently in destination returning home, or those who wish to cancel, book or amend a booking for departure dates from May 1st onwards. If you have a booking with a departure date up to, and including, April 30th 2020 you will receive a travel credit, and no action on your part will be required.

The health and safety of our passengers and our employees is of paramount importance and we are working tirelessly to assist our customers in light of the COVID-19 outbreak.

March 18, 2020: New government travel regulations were introduced this morning that affect anyone returning to Canada, please click here (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/sunwing-operational-updates)for more information.

If you are currently in destination please click here (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/sunwing-operational-updates)for more information.

March 17th to April 30th

Sunwing is suspending all southbound flights between March 17th and April 30th.

Customers with departure dates for flights or vacation packages between March 17th and April 30th are eligible to receive a future travel credit in the value of the original amount paid. No action needed. Your original booking number will be the code of your future travel credit. We will communicate formally via the email address we have on file (including group travel bookings). You do not need to contact us.

This credit can be redeemed against future travel for travel up to 24 months from original departure date to anywhere Sunwing Airlines operates.

May 1, 2020 onwards

Standard terms and conditions apply to changes and cancellations.

For bookings with Cancellation Insurance

If you have purchased the Sunwing Worry Free Cancellation Waiver you can cancel your vacation. click here

If you have travel insurance not purchased through Sunwing, you can go to Sunwing My Booking (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004/https://www2.sunwing.ca/mybooking?lang=en) to cancel your trip and make a claim with your insurance provider.

Future travel credit are non-transferable, non-refundable and hold no cash value.*

Vacation deals

All inclusive vacation packages (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/all-inclusive-vacation-packages)

Cruise vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/cruise-travel/)

Departures from your doorstep (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/vacations-from-your-doorstep)

Last minute vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/last-minute-vacations)

Signature Collections (/web/20200321203004mp_/https:

Flight deals

Flights to Costa Rica (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/costa-rica)

Flight deals to Jamaica (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/jamaica)

Flights to Cuba (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/cuba)

Flight deals to Mexico (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/mexico)

Flights to the D.R. (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/dominican-republic)

Flights to Florida (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/florida-flights)

//www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/signature-collections)

Summer vacation deals (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/summer-steals)

Top-rated Adult resorts (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/adult-vacations/)

Top-rated Family resorts (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/family-vacations)

Two week vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/two-week-vacations)

Short Stay Vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/short-stay-vacations)

Winter vacation deals (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/winter-vacation-deals)

Flights within Canada (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/canada-flights)

Popular destinations

Antigua (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/antigua)

The Bahamas (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/bahamas)

Caribbean vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/caribbean-vacations)

Cuba (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/cuba)

Dominican Republic (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/dominican-republic)

Grand Cayman (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/cayman-islands/grand-cayman)

Jamaica (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/jamaica)

Mexico (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/mexico)

Saint Lucia (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/saint-lucia)

United States (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/united-states)

Holiday types

Cruise vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/cruise-travel/)

Boutique vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/boutique-hotels)

Destination Weddings (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.weddingvacations.com/?utm_source=sunwing%20group%20banner%20ad&utm_medium=referral&utm_campaign=footer)

Dive vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/featured-offer/divecations)

Golf vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/golf-vacations)

Honeymoons (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/honeymoon-vacations/)

Single parent vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/single-parent-vacations)

Spa vacations (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/spa-vacations)

Vacations for singles (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/solo-travel)

More destination deals (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations)

Corporate

About us (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/about-us)

Accessibility policy (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/sunwing-airlines/special-assistance)

Careers (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004mp_/http://www.sunwingtravelgroup.com/en/Careers/Join-our-winning-team)

Press releases (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004mp_/http://www.sunwingtravelgroup.com/en/Media-Room/Latest-News)

Privacy policy (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/mobileprivacy)

Terms and conditions (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/terms-and-conditions)

(https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/http://www.tico.ca)

Click for Review (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/http://www.bbb.org/kitchener/business-reviews/tours-operators-and-promoters/sunwing-vacations-in-etobicoke-on-1133128#sealclick)

Our sites

(/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/) (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/https://www.sunwing.com/?forceRedir=0)

Useful links

Airline travel information (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/sunwing-airlines)

Protect your vacation (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/be-worry-free)

Brochures (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/e-brochures)

Contact us (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwingcares.ca/hc/en-us/articles/115000183534-Contact-us)

FAQs (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwingcares.ca/hc/en-us/sections/204950908)

Flight status and alerts (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/flight-status-alerts)

Optional services (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/optional-services-sunwing-airlines)

Web check-in (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/flight-check-in)

Win a vacation (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/contest/win-a-holiday)

Vacation Better (/web/20200321203004mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/vacation-inspiration)

Social media

(https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/http://www.facebook.com/SunwingVacations)

(https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/http://twitter.com/#!/SunwingVacay)

(https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/http://www.youtube.com/user/SunwingTV)

(https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203034/https://www.instagram.com/sunwingvacations)

This is Exhibit "22" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

COVID-19 Policies

We apologize if your travel plans have been disrupted as a result of COVID-19 and we understand that you likely have many questions during this unprecedented time . Our team is working around the clock to assist you. Although we can't anticipate all your questions, we've tried our best to answer many of them on our FAQ page. Current call wait times are longer than usual so please check our FAQ to see if your question has been answered before contacting us. We appreciate your patience and understanding at this time. Please view our FAQ here (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203/https://www.sunwingcares.ca/hc/en-us/articles/360042892693-COVID-19-)

If you have a booking with us please see the chart below regarding our cancellation policies:

March 17th to May 31st

Sunwing is suspending all southbound flights between March 17th and May 31st.

Customers with departure dates for flights or vacation packages between March 17th and May 31st are eligible to receive a future travel credit in the value of the original amount paid. No action needed. Your original booking number will be the code of your future travel credit. We will communicate formally via the email address we have on file (including group travel bookings). You do not need to contact us.

This credit can be redeemed against future travel for departures up to June 20, 2022 to anywhere Sunwing Airlines operates.

June 1, 2020 onwards

Standard terms and conditions apply to changes and cancellations.

For bookings with Cancellation Insurance

If you have purchased the Sunwing Worry Free Cancellation Waiver you can cancel your vacation. click here

If you have travel insurance not purchased through Sunwing, you can go to Sunwing My Booking (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203/https://www2.sunwing.ca/mybooking?lang=en) to cancel your trip and make a claim with your insurance provider.

Flexible Final Payment Due Date

Effective March 25, 2020, final payments will now be due 25 days before the departure date (instead of the usual 45 days) for departures from June 1 - 30, 2020. This change to our policy is temporary and conditions will apply*. In addition, our air and package cancellation terms will also be aligned with these amended final payment conditions. All other terms and conditions remain the same.

*Individual bookings only (not applicable to group bookings). Applicable on all air only and packages purchased via Sunwing Cancellation fees: 25 days or more before departure: loss of deposit. 24 to 22 days before departure: 50% of the total amount. 21 days and less before departure: 100% of the total amount.

Future travel credit are non-transferable, non-refundable and hold no cash value.*

Vacation deals

Flight deals

Flights to Costa Rica (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/costa-rica)

All inclusive vacation packages (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/all-inclusive-vacation-packages)

Cruise vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/cruise-travel/)

Departures from your doorstep (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/vacations-from-your-doorstep)

Last minute vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/last-minute-vacations)

Signature Collections (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/signature-collections)

Summer vacation deals (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/summer-steals)

Top-rated Adult resorts (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/adult-vacations/)

Top-rated Family resorts (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/family-vacations)

Two week vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/two-week-vacations)

Short Stay Vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/short-stay-vacations)

Winter vacation deals (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/winter-vacation-deals)

Flight deals to Jamaica (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/jamaica)

Flights to Cuba (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/cuba)

Flight deals to Mexico (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/mexico)

Flights to the D.R. (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/dominican-republic)

Flights to Florida (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/florida-flights)

Flights within Canada (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/flights/canada-flights)

Popular destinations

Antigua (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/antigua)

The Bahamas (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/bahamas)

Caribbean vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/caribbean-vacations)

Cuba (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/cuba)

Dominican Republic (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/dominican-republic)

Grand Cayman (/web/20200414061203mp_/https:

Holiday types

Cruise vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/cruise-travel/)

Boutique vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/boutique-hotels)

Destination Weddings (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.weddingvacations.com/?utm_source=sunwing%20group%20banner%20ad&utm_medium=referral&utm_campaign=footer)

Dive vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/featured-offer/divecations)

Golf vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https:

//www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/cayman-islands/grand-cayman)

Jamaica (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/jamaica)

Mexico (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/mexico)

Saint Lucia (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/saint-lucia)

United States (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations/united-states)

More destination deals (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/destinations)

Corporate

About us (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/about-us)

Accessibility policy (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/sunwing-airlines/special-assistance)

Careers (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203mp_/http://www.sunwingtravelgroup.com/en/Careers/Join-our-winning-team)

Press releases (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203mp_/http://www.sunwingtravelgroup.com/en/Media-Room/Latest-News)

Privacy policy (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/mobileprivacy)

Terms and conditions (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/terms-and-conditions)

(https://web.archive.org/web/20200412015128/http://www.tico.ca)

Click for Review (https://web.archive.org/web/20200412015128/http://www.bbb.org/kitchener/business-reviews/tours-operators-and-promoters/sunwing-vacations-in-etobicoke-on-1133128#sealclick)

Our sites

//www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/golf-vacations)

Honeymoons (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/honeymoon-vacations/)

Single parent vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/single-parent-vacations)

Spa vacations (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/spa-vacations)

Vacations for singles (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/promotion/packages/solo-travel)

Useful links

Airline travel information (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/sunwing-airlines)

Protect your vacation (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/be-worry-free)

Brochures (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/e-brochures)

Contact us (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwingcares.ca/hc/en-us/articles/115000183534-Contact-us)

FAQs (https://web.archive.org/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwingcares.ca/hc/en-us/sections/204950908)

Flight status and alerts (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/Pages/en/flight-status-alerts)

Group Travel (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/grouptravel)

Optional services (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/optional-services-sunwing-airlines)

Web check-in (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/pages/en/flight-check-in)

Win a vacation (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/contest/win-a-holiday)

Vacation Better (/web/20200414061203mp_/https://www.sunwing.ca/en/vacation-inspiration)

Social media

542

/web/20200412015128
/https:
//www.instagram.com
/sunwingvacations)

This is Exhibit "23" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

544

Swoop Suspends all International Flights, Commits to Bringing Home 2,349 Canadian Travellers

CALGARY, AB - March 19, 2020

Swoop is altering its international operations to help with the global efforts to combat the spread of COVID-19. At the end of the operating day on Sunday, March 22, Swoop is suspending all international and transborder flights, with the exception of some select Montego Bay flights, and will begin its efforts to bring home the 2,349 Swoop travellers who are currently outside of Canada. This suspension will be in place until October 24, 2020.

> "These are extraordinary times, and we want to be sure our Swoop travellers are safe at home in Canada," says Bert van der Stege, Head of Commercial, Swoop. "Our priority is to bring Canadian travellers home, ensuring the safety of our travellers, crew and aircraft. We have put these suspensions and subsequent repatriation efforts in place to continue to deliver on that."

On Monday, March 23, extra flights will begin operating for those Canadians abroad. There will be a total of 9 flights operating over three days to repatriate 2,349 Swoop travellers to Canada.

Impacted travellers are being contacted via email with more specific information on how to re-book on these repatriation flights, as well as how to cancel any upcoming international travel.

> "As a result of how quickly the COVID-19 outbreak is changing demand for international air travel, we are in constant communication with our travellers through our various channels. We apologize for longer than average response times as we work through these changes," van der Stege states.

Swoop is committed to helping Canadians get to where they need to be, whether that be home to Canada or within the domestic network. The airline prides itself on making all seats available at fair fares to support Canadians through these unsettling times.

About Swoop

Swoop is on a mission to make travel more affordable and accessible for all Canadians. Established in 2018 as an independent subsidiary of the WestJet Group of Companies, Swoop is Canada's ultra-not-expensive airline. Offering scheduled service to destinations in Canada, the U.S., Mexico and the Caribbean, Swoop's unbundled fares put travellers in control of purchasing only the products and services they desire.

Swoop's fleet of ten Boeing 737-800 NG aircraft expanded this year to add six Boeing 737 MAX 8 aircraft, for a total of 16 aircraft.

At FlySwoop.com travellers can quickly and easily book flights, manage bookings, check-in, view boarding passes, track flights and access Wi-Fi service in-flight.

For Swoop media relations, please contact media@flyswoop.com

For Swoop media relations, please contact: media@flyswoop.com

About Swoop

Swoop 101

Where we fly

Jobs

Newsroom

Media library

Sitemap

Travel Agent Sign-in

Legal and Fees

Terms of use

Privacy policy

Tariffs

Canadian flight and service disruptions

U.S. flight and service disruptions

Travel terms and conditions

Optional fees

Flight interruptions and passenger rights

Connect

Need help

Group bookings

Email offers

Blog

547

Follow us:

This is Exhibit "24" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

WestJet statement on operations and network from Ed Sims, President and CEO

Today, Prime Minister Trudeau made an explicit declaration to all Canadians abroad that it is time to come home. Based on this statement and the recommendations to Canadians to control the spread of the coronavirus COVID-19, we have made impactful decisions related to our operations.

On Sunday, March 22 at 11:59 p.m. MDT, we will suspend scheduled commercial operations for all international and transborder flights for a 30 day period. To be clear, this means our final commercially scheduled flights from international and transborder destinations will launch on Sunday night by 11:59 p.m. local time; after that, we will be operating rescue and repatriation flights with our partners. As of tonight, international and transborder tickets are no longer available for sale during this 30 day period.

On Wednesday, March 18 at 11:59 p.m. MDT, WestJet will suspend all outbound international ticket sales for travel until Sunday, March 22 at 11:59 p.m. MDT, so we are no longer sending Canadians out of the country and can instead focus on bringing them home.

To assist Canadians in returning home on short notice, we are in the process of lowering prices on our remaining seats into Canada in all cabins.

In addition, we will also reduce our domestic schedule by approximately 50 per cent. At this point, all network changes are in place for the next 30 days.

WestJetters are known for our level of care and this situation is no different. While this is a difficult time, we now have the responsibility as a Canadian airline to bring our citizens home.

-Statement from Ed Sims, WestJet President and Chief Executive Officer

For more details, and to understand how this may impact you, visit Options for WestJet guests.

This is Exhibit "25" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

WestJet updates domestic flight schedule from May 5 through June 4 - WestJet Blog

WestJet is making changes to its domestic flight schedule, removing approximately 4,000 weekly flights or 600 daily flights from May 5 through June 4, 2020. These changes are required to address significantly reduced guest demand during the COVID-19 crisis.

While some city pairings have been temporarily removed, we continue to serve the 38 Canadian airports to which we currently operate, ensuring that those with essential travel requirements can get where they need to be and that cargo goods like blood, medical products and food supplies can continue to flow.

The overall demand for travel remains fluid during this ongoing pandemic and we continue to evaluate further reductions. Bookings and full schedule details are available at westjet.com. All transborder and international routes remain suspended at this time through June 4, 2020.

For guests with travel booked after May 5 through June 4, we are proactively notifying them of their options.

The following city pairs have been temporarily removed from May 5-June 4, 2020:

This is Exhibit "26" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Air Canada Flash <communications@emails.agents.aircanada.com>
Sent: March 18, 2020 4:53 PM
[redacted]
Subject: Update to Schedule Change policy in response to COVID-19 | Air Canada Provides Update on Ongoing COVID-19 Response

AIR CANADA

Email not displaying correctly?
View t in your browser.

FLASH Canada - March 18, 2020

Update to Schedule Change Policy In Response To COVID-19

Air Canada said today that it will gradually suspend the majority of its international and U.S. transborder flights by March 31, 2020 in response to decisions by national governments, including Canada and the United States, to close borders and restrict commercial aviation as a result of the COVID-19 crisis. As a result, you will start to receive these Schedule Change notifications in your GDS queues tomorrow March 19, 2020.

Affected customers whose flights are cancelled will be able to receive a full credit, regardless of fare type, valid for 24 months. We will be providing you additional information shortly on how to process the 24-month validity. At this time, we ask that you refrain from actioning or refunding tickets affected by this schedule change.

This new change in schedule change policy will take effect tomorrow March 19, 2020 for all schedule changes implemented as of tomorrow March 19, 2020. Kindly note, any schedule changes made by Air Canada prior to March 19, 2020 are covered by our standard Schedule Change policy, which includes the option for a full refund for all fare brands.

Additionally, in order to make seats available to customers that need to get home, please note that existing PNRs with International segments and without ticket numbers, regardless of original Ticket Time Limit (TTL) will be cancelled.

Thank you again for your continued support.

Air Canada Provides Update on Ongoing COVID-19 Response

Air Canada said today that it will gradually suspend the majority of its international and U.S. transborder flights by March 31, 2020 in response to decisions by national governments, including Canada and the United States, to close borders and restrict commercial aviation as a result of the COVID-19 crisis. Subject to further government restrictions, the airline intends to continue to serve a small number of international and U.S. trans-border destinations from select Canadian cities after April 1, 2020. The airline also intends to continue serving all provinces and territories of Canada after that date, albeit with a significantly reduced network.

All schedule changes can be found at www.aircanada.com.

International and U.S. transborder services

In order to facilitate the continued repatriation of citizens to their home countries, including Canadians back to Canada, and to support the essential movement of needed goods and cargo during the crisis, Air Canada intends to continue to operate a limited number of international “air bridges” between one or more of its Canadian hubs and the cities of London, Paris, Frankfurt, Delhi, Tokyo and Hong Kong from April 1 until at least April 30. This will reduce its international network from 101 airports to six.

As to U.S. transborder services, given the decision by the U.S. and Canadian governments today, from April 1, Air Canada will reduce its transborder network from 53 airports to 13, subject to further reductions based on demand or government edicts. The cities with continued service will be: New York (LGA and EWR), Boston, Washington, D.C. (IAD and DCA), Chicago, Houston, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Orlando and Fort Lauderdale.

Domestic Canada network

Air Canada intends to continue to serve all provinces and territories of Canada, reducing its domestic network from 62 airports to 40 through a reduced network during the period April 1 to 30, subject to further reductions based on demand or government edict.

For information on Air Canada's schedule beginning April 1, 2020 please see www.aircanada.com.

"The restrictions on travel imposed by governments worldwide, while understandable, are nonetheless having a cataclysmic effect upon the global airline industry. Our immediate focus is on ensuring the safety and well-being of our employees, customers and communities. At the same time, we are exploring with the Government of Canada possibilities to maintain essential operations to enable as many Canadians as possible to return to Canada, and to support other vital transport needs, including the shipment of goods and cargo during the crisis as required in any state of emergency. We are working around the clock to deal with the impact for our customers and our business of the various travel restrictions that are being made by governments at unprecedented speed without advance warning. We will also look at helping Canadians to return home by operating a limited number of charters from international destinations and exploring with the Government of Canada avenues in this regard. We will provide updates as details are finalized," said Calin Rovinescu, President and Chief Executive of Air Canada.

For Affected Customers

The airline will gradually suspend some of its scheduled flights between now and March 31 as demand for Canadians to return to Canada from a number of destinations reduces. Please check Air Canada's website for details given the rapidly evolving situation.

Affected customers, including those with Air Canada Vacations packages, whose flights are cancelled will receive a full credit valid for 24 months. There is no requirement to contact Air Canada as customers will be contacted directly.

The airline has also put in place temporary, one-way fares to Canada to enable customers abroad to return home. Customers seeking to contact Air

Canada are advised that contact centre wait times are elevated, so the airline has put in place a number of self-service tools to enable customers to manage their travel online. For more information please consult our COVID-19 webpage at www.aircanada.com.

FOLLOW OUR SHOWCASE PAGE @AirCanada AIR CANADA TRAVEL AGENTS GROUP

AIR CANADA rouge

AIR CANADA
A STAR ALLIANCE MEMBER
MEMBRE DU RÉSEAU STAR ALLIANCE

Voted Best Airline in North America
Élue meilleur transporteur aérien en Amérique du Nord

Flights operated by Air Canada Rouge. For more information, visit flyrouge.com.

This email was sent because you represent or are an agent of a company or other legal entity engaged in the sale of air services that has a relationship with Air Canada.

Prices, schedules, terms and conditions are subject to change. All taxes, fees and charges are subject to change.

For online bookings, please refer to the booking flow by clicking on the search option in order to see the final price/breakdown or contact Air Canada Reservations at 1-888-247-2262. Certain international destinations may have taxes, fees or charges that must be paid at the point of origin or at departure. Please contact the nearest foreign government office of the country you plan to visit for definitive, up-to-date information. Country-specific and interactive passenger-specific information is also available at iatatravelcentre.com and travel.gc.ca. Fees for optional services, such as itinerary changes, additional baggage, advance seat selection, or certain special service requests may increase overall cost. For more information, please consult aircanada.com/us/en/aco/home/legal/products-and-services.html

If you do not wish to receive Air Canada emails resulting from the business relationship between the company or other legal entity that you represent and Air Canada, please click here to unsubscribe. Your privacy is important to us. To learn how Air Canada collects, uses, and protects the personal information you provide, please view our Privacy Policy.

Please do not reply to this email, as this inbox is not monitored. If you have any questions please send an email to flashsubscription@aircanada.ca or you can write to Air Canada, PO Box 64239, RPO Thorncliffe, Calgary Alberta, T2K 6J7

Update subscription preferences.

This is Exhibit "27" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

COVID-19 Updates

To Canadians abroad: For customers concerned about their travel plans, our flights continue to operate. Please check your flight status here.

Thank you for your patience and understanding during these times of rapid change.

If you booked directly with Air Canada (including aircanada.com, Air Canada Mobile App, Air Canada for Business, or our Contact Centres), please follow the questions below for help with your booking.

If you booked with Kayak, Google Flights, or Skyscanner, please follow the questions below for help with your booking.

Otherwise, if you booked with a travel agent or any other online travel agency (for example, Expedia or Priceline), kindly contact them directly for changes or cancellations. Each partner has a unique booking system that we are unable to access in order to adjust your booking.

What do you want to do?

I want to cancel an existing booking

If you made a flight booking before March 31st, 2020, and you want to cancel it, you can do so with no cancellation fee. You will receive full credit, which you can use towards future travel. This credit is valid for travel before March 31st, 2021.

Here's how:

- If you booked on aircanada.com, the Air Canada mobile app, through the Air Canada Contact Centre; or on Kayak, Google Flights or Skyscanner; you can go online for the fastest outcome:
- Sign in to aircanada.com, and select 'My Bookings'
- Enter the booking reference number and passenger information
- Select 'Cancel booking'
- When you confirm, if any change fee is displayed, it will be waived
- Please ensure that you hold on to your ticket number, which can be found in your original booking itinerary. When you are ready to travel again, please call us at 1-888-247-2262, with your ticket number, to book your future flight. Future travel using your travel credit must be completed before March 31st, 2021.
- If you booked your ticket through a travel agent or online travel agency (for example Expedia or Priceline), please contact them for assistance. Remember that tickets sold through a travel agency cannot be changed online.
- Click here if your booking is an Aeroplan flight reward.
- For all vacation packages purchased before March 31st, 2020, Air Canada Vacations please visit AirCanadaVacations.com
- If you booked in 2019, call us before the one-year anniversary of your original ticket purchase date and we will extend the waiver through March 31st, 2021.

561

Terms and conditions

- You must use your future flight credit for travel before March 31st, 2021.
- Tickets must have been purchased directly from Air Canada, Kayak, Google Flights, Skyscanner or through your travel agent before March 31st, 2020.
- Air Canada tickets can be identified by a 13-digit ticket number beginning with Air Canada's code "014". Tickets issued by other airlines with a different carrier code (ticket numbers not beginning with "014") are subject to the waiver policy of the other airline.
- When booking a new flight with your flight credit, any fare difference will apply if the new flight is more expensive. If the new flight is less expensive, any residual value resulting from a lower fare will be lost.
- Air Canada Vacations is offering its CareFlex travel protection plan for free on bookings made between March 5 and March 31, 2020. If you purchased your vacation package with Air Canada Vacations and would like to make changes to your booking, please contact your travel agent directly or Customer Care at 1 800 296-3408 for packages to Mexico, the Caribbean, Las Vegas or Hawaii, or at 1 877 752-7710 for tours in Europe.

I have an existing booking, and I want to change my flight

- Did you book on or before March 4th, 2020?
- Did you book after March 4th, 2020?

I am thinking about making a new booking

Book any flight with confidence now, knowing that if the situation with COVID-19 changes, you can adjust your travel plans accordingly. Any booking made until March 31st, 2020, for travel until December 31st 2020, can be changed without a fee. For non-refundable fares, you will get a credit towards future travel. Note that travel must be completed by December 31, 2020.

Click here for full details.

I want to check whether my flight is still scheduled

Regardless of how you booked, you can go online to check if your booking has been cancelled:

562

- Sign in to aircanada.com, and select 'My Bookings'
- Enter the booking reference number and passenger information
- Once there, you can see if there have been any changes made to your upcoming flights

You can also visit the list of countries where we've suspended routes.

My flight has been cancelled What should I do?

If your flight has been cancelled, you will receive full credit, which you can use towards future travel. This credit is valid for travel within 24 months of your flight cancellation date.

563

Here's how:

- You will receive an email notifying you that your flight has been cancelled and outlining next steps to process your flight credit.
- If you booked on aircanada.com, the Air Canada mobile app, through the Air Canada Contact Centre; or on Kayak, Google Flights or Skyscanner; you can go online for the fastest outcome:
  - Sign in to aircanada.com, and select 'My Bookings'
  - Enter the booking reference number and passenger information
  - Select 'Cancel booking'
  - When you confirm, if any change fee is displayed, it will be waived
  - Please ensure that you hold on to your ticket number, which can be found in your original booking itinerary. When you are ready to travel again, please call us at 1-888-247-2262, with your ticket number, to book your future flight. Future travel using your travel credit must be completed within 24 months from the date your flight was cancelled.
- If you booked your ticket through a travel agent or online travel agency (for example Expedia or Priceline), please contact them for assistance. Tickets sold through a travel agency cannot be changed online.
- Click here if your booking is an Aeroplan flight reward.
- For all Air Canada Vacations bookings cancelled between March 19, 2020 and April 30, 2020, please visit AirCanadaVacations.com

Terms and conditions

- You must use your future flight credit for travel within 24 months of your flight cancellation date
- Tickets must have been purchased directly from Air Canada, Kayak, Google Flights, Skyscanner or through your travel agent before March 31st, 2020.
- Air Canada tickets can be identified by a 13-digit ticket number beginning with Air Canada's code "014". Tickets issued by other airlines with a different carrier code (ticket numbers not beginning with "014") are subject to the waiver policy of the other airline.
- When booking a new flight with your flight credit, any fare difference will apply if the new flight is more expensive. If the new flight is less expensive, any residual value resulting from a lower fare will be lost.
- Exceptions may apply per government regulations

I am stranded abroad and need information on special flights operated by Air Canada

If you are seeking information about special flights on behalf of the Canadian Government, please register at the local Embassy or online at: https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/registration

564

Important information for you to know

Route suspensions

Find out more

Preventive measures

Find out more

Government-imposed entry requirements

Find out more

Service offering changes

Find out more

Latest Updates

- Travellers who have visited the E.U.
- Flight suspension to/from Israel
- Change your existing booking
- Flight suspension to/from Italy
- Book without change fees

565

A message from Calin Rovinescu, President and Chief Executive Officer, Air Canada

Our industry has always been a fast-changing one and these times are no different...

Read the full message.

Useful resources

We encourage our customers to stay informed about the facts surrounding COVID-19 and recommend the following links to qualified authorities:

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)
Sharing background information about COVID-19 and news about cases in the United States.
Read more.

The World Health Organization (WHO)
Has the latest updates and a Q&A about COVID-19.
Read more.

The Government of Canada
Providing outbreak updates within Canada and around the world.
Read more.

International Air Transport Association (IATA)
Publishing the latest travel restrictions.
Read more.

This is Exhibit "28" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Making changes to your flight

Are you looking to make a change to your flight? Call center wait times are higher than expected. Please only call if your travel is within 72 hours.
Change/cancellation options are available for online self-service.

Flight Refunds will be returned as a future travel credit in the form of a Swoop Credit, valid for 24 months. We are not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time,

Click for instructions on how to make changes

Did you receive an email from Swoop about a change to your flight?

- Follow the instructions in the email, to make changes to your flight, or to cancel for a credit to be used for future travel at FlySwoop.com.
- Can't find the email? You can log into Manage My Booking with your reservation code and the last name of the lead traveller on your booking to review your options.
- Follow the instructions here to process your credit.

Are you travelling within Canada?

568

- There are currently no domestic travel restrictions.
- If your departure date is more than 7 days out, you can add ModiFly for free to your booking, to make a one-time date change.
    - Click here to learn more.
- If your departure date is between 3 – 7 days out, you can still make a change for a fee. Log into Manage My Booking to review your options.

Are you travelling to the U.S., Mexico, and/or Jamaica before May 31, 2020?

- Log into Manage My Booking and cancel your flight reservation for a credit. For instructions on how, click here

About Swoop

Swoop 101

Where we fly

Jobs

Newsroom

Media library

Sitemap

Legal and Fees

569

Terms of use

Privacy policy

Tariffs

Canadian flight and service disruptions

U.S. flight and service disruptions

Travel terms and conditions

Optional fees

Passenger Protection Regulations

Connect

Need help

Group bookings

Email offers

Blog

Mobile app

Follow us:

This is Exhibit "29" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Instructions on how to cancel for credit

Swoop flight cancellations, Cancel for credit steps.

1 Make sure you're eligible for cancel for credit!

Travel booked between Canada and the United States, Mexico and/or Jamaica for travel before May 31st, 2020 or flights that have been changed or cancelled by Swoop.

2 Once you've confirmed you're eligible, you should have received an email from Swoop with instructions on how to access your credit.

Check your junk/spam folder if you haven't received an email.

3 If you cannot find the email, you can still access your credit as long as you can log into Manage My Booking with your reservation code (6 digit alpha-numeric code) and the last name of the first traveller listed on your reservation (note: this could be different from the person who made the booking).

4 If you don't have a Swoop account, please create one. You'll need an account for your credit to be stored in. The name on the Swoop account must exactly match the first

5 Once you're logged into Manage My Booking:

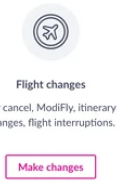
1. Select 'Flight Changes.'



2. Select 'Flight Interruptions.'
3. Hit 'cancel.'

6 If you want to confirm your credit is available, you can view your available credits through your Swoop Account.

and last name of the first traveller on the itinerary.

572

About Swoop

Swoop 101

Where we fly

Jobs

Newsroom

Media library

Sitemap

Legal and Fees

Terms of use

Privacy policy

Tariffs

Canadian flight and service disruptions

U.S. flight and service disruptions

573

Travel terms and conditions

Optional fees

Passenger Protection Regulations

Connect

Need help

Group bookings

Email offers

Blog

Mobile app

Follow us:

This is Exhibit "30" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Christopher Brothers <Christopher.Brothers@westjet.com>
Sent: March 18, 2020 7:35 PM
Subject: Updated cancellation policy

Updated cancellation policy

As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation, WestJet and WestJet Vacations are not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time. This applies to WestJet air-only, WestJet Vacations, Groups and group claims bookings.

Effective immediately, WestJet 838 air tickets booked via GDS and WestJet Agent will remain as open/unused tickets for future travel. This includes all existing tickets and any new tickets issued. WestJet Vacations cancellations will be refunded to WestJet dollars if full payment has been made or if a deposit has been provided.

If your clients prefer a refund to original form of payment, we will provide information about when that can be requested at a later date.

What's changing?

- WestJet 838 air-only cancellations: WestJet air tickets will remain as open/unused tickets for future travel. This change includes fares where refund to original form of payment previously applied (i.e. PremiumFlex and BusinessFlex), and for tickets paid with multiple forms of payment (i.e. WestJet dollars, gift card). Tickets are valid for 13 months from first coupon date.

- WestJet Vacations cancellations (including land only): The value of the package will be refunded to WestJet dollars and will be valid for 24 months from date of issue.

- WestJet 838 contracted and private fare programs: All WestJet contracted rates and private fares will remain as open/unused tickets for future travel. This change includes contracted or private fares where refund to original form of payment was previously permitted.

This is Exhibit "31" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Coronavirus (COVID-19)

Recently we announced the suspension of our commercial operations for all transborder (United States, including Hawaii) and international (Europe, Mexico, Caribbean, Central America) flights as of Sunday, March 22 for a 30-day period.

Whether we are flying or not, we are always here for our guests. During this downtime, we will be doing everything we can to accommodate your changing travel needs. We will also continue to ensure our aircraft meet the highest safety and health standards.We are ready to fly when you are.

Since the situation with Coronavirus (COVID-19) is evolving day by day, we have implemented a flexible change policy (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#tabpane-1462317543748-1) so you can adjust your travel plans without worry.

What you need to know

Change/cancel | Flights home

Info to travel | FAQs

Change or cancel your flight online

Call centre wait times are higher than expected. Please call only if your travel is within 72 hours. Change/cancel up to 2 hours before your flight.

Change/cancel your flights online (/web/2

579

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

Flexible change/cancel policy (/web/2020(

Flight refunds will be returned as a future travel credit in the form of a Travel Bank, valid for 24 months. Vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, valid for 24 months. We are not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time.

- Learn about flights that can only be changed or cancelled by an agent (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/my-trips/index#change)
- Request to cancel a flight form (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories/cancel-booking)
- Request to cancel a vacation form (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories/WVI-cancel-booking)
- If you were unable to reach us before your flight and decided not to fly due to Coronavirus (COVID-19), you may be eligible for a credit (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories/no-show-credit-request).

If you booked through a Travel Agent (online or directly), Corporate Travel arranger, or another airline, please contact them directly.

Please DO NOT go to the airport to cancel or change a future flight as this may result in delays for guests who are departing on their scheduled flights.

Bringing Canadians home

We're adding seats to bring more Canadians home

New flights

20 MAR / DEP 12:40 pm London (LGW) / ARR 4:27pm Toronto (YYZ)

Full 20 MAR / DEP 3:42 p.m. Puerto Vallarta (PVR) / ARR Calgary (YYC) 8:39 p.m.

Full 20 MAR / DEP 4:12 p.m. Puerto Vallarta (PVR) / ARR Calgary (YYC) 9:09 p.m.

580

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

Book now (/web/20200321203000/https:/

Suspension of transborder and international flights

On Sunday, March 22, 2020 at 11:59pm local time, we are suspending flights to the United States (including Hawaii), Europe, Mexico, Caribbean, and Central America.

1. Booked flights within Canada that departs anytime -- no action is required.
2. Booked international flights with all connections departing before 11:59 p.m. -- no action is required.
3. International flights that depart after 11:59 p.m.
   a. Change/cancel your existing flight online with Manage trips (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/my-trips/index#managetrip)
   b. We will contact you if your flight is not eligible for change/cancel online
   c. Book a new flight
   d. if you are unable to secure a flight back to Canada on WestJet, please contact the Canadian Government via travel.gc.ca to register.

Read the announcement regarding the suspension of flights.

Travel help and resources

Helpful resources

Government Travel Advice and Advisories

World Health Organization

IATA – Air transport & communicable diseases

Public Health Agency of Canada

See all travel advisories (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories)

581

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

NOTICE: Affected WestJet Flights

Find out more regarding WestJet's latest Coronavirus (COVID-19) operational updates here.

See updates (https://web.archive.org/web

Cleaning our aircraft

We hold ourselves to the highest standard and strive to create an environment as clean as possible. In response to Coronavirus (COVID-19), we are doing more to keep you and your WestJet crew safe.

How we clean (https://web.archive.org/w

Preventative tips for your travel

- Travel with your own regulation-size hand sanitizers or disinfectant wipes (in containers 100 ml/100 g or less)
- Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth with unwashed hands
- Stay home if you are sick
- When coughing or sneezing:
  - Cover your mouth and nose with your arm or tissues to reduce the spread of germs
  - Immediately dispose of any tissues you have used into the garbage as soon as possible and wash your hands afterwards

582

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

Frequently asked questions

1. Is it safe to travel?
   Safety is WestJet's top priority and we are committed to providing our guests and WestJetters a safe travel and work environment. The health risk at this time remains low for Canada and for Canadian travellers. WestJet continues to monitor the situation closely.
2. How are WestJet aircraft cleaned?
   WestJet has taken additional precautionary measures to expand and increase frequency of our aircraft sanitization at busiest bases.
3. Can I cancel my flight?
   We have relaxed our cancellation policy for all fare types, so for new bookings, or existing bookings for travel in March or April, you can change or cancel your flight one time, without a fee.
4. What if I'm travelling on a flight with one of WestJet's partner airlines? Where can I find out more information?
   Our global partners are working diligently to provide guests with the most up-to-date information. You can find out more from their pages directly below.
   Delta
   Air France
   Qantas
   Aeromexico

More questions? (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://blog.westjet.com/questions-and-answers-for-our-guests-on-coronavirus-covid-19)

English Contact us (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/contact-us/index)

583

BOOKING OPTIONS

Business travel (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/business-travel/index)

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

Groups and conventions (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/groups-charters/index)

Direct flights (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/direct-flights/index)

Hold the fare (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/payment/hold-fare)

Book with a companion voucher (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/flight?iscompanionvoucher=true)

Book with WestJet dollars (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/flight?iswestjetdollars=true)

Fares, taxes and fees (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/fares/index)

Car rental (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://autos.westjet.com/en/?clientID=443464#/searchcars)

Hotel (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://hotels.westjet.com/en-ca?utm_source=westjet-hp&utm_medium=mega-nav_book_a_hotel_en-ca&utm_source=westjet-hp&utm_medium=mega-nav_book_a_hotel_en)

Destinations (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/destination-guide)

BEFORE YOU GO

Baggage allowance (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/baggage/index)

Seat selection (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/seats/index)

Children and family (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/children/index)

Pets (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/pets)

Special needs (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/special-needs/index)

Travel documents (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/check-in/id-requirements)

Travel insurance (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/lowfaresandmore/extras/travel-insurance)

Download/update the app (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/mobile-app/index)

584

AT THE AIRPORT

Lounges (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/business-travel/airport-lounges)

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

Priority services (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/airport-experience/priority-services)

Security screening (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/check-in/security-screening)

Travel advisories (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories)

Parking (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/lowfaresandmore/extras/airport-parking)

IN THE AIR

Food and beverage (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/inflight/buy-on-board)

Entertainment (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/inflight/entertainment)

Our aircraft (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/fleet/index)

Cabins (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/inflight/index)

AT YOUR DESTINATION

Lost and found (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://www.chargerback.com/reportlostitemcbembed.asp?customerid=16885&languagecode=en-US)

Lost luggage (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/baggage/lost-delayed-damaged)

WestJet Magazine (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjetmagazine.com/)

WestJet App (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/mobile-app/index)

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

ABOUT WESTJET

About us (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/index)

Awards (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/history/awards)

History (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/history)

Sponsorship (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/contact-us/service-requests/sponsorship/index)

Community Investment (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/community-investment/index)

Media relations (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/media-relations/index)

Great jobs (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/jobs/index)

Our airline partners (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/airline-partners)

WestJet RBC® credit cards (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/rewards/rbc-mastercard/index)

FAQs (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/contact-us/faqs/index)

Sitemap (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/site-map)

WESTJET VACATIONS

Featured vacation packages (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/lowfaresandmore/vacations/index)

Exclusive vacation packages (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/vacation/exclusive-vacation-packages)

Family vacation packages (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/vacation/family-vacation-packages)

Why WestJet Vacations? (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/contact-us/faqs/vacations)

SERVICES

WestJet biz (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/https://westjetbiz.westjet.com/login.html)

CORONAVIRUS UPDATES

WestJet Cargo (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/book-trip/westjet-cargo/index)

Travel agents (https://web.archive.org/web/20200321203000/http://www.westjettravelagents.com/)

Accessibility (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/special-needs/index)

WestJet Flight Light (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/flightlight)

LEGAL

Tariffs and conditions of carriage (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/legal/tariffs/index)

Privacy policy (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/legal/privacy-policy)

Flight interruptions and passenger rights (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/flight-interruptions-passenger-rights/index)

US flight and service disruptions (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/flight-interruptions/us-service-plan)

Legal (/web/20200321203000/https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/legal/index)

This is Exhibit "32" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Determination No. A-2020-42

March 13, 2020

DETERMINATION by the Canadian Transportation Agency relating to COVID-19 pandemic – Temporary exemptions to certain provisions of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, SOR/2019-150 (APPR).

Case number: 20-02750

[1] On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization assessed the outbreak of COVID-19 as a pandemic.

[2] Since the outbreak of the virus, a number of countries, including Canada, have imposed travel bans, restrictions, or advisories.

[3] Public health experts have also recommended behaviours, such as enhanced hygiene practices and social distancing, to mitigate the spread of the virus.

[4] The situation is evolving rapidly, and further restrictions relating to travel may be implemented.

[5] The pandemic is causing a significant decrease in demand for air travel. Flying with many empty aircraft seats can result in significant financial difficulties for air carriers, which may therefore decide to cancel or consolidate flights. Due to the evolving nature of the situation and public behaviours, these decisions may need to be made much closer to a scheduled flight day than would normally be the case.

[6] Other aspects of air carrier operations may also be impacted by the pandemic, including but not limited to staff shortages due to quarantines or refusals to work, additional hygiene practices onboard the aircraft, and passenger health screenings. These factors may result in flight delays.

[7] Under the APPR, air carriers have minimum obligations to passengers when flights are cancelled or delayed. Those obligations depend on whether the disruption was within the control of the air carrier, within the air carrier's control but required for safety, or outside the carrier's control:

- Situations within the air carrier's control: keep the passenger informed, provide standards of treatment (such as food and water), compensate the passenger for inconvenience, and rebook or refund the passenger.
- Situations within the air carrier's control but required for safety: keep the passenger informed, provide standards of treatment, and rebook or refund the passenger.
- Situations outside the air carrier's control: keep the passenger informed and rebook the passenger so the passenger can complete their itinerary.

[8] Section 10 of the APPR provides a non-exhaustive list of situations considered outside the air carrier's control (the third category above). These include medical emergencies and orders or instructions from state officials. In the context of the COVID-19 pandemic, the following would be considered outside a carrier's control:

- flight disruptions to locations that are covered by a government advisory against travel or unnecessary travel due to COVID-19;
- employee quarantine or self-isolation due to COVID-19;
- employee refusal to work under Part II of the Canada Labour Code, R.S.C, 1985, c. L-2*,* (or equivalent law) due to COVID-19; and
- additional hygiene or passenger health screening processes put in place due to COVID-19.

[9] Beyond such situations, air carriers may make decisions that are influenced by the pandemic, including decisions to cancel and consolidate flights due to dropping passenger volumes. Whether such situations are within or outside carrier control would have to be assessed on a case-by-case basis. If the disruption was within the air carrier's control, the air carrier would be subject to more onerous obligations.

[10] In the extraordinary context of this pandemic, reasonable expectations regarding air travel have changed, taking into account government travel bans, restrictions, and advisories; public health practices; and impacts on travel demand and air carrier operations.

CONCLUSION

[11] The Agency finds that, in the context of the significant declines in passenger volumes and disruptions to air carrier operations caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, temporary exemptions to the APPR should be made to provide air carriers with increased flexibility to adjust flight schedules without facing prohibitive costs.

[12] Specifically, the Agency finds it undesirable, in the current extraordinary circumstances, that carriers be obligated to provide compensation for inconvenience to passengers who were informed of a flight delay or a flight cancellation more than 72 hours before their original scheduled departure or to passengers who were delayed at destination by less than six hours. The Agency further finds it undesirable that carriers be required to offer alternative travel arrangements that include flights on other air carriers with which they have no commercial agreement.

ORDER

[13] The Agency orders that all air carriers be exempted from:

- the obligation, under paragraphs 19(1)(a) and 19(1)(b) of the APPR, to pay compensation for inconvenience
    - if the flight delay or the flight cancellation is communicated to passengers more than 72 hours before the departure time indicated on the passengers' original ticket; or,
    - if the flight delay or the flight cancellation is communicated to the passengers within 72 hours of the departure time indicated on the original ticket, on condition that the carrier pays the passengers the following compensation for inconvenience;in the case of a large carrier,
        - in the case of a large carrier,

            - $400, if the arrival of the passenger's flight at the destination that is indicated on the original ticket is delayed by six hours or more, but less than nine hours, or

- $700, if the arrival of the passenger's flight at the destination that is indicated on the original ticket is delayed by nine hours or more; and

  - in the case of a small carrier,

    - $125, if the arrival of the passenger's flight at the destination that is indicated on the original ticket is delayed by six hours or more, but less than nine hours, or

    - $250, if the arrival of the passenger's flight at the destination that is indicated on the original ticket is delayed by nine hours or more.

- the obligation, under subsection 19(2) of the APPR to pay compensation for inconvenience to passengers who opted to obtain a refund instead of alternative travel arrangement, if the flight delay or the flight cancellation is communicated to passengers more than 72 hours before the departure time indicated on the passengers' original ticket;
- the obligation, under paragraphs 17(1)(a)(ii),17(1)(a)(iii), and 18(1)(a)(ii) of the APPR to provide a confirmed reservation on a flight operated by a carrier with which the carrier does not have any commercial agreement.

[14] The exemption is effective immediately, will remain valid until April 30, 2020, and may be extended by a further determination of the Agency, if required.

Member(s)

Scott Streiner
Elizabeth C. Barker

Back to rulings

Date modified:
2020-03-13

This is Exhibit "33" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Determination No. A-2020-47

March 25, 2020

DETERMINATION by the Canadian Transportation Agency relating to COVID-19 pandemic – Additional temporary exemptions to certain provisions of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, SOR/2019-150 (APPR) and extension of the temporary exemption period.

Case number: 20-03254

[1] On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization assessed the outbreak of COVID-19 as a pandemic.

[2] On March 13, 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency (Agency) found in Determination No. A-2020-42 that it is undesirable that carriers be obligated to follow certain requirements of the APPR in these circumstances.

[3] Specifically, in the context of the significant declines in passenger volumes and disruptions to air carrier operations caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, the Agency granted temporary exemptions from APPR requirements related to compensation for inconvenience and to rebooking with competitors, to provide air carriers with increased flexibility to adjust flight schedules without facing prohibitive costs.

[4] To allow air carriers to continue focusing on immediate and urgent operational demands, including bringing Canadians home from abroad, the Agency considers it temporarily undesirable for air carriers to have to meet the APPR's 30-day deadline to respond to passengers' claims for the payment of compensation for inconvenience.

[5] Further, considering that the major impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on the air sector are unlikely to be resolved by April 30, 2020, the Agency finds it appropriate to extend the duration of the exemptions in Determination No. A-2020-42.

ORDER

[6] Pursuant to subsection 80(1) of the Canada Transportation Act, S.C., 1996, c. 10, as amended, the Agency orders that all air carriers be exempted from the requirement under subsection 19(4) of the APPR to respond to requests for compensation, on the condition that air carriers respond to such requests within 120 day of the expiry of this order.

[7] This Order is effective immediately and will remain valid until June 30, 2020.

[8] The Agency further orders that the exemptions granted by Determination No. A-2020-42 remain valid until June 30, 2020.

[9] Exemptions granted under this determination and Determination No. A-2020-42 may be extended by a further determination of the Agency, if required.

Member(s)

Scott Streiner
Elizabeth C. Barker

Back to rulings

Share this page

Date modified:
2020-03-25

This is Exhibit "34" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Order No. 2020-A-32

March 18, 2020

IN THE MATTER OF an immediate and temporary stay of all dispute proceedings involving air carriers.

Case number: 20-02915

On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization assessed the outbreak of COVID-19 as a pandemic. Since the outbreak of the virus, a number of countries, including Canada, have imposed travel bans, restrictions, or advisories. On March 13, 2020, in Determination No. A-2020-42, the Agency ordered that all air carriers be temporarily exempted from certain provisions of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, SOR/2019-150. On March 16, 2020, the Government of Canada announced several new COVID 19 responses which directly affect air carriers. Air carriers are now required to conduct a basic health assessment of all passengers, and to deny boarding for international flights to Canada to passengers who present COVID-19 symptoms, and to many non citizens and non-residents. As of March 18, 2020, arrivals of international flights are restricted to four airports in Canada.

The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on air carriers and passengers is significant and continues to evolve. Air carrier resources are highly stretched as carriers work to bring Canadians home from abroad, implement new Government of Canada directions, and adjust to rapidly dropping passenger volumes and travel restrictions.

The Agency finds that in light of these extraordinary circumstances, it would be just and reasonable to temporarily stay dispute proceedings involving air carriers to permit them to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands.

ORDER

Pursuant to subsection 5(2), paragraph 41(1)(d), and section 6 of the Canadian Transportation Agency Rules (Dispute Proceedings and Certain Rules Applicable to All Proceedings), SOR/2014-104, the Agency, on its own motion, orders that all dispute proceedings before the Agency involving air carriers be stayed until April 30, 2020. The stay is effective immediately and applies to all current applications currently before the Agency, as well as any applications received for dispute adjudication during the stay period. On or before April 30, 2020, the Agency will determine if the stay should end on that date or be extended to a later date. In exceptional circumstances, the Agency may lift the stay on individual cases sooner, where necessary in the interests of justice.

Member(s)

Scott Streiner
Elizabeth C. Barker
J. Mark MacKeigan
Heather Smith
Mary Tobin Oates
Gerald Dickie
Lenore Duff

Back to rulings

Share this page

Date modified:
2020-03-18

This is Exhibit "35" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Order No. 2020-A-37

March 25, 2020

IN THE MATTER OF an extension of the stay of proceedings ordered in Order No. 2020-A-32.

Case number: 20-03246

On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization assessed the outbreak of COVID-19 as a pandemic.

On March 18, 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency (Agency) found that in light of these extraordinary circumstances related to the pandemic, it would be just and reasonable to temporarily stay dispute proceedings involving air carriers to permit them to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands.

Considering that the major impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on the air sector are unlikely to be resolved by April 30, 2020, the Agency finds it is just and reasonable to extend the duration of the stay of proceedings ordered in Order No. 2020 A-32 until June 30, 2020.

ORDER

Pursuant to subsection 5(2), paragraph 41(1)(d), and section 6 of the Canadian Transportation Agency Rules (Dispute Proceedings and Certain Rules Applicable to All Proceedings), SOR/2014-104, the Agency, on its own motion, orders that all dispute proceedings before the Agency involving air carriers be stayed until June 30, 2020, including any applications received for dispute adjudication during the stay period.

On or before June 30, 2020, the Agency will determine if the stay should end on that date or be extended to a later date. In exceptional circumstances, the Agency may lift the stay on individual cases sooner, where necessary in the interests of justice.

Member(s)

Scott Streiner
Elizabeth C. Barker
J. Mark MacKeigan
Mary Tobin Oates
Heather Smith
Gerald Dickie
Lenore Duff

Back to rulings

Share this page

Date modified:
2020-03-25

This is Exhibit "36" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Date modified:
2020-03-25

This is Exhibit "37" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Home

Important Information for Travellers During COVID-19

Official Global Travel Advisory from the Government of Canada

Suspension of all air dispute resolution activities

During these difficult times, the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) continues to maintain its normal operations while our employees practice social distancing. Our dedicated employees are working remotely and are available through electronic means to provide service. You can continue to request CTA services, file applications, and do normal business with us through our normal channels.

Please note, however, that the CTA has temporarily paused all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers until June 30, 2020, to permit them to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands. While you can continue to file air passenger complaints with us and all complaints will be processed in due course, we may not be able to respond quickly. On or before June 30, 2020, the Agency will determine if the pause should end on that date or be extended to a later date.

Air Passenger Protection Obligations During COVID-19 Pandemic

On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization assessed the outbreak of COVID-19 as a pandemic. Since the outbreak of the virus, a number of countries, including Canada, have imposed travel bans, restrictions, or advisories. Officials have also recommended behaviours, such as enhanced hygiene practices and social distancing, to mitigate the spread of the virus. The situation is evolving rapidly, and further restrictions relating to travel may be implemented.

The Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has taken steps to address the major impacts that the COVID-19 pandemic is having on the airline industry by making temporary exemptions to certain requirements of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR) that apply from March 13, 2020 until June 30, 2020.

This guide explains these temporary changes and how the APPR apply to certain flight disruptions related to COVID-19.

In addition to the APPR, carriers must also follow their tariffs. In light of the COVID-19 Pandemic, CTA has issued a Statement on Vouchers.

Related Links

Air carriers - Exemptions due to COVID-19 pandemic
A-2020-42 | Determination | 2020-03-13

Air Canada also carrying on business as Air Canada rouge and as Air Canada Cargo - temporary exemption from the advance notice requirements of section 64 of the CTA
2020-A-36 | Order | 2020-03-25

Extension of stay - COVID-19 - immediate and temporary stay of all dispute proceedings involving air carriers
2020-A-37 | Order | 2020-03-25

Air carriers - further exemptions due to COVID-19 pandemic
A-2020-47 | Determination | 2020-03-25

Delays and Cancellations

The APPR set airline obligations to passengers that vary depending on whether the situation is within the airline's control, within the airline's control and required for safety purposes, or outside the airline's control. Descriptions of these categories can be found in Types and Categories of Flight Disruption: A Guide.

The CTA has identified a number of situations related to the COVID-19 pandemic that are considered outside the airline's control. These include:

- flight disruptions to locations that are covered by a government advisory against travel or unnecessary travel due to COVID-19;
- employee quarantine or self-isolation due to COVID-19; and
- additional hygiene or passenger health screening processes put in place due to COVID-19.

Airlines may make decisions to cancel or delay flights for other reasons. Whether these situations are within or outside the airline's control would have to be assessed on a case-by-case basis.

Airline obligations

In the event of a flight delay or cancellation, airlines must always keep passengers informed of their rights and the cause of a flight disruption. Airlines must also always make sure the passengers reach their destinations (re-booking them on other flights).

If the cause of the disruption is within an airline's control, there are additional obligations, as outlined below.

Situations outside airline control (including COVID-19 related situations mentioned above)

In these situations, airlines must:

- Rebook passengers on the next available flight operated by them or a partner airline.
  - For disruptions between March 13, 2020 and June 30, 2020, airlines do not have to follow APPR requirements to rebook passengers using an airline with which they have no commercial agreement.
  - Please refer to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers.
  - This obligation does not require air carriers to rebook passengers who have already completed their booked trip (including by other means such as a repatriation flight).

Situations within airline control

In these situations, airlines must:

- Meet standards of treatment
- Rebook passengers on the next available flight operated by them or a partner airline or a refund, if rebooking does not meet the passenger's needs;
    - For disruptions between March 13, 2020 and June 30, 2020, airlines do not have to follow APPR requirements to rebook passengers using an airline with which they have no commercial agreement.
    - Please refer to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers.
    - This obligation does not require air carriers to rebook passengers who have already completed their booked trip (including by other means such as a repatriation flight).
- Provide compensation: For disruptions between March 13, 2020 and June 30, 2020, different compensation requirements are in effect. If the airline notified the passengers of the delay or cancellation less than 72 hours in advance, they must provide compensation based on how late the passenger arrived at their destination (unless the passenger accepted a ticket refund):
    - Large airline:
        - 6-9 hours: $400
        - 9+ hours: $700
    - Small airline:
        - 6-9 hours: $125
        - 9+ hours: $250
- Effective March 25, 2020, the deadline for a carrier to respond to claims filed by passengers for payment of the compensation for inconvenience is suspended until June 30, 2020 (or any further period that the Agency may order). Once the suspension is over, carriers will have 120 days to respond to claims received before or during the suspension.

Situations within airline control, but required for safety

In these situations, the airline must:

- Meet standards of treatment;
- Rebook passengers on the next available flight operated by them or a partner airline or a refund, if rebooking does not meet the passenger's needs.
    - For disruptions between March 13, 2020 and June 30, 2020, airlines do not have to follow APPR requirements to rebook passengers using an airline with which they have no commercial agreement.
    - Please refer to the CTA's Statement on Vouchers.
    - This obligation does not require air carriers to rebook passengers who have already completed their booked trip (including by other means such as a repatriation flight).

Other APPR requirements

All other air passenger entitlements under the APPR remain in force, including clear communication, tarmac delays and seating of children. For more information visit the CTA's Know Your Rights page.

606

Refusal to transport

The Government of Canada has barred foreign nationals from all countries other than the United States from entering Canada (with some exceptions). Airlines have also been instructed to prevent all travellers who present COVID-19 symptoms, regardless of their citizenship, from boarding international flights to Canada.

The APPR obligations for flight disruptions would not apply in these situations.

Share this page

Date modified:
2020-03-18

This is Exhibit "38" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

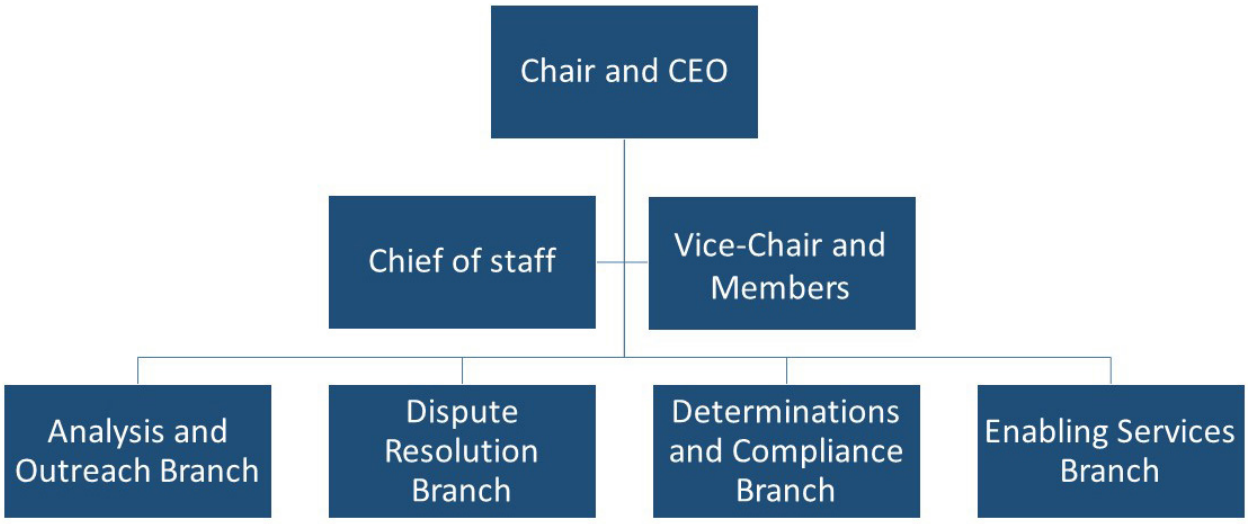
Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

608

Home

Organizational chart



Reporting to the Chair and Chief Executive Officer

- Vice-Chair and Members
- Chief of Staff
- Analysis and Outreach Branch
- Dispute Resolution Branch
- Determinations and Compliance Branch
- Enabling Services Branch

Agency branches

- Led by the Chief Strategy Officer, the Analysis and Outreach Branch comprises the following directorates:
  - Analysis and Regulatory Reform
  - Communications
  - Centre of Expertise on Accessible Transportation
- Led by the Chief Compliance Officer, the Determinations and Compliance Branch comprises the following directorates:

    - Air Determinations
    - Rail and Marine Determinations
    - Monitoring and Compliance
- Led by the Chief Dispute Resolution Officer, the Dispute Resolution Branch comprises:
    - Air and Accessibility Alternate Dispute Resolution
    - Rail and Marine ADR
    - Dispute Adjudication
- Led by the General Counsel and Secretary, the Enabling Services Branch comprises the following directorates:
    - Legal Services
    - Secretariat and Registrar Services
    - Financial Services and Asset Management
    - Workforce and Workplace Services
    - Information and Technology Management Services

Date modified:
2016-04-01

This is Exhibit "39" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

611

Home

Organization and mandate

Our organization and mandate

Members

Organizational chart

Partner organizations

At the Heart of Transportation: A Moving History

The Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) is an independent, quasi-judicial tribunal and regulator that has, with respect to all matters necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction, all the powers of a superior court.

The CTA is made up of five full-time Members; up to three temporary Members may also be named. The Members, who are all based in the National Capital Region, are supported in their decision-making process by some 240 employees and administrative staff.

The CTA has three core mandates

- We help ensure that the national transportation system runs efficiently and smoothly in the interests of all Canadians: those who work and invest in it; the producers, shippers, travellers and businesses who rely on it; and the communities where it operates.
- We protect the human right of persons with disabilities to an accessible transportation network.
- We provide consumer protection for air passengers.

Our tools

To help advance these mandates, we have three tools at our disposal:

- Rule-making: We develop and enforce ground rules that establish the rights and responsibilities of transportation service providers and users and that level the playing field among competitors. These rules can take the form of binding regulations or less formal guidelines, codes of practice or interpretation notes.
- Dispute resolution: We resolve disputes that arise between transportation providers on the one hand, and their clients and neighbours on the other, using a range of tools from facilitation and mediation to arbitration and adjudication.

612

- Information provision: We provide information on the transportation system, the rights and responsibilities of transportation providers and users, and the Agency's legislation and services.

Our values

Our Code of Values and Ethics outlines the core values and expected behaviours that guide us in all activities related to our professional duties. Our guiding values are:

Respect for democracy - We uphold Canadian parliamentary democracy and promote constructive and timely exchange of views and information.
Respect for people - We treat people with dignity and fairness and foster a cooperative, rewarding working environment. Integrity - We act with honesty, fairness, impartiality and transparency.
Stewardship - We use and manage our resources wisely and take full responsibility for our obligations and commitments.
Excellence - We provide the highest quality service through innovation, professionalism and responsiveness.

Members

- Scott Streiner, Chair and CEO
- Elizabeth C. Barker, Vice-Chair
- William G. McMurray, Member
- Mark MacKeigan, Member
- Mary Tobin Oates, Member
- Heather Smith, Member
- Gerald Dickie, temporary Member
- Lenore Duff, temporary Member

Scott Streiner, Chair and CEO

Scott Streiner began a five-year term as Chair and CEO of the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) on July 20, 2015. Since that time, he has taken a series of steps to enhance the CTA's ability to respond to the needs of a rapidly evolving national transportation system, its customers, and the communities in which the system operates. These steps include: realigning the CTA's internal structure and recruiting top-notch talent to serve on the executive team; putting in place an action plan to foster a healthy, high-performing organization; increasing public awareness of the CTA's roles and services through speeches, media interviews, and social media; introducing innovative approaches to delivering the CTA's regulatory and adjudicative mandates; and launching a broad review of the full suite of regulations, codes, and guidelines administered by the CTA.

Scott also led the revitalization of the Council of Federal Tribunal Chairs in 2016 and 2017, and is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the Council of Canadian Administrative Tribunals.

Prior to joining the CTA, Scott had a 25-year career in the federal public service. As Assistant Secretary to the Cabinet, Economic and Regional Development Policy, he served as Secretary to the Cabinet Committee on Economic Prosperity and played a key role in preparing advice to the Prime Minister on economic, environmental and trade matters, including in the areas of transportation and infrastructure. As Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy with Transport Canada, he led the development of policy options and advice on issues touching all modes of the national transportation system, and ran the Department's international, intergovernmental and data analysis functions.

Earlier positions included Executive Director of the Aerospace Review; Assistant Deputy Minister with the Labour Program; Vice President, Program Delivery with the Canadian Environmental Assessment Agency; Director General, Human Resources with the Department of Fisheries and Oceans; Director of Operations for the Reference Group of Ministers on Aboriginal Policy; Machinery of Government Officer at the Privy Council Office; and Director of Pay Equity with the Canadian Human Rights Commission.

Scott has led Canadian delegations abroad, including to India, China, and the International Labour Organization. He has also served as the Government Member with NAV Canada, Canada's Ministerial Designee under the North American Agreement on Labour Cooperation, Chair of the Council of Governors of the Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety, and a Director on the Board of the Soloway Jewish Community Centre.

Scott received a bachelor's degree in East Asian Studies from the Hebrew University, a master's degree in International Relations from the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, and a PhD in Political Science from Carleton University. He spent a year at Carleton University as a Public Servant in Residence and has taught courses, published articles, and made conference presentations on human rights, Middle Eastern history and politics, and public policy.

Elizabeth C. Barker, Vice-Chair

Liz Barker began a five-year term as Vice-Chair and Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) on April 3, 2018.

Liz joined the CTA's predecessor, the National Transportation Agency, in 1991 as counsel. She has held several positions at the CTA, including, most recently, Chief Corporate Officer, Senior General Counsel and Secretary. She has worked in all areas of the Agency's mandate over the years, but has specialized in advising the tribunal in complex dispute adjudications and oral hearings on controversial subjects including rail level of service complaints, a wide range of complex accessible transportation disputes, and ministerial inquiries into marine pilotage and the accessibility of inter-city motor coach services. She has also worked extensively in the development of the Agency's approach to its human rights mandate, administrative monetary penalties regime, alternative dispute resolution, final offer arbitration, and rail level of service arbitration. She has appeared as counsel before all levels of court, including the Federal Court, the Federal Court of Appeal, and the Supreme Court of Canada, as co-counsel in Council of Canadians with Disabilities v. VIA Rail Canada Inc., [2007] 1 S.C.R. 650.

Liz was a recipient of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee Medal in 2016 for her work at the Agency, in particular in accessible transportation, the administrative monetary penalties program, and for her leadership of the Legal Services Branch.

Liz received her law degree from Osgoode Hall Law School in 1987 and her B.A. (Honours in Law) from Carleton University in 1984. She has been a member of the Law Society of Ontario since 1989.

William G. McMurray, Member

William G. McMurray became a Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency on July 28, 2014.

Prior to his appointment to the Agency, he served as Vice-Chairperson of the Canada Industrial Relations Board.

A lawyer, Mr. McMurray practised administrative law and litigation in the private sector for over 23 years. He acted as counsel for some of Canada's largest employers in the federal transportation industry. He successfully pleaded complex cases before a number of federal administrative tribunals, including the Agency and its predecessors. He has argued cases, in both official languages, before the Federal Court, the Federal Court of Appeal and has appeared in all levels of the civil courts. While practising law, he also taught "transportation law and regulation" at McGill University in Montréal for over ten years.

He studied common law and civil law at the University of Ottawa and studied political economy at Université Laval in Québec City and at the University of Toronto. Mr. McMurray completed his articles of clerkship while working in the Law Department of the former Canadian Transport Commission.

He has been a member of the Law Society of Upper Canada since 1986.

Mark MacKeigan, Member

Mark MacKeigan began a four-year term as a Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency on May 28, 2018.

He comes to the Agency from The St. Lawrence Seaway Management Corporation, the not-for-profit operator of the federal government's Seaway assets, where he was Chief Legal Officer and Corporate Secretary from 2014.

Mark is not entirely new to the Agency, having served previously as a Member from 2007 to 2014 and as legal counsel on specific files in a contract position during 1996.

His transportation law experience includes six years as senior legal counsel with the International Air Transport Association in Montréal from 2001 to 2007, focusing on competition law, cargo services, aviation regulatory and public international law matters. From 1996 to 2000, he was legal counsel with NAV CANADA, the country's provider of civil air navigation services.

Mark began his legal career in private practice in Toronto. After earning a Bachelor of Arts with highest honours in Political Science from Carleton University, Mark obtained his law degree from the University of Toronto and a Master of Laws from the Institute of Air and Space Law at McGill University. He also holds a postgraduate diploma in European Union Competition Law from King's College London.

He is a member of the Bars of Ontario and the State of New York and is admitted as a solicitor in England and Wales.

Mary Tobin Oates, Member

After 25 years of public service, Mary Tobin Oates joined the Canadian Transportation Agency on 9 July 2018. As a lawyer, Mary practised in different areas of law, largely in public and administrative law. She appeared before the Pension Appeals Board and the Federal Court of Appeal regarding disability benefits under the Canada Pension Plan and the Old Age Security Act. Mary served as a Board member of the Veterans Review and Appeal Board where she determined eligibility for disability benefits for members of the Canadian Forces and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Mary provided legal and policy advice on indigenous issues to the Department of Justice and to Indian and Northern Affairs Canada. She also served as Board member to Tungasuvvingat Inuit, a not-for-profit, charitable organization that provides services to and advocates on behalf of Inuit who live in southern Canada.

Before becoming a lawyer, Mary worked as a technical editor for the Canadian Transportation Accident and Safety Board (now Transportation Safety Board).

Mary received her Bachelor of Arts from Memorial University of Newfoundland and graduated from Osgoode Hall Law School. She has been a member of the Law Society of Ontario (formerly the Law Society of Upper Canada) since February 1997.

Heather Smith, Member

Heather Smith became a full-time Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency on August 27, 2018. Heather was most recently Vice-President, Operations at the Canadian Environmental Assessment Agency. In previous positions, Heather was Executive Director in the Government Operations Sector of Treasury Board Secretariat, and Director General in the Strategic Policy Branch at Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada (AAFC). Heather held several management positions within Justice Canada, as General Counsel and Head of AAFC Legal Services, General Counsel and Head of Legal Services at the Canadian Environmental Assessment Agency, and General Counsel in the Legal Services Unit of Social Development Canada/Human Resources and Skills Development Canada.

Heather also served as legal counsel at Environment Canada Legal Services and Manager of the Canadian Environmental Protection Act Office at Environment Canada. Heather holds a B.A.(Hons.) from the University of King's College and an L.L.B. from the University of Toronto. She has also earned the Chartered Director (C.Dir.) designation from the McMaster/DeGroote Directors College.

Gerald Dickie, temporary Member

Gerald Dickie comes to the Canadian Transportation Agency after having worked for 36 years in the grain industry at different port locations. He spent the first 6 years in Thunder Bay at the Cargill Terminal. The next 30 years, he worked at the Port of Metro Vancouver. He initially worked on the rehabilitation of the Alberta Wheat Pool Terminal (now Cascadia Terminal) and was part of the team that automated the facility and introduced unit train unloading capabilities. In July of 2007, as a result of the ownership change of Agricore United, he moved to the North Vancouver Cargill Facility (formerly SWP) as the General Manager. He is an experienced manager of people, capital projects, business operations, labour negotiations, supply chains and strategy.

The 30 years he spent working at the Port of Vancouver included being part of several external groups. He has held every position within the Vancouver Terminal Elevator Association, from President to Secretary. He was a member of the Senior Port Executive Committee Group, the Port Competitiveness Committee, BC Terminals Association and North Shore Waterfront Industry Association. This included leadership roles and active work in everything from port education for the community to Low Level Road Initiative and social licence activities. This experience included a good exposure to the issues that all port tenants, railway companies, vessel companies and customers faced.

He has worked with Transport Canada on the Winter Rail Contingency Meeting programs and on supply chain issues with a number of groups. He is familiar with marine and rail supply chains and with the producers, shippers and customers that rely on these chains.

Gerald has an MBA from Royal Roads University and a BScF from Lakehead University.

Lenore Duff, temporary Member

Lenore Duff is a former public service executive with 28 years of service with the Government of Canada whose positions included Director General, Strategic Initiatives at the Labour Program; Director General, Surface Transportation Policy at Transport Canada; and Senior Privy Council Officer supporting the Social Affairs Committee of Cabinet. Her primary focus throughout her career has been on the development of policy and legislation across a broad range of economic and social policy areas.

As Director General, Surface Transportation Policy at Transport Canada, Lenore was responsible for developing policy options and providing advice on strengthening the freight rail liability and compensation regime, as well as on reforming freight rail provisions as part of the recent modernization of the Canada Transportation Act. At the Labour Program, her work included leading the development of a series of legislative initiatives designed to enhance protections for federally regulated employees. Prior to that, Lenore was responsible for the development of policy initiatives related to income, employment and disability.

In the course of her career, Lenore has also had the opportunity to conduct consultations with a broad range of industry, civil society and government stakeholders to inform the development of policy and legislation.

Lenore earned both a Bachelor of Arts (Honours Sociology) and Master of Arts in Sociology from Carleton University.

618

Date modified:

2019-05-02

This is Exhibit "40" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Code of Conduct for Members of the Agency

A. CONTEXT

Mandate of the Agency

(1) The Canadian Transportation Agency (Agency) is an independent, quasi-judicial, expert tribunal and regulator which has, with respect to all matters necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction, all the powers of a superior court.

(2) The Agency and has three core mandates:

a. Helping ensure that the national transportation system runs efficiently and smoothly in the interests of all Canadians: those who work and invest in it; the producers, shippers, travellers and businesses who rely on it; and the communities where it operates.
b. Protecting the fundamental human right of persons with disabilities to an accessible transportation network.
c. Providing consumer protection for air passengers.

Roles of the Agency's Chair, Vice-Chair, Members, and staff

(3) The Agency is comprised of up to five regular Members appointed by the Governor in Council (GIC), including the Agency's Chair and Vice-Chair, and up to three temporary Members appointed by the Minister of Transport from a roster approved by the GIC.

(4) Members make adjudicative decisions and regulatory determinations [1]. Their responsibilities in these regards cannot be delegated.

(5) The Chair, who is the also Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and a Member, is responsible for overall leadership of the Agency. He or she sets the Agency's strategic priorities, serves as its public voice, reports on its plans and results to Parliament through the Minister of Transport, and handles relations with Ministers, Parliamentarians, Deputy Ministers, and analogous bodies in other jurisdictions. He or she assigns cases to Members, supervises and directs their work, and chairs regular Members meetings. And as CEO, he or she is the most senior manager of the public servants working in the organization, serves as Deputy Head and Accounting Officer with a broad range of related responsibilities under the Financial Administration Act and other statutes, and chairs the Executive Committee.

(6) The Vice-Chair, who is also a Member, sits on the Executive Committee and assumes the responsibilities of the Chair if the Chair is absent or incapacitated.

(7) Members other than the Chair and Vice-Chair do not have any managerial functions within the Agency.

(8) All Members are supported in the discharge of their decision-making duties by the Agency's public servants, who are responsible for giving Members frank, impartial, evidence-based advice; fully implementing Members' direction; and other tasks assigned to them by the Chair, their managers, or legislation.

B. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Purpose, guiding principles, and application of the Code

(9) This Code establishes the standards for the conduct of Members and applies to all regular and temporary Members. It supplements, and should be read in conjunction with, any applicable requirements and standards set out in the Canada Transportation Act; other legislation administered by the Agency; other legislation establishing ethical and conduct obligations, such as the Conflict of Interest Act; relevant regulations, policies, and guidelines; other relevant codes; and letters of appointment.

(10) The Code reflects:

a. the Agency's commitment to independent, impartial, fair, transparent, credible, and efficient decision making; and
b. the Agency's organizational values of respect for democracy, respect for people, integrity, stewardship, and excellence.

(11) Members shall:

a. adhere to all elements of the Code and other applicable instruments;
b. uphold the highest ethical standards at all times;
c. arrange their private affairs in a manner that ensures they have no conflicts of interest;
d. conduct themselves with integrity, avoid impropriety or the appearance of impropriety, and eschew any action that could cast doubt on their ability to perform their duties with impartiality;
e. not accept gifts, hospitality, or other advantages or benefits from any party that has an interest in matters handled by the Agency;
f. recuse themselves from any proceeding where they know or reasonably should know that, in the making of the decision, they would be in a conflict of interest, or where their participation might create a reasonable apprehension of bias. In such case, they shall immediately inform the Chair and provide reason for their recusal. Members are encouraged to seek the advice of the Chair and the General Counsel when dealing with any situation where recusal is contemplated; and
g. immediately inform to the Chair if they become aware of a situation that may adversely affect the integrity or the credibility of the Agency, including possible non-compliance with the Code.

(12) The Chair is responsible for the administration of the Code, including any matters regarding its interpretation. Members are accountable to the Chair for their compliance with the Code.

Members' expertise and work arrangements

(13) Members have a responsibility to maintain the highest levels of professional competence and expertise required to fulfil their duties. Members are expected to pursue the development of knowledge and skills related to their work, including participation in training provided by the Agency.

(14) Regular, full-time Members must devote at least 37.5 hours per week to the performance of their duties during their term of appointment. If a regular Member is authorized by the Chair to continue to hear one or more matters before them upon expiry of their term, they shall only request remuneration for actual time worked during the period of continuation.

(15) When temporary Members are appointed on a full-time basis, they must devote at least 37.5 hours per week to the performance of their duties. When temporary Members are appointed on a part-time basis, they shall only request remuneration for actual time worked.

(16) Members' designated workplace is at the Agency's head office. They shall only work from home or other off-site locations with the prior written approval of the Chair.

C. DECISION MAKING

Impartiality

(17) Members must approach each case with an open mind and must be, and be seen to be, impartial and objective at all times.

Natural justice and fairness

(18) Members must respect the rules of natural justice and procedural fairness.

(19) Members must ensure that proceedings are conducted in a manner that is transparent, fair, and seen to be fair.

(20) Members shall render each decision on the merits of the case, based on the application of the relevant legislation and jurisprudence to the evidence presented during the proceeding.

(21) Members shall not be influenced by extraneous or improper considerations in their decision making. Members shall make their decisions free from the improper influence of any other person, institution, stakeholder or interest group, or political actor.

Preparation

(22) Members shall carefully review and consider relevant material – including applications, pleadings, briefing notes, and draft decisions – before attending case-related briefing sessions, meetings, or oral hearings.

Timeliness

(23) Members shall take all reasonable steps to ensure that proceedings progress in a timely fashion, avoiding unnecessary delays but always complying with the rules of natural justice and procedural fairness. Members shall render decisions as soon as possible after pleadings have closed and ensure, to the greatest extent possible, that statutory timelines and internal service standards for the issuance of decisions are met.

Quality

(24) Members shall ensure that their decisions are written in a manner that is clear, logical, complete without being unnecessarily repetitive or lengthy, and consistent with any guidelines or standards established by the Agency regarding the quality and format of decisions.

Consistency

(25) Members shall be cognizant of the importance of consistency in Agency decisions, notwithstanding the fact that prior decisions on similar matters do not constitute binding precedents. Members should not depart from the principles established in previous decisions unless they have a reasonable basis, and provide well-articulated reasons, for doing so.

Respect for parties and participants

(26) Members shall conduct proceedings, including oral hearings, in a courteous and respectful manner, while ensuring that proceedings are orderly and efficient.

(27) Members shall conduct proceedings such that those who have cases before the Agency understand its procedures and practices and can participate meaningfully, whether or not they are represented by counsel.

(28) Members must be responsive to accessibility-related needs and implement reasonable accommodation measures to facilitate meaningful participation of parties and other participants with disabilities in Agency hearings.

(29) Members shall be responsive to diversity, gender, and other human rights considerations when conducting proceedings; for example, in the affirmation/swearing in of witnesses and the scheduling of oral hearings. Members shall avoid words, phrases, and actions that could be understood to manifest bias or prejudice based on factors such as disability, race, age, national origin, gender, religion, sexual orientation, or socio-economic status, and shall never draw inferences on a person's credibility on the basis of such factors.

Case-related communications

(30) Members shall not communicate directly or indirectly with any party, counsel, witness, or other non-Agency participants appearing before them in a proceeding with respect to that proceeding, except in the presence of all parties or their counsel.

(31) Members shall not disclose information about a case or discuss any matter that has been or is in the process of being decided by them or the Agency, except as required in the performance of, and in the circumstances appropriate to, the formal conduct of their duties. Members shall refrain from discussing any case or Agency-related matter in public places.

D. WORKING RELATIONS AND INTERACTIONS

Relations with other Members

(32) Members shall foster civil, collegial relations with other Members.

(33) Members should have frank discussions and openly debate issues, while showing respect for one another's expertise, opinions, and roles. Members shall not comment on another Member's views, decisions, or conduct, except directly and privately to that Member himself or herself, or to the Chair pursuant to subsection 11.g of this Code.

(34) Members assigned together to a Panel should strive to reach consensus decisions whenever possible, but respectfully agree to disagree and prepare a majority opinion and a dissenting opinion where consensus cannot be achieved within a reasonable time period.

(35) Members should share their knowledge and expertise with other Members as requested and appropriate, without attempting to influence decisions in cases to which they are not assigned.

Relation with Agency staff

(36) Members shall at all times treat Agency staff with courtesy and be respectful of their views and recommendations, recognizing that staff are professional public servants who are required to offer their best advice to Members, who make the final decisions.

(37) Any concerns about staff performance should not be communicated directly to working-level employees but rather should be shared with the relevant Branch Head if the concerns are relatively minor and with the Chair if they are significant or systemic.

Interactions with non-Agency individuals and organizations

(38) Members shall not communicate with the news media. Enquiries from the media or members of the public shall be referred to the Chair's Office.

(39) Members shall not communicate with political actors or officials of other federal departments and agencies, provincial or foreign governments, or international organizations regarding a matter that is, was, or could be before the Agency.

(40) Members shall not publicly express an opinion about any past, current, or potential cases or any other issue related to the work of the Agency, and shall refrain from comments or discussions in public or otherwise that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias.

(41) Members shall not disclose or make known, either publicly or privately, any information of a confidential nature that was obtained in their capacity as a Member.

(42) Members shall not use their position or the Agency's resources (e.g., an Agency email account or letterhead) for personal gain.

(43) Members should exercise caution when using social media for personal purposes, and should not identify themselves as Members of the Agency on social media sites, except professional sites such as LinkedIn.

E. OUTSIDE ACTIVITIES

(44) Members shall not accept invitations to attend social events such as receptions or dinners with stakeholder representatives or with persons who are, or may become, a party, counsel, witness, or other non-Agency participants in an Agency proceeding, except in rare instances where there is a compelling justification and the Chair provides prior written approval.

(45) Members may take part in other outside activities that are not incompatible with their official duties and responsibilities and do not call into question their ability to perform their duties objectively, with the prior written approval of the Chair. Such activities may include participation in conferences and training seminars, speeches, teaching assignments, and volunteering.

(46) Requests for the Chair's approval of participation in social events or other outside activities must be made in writing at least two weeks before those events or activities begin, and must fully disclose all relevant details. Members are also responsible for obtaining any other approval required by applicable legislation, guidelines, codes, or other instruments.

(47) Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Chair may, from time to time, confer with stakeholder representatives, counsel, or other parties in his role as the Agency's public voice, to discuss matters unrelated to any specific proceeding.

F. AFFIRMATION

(48) Members shall review and affirm their commitment to and compliance with the Code upon initial appointment and every year thereafter on or near the anniversary of their appointment.

---

1 In this Code, "decisions" shall be understood to refer to both adjudicative decisions, which deal with disputes between parties, and regulatory determinations, which deal typically involve a single party.

- Code of Conduct for Members of the Agency last update: March 26, 2018

Date modified:
2014-01-22

This is Exhibit "41" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

627

Home

Organization and mandate

Our organization and mandate

Strategic Framework 2021–2024

Statement regarding the independence of the Canadian Transportation Agency

Members

Members Code of Conduct

Organizational chart

At the Heart of Transportation: A Moving History

The Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) is an independent, quasi-judicial tribunal and regulator that has, with respect to all matters necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction, all the powers of a superior court.

The CTA is made up of five full-time Members; up to three temporary Members may also be named. The Members, who are all based in the National Capital Region, are supported in their decision-making process by some 330 employees and administrative staff.

The CTA has three core mandates

- We help ensure that the national transportation system runs efficiently and smoothly in the interests of all Canadians: those who work and invest in it; the producers, shippers, travellers and businesses who rely on it; and the communities where it operates.
- We provide consumer protection for air passengers.
- We protect the human right of persons with disabilities to an accessible transportation network.

Our tools

To help advance these mandates, we have three tools at our disposal:

- Rule-making: We develop and enforce ground rules that establish the rights and responsibilities of transportation service providers and users and that level the playing field among competitors. These rules can take the form of binding regulations or less formal guidelines, codes of practice or interpretation notes.

- Dispute resolution: We resolve disputes that arise between transportation providers on the one hand, and their clients and neighbours on the other, using a range of tools from facilitation and mediation to arbitration and adjudication.
- Information provision: We provide information on the transportation system, the rights and responsibilities of transportation providers and users, and the Agency's legislation and services.

Our values

Our Code of Values and Ethics outlines the core values and expected behaviours that guide us in all activities related to our professional duties. Our guiding values are:

Respect for democracy - We uphold Canadian parliamentary democracy and promote constructive and timely exchange of views and information.
Respect for people - We treat people with dignity and fairness and foster a cooperative, rewarding working environment.
Integrity - We act with honesty, fairness, impartiality and transparency.
Stewardship - We use and manage our resources wisely and take full responsibility for our obligations and commitments.
Excellence - We provide the highest quality service through innovation, professionalism and responsiveness.

Members

- France Pégeot, Chair and CEO
- Elizabeth C. Barker, Vice-Chair
- Mark MacKeigan, Member
- Mary Tobin Oates, Member
- Heather Smith, Member
- Lenore Duff, temporary Member

France Pégeot, Chair and CEO

France Pégeot was appointed Chair and CEO of the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) on June 1, 2021.

Highly committed to public service for over 30 years, and an agent of change within the organizations where she works, she has diversified management experience, including in the fields of regulation and economic development.

Before joining the CTA, Ms. Pégeot most recently served as Executive Vice-President of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency.

629

Prior to that, she has held Assistant Deputy Minister positions in the following departments: Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada, Justice Canada, Fisheries and Oceans Canada, Industry Canada and Economic Development for the Quebec Regions.

Prior to becoming Assistant Deputy Minister, Ms. Pégeot participated in an Interchange assignment with Encana Corp. in Calgary and worked in various departments, including Health Canada and the Privy Council Office. She started her career in the Quebec Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

She holds a Master of Policy Analysis and a Bachelor of Food Science and Technology, both from Laval University.

Elizabeth C. Barker, Vice-Chair

Liz Barker began a five-year term as Vice-Chair and Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) on April 3, 2018.

Liz joined the CTA's predecessor, the National Transportation Agency, in 1991 as counsel. She has held several positions at the CTA, including, most recently, Chief Corporate Officer, Senior General Counsel and Secretary. She has worked in all areas of the Agency's mandate over the years, but has specialized in advising the tribunal in complex dispute adjudications and oral hearings on controversial subjects including rail level of service complaints, a wide range of complex accessible transportation disputes, and ministerial inquiries into marine pilotage and the accessibility of inter-city motor coach services. She has also worked extensively in the development of the Agency's approach to its human rights mandate, administrative monetary penalties regime, alternative dispute resolution, final offer arbitration, and rail level of service arbitration. She has appeared as counsel before all levels of court, including the Federal Court, the Federal Court of Appeal, and the Supreme Court of Canada, as co-counsel in Council of Canadians with Disabilities v. VIA Rail Canada Inc., [2007] 1 S.C.R. 650.

Liz was a recipient of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee Medal in 2016 for her work at the Agency, in particular in accessible transportation, the administrative monetary penalties program, and for her leadership of the Legal Services Branch.

Liz received her law degree from Osgoode Hall Law School in 1987 and her B.A. (Honours in Law) from Carleton University in 1984. She has been a member of the Law Society of Ontario since 1989.

Mark MacKeigan, Member

630

Mark MacKeigan began a four-year term as a Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency on May 28, 2018.

He comes to the Agency from The St. Lawrence Seaway Management Corporation, the not-for-profit operator of the federal government's Seaway assets, where he was Chief Legal Officer and Corporate Secretary from 2014.

Mark is not entirely new to the Agency, having served previously as a Member from 2007 to 2014 and as legal counsel on specific files in a contract position during 1996.

His transportation law experience includes six years as senior legal counsel with the International Air Transport Association in Montréal from 2001 to 2007, focusing on competition law, cargo services, aviation regulatory and public international law matters. From 1996 to 2000, he was legal counsel with NAV CANADA, the country's provider of civil air navigation services.

Mark began his legal career in private practice in Toronto. After earning a Bachelor of Arts with highest honours in Political Science from Carleton University, Mark obtained his law degree from the University of Toronto and a Master of Laws from the Institute of Air and Space Law at McGill University. He also holds a postgraduate diploma in European Union Competition Law from King's College London.

He is a member of the Bars of Ontario and the State of New York and is admitted as a solicitor in England and Wales.

Mary Tobin Oates, Member

After 25 years of public service, Mary Tobin Oates joined the Canadian Transportation Agency on 9 July 2018. As a lawyer, Mary practised in different areas of law, largely in public and administrative law. She appeared before the Pension Appeals Board and the Federal Court of Appeal regarding disability benefits under the Canada Pension Plan and the Old Age Security Act. Mary served as a Board member of the Veterans Review and Appeal Board where she determined eligibility for disability benefits for members of the Canadian Forces and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Mary provided legal and policy advice on indigenous issues to the Department of Justice and to Indian and Northern Affairs Canada. She also served as Board member to Tungasuvvingat Inuit, a not-for-profit, charitable organization that provides services to and advocates on behalf of Inuit who live in southern Canada.

Before becoming a lawyer, Mary worked as a technical editor for the Canadian Transportation Accident and Safety Board (now Transportation Safety Board).

Mary received her Bachelor of Arts from Memorial University of Newfoundland and graduated from Osgoode Hall Law School. She has been a member of the Law Society of Ontario (formerly the Law Society of Upper Canada) since February 1997.

Heather Smith, Member

Heather Smith became a full-time Member of the Canadian Transportation Agency on August 27, 2018. Heather was most recently Vice-President, Operations at the Canadian Environmental Assessment Agency. In previous positions, Heather was Executive Director in the Government Operations Sector of Treasury Board Secretariat, and Director General in the Strategic Policy Branch at Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada (AAFC). Heather held several management positions within Justice Canada, as General Counsel and Head of AAFC Legal Services, General Counsel and Head of Legal Services at the Canadian Environmental Assessment Agency, and General Counsel in the Legal Services Unit of Social Development Canada/Human Resources and Skills Development Canada.

Heather also served as legal counsel at Environment Canada Legal Services and Manager of the Canadian Environmental Protection Act Office at Environment Canada. Heather holds a B.A.(Hons.) from the University of King's College and an L.L.B. from the University of Toronto. She has also earned the Chartered Director (C.Dir.) designation from the McMaster/DeGroote Directors College.

Lenore Duff, temporary Member

Lenore Duff returned to the Canadian Transportation Agency after having served as a temporary Member from 2018-2020. She is a former public service executive with 28 years of service with the Government of Canada whose positions included Director General, Strategic Initiatives at the Labour Program; Director General, Surface Transportation Policy at Transport Canada; and Senior Privy Council Officer supporting the Social Affairs Committee of Cabinet. Her primary focus throughout her career has been on the development of policy and legislation across a broad range of economic and social policy areas.

As Director General, Surface Transportation Policy at Transport Canada, Lenore was responsible for developing policy options and providing advice on strengthening the freight rail liability and compensation regime, as well as on reforming freight rail provisions as part of the recent modernization of the Canada Transportation Act. At the Labour Program, her work included leading the development of a series of legislative initiatives designed to enhance protections for federally regulated employees. Prior to that, Lenore was responsible for the development of policy initiatives related to income, employment and disability.

In the course of her career, Lenore has also had the opportunity to conduct consultations with a broad range of industry, civil society and government stakeholders to inform the development of policy and legislation.

Lenore earned both a Bachelor of Arts (Honours Sociology) and Master of Arts in Sociology from Carleton University.

Date modified:
2019-05-02

This is Exhibit "42" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Salmasi, Aysa

From: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:28 PM
To: Stacey, Colin
Cc: Caitlin Hurcomb; Allan Burnside; Davis, Mark; Millette, Vincent
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Categories: ATIP Retrieval Notice A-2020-00167BB, ATIP Retrieval Notice / A-2020-00091

Hi Colin,
I am sending this unencryped as our remote network access is patchy and we are not able to open encrypted emails on our Samsungs at the Agency.

I would note that for situations outside of the carrier's control, no refunds are required under the APPR. As you know, the Agency issued a determination on Friday to clarify some situations flowing from COVID-19 that are considered to be in that category.

I would assume that writ large this situation is outside of the carrier's control.

If a flight cancellation is within the carrier's control, or within the carrier's control but required for safety, a refund is required and a voucher would not be compliant. Again, this does not seem to be relevant here.

Looping in Cait in case she has anything to add.

I hope this is helpful.
Thanks,
Marcia

From: Stacey, Colin <colin.stacey@tc.gc.ca>
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 2:57 PM
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Davis, Mark <mark.davis@tc.gc.ca>; Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Marcia,

Air Transat are telling us that they are getting pressure from creditors who are pushing on the airlines for cash. They will request that we officially let them to provide vouchers to passengers instead of providing them cash because they literally do not have enough cash to give refunds.

Have you heard anything about this? Are you available to discuss?

Thanks,

cs

This is Exhibit "43" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Transport Canada

Transports Canada

Director General
Air Policy

Directeur général
Politique aérienne

636

June 8th, 2023

Simon Lin
Evolink Law Group
237-4388 Still Creek Drive
Burnaby, B.C. V5C 6C6
simonlin@evolinklaw.com
Counsel for the Applicant

Judicial Administrator
Federal Court of Appeal
90 Sparks Street
Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0H9
FCARegistry-CAFGreffe@cas-satj.gc.ca

Kevin Shaar
Counsel, Legal Services and Secretariat Branch
Canadian Transportation Agency /
Government of Canada
kevin.shaar@otc-cta.gc.ca
Counsel for the Intervenor CTA

Re: Air Passenger Rights v AGC, Court File No.: A-102-20
Subpoena received May 26, 2023 - documents

Counsel,

I, the undersigned, in my capacity as an employee of Transport Canada, do confirm that Transport Canada has performed a search of documents in its possession and control, in compliance with the May 26, 2023, subpoena received in respect of Federal Court of Appeal file number A-102-20.

I do further confirm that in respect of items '1' and '3' of the subpoena, no compliant documents have been identified, and that a single document has been identified in respect of item '2', a March 18, 2020, email, attached hereto.

Sincerely,

Colin Stacey
Director General, Air Policy
Directeur général, Politique aérienne

c.c.: Lorne Ptak and Sandy Graham, Counsel for the Respondent

Canada

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:14 PM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Cait – we have a question from our MinO. Would that be contrary to the APPRs to provide vouchers instead of cash for tickets refunds?

Colin has been in touch with Marcia but I don't think she responded.

Many Thanks!

From: Stacey, Colin
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 2:57 PM
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Davis, Mark <mark.davis@tc.gc.ca>; Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Marcia,

Air Transat are telling us that they are getting pressure from creditors who are pushing on the airlines for cash. They will request that we officially let them to provide vouchers to passengers instead of providing them cash because they literally do not have enough cash to give refunds.

Have you heard anything about this? Are you available to discuss?

Thanks,

cs

This is Exhibit "44" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Meredith Desnoyers

From: Caitlin Hurcomb
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2020 9:39 AM
To: Valérie Lagacé
Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Val,
Just looping you in on this exchange with TC, in case there was anything you felt needed discussing with TC Legal.
I believe this information was requested by Finance to inform decisions about potential support for airlines. Happy to give more context.

Thanks!
Cait

From: Caitlin Hurcomb
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2020 8:21 AM
To: 'Millette, Vincent'
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Vincent,

All carriers with an international license with the Agency must file a tariff with us. To make changes to conditions in its tariff:

- Generally speaking, the carrier would need to file a new tariff, which would only take effect after the statutory notice period, which is 45 days.
- If necessary, a carrier may make a request to the Agency for the tariff to be in effect earlier than 45 days, especially if beneficial to the travelling public.
- The carrier could also ask to be exempt from the statutory period under section 80 of the Act, if the carrier can justify that "compliance with the provision by the person is unnecessary, undesirable or impractical."

The CTA's Tariff and Research Division can provide further guidance to carriers on this, as required.

Obviously I can't speak for senior management or decision-makers at the Agency, but I think there would be some concern here if carriers were looking to change their tariffs in a way that would leave passengers without recourse. I am not sure there would be appetite to waive the statutory requirements in those circumstances. I'll also note that the reasonableness of a carrier's tariff can be reviewed by Agency members.

Feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

Thanks!

Cait Hurcomb

Chef d'équipe et Conseillère principale en politiques, Affaires réglementaires
Office des transports du Canada | Gouvernement du Canada
Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca | 613-853-3381

Team Lead and Senior Policy Advisor, Regulatory Affairs
Canadian Transportation Agency | Government of Canada
Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca | 613-853-3381

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Thursday, March 19, 2020 4:53 PM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Would you know what would be involved in terms of process and timelines if a carrier wanted to quickly change certain conditions of its tariff.

Thanks

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Thursday, March 19, 2020 1:24 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Vincent,
Spoke with Tariffs Division and they confirm that airlines must follow the policies in their tariffs and if they wanted to follow different policies, they would have to amend their tariff.

I hope this helps – let me know if you have any other questions.

Thanks!
Cait

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:32 PM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

That would be great – thanks!

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:31 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Marcia just responded to the original question.

Yes, policies on cancellations by the passenger would be an airline tariff/fare rules issue. I can ask my colleagues in the Tariffs about your last question.

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:28 PM

To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

641

Refunds under the APPR.

Refunds for trips cancelled by the passenger would be dealt with accordingly with the carriers' tariff? If the tariff allows it, then they can do it. What if the tariff says they reimburse cash but now they want to do vouchers, do they need to amend their tariff?

Thanks

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:24 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Yeah, that happens for some reason on encrypted replies between TC and CTA. Not sure why.
Wanted to ask – are we talking about refunds under the APPR or refunds for trips cancelled by the passenger?

Also – I think Marcia is on her way back from T.O.

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:21 PM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Hi Cait – I don't know if you meant to reply something but your message below was empty

---

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 5:16 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

This is Exhibit "45" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 18, 2020 10:14 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: RE: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions

Thanks, Marcia. I'm not sure we have a clear role here, as this seems to boil down to a commercial dispute between the carrier and the credit card companies. That said, these are extraordinary times, and if there's something we can do to ease threats to industry viability while protecting passengers, we should at least consider it. Let's discuss during EC tomorrow.

S

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 10:05 PM
To: Scott Streiner
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: Fwd: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions

Scott, I had a long call this evening and have a better understanding of the concern, now outlined in this email.

Perhaps we can discuss tomorrow or at the special EC.

Marcia

Sent from my Bell Samsung device over Canada's largest network.

-------- Original message --------
From: George Petsikas <George.Petsikas@transat.com>
Date: 2020-03-18 8:16 PM (GMT-05:00)
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions

Marcia

Many thanks for taking time to speak with me this evening.

As discussed, we are currently under enormous pressure from Canada's bank-owned credit card processors as a result of their charge back guarantees to their customers where the merchant is unable to provide the service nor refund the money paid to this end with the card. This is a pretty standard commitment per the credit card agreements offered by the big players such as Mastercard and Visa.

Consequently, one of the conditions imposed by these companies when doing business with large merchants such as Transat is to demand financial guarantees to cover their exposure per their voluntary commitments to their customers in the event we can't deliver or refund regardless of circumstances, including beyond our control and/or force majeure.

The net result is with the avalanche of recent COVID cancellations, consumers are invoking their charge back guarantees directly with the cards / banks, who in turn are demanding that the merchant makes them whole through the guarantees in question. This is putting enormous strain on our desperate attempts to manage the collapse in our revenues and stabilize our business and avoid ultimate failure and job losses.

As explained, this matter was actively addressed in France and Italy recently, two countries enormously dependant on the stability of their important travel and tourism and tourism sectors that have been severely impacted by the crisis. In brief, the relevant travel industry oversight authorities in these countries publicly recognized and accepted the offering of travel vouchers valid for up to 24 months as a satisfactory resolution of the consumer's claim for a cash refund in the current extraordinary circumstances.

This recognition of this option by state authorities in turn allowed the banks / card processors in those countries to invoke this voucher in lieu of a cash refund approach as evidence the merchant had fulfilled its obligations per the sale and thus allowed them to deny the charge back claim. The result was subsequently the suspension or significant alleviation of cash guarantee demands on the travel industry merchant by the banks.

Consequently, Transat respectfully requests that the Agency give active and urgent consideration to publishing a similar statement with respect to the existing travel voucher programs now being offered by Canadian air carriers including ourselves and Air Canada, among others. Again, the purpose is not to create any form of obligation in this sense but simply to recognize them as a satisfactory resolution of any cash refund claims against airlines. This of course would be temporary while we ride out the worst of the storm over the next few months.

Thank you in advance for your assistance and expeditious consideration of the present and please don't hesitate if you have any questions or require further information.

Kind regards - GP

This is Exhibit "46" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amanda Hamelin

Subject:	Special EC - COVID19 - Daily updates
Location:	(514) 938-6569,,935311571# (then press #)
Start:	Mon 3/16/2020 2:00 PM
End:	Mon 3/16/2020 2:30 PM
Recurrence:	Daily
Recurrence Pattern:	every day from 2:00 PM to 2:30 PM
Meeting Status:	Accepted
Organizer:	Scott Streiner
Required Attendees:	Alysia Lau; Douglas Smith; Lesley Robertson; Liz Barker; Marcia Jones; Mireille Drouin; Sébastien Bergeron; Tom Oommen; Valérie Lagacé
Optional Attendees:	Allan Burnside; Simon-Pierre Lessard
Importance:	High

Chair's Boardroom & by CBCI teleconference: dial 1 514 938 6569 call ID: 935311571# then # again

Alysia will HOST.

This is Exhibit "47" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Meeting - Mar. 19

Thursday, March 19, 2020 9:03 AM

Attendance

- Scott Streiner
- Liz Barker
- Mireille Drouin
- Doug Smith
- Marcia Jones
- Tom Oommen
- Valérie Lagacé

- Sébastien Bergeron
- Alysia Lau

Debriefs - External

- MJ: Debriefed on suspension order and APPR determination. Air carrier tone is nothing within their control. Want Agency to clarify that they are not required to refund carriers. Air carriers don't have resources to turn to implementing ATPDR.
- SS: ATPDR largely reflect previous codes, so not reasonable to delay coming-into-force wholesale.

- SS: Other issue is air carriers refusing to provide refund or voucher to passengers.
- SS: Considering issuing statement - current context very different from regulations, Agency view is it would be reasonable that air carriers provide refunds or vouchers to passengers affected by mass cancellations.
- DS: Prefer vouchers given cash flow issues.
- LB: Vouchers would need to include reasonable conditions.
- VL: Could offer suspension of compensation requirements altogether. SS: Could imply that these types of situations are outside air carrier control.
- SS and SB: What if government provides bailout?

- MD: Have already communicated with employees who need to come in, other staff have come in to take equipment home.

- MD: BCP - must inform PCO of additional critical service.
- LB: Thought the Act already allowed for coasting trade to take place without permits for emergency operations. VL to examine this provision.
- SS: Why would this be included in the first place? TO: Some urgency to processing applications even if for several months down the road.

- MD: BCP - what happens to non-critical services and comms plan. MD Will provide this tomorrow.
- SS: Reached out to Ian Stewart from HFA.

- TO: Discontinuance of service. Sent potential conditions to Chair:
    - Shortening notification period to 2 weeks
    - Exemption will only apply during "crisis" pandemic period
    - Denial of discontinuance of service in remote communities with no other viable transportation service
    - APPR continue to apply
- TO: Rather than grant blanket exemption, seek specific routes from air carriers.
- SS: No need to specify APPR as condition.
- LB: Agree with proposed conditions.
- Decision: TO and VL to draft s. 80 decision applicable to all air carriers with conditions proposed (and requiring air carriers to identify routes).

Internal Approach

- MD: Would like today's message to express maintaining telework until further notice. Approved
- DS: Should we continue with compressed work weeks? SS: Should give employees flexibility in line with Central Agencies.
- MD: As of tomorrow, doors at 15 Eddy will be locked. Staff can enter with passes. MD to inform staff.
- MD: NB will accompany cleaners so they can empty trash cans in all closed offices.
- MD: There's been confirmed COVID-19 case in INAC in Vancouver.

- SS: Messages from Centre regarding flexibility, even in budget uncertainty. At some point, may need to seek signal from TBS/PCO regarding budget so we know what commitments we can make to employees. DRB terms extended until September.
- SS: Draft letter from TBS Secretary. MD: Main concern. MD to reach out to TBS regarding needed flexibility with respect to deliveries.
- SS: Encourage Branch Heads and managers to be in regular contact with staff.

Varia

- VL: Secretariat still receiving filings for stayed cases. VL will share options for action with DS, SS and LB.
- VL: Have a casual to take on administrative tasks for staff going on mat leave. Will present appointment to EC tomorrow.
- DS: Also have casuals that will come up over next few weeks. *SS: No need for full-blown submission, instead Branch Heads should consult MD and NB first, then draft short email for EC in advance of meeting.
-

This is Exhibit "48" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: March 19, 2020 4:19 PM
To: George Petsikas
Cc: Bernard Bussières; Agnieszka Charysz; Howard Liebman; Allan Burnside; Caitlin Hurcomb
Subject: RE: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions

Follow Up Flag: Assurer un suivi
Flag Status: Flagged

Hi George,

Thanks for your message. Please rest assured we are looking into this – there is a lot going on in government/the Agency at this time, as you can imagine. We do appreciate how much pressure you are facing.

I will definitely keep you posted of any updates.
Marcia

From: George Petsikas
Sent: Thursday, March 19, 2020 12:55 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Bernard Bussières ; Agnieszka Charysz ; Howard Liebman
Subject: RE: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions
Importance: High

Hi Marcia,

Would you be able to provide a status update regarding our urgent request hereunder?

Copying my colleagues who are on need-to-know basis.

Thanks again for your vital cooperation.

George Petsikas
Directeur principal Affaires gouvernementales et de l'industrie
Senior Director, Government and Industry Affairs
T 514-842-9612
C 514-781-1525

Transat A.T. inc.
300, rue Léo-Pariseau, bureau 600
Montréal (Québec) H2X 4C2

De : Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Envoyé : 18 mars 2020 22:19
À : George Petsikas <George.Petsikas@transat.com>
Objet : Re: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions

Hi George,
Thank you for your message and explaining the situation in more detail. I will be checking into this and I appreciate it is highly urgent.

Regards,
Marcia

Sent from my Bell Samsung device over Canada's largest network.

-------- Original message --------
From: George Petsikas <George.Petsikas@transat.com>
Date: 2020-03-18 8:16 PM (GMT-05:00)
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Request for recognition and acceptance of travel voucher solutions

Marcia

Many thanks for taking time to speak with me this evening.

As discussed, we are currently under enormous pressure from Canada's bank-owned credit card processors as a result of their charge back guarantees to their customers where the merchant is unable to provide the service nor refund the money paid to this end with the card. This is a pretty standard commitment per the credit card agreements offered by the big players such as Mastercard and Visa.

Consequently, one of the conditions imposed by these companies when doing business with large merchants such as Transat is to demand financial guarantees to cover their exposure per their voluntary commitments to their customers in the event we can't deliver or refund regardless of circumstances, including beyond our control and/or force majeure.

The net result is with the avalanche of recent COVID cancellations, consumers are invoking their charge back guarantees directly with the cards / banks, who in turn are demanding that the merchant makes them whole through the guarantees in question. This is putting enormous strain on our desperate attempts to manage the collapse in our revenues and stabilize our business and avoid ultimate failure and job losses.

As explained, this matter was actively addressed in France and Italy recently, two countries enormously dependant on the stability of their important travel and tourism and tourism sectors that have been severely impacted by the crisis. In brief, the relevant travel industry oversight authorities in these countries publicly recognized and accepted the offering of travel vouchers valid for up to 24 months as a satisfactory resolution of the consumer's claim for a cash refund in the current extraordinary circumstances.

This recognition of this option by state authorities in turn allowed the banks / card processors in those countries to invoke this voucher in lieu of a cash refund approach as evidence the merchant had fulfilled its obligations per the sale and thus allowed them to deny the charge back claim. The result was subsequently the suspension or significant alleviation of cash guarantee demands on the travel industry merchant by the banks.

Consequently, Transat respectfully requests that the Agency give active and urgent consideration to publishing a similar statement with respect to the existing travel voucher programs now being offered by Canadian air carriers including ourselves and Air Canada, among others. Again, the purpose is not to create any form of obligation in this sense but simply to recognize them as a satisfactory resolution of any cash refund claims against airlines. This of course would be temporary while we ride out the worst of the storm over the next few months.

Thank you in advance for your assistance and expeditious consideration of the present and please don't hesitate if you have any questions or require further information.

Kind regards - GP

This is Exhibit "49" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: March 20, 2020 12:18 PM
To: Allan Burnside; Caitlin Hurcomb
Subject: Fwd: Air passengers and financial stress
Attachments: Air passengers and financial stress (Mar.19.20).pdf

Follow Up Flag: Assurer un suivi
Flag Status: Flagged

Sent from my Bell Samsung device over Canada's largest network.

-------- Original message --------
From: Scott Streiner
Date: 2020-03-20 12:08 PM (GMT-05:00)
To: +_EC
Subject: FW: Air passengers and financial stress

From: Jason Kerr
Sent: Thursday, March 19, 2020 7:21 PM
To: MINTC@TC.GC.CA
Cc: Scott Streiner ; Hill, Miled ; Sébastien Bergeron ; Ian Jack
Subject: Air passengers and financial stress

Dear Minister,

We are writing to you this evening concerning two issues of importance to many thousands of Canadian air travellers affected by government actions in response to the COVID-19 crisis. If you or your staff have any questions, they may contact me for additional information.

Thank you,
Jason

Jason Kerr
SENIOR DIRECTOR / DIRECTEUR PRINCIPAL
Government Relations / Relations gouvernementales
100 – 46 Elgin Street
Ottawa, ON
Tel/Tél 343-998-6679
jkerr@national.caa.ca

March 19, 2020

The Honourable Marc Garneau, P.C., M.P.
Minister of Transport
330 Sparks Street
Ottawa, ON
K1A 0N5

Subject: Air passengers and financial stress

Dear Minister,

I am writing today concerning two issues of importance to many thousands of Canadian air travellers affected by government actions in response to the COVID-19 virus.

Let me first salute your government for its rapid response to this global pandemic, and acknowledge the extraordinary and complex work that is being undertaken by government and its private-sector partners, such as the airlines, to cope with the sudden and systemic shocks that have resulted.

That said, cases that our travel agent network have dealt with, as well as numerous media reports, show that in recent days many, many Canadians have had to pay thousands of dollars over regular prices in order to buy tickets to comes back to Canada, as requested by the federal government. In a related issue, many carriers are offering only credits for future flights, most of which expire within a year, for flights cancelled due to government advisories or orders not to fly to certain destinations. In contrast, Via Rail Canada is offering full refunds to consumers wishing to cancel travel, regardless of when the ticket was purchased.

We believe these government actions are reasonable and warranted for public health reasons. But we equally believe that Canadians should not be hit with large financial penalties for decisions out of their hands, especially at a time when unexpected economic stress has become a fact of life for most Canadians.

We understand the industry is under immense financial pressure itself, and we accept that the enormous fares – as high as $14,000 to fly from Australia – may have been an unintentional booking anomaly driven by a frantic surge in demand. But the result is still a huge and often unaffordable bill to affected consumers. We note the $5,000 the government has made available to Canadians who need to book tickets urgently, and thank you for this measure. But we also know that this is not a grant – it is a repayable loan.

As for credits, we note that European Union policy in this area is clear, different than Canada's, and much better for travellers. It requires that airlines offer a full refund

500–1545 ave Carling Ave, Ottawa, ON K1Z 8P9 Tel/Tél 613.247.0117 Fax/Télec 613.247.0118 CAA.ca

(https://ec.europa.eu/transport/sites/transport/files/legislation/c20201830.pdf). Customers may choose to accept a credit for future flight, but they should not be forced to. Again, we support a balanced approach that does not unduly further destabilize the carriers. It may well be that their systems are overwhelmed right now, they are properly focused on repatriating Canadians with special flights, and their cash flow cannot withstand a stream of cash refunds at the moment. But it is not fair to expect passengers to shoulder this either. They should be able to access a cash refund, if not now then in the coming months, whether it is the carriers or government that make them whole. To the extent that credits remain an option, they should not be allowed to expire as they would under normal circumstances. It may be more than a year before a Canadian's financial situation is good enough for her or him to contemplate another trip.

We know from the Prime Minister's social media feed that he talked yesterday with the CEOs of Air Canada and WestJet. Such dialogue is important. We request that you raise these issues with the carriers, and also consider whether some government relief is in order. We understand the carriers themselves may need financial relief, and we support this – but would expect that consumer concerns are taken into account too.

A signal now from the Government that these issues will be addressed, even if not for a few weeks, would go a long way towards relieving many thousands of Canadian travellers of the undue financial anxiety that these needed public health measures have imposed on them.

We are in the middle of an unprecedented crisis for everyone, including carriers, but as things stand now many consumers are getting sideswiped in the process. You have always been a champion of the Canadian traveller, Minister Garneau, and we ask you to step up once again.

We would be happy to answer any questions you or your staff might have. Please do not hesitate to contact me by telephone at (613) 863-2590 or email at ijack@national.caa.ca.

Sincerely,

Ian Jack
Vice President, Public Affairs
Canadian Automobile Association (CAA)

CC: Scott Streiner, Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency

This is Exhibit "50" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 20, 2020 5:00 PM
To: Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: RE: EC March 20 - Decisions and Follow-ups

Great work, Alysia. Just a few additions below. Also, let's remove the "refunds and vouchers" item, since we're not quite sure yet what will be done on this front or how.

Let's make sure the cover message when you send these out invites EC members to let you know if they believe any items are missing or should be edited.

Thanks,

S

From: Sébastien Bergeron
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2020 4:49 PM
To: Scott Streiner
Subject: TR: EC March 20 - Decisions and Follow-ups

Scott,

See below. Anything's missing in your opinion ? Kudos to Alysia for being able to work so fast ! For me, it's good to go. It's for your consideration.

EC Member(s) Tasked	EC Decision(s)	Deliverable(s)	Expected Deadline
All Branch Heads	-	• Prepare list of potential projects to assign to staff during teleworking period.	March 23/24
	-	• Identify annual publications and reports that the Agency should continue to monitor and work on. • Marcia – includes Annual Report • Chair's Office to compile a list → Please send your items to Alysia in advance if possible.	March 25
Chair's Office	-	• Work with Mireille and Comms to create internal "teleworking haiku" competition for staff on The Hub.	Next week
Marcia	-	• Comms will work with ATC and other groups to post public messaging on website to communicate delivery of Agency services during COVID-19:	As soon as feasible

		○ The Agency is continuing to deliver its services to the extent possible. ○ Complaints can continue to be filed with the Agency; however, there may be a longer response time. ○ Dispute proceedings involving airlines have been temporarily suspended. • Comms will update the Agency's helplines and other public-facing platforms to reflect the above messaging.
	-	• Prepare and circulate draft statement with respect to air passenger refunds and vouchers during COVID-19.	Next week
Mireille	-	• Daily staff update – Include acknowledgment of challenges staff facing working from home e.g. child care	March 20
	• The Agency is not invoking the BCP at this time, but should prepare itself for the possibility. • The BCP will be invoked in extraordinary circumstances (e.g. direction from Central Agencies, unavailability of staff due to sickness). • If the BCP is invoked, the Agency will continue to receive complaints. • If the BCP is invoked, non-critical services will continue to be provided to the extent possible. These will be managed on a day-to-day basis.	• Daily staff update – Inform staff that the Agency has not invoked the BCP and will continue to provide as many of its regular services as possible in the circumstances, but is making preparations should the possibility arise. The BCP would only be invoked in extraordinary circumstances.	March 20
	-	• Update Committee on call with TBS with respect to fiscal year-end contracts.	March 23/24
Valérie	-	• [redacted]	March 23
	-	• Prepare options regarding approaches to VRCPI in context of COVID-19 and possible BCP situation.	Next week

This is Exhibit "51" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: March 21, 2020 4:19 PM
To: Allan Burnside; Caitlin Hurcomb; Timothy Zarins
Subject: Fwd: communique´de presse-arrêt ministériel-20-03-2020.pdf.pdf.pdf.pdf
Attachments: communique´de presse-arrêt ministériel-20-03-2020.pdf.pdf.pdf.pdf

Fyi

Sent from my Bell Samsung device over Canada's largest network.

-------- Original message --------
From: George Petsikas
Date: 2020-03-21 12:30 PM (GMT-05:00)
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Bernard Bussières , Howard Liebman
Subject: Fwd: communiqué de presse-arrêt ministériel-20-03-2020.pdf.pdf.pdf.pdf

Hi Marcia,

In relation to what we have discussed recently, please see attached from Belgium. This is in addition to similar measures already taken by France and Italy.

As you can see, we are not alone in our concerns and that this option is essential to avoid a catastophic run on carrier cash reserves not just from consumers but from credit card chargeback refunds that the big banks want us to pay for.

I await news regarding our urgent request of earlier this week to this end.

Thx - GP

Get Outlook for Android

L'utilisation de bons à valoir en cas d'annulation dans le cadre de la crise COVID-19 est approuvée par Arrêté ministériel

Le 20 mars 2020 – Le Cabinet de la ministre Muylle confirme que la proposition commune du secteur du voyage organisé d'utiliser des bons à valoir en cas d'annulation dans le cadre de la crise COVID-19 — que ce soit par le voyageur ou par l'organisateur de voyages — a été approuvée. Cette proposition a également été ratifié aujourd'hui et l'Arrêté ministériel a été publié au Moniteur Belge. Il existe désormais un cadre juridique dans lequel le bon à valoir est devenu un moyen de paiement légalement reconnu.

Ce système de bons à valoir donne au secteur du voyage organisé, l'un des plus durement touchés par le coronavirus, le répit nécessaire pour surveiller ses flux de trésorerie, tout en étant en mesure d'aider le client.

Cette initiative fait suite à la demande des différentes associations professionnelles représentant les différents acteurs du secteur du voyage organisé.

Sans ce système, le secteur du voyage organisé ne pouvait pas survivre longtemps. Dans les circonstances actuelles d'annulation massive et obligatoire des contrats de voyage à forfait, les liquidités disponibles sont insuffisantes pour assurer le remboursement des voyageurs sous les conditions classiques.

Grâce au système de bons à valoir, le voyageur conserve le droit de réserver à nouveau son voyage à une date ultérieure et le secteur du voyage organisé préserve les liquidités nécessaires pour survivre dans cet état d'urgence.

Le secteur remercie la ministre Muylle et son cabinet pour cette action rapide et la bonne coopération dans le cadre de ce dossier.

Le secteur du voyage maintient sa demande de mesures de soutien supplémentaires au gouvernement

En plus de ce système de bons à valoir, le secteur du voyage organisé demande entre autres qu'un système équitable soit élaboré au sein de la Loi voyages qui donne possibilité à l'organisateur de voyages d'invoquer un cas de force majeure lorsque leurs fournisseurs y font appel, ce qui les préserverait de devoir rembourser les sommes reçues.

Actuellement, les entreprises du secteur du voyage organisé ont payé leurs fournisseurs étrangers, mais ne reçoivent pas de remboursement pour les annulations en cours, alors que la législation actuelle les oblige à rembourser toutes les sommes versées. Ce système est intenable dans les circonstances actuelles. C'est pourquoi le secteur réclame d'urgence la création d'un fonds de calamités pour protéger les voyageurs et le secteur dans ces cas précis.

Regard vers l'avenir: des annulations ne sont pas à l'ordre du jour

En tant que secteur, nous regardons également pleinement vers l'avenir. Bien sûr, nous voulons que les gens reviennent le plus tôt possible et le secteur gèrera ceci comme il l'a toujours fait de manière responsable, en tenant compte des directives belges et locales. Annuler ces voyages pour les vacances d'été n'est donc pas du tout à l'ordre du jour. Au contraire, nous espérons à ce moment-là être en mesure d'amener de nombreux voyageurs en toute sécurité vers des destinations de vacances sûres.

Contact pour la presse[i]:

- Pour ABTO – Association of Belgian Travel Organisers, BTO – Belgian Travel Organisation en VLARA – Vlaamse Associatie van Reisagenten :

  Pierre Fivet, porte-parole – T: 0479 99 43 91 – E: pfivet@vacansoleil.com

- Pour l'UPAV — Union Professionnelle des Agences de Voyages :

  Anne-Sophie Snyers, secrétaire générale — T : 0471 88 45 42 — E : anne-sophie@upav.be

- Pour la VVR — Vereniging Vlaamse Reisbureaus :

  Koen van den Bosch, administrateur délégué — T : 050 25 00 60 — E : koen@vvr.be

[i] Il s'agit d'une initiative de l'ensemble du secteur du voyage, ces associations ont été désignées comme porte-parole.

This is Exhibit "52" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 22, 2020 8:54 AM
To: Liz Barker; Marcia Jones; Valérie Lagacé; Tom Oommen; Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: Draft
Attachments: Statement.docx

Good morning, folks. The attached will be one item for discussion on our 10:30 call. Talk soon.

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. In addition, some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but have clauses that relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.

All these documents were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of mass cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger concerns and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance and have to find other ways of getting home should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. They should be "kept whole" in some manner. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could put their very survival at risk.

While any specific situations brought before the CTA will be examined on their merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate solution could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

This is Exhibit "53" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amanda Hamelin

Subject:	Urgent Debrief - Please confirm attendance ASAP
Location:	CBCI teleconference: dial 1 514 938 6569 call ID: 935311571# then # again
Start:	Sun 3/22/2020 10:30 AM
End:	Sun 3/22/2020 11:00 AM
Recurrence:	(none)
Meeting Status:	Accepted
Organizer:	Scott Streiner
Required Attendees:	sebastien bergeron (Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca); Marcia Jones; Tom Oommen; Valérie Lagacé; Liz Barker
Importance:	High

Seb will host

This is Exhibit "54" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 22, 2020 11:24 AM
To: Mark MacKeigan; Heather Smith; Mary Tobin Oates; Lenore Duff; Gerald Dickie
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: Draft statement
Attachments: Statement.docx

Hi, Colleagues. I hope all of you and your family and friends remain healthy and are doing OK despite our current isolation in our homes.

As you know, there have been many questions about what (if any) entitlements passengers have, and what (if any) obligations carriers have, when flights are disrupted as a result of the COVD-19-related mass cancellations.

After some analysis, reflection, and discussion with other federal players, we're considering issuing a statement (draft attached) that acknowledges the current rule-set never really contemplated the present circumstances and indicates that vouchers/credits would be an appropriate way of protecting passengers from a total loss without pushing carriers closer towards insolvency.

Because this statement is a policy signal of sorts and could inform -- though of course, not fetter – future Agency decisions, Liz and I wanted to share it with all Members. We're looking at releasing it as early as tomorrow, so could you please let us know by 2 pm if you concur with it, and whether you have any questions or comments?

Many thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. In addition, some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but have clauses that relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.

All these documents were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of mass cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger concerns and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance and have to find other ways of getting home should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could put their very survival at risk.

While any specific situations brought before the CTA will be examined on their merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate solution could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

This is Exhibit "55" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Mary Tobin Oates
Sent: March 22, 2020 12:55 PM
To: Scott Streiner; Mark MacKeigan; Heather Smith; Lenore Duff; Gerald Dickie
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: RE: Draft statement
Attachments: Statement mto.docx

Hey there!

Thank you for the opportunity to review this document. I think that there should be a short introductory sentence that states that cause of the issuance of a statement. That it's the pandemic is buried. I also wonder which situations are captured by our recommendation: flights returning to Canada or future flights. Thanks, MTO

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 11:24 AM
To: Mark MacKeigan ; Heather Smith ; Mary Tobin Oates ; Lenore Duff ; Gerald Dickie
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: Draft statement

Hi, Colleagues. I hope all of you and your family and friends remain healthy and are doing OK despite our current isolation in our homes.

As you know, there have been many questions about what (if any) entitlements passengers have, and what (if any) obligations carriers have, when flights are disrupted as a result of the COVD-19-related mass cancellations.

After some analysis, reflection, and discussion with other federal players, we're considering issuing a statement (draft attached) that acknowledges the current rule-set never really contemplated the present circumstances and indicates that vouchers/credits would be an appropriate way of protecting passengers from a total loss without pushing carriers closer towards insolvency.

Because this statement is a policy signal of sorts and could inform -- though of course, not fetter – future Agency decisions, Liz and I wanted to share it with all Members. We're looking at releasing it as early as tomorrow, so could you please let us know by 2 pm if you concur with it, and whether you have any questions or comments?

Many thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused disruptions in daily lives around the world. For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. In addition, some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but have clauses that relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations. The COVIC-19 pandemic would be considered a force majeure.

Formatted: Font: Italic

All these documents were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of mass cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger concerns and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance and have to find other ways of getting home should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could put their very survival at risk.

Commented [MTO1]: Are only repatriation flights being considered? The next sentence seems to contemplate ongoing disruptions.

While any specific situations brought before the CTA will be examined on their merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate solution could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

This is Exhibit "56" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Mark MacKeigan
Sent: March 22, 2020 1:11 PM
To: Mary Tobin Oates; Scott Streiner; Heather Smith; Lenore Duff; Gerald Dickie
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: RE: Draft statement
Attachments: Statement mto_mm.docx

Scott, Mary, and all,

I think Mary's changes improve the document. I agree with the policy statement being necessary and I agree with its contents. I have made a few further changes in the attached for colouring and limitation of this policy re: perception of fettering.

Mark

From: Mary Tobin Oates
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 12:55 PM
To: Scott Streiner ; Mark MacKeigan ; Heather Smith ; Lenore Duff ; Gerald Dickie
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: RE: Draft statement

Hey there!

Thank you for the opportunity to review this document. I think that there should be a short introductory sentence that states that cause of the issuance of a statement. That it's the pandemic is buried. I also wonder which situations are captured by our recommendation: flights returning to Canada or future flights. Thanks, MTO

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 11:24 AM
To: Mark MacKeigan <Mark.MacKeigan@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Heather Smith <Heather.Smith@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Mary Tobin Oates <Mary.TobinOates@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Lenore Duff <Lenore.Duff@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Gerald Dickie <Gerald.Dickie@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Draft statement

Hi, Colleagues. I hope all of you and your family and friends remain healthy and are doing OK despite our current isolation in our homes.

As you know, there have been many questions about what (if any) entitlements passengers have, and what (if any) obligations carriers have, when flights are disrupted as a result of the COVD-19-related mass cancellations.

After some analysis, reflection, and discussion with other federal players, we're considering issuing a statement (draft attached) that acknowledges the current rule-set never really contemplated the present circumstances and indicates that vouchers/credits would be an appropriate way of protecting passengers from a total loss without pushing carriers closer towards insolvency.

Because this statement is a policy signal of sorts and could inform -- though of course, not fetter – future Agency decisions, Liz and I wanted to share it with all Members. We're looking at releasing it as early as tomorrow, so could you please let us know by 2 pm if you concur with it, and whether you have any questions or comments?

Many thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused disruptions in daily lives around the world. For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. In addition, some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but have clauses that relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations. The COVIC-19 pandemic would be considered a force majeure.

All these documents were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger concerns and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance and have to find other ways of getting home should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could put their very survival at risk.

While any specific situations brought before the CTA will be examined on their merits, the CTA believes that, in the context of the current pandemic, generally speaking, an appropriate solution could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

Formatted: Font: Italic

Commented [MM1]: While this document may have been drafted in the context of our Canadian carriers, international licensees are also covered. This text might add a bit of useful colouring.

Commented [MTO2]: Are only repatriation flights being considered? The next sentence seems to contemplate ongoing disruptions.

Commented [MM3R2]: Mary raises a good point.

Commented [MM4]: Again, emphasizing the specific nature of the circumstances. Might help on the fettering issue.

This is Exhibit "57" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Lenore Duff
Sent: March 22, 2020 1:12 PM
To: Scott Streiner; Liz Barker; Mark MacKeigan; Heather Smith; Mary Tobin Oates; Gerald Dickie
Subject: Statement
Attachments: Statement.docx

Hi Scott & Liz (and colleagues):

Thank you for the opportunity to comment. I have taken a look at this and have a few comments. A couple are for clarity, and one is a "communications" concern, but I have tried to respect the content and format that you and Liz have taken. Please feel free to ignore any or all of my comments – afterall, I will not be around to deal with the fall out from the current crisis when we finally turn the corner. And by not be around, I mean at the Agency rather than on the earth, I hope!

Beyond that, I was wondering about two things:

- What happened in the past with respect to large scale disruptions of air travel, as in 9/11 and the Iceland volcano in Europe. I have noted that in my comments, but was wondering if what we are saying now is consistent with that. I realize it does not have to be consistent and the current crisis is worse, but it might prove useful.
- I am wondering about the timing of this statement. Are we responding to questions from the airlines or the public – if so will be saying something like "in response to concerns/questions raised by the industry and the public… ." I just would want to be careful to not be looking to set a policy standard, which may appear more favourable to industry, without some context. You mention in your email that you have been discussing with other federal colleagues, so this may be a more coordinated federal response, so that may address that concern.

Hope this is helpful, no need to answer my questions, they are largely rhetorical.

Lenore

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. In addition, some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but have clauses that relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.

All these documents were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of mass cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger concerns and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance and have to find other ways of getting home should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues, because of circumstances largely beyond their control should not be expected to take steps that could put their very survival at risk.

While any specific situation~~s~~ brought before the CTA will be examined on its ~~their~~ merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate response ~~solution~~ could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits take the current situation fully into account, and do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

Commented [LD1]: Not sure what we mean by documents here; is it tariffs, or legislation referred to above, or both? I would probably broaden this to instead say: "The legislative framework that governs air travel is primarily designed to address relatively localized and short-term disruptions."

That said, I don't know what happened after 9/11(or, grant it, to a lesser extent), the Iceland volcano, but perhaps there is some experience on which to draw in terms of a broad scale disruption of air traffic. I think what will set this one apart will be the duration.

Commented [LD2]: Definitely would nix this language, as I can see individuals coming back to say that this is putting their personal survival at risk – not good optics. Maybe you could replace with:
… take steps that threaten their overall economic viability; or
… take steps that threaten their continued operations.

This is Exhibit "58" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Heather Smith
Sent: March 22, 2020 10:32 PM
To: Gerald Dickie; Scott Streiner; Mark MacKeigan; Mary Tobin Oates; Lenore Duff
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: RE: Draft statement

Hi all!

I agree with the comments that Mary, Mark and Lenore have already made on the draft text. I would also encourage you to look again at the last phrase of the statement "as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time". It is ambiguous about what "an unreasonably short period of time" would be, and in many provinces, consumer protection legislation does not allow vouchers and credits to have expiry dates. It seems to be injecting unnecessary questions or potential for media controversy where the Agency is trying to provide guidance and reassurance. I would delete that last thought altogether, or - if you have incorporated Lenore's suggested changes to that sentence re "taking the current circumstances fully into account", I suggest that you end the sentence there.

Cheers!

Heather

From: Gerald Dickie
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 10:04 PM
To: Scott Streiner ; Mark MacKeigan ; Heather Smith ; Mary Tobin Oates ; Lenore Duff
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: Re: Draft statement

No comments from me other than the letter is well timed and valuable to the reader. Its the right thing to do in terms of Crisis Management.

Gerry

Sent from my Bell Samsung device over Canada's largest network.

-------- Original message --------
From: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: 2020-03-22 11:24 AM (GMT-05:00)
To: Mark MacKeigan <Mark.MacKeigan@otc-cta.gc.ca>, Heather Smith <Heather.Smith@otc-cta.gc.ca>, Mary Tobin Oates <Mary.TobinOates@otc-cta.gc.ca>, Lenore Duff <Lenore.Duff@otc-cta.gc.ca>, Gerald Dickie <Gerald.Dickie@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Draft statement

Hi, Colleagues. I hope all of you and your family and friends remain healthy and are doing OK despite our current isolation in our homes.

As you know, there have been many questions about what (if any) entitlements passengers have, and what (if any) obligations carriers have, when flights are disrupted as a result of the COVD-19-related mass cancellations.

After some analysis, reflection, and discussion with other federal players, we're considering issuing a statement (draft attached) that acknowledges the current rule-set never really contemplated the present circumstances and indicates that vouchers/credits would be an appropriate way of protecting passengers from a total loss without pushing carriers closer towards insolvency.

Because this statement is a policy signal of sorts and could inform -- though of course, not fetter – future Agency decisions, Liz and I wanted to share it with all Members. We're looking at releasing it as early as tomorrow, so could you please let us know by 2 pm if you concur with it, and whether you have any questions or comments?

Many thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

This is Exhibit "59" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amanda Hamelin

From: Liz Barker
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 6:42 PM
To: Scott Streiner; +_EC
Subject: RE: Revised statement

This looks good Scott.
Liz

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March-22-20 2:57 PM
To: +_EC
Subject: Revised statement

Hi, all. The attached version reflects feedback from Members. Please let me know this afternoon if you have any additional comments.

Valérie, let's have the secretariat ready to translate the statement and a s.64 decision tomorrow morning.

Thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

This is Exhibit "60" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amanda Hamelin

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 4:42 PM
To: Lenore Duff; Liz Barker; Mark MacKeigan; Heather Smith; Mary Tobin Oates; Gerald Dickie
Subject: RE: Statement

Thanks for the quick replies. Most of the suggestions have been incorporated. I'll explain more during our call on Tuesday.

S

-------- Original message --------
From: Lenore Duff
Date: 2020-03-22 1:11 p.m. (GMT-05:00)
To: Scott Streiner , Liz Barker , Mark MacKeigan , Heather Smith , Mary Tobin Oates , Gerald Dickie
Subject: Statement

Hi Scott & Liz (and colleagues):
Thank you for the opportunity to comment. I have taken a look at this and have a few comments. A couple are for clarity, and one is a "communications" concern, but I have tried to respect the content and format that you and Liz have taken. Please feel free to ignore any or all of my comments – afterall, I will not be around to deal with the fall out from the current crisis when we finally turn the corner. And by not be around, I mean at the Agency rather than on the earth, I hope!
Beyond that, I was wondering about two things:

- What happened in the past with respect to large scale disruptions of air travel, as in 9/11 and the Iceland volcano in Europe. I have noted that in my comments, but was wondering if what we are saying now is consistent with that. I realize it does not have to be consistent and the current crisis is worse, but it might prove useful.
- I am wondering about the timing of this statement. Are we responding to questions from the airlines or the public – if so will be saying something like "in response to concerns/questions raised by the industry and the public… ." I just would want to be careful to not be looking to set a policy standard, which may appear more favourable to industry, without some context. You mention in your email that you have been discussing with other federal colleagues, so this may be a more coordinated federal response, so that may address that concern.

Hope this is helpful, no need to answer my questions, they are largely rhetorical.
Lenore

This is Exhibit "61" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Nadine Landry

From: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 12:40 PM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

thanks

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 12:31 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

At this point, I've not received confirmation of what the timing will be.

> From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
> Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 12:28 PM
> To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
>
> Just out of my personal curiosity, do you know why it is delayed?
>
> From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
> Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 12:25 PM
> To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
> Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
>
> Hi Vincent,
> I anticipate it will be in the next day or two, but I've not received confirmation.
>
> > From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
> > Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 12:07 PM
> > To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
> >
> > Hi Cait – do you know when the Agency will be issuing this statement?
> >
> > Thanks
> >
> > From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
> > Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 11:04 AM
> > To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
> > Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
> >
> > Hi Vincent,
> > This statement indicates what the CTA views as appropriate given this situation – an approach that would ensure passengers aren't totally out of pocket while taking into account concerns from airlines.

The statement indicates that the CTA would consider vouchers acceptable "refunds" for those airlines that do require reimbursement in their tariff.

The statement does not force other airlines – whose tariffs do not require reimbursement in force majeure situations – to provide passengers with vouchers or credits. It indicates what we view as a good practice that would help make passengers whole. It's not our intention to take enforcement actions against one of these airlines if this practice is not followed, in alignment with their tariff.

If a complaint were brought forward to the CTA, it would be assessed on its own merits, of course.

Happy to discuss further,
Cait

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 10:20 AM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

Would your approach force in any way carriers that do not have refunds specified in their tariff to start refunding or their current tariff still apply?

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 10:15 AM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

Hi Vincent,
I understand there is a plan to release a statement indicating that, generally speaking, for cancelled flights, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. This was discussed between the Chair, the DM and the Minister's Chief of Staff and Marcia spoke with your ADM over the weekend as well.

It has been noted, though, that some airlines may not wish to provide vouchers, if their tariffs do not have any reimbursement requirement for force majeure situations.

Let me know if you'd like to discuss further.

Cait

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 10:02 AM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

Hi Cait – I am on a Min/DM call and I'm sure the question will come up. Any insight you can provide quickly?

Thanks

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 2:22 PM
To: 'Caitlin Hurcomb' <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: CTA announcement tomorrow

Hi Cait - I was just on a conference call with Lawrence, our ADM, where he briefed us on an announcement the Agency would do tomorrow regarding the refund and voucher issue.

He understood, based on a conversation with Marcia, that the measure you would announce may have an adverse impact on the larger carriers like AC or WestJet.

We are not entirely sure we understand this. Can you explain?

Feel free to call me if easier 343-996-9858

Thanks!

Sent from my BlackBerry 10 smartphone on the Rogers network.

This is Exhibit "62" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Our Deputy Minister

696

From: Transport Canada

Michael Keenan

Deputy Minister

Transport Canada

697

Michael Keenan was appointed Deputy Minister of Transport on March 14, 2016.

Michael has extensive experience in management, engagement, economic analysis and policy development in the Government of Canada.

Before joining Transport Canada, he served as Associate Deputy Minister at Natural Resources Canada.

Before that, at Environment Canada he was responsible for strategic policy development, economic analysis of environmental policy and regulatory initiatives, coordination of federal/provincial relations, and the Federal Sustainable Development Strategy. He also served as the Vice-President of Organizational Leadership at the Canada School of Public Service and as the Director General of Economic Analysis at Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada, where he also chaired of the OECD Committee of Agriculture.

Earlier in his public service career, Michael worked in central agencies, in the Priorities and Planning Secretariat at the Privy Council Office, in various positions at Finance Canada and at the British Columbia Ministry of Finance.

Michael holds a B.A. (Honours) from Saint Francis Xavier University and an M.A. in economics from Queen's University.

For information on COVID-19 updates, please visit Canada.ca/coronavirus.

Date modified:

2019-01-11

This is Exhibit "63" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Our Deputy Minister

700

From: Transport Canada

Arun Thangaraj
Deputy Minister
Transport Canada

Arun Thangaraj was appointed Deputy Minister of Transport on February 20, 2023.

Before joining Transport Canada, Arun was the Associate Deputy Minister at Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada, following two years as the Associate Deputy Minister at Transport Canada.

Before these roles, he was Assistant Deputy Minister and Chief Financial Officer at Global Affairs Canada and was the Deputy Chief Financial Officer at the former Canadian International Development Agency. He also brings experience and knowledge on transportation issues, from his time at the Canadian Transportation Agency from 2002 to 2011.

701

Arun received the Queen Diamond Jubilee Medal in 2013 for his contribution to the federal public service and to his community. He has served on various governance boards and is a sessional lecturer in the School of Public Administration at Carleton University.

Arun is a Chartered Professional Accountant and holds a Master of Arts in Public Administration from Carleton University, a Master of Business Administration from the University of Ottawa, and an Honours BA in Political Science from the University of Toronto.

Date modified:
2019-01-11

This is Exhibit "64" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

703

Marc Roy

Vice President, Public Affairs and Business Development- Sandstone Group

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

781 followers · 500+ connections

Join to follow

Sandstone Group

Personal Website

About

Sandstone Group, based in Ottawa, specializes in providing strategic advice to corporate executives in matters of public affairs, government relations, crisis communications and issues management, procurement, public policy, and on legislation before Parliament.

We specialize in helping our clients succeed on what might be viewed as difficult files by providing effective, efficient and winning strategies.

704

Experience

Vice President, Public Affairs and Business Development
Sandstone Group

Mar 2022 - Present · 9 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Transport Canada - Transports Canada
5 years 4 months

Chief Of Staff
Jun 2018 - Feb 2021 · 2 years 9 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Chief of Staff to the Minister of Transport Marc Garneau

Director Of Communications
Nov 2015 - Jun 2018 · 2 years 8 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Director of Communications to Minister of Transport Marc Garneau

Director Of Communications
Senate of Canada | Sénat du Canada

Aug 2006 - Oct 2015 · 9 years 3 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Director of Communications to the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

Associate Director Of Communications
Office of the Prime Minister of Canada | Cabinet du premier ministre du Canada

Jul 2004 - Feb 2006 · 1 year 8 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Director Of Communications
Patrimoine canadien -- Canadian Heritage

705

Dec 2003 - Jun 2004 · 7 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Director of Communications to the Minister of Canadian Heritage

Director Of Communications

House of Commons of Canada Chambre des communes du Canada

Aug 1998 - Dec 2003 · 5 years 5 months

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Director Of Communications to the House of Commons Government House Leader

View Marc’s full profile

See who you know in common

Get introduced

Contact Marc directly

Join to view full profile

This is Exhibit "65" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Contact

www.linkedin.com/in/lawrence-hanson-7a1b6498 (LinkedIn)

Top Skills

Policy
Policy Analysis
Public Policy

Lawrence Hanson

Associate Deputy Minister at Environment and Climate Change Canada
Canada

Experience

Environment and Climate Change Canada
Associate Deputy Minister
November 2022 - Present (4 months)

Fisheries and Oceans Canada
Associate Deputy Minister
March 2021 - Present (2 years)

Government of Canada
Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy, Transport Canada
June 2017 - March 2021 (3 years 10 months)
Ottawa, Canada Area

Industry Canada
4 years

Assistant Deputy Minister, Science and Innovation
November 2014 - June 2017 (2 years 8 months)
Ottawa, Ontario

Assistant Deputy Minister, Spectrum, Information Technologies and Telecommunications
July 2013 - November 2014 (1 year 5 months)

Environment Canada
8 years 9 months

Director General, Strategic Policy
May 2006 - July 2013 (7 years 3 months)

Director, Policy Planning and Integraion
November 2004 - May 2006 (1 year 7 months)

Government of Canada
Director, Employment Policy, Human Resources Development Canada
May 2002 - November 2004 (2 years 7 months)

Education

The University of British Columbia

Master's degree, Political Science · (1991 - 1993)

University of Saskatchewan

Bachelor's Degree (Hons.), Political Studies · (1987 - 1991)

This is Exhibit "66" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Chaar, Pascale

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 4:54 PM
To: Stacey, Colin
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Oh – I did not since you emailed Marcia at the same time.

I'll do it now

From: Stacey, Colin
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 4:51 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

Thanks. Please let me know what you hear.

cs

Colin Stacey
Director General, Air Policy
Directeur général, Politique aérienne
Transport Canada / Transports Canada
T: 613-993-0054 / C 613-355-0749 / 1-888-675-6863

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 2:57 PM
To: Stacey, Colin <colin.stacey@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

I'll get in touch with Cait

From: Stacey, Colin
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 2:49 PM
To: Hanson, Lawrence <lawrence.hanson@tc.gc.ca>
Cc: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat

Lawrence:

Should we be reaching out to the Agency about this?

cs

Colin Stacey
Director General, Air Policy
Directeur général, Politique aérienne
Transport Canada / Transports Canada
T: 613-993-0054 / C 613-355-0749 / 1-888-675-6863

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 2:48 PM
To: Stacey, Colin <colin.stacey@tc.gc.ca>
Cc: Davis, Mark <mark.davis@tc.gc.ca>; Dawson, Dave <dave.dawson@tc.gc.ca>; Rioux, Marc <marc.rioux@tc.gc.ca>; Herdsman, Sophie <Sophie.Herdsman@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: From MinO: Air Transat

The APPRs requires cash refund unless the passenger agrees to an alternative method of payment (points, vouchers, etc…) and that its nominal value is at least equal to the cash refund

From: Stacey, Colin
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 2:02 PM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Cc: Davis, Mark <mark.davis@tc.gc.ca>; Dawson, Dave <dave.dawson@tc.gc.ca>; Rioux, Marc <marc.rioux@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: FW: From MinO: Air Transat

Vince:

Any thoughts on this? Do the APPRs require cash refunds?

Thanks,

cs

Colin Stacey
Director General, Air Policy
Directeur général, Politique aérienne
Transport Canada / Transports Canada
T: 613-993-0054 / C 613-355-0749 / 1-888-675-6863

From: Little, Jennifer
Sent: Wednesday, March 18, 2020 1:49 PM
To: Keenan, Michael <michael.keenan@tc.gc.ca>; Hanson, Lawrence <lawrence.hanson@tc.gc.ca>; Stacey, Colin <colin.stacey@tc.gc.ca>
Cc: Maheu, Caroline <Caroline.Maheu@tc.gc.ca>; Langlois, Alain <alain.langlois@tc.gc.ca>; Brosseau, Kevin <Kevin.Brosseau@tc.gc.ca>; McCrorie, Aaron <aaron.mccrorie@tc.gc.ca>; Phillips, Alyssa <alyssa.phillips@tc.gc.ca>; Arcand, Annie <annie.arcand@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: From MinO: Air Transat

MinO has let us know that Transat is telling them:

Air Transat will be sending a formal letter to the Minister for financial assistance. They provided no other details to us at this time.

Jennifer

This is Exhibit "67" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

VL

714

Millette, Vincent

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 11:10 AM
To: Stacey, Colin
Subject: FW: CTA announcement tomorrow

Categories: ATIP Retrieval Notice A-2020-00167BB, ATIP Retrieval Notice / A-2020-00091

See response below from the Agency. It doesn't seem that the announcement would impact carriers that do not currently refund (AC) – perhaps just make them look bad.

From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 11:04 AM
To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

Hi Vincent,
This statement indicates what the CTA views as appropriate given this situation – an approach that would ensure passengers aren't totally out of pocket while taking into account concerns from airlines. The statement indicates that the CTA would consider vouchers acceptable "refunds" for those airlines that do require reimbursement in their tariff.

The statement does not force other airlines – whose tariffs do not require reimbursement in force majeure situations – to provide passengers with vouchers or credits. It indicates what we view as a good practice that would help make passengers whole [redacted]

If a complaint were brought forward to the CTA, it would be assessed on its own merits, of course.

Happy to discuss further,
Cait

> From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
> Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 10:20 AM
> To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
>
> Would your approach force in any way carriers that do not have refunds specified in their tariff to start refunding or their current tariff still apply?
>
> From: Caitlin Hurcomb [mailto:Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca]
> Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 10:15 AM
> To: Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>
> Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow
>
> Hi Vincent,
> I understand there is a plan to release a statement indicating that, generally speaking, for cancelled flights, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. This was discussed between the Chair, the DM and the [redacted] and Marcia spoke with your ADM over the weekend as well.

It has been noted, though, that some airlines may not wish to provide vouchers, if their tariffs do not have any reimbursement requirement for force majeure situations.

Let me know if you'd like to discuss further.

Cait

From: Millette, Vincent [mailto:vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca]
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 10:02 AM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: CTA announcement tomorrow

Hi Cait – I am on a Min/DM call and I'm sure the question will come up. Any insight you can provide quickly?

Thanks

From: Millette, Vincent
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 2:22 PM
To: 'Caitlin Hurcomb' <Caitlin.Hurcomb@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: CTA announcement tomorrow

Hi Cait - I was just on a conference call with Lawrence, our ADM, where he briefed us on an announcement the Agency would do tomorrow regarding the refund and voucher issue.

[redacted]

We are not entirely sure we understand this. Can you explain?

Feel free to call me if easier 343-996-9858

Thanks!

Sent from my BlackBerry 10 smartphone on the Rogers network.

This is Exhibit "68" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

March 22, 2020

Transmission by e-mail
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca

Mr. Scott Streiner
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
Canadian Transportation Agency
15 Eddy Street, 17th Floor
Gatineau, Quebec J8X 4B3

RE: Request for further public clarification of air carrier obligations per the Air Passenger Protection Regulations ("APPR") in the context of the current extraordinary circumstances

Dear Mr. Streiner:

As you are aware, the global air transport and tourism industries are dealing with a wholly-unprecedented collapse in world travel demand, as well as with the resulting operational and financial calamity in terms of drastically cutting capacity and preserving liquidity in an attempt to prevent our businesses from failing and putting tens of thousands of Canadians out of work. Obviously, Transat A.T. and our subsidiary travel units, including Air Transat and Transat Holidays, have not been spared the brunt of this disaster.

Indeed, we have recently announced, as a result of borders closing, the suspension of all outbound travel sales on our flights and the imminent grounding of almost all of our fleet until April 30, 2020, except for the small remainder of our flights that are conducting emergency repatriation operations of Canadians abroad in coordination with the federal government. Furthermore, we are confronted to making extremely difficult decisions where an important number of employees will be put on leave until the situation stabilizes and until we can hopefully and eventually contemplate a return to some sense of normalcy in the future.

In the meantime, while our industry fights to survive, we urgently need the federal government and our oversight authorities such as the CTA to provide assistance, both in the form of financial support and relief in terms of the substantial easing of existing regulatory costs and burdens. I have already written to Ministers Garneau and Morneau with regards to the first objective, and I am now hereby addressing myself to you with respect to the second.

Please be assured that I appreciated the Agency's efforts on March 13, 2020 to provide much-needed clarification to both industry and consumers concerning the application and enforcement of certain provisions of the APPR in the context of the current extraordinary circumstances.

Transat A.T. inc.
Place du Parc
300, rue Léo-Pariseau, bureau 600
Montréal, Québec, Canada H2X 4C2

Téléphone : 514 987-1660
www.transat.com

However, we need more to be done on an urgent basis in order to establish proper certainty and support the industry's impact mitigation efforts to date.

Specifically, I hereby request that the Agency publicly and unequivocally recognize the uncontrollable nature of the crisis and that all changes to schedules and capacity reductions are measures needed to manage the devastating losses this crisis is causing. Quite simply, these changes are not within the control of air carriers and our regulator should be clear to this end, as well as for the purposes of the application of the APPR.

Furthermore, the limited scope of the exemption on March 13, 2020 is problematic as our personnel have almost no ability to provide alternative travel arrangements at this time given the above-mentioned folding of flight schedules. Consequently, and as additional support and relief, I hereby request the following:

- Clearly recognize that all delays, cancellations, and denied boarding occurring at this time of crisis are outside of Air Transat's control;

- Clarify that the uncontrollable nature of the crisis means that no refunds to passengers are required under the APPR. This is essential to avoid unnecessary confusion among consumers and to pre-empt a spike in the increase of complaints and lawsuits;

- Recognize the offering of travel voucher options in lieu of cash refunds as an acceptable means to address consumer requests for refunds which, in turn, would allow credit card companies and their processors to deny customer chargeback claims and thereafter cease otherwise resulting and destructive financial guarantee demands on air carrier merchants;

- Exempt airlines from the obligation to respond to compensation claims within 30 days;

- Exempt airlines from all obligations to provide alternate travel arrangements; and

- Ensure that all exemptions ordered by the Agency, including those found in Determination No. A-2020-42, are in effect until such time as the industry has fully recovered, which is expected to take longer than April 30, 2020, and at the very least, 90 days.

I would also like to take this opportunity to request a minimum one-year suspension of enforcement action and the levying of fines for non-compliance per the APPR and ATPDR. Again, we are not trying to conveniently avoid our obligations in normal circumstances, but rather to ensure that our reduced levels of human resources going forward are able to focus on actively managing the crisis and minimizing as much as possible disruptions to the system and our eventual efforts at recovery.

I wish to thank you in advance for your understanding and expeditious consideration of the present request. Also, please accept my best wishes for the continued health and well-being of yourself, your loved ones and your staff in these unimaginably difficult times.

Sincerely,

Jean-Marc Eustache
Chairman, President and
Chief Executive Officer

c.c. Hon. Marc Garneau, PC, MP – Minister of Transport
Marcia Jones, Chief Strategy Officer - CTA
Miled Hill, Office of the Hon. Marc Garneau, PC, MP
Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister of Transport (Policy)
Colin Stacey, Director General of Air Policy – Transport Canada
George Petsikas, Senior Director, Government and Industry Affairs – Transat A.T. Inc.

This is Exhibit "69" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 22, 2020 1:59 PM
To: +_EC
Subject: FW: Letter from Jean-Marc Eustache
Attachments: 20-03-22 Scott Streiner.pdf.DRF

Importance: High

Hi, all. Some of these items were covered in our discussion on Friday or the call I have with several of you this morning. Others weren't. We'll talk about all of them tomorrow.

S

From: Jean-Marc Eustache <Jean-Marc.Eustache@transat.com>
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 1:52 PM
To: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: mintc@tc.gc.ca; Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>; miled.hill@tc.gc.ca; lawrence.hanson@tc.gc.ca; colin.stacey@tc.gc.ca; George Petsikas <George.Petsikas@transat.com>; Jean-Marc Eustache <Jean-Marc.Eustache@transat.com>
Subject: Letter from Jean-Marc Eustache
Importance: High

Dear Mr. Streiner,

Please find enclosed a letter from Mr. Jean-Marc Eustache.

Best Regards,

Francine Giroux
Adjointe au président
Assistant to the President
T 514-987-1660, 4055

Transat A.T. inc.
300, rue Léo-Pariseau, bureau 600
Montréal (Québec) H2X 4C2

indiqué(s), sont confidentiels et peuvent contenir des renseignements privilégiés. Si vous n'êtes pas un destinataire indiqué, soyez avisé que tout examen, divulgation, copie, impression, reproduction, distribution, ou autre utilisation de ce message et de ses pièces jointes est strictement interdit. Si vous avez reçu ce message alors que vous n'êtes pas un destinataire désigné, veuillez en aviser immédiatement l'émetteur et détruire ce message et les pièces jointes.

Confidentiality Warning:
This message, its content and any attachments are intended only for the use of the intended recipient(s), are confidential, and may be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any review, retransmission, conversion to hard copy, copying, circulation or other use of this message and any attachments is strictly prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please notify the sender immediately by return e-mail, and delete this message and any attachments from your system.

March 22, 2020

Transmission by e-mail
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca

Mr. Scott Streiner
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
Canadian Transportation Agency
15 Eddy Street, 17th Floor
Gatineau, Quebec J8X 4B3

RE: Request for further public clarification of air carrier obligations per the Air Passenger Protection Regulations ("APPR") in the context of the current extraordinary circumstances

Dear Mr. Streiner:

As you are aware, the global air transport and tourism industries are dealing with a wholly-unprecedented collapse in world travel demand, as well as with the resulting operational and financial calamity in terms of drastically cutting capacity and preserving liquidity in an attempt to prevent our businesses from failing and putting tens of thousands of Canadians out of work. Obviously, Transat A.T. and our subsidiary travel units, including Air Transat and Transat Holidays, have not been spared the brunt of this disaster.

Indeed, we have recently announced, as a result of borders closing, the suspension of all outbound travel sales on our flights and the imminent grounding of almost all of our fleet until April 30, 2020, except for the small remainder of our flights that are conducting emergency repatriation operations of Canadians abroad in coordination with the federal government. Furthermore, we are confronted to making extremely difficult decisions where an important number of employees will be put on leave until the situation stabilizes and until we can hopefully and eventually contemplate a return to some sense of normalcy in the future.

In the meantime, while our industry fights to survive, we urgently need the federal government and our oversight authorities such as the CTA to provide assistance, both in the form of financial support and relief in terms of the substantial easing of existing regulatory costs and burdens. I have already written to Ministers Garneau and Morneau with regards to the first objective, and I am now hereby addressing myself to you with respect to the second.

Please be assured that I appreciated the Agency's efforts on March 13, 2020 to provide much-needed clarification to both industry and consumers concerning the application and enforcement of certain provisions of the APPR in the context of the current extraordinary circumstances.

Transat A.T. inc.
Place du Parc
300, rue Léo-Pariseau, bureau 600
Montréal, Québec, Canada H2X 4C2

Téléphone : 514 987-1660
www.transat.com

However, we need more to be done on an urgent basis in order to establish proper certainty and support the industry's impact mitigation efforts to date.

Specifically, I hereby request that the Agency publicly and unequivocally recognize the uncontrollable nature of the crisis and that all changes to schedules and capacity reductions are measures needed to manage the devastating losses this crisis is causing. Quite simply, these changes are not within the control of air carriers and our regulator should be clear to this end, as well as for the purposes of the application of the APPR.

Furthermore, the limited scope of the exemption on March 13, 2020 is problematic as our personnel have almost no ability to provide alternative travel arrangements at this time given the above-mentioned folding of flight schedules. Consequently, and as additional support and relief, I hereby request the following:

- Clearly recognize that all delays, cancellations, and denied boarding occurring at this time of crisis are outside of Air Transat's control;

- Clarify that the uncontrollable nature of the crisis means that no refunds to passengers are required under the APPR. This is essential to avoid unnecessary confusion among consumers and to pre-empt a spike in the increase of complaints and lawsuits;

- Recognize the offering of travel voucher options in lieu of cash refunds as an acceptable means to address consumer requests for refunds which, in turn, would allow credit card companies and their processors to deny customer chargeback claims and thereafter cease otherwise resulting and destructive financial guarantee demands on air carrier merchants;

- Exempt airlines from the obligation to respond to compensation claims within 30 days;

- Exempt airlines from all obligations to provide alternate travel arrangements; and

- Ensure that all exemptions ordered by the Agency, including those found in Determination No. A-2020-42, are in effect until such time as the industry has fully recovered, which is expected to take longer than April 30, 2020, and at the very least, 90 days.

I would also like to take this opportunity to request a minimum one-year suspension of enforcement action and the levying of fines for non-compliance per the APPR and ATPDR. Again, we are not trying to conveniently avoid our obligations in normal circumstances, but rather to ensure that our reduced levels of human resources going forward are able to focus on actively managing the crisis and minimizing as much as possible disruptions to the system and our eventual efforts at recovery.

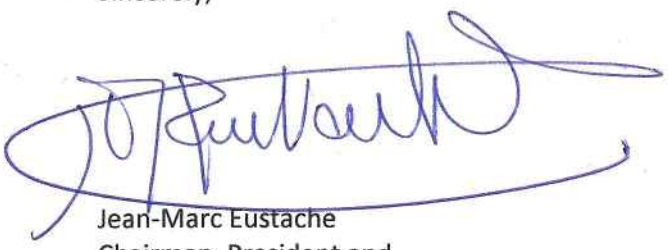
I wish to thank you in advance for your understanding and expeditious consideration of the present request. Also, please accept my best wishes for the continued health and well-being of yourself, your loved ones and your staff in these unimaginably difficult times.

Sincerely,



Jean-Marc Eustache
Chairman, President and
Chief Executive Officer

c.c. Hon. Marc Garneau, PC, MP – Minister of Transport
Marcia Jones, Chief Strategy Officer - CTA
Miled Hill, Office of the Hon. Marc Garneau, PC, MP
Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister of Transport (Policy)
Colin Stacey, Director General of Air Policy – Transport Canada
George Petsikas, Senior Director, Government and Industry Affairs – Transat A.T. Inc.

This is Exhibit "70" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Heather Craig-Peddie <HCraig-Peddie@acta.ca>
Sent: March 22, 2020 7:49 PM
To: Caitlin Hurcomb
Cc: Heather Craig-Peddie
Subject: CTA Suspension of air dispute resolution activities

Importance: High

Follow Up Flag: Follow up
Flag Status: Flagged

Hello Caitlin,
I do hope that you and your family are keeping well.
Caitlin, ACTA has received numerous responses from our Travel Agency Members concerned about the messaging that Gabor Lukas is reciting in main stream media. While the CTA has suspended all air dispute resolution activities, and airlines are not allowing for refunds to occur (only travel credits/vouchers), this puts tremendous pressure on travel agencies especially in the regulated provinces of BC, ON and QC. For example, Section 45 of the Ontario Travel Industry Act references that consumers must receive a refund if they do not get their product. The travel industry is on the brink. We anticipate 90% of travel agency businesses to temporarily close operations in the next 7 to 21 days. Recovery will be slow until consumers feel confident in traveling again. The industry will not recover if we have to adhere to these regulations.
Is the CTA in any position to assist the retail Canadian travel industry to work with the federal and provincial governments to quell Mr. Lukas's damaging messaging (difficult I know with freedom of speech), and/or assist with going to the banks and credit card companies for prevention of credit card chargebacks during this time. Globally, governments are putting measures in place to stem the tide of refunds. Below is an excerpt from Belgium law:
The Belgian decree is now official and will be published in the official gazette this afternoon (Google translate) :
Article 1. § 1. When a package travel contract as provided in Article 2, 3 °, of the Law of 21 November 2017 on the sale of package holidays, linked travel arrangements and travel services is canceled due to the corona crisis, either by the tour operator or by the traveler, the tour operator is entitled to provide him with a voucher worth the amount paid instead of a refund.
This voucher meets the following conditions:
1 ° the voucher represents the full value of the amount already paid by the traveler;
2 ° no costs will be charged to the traveler for the delivery of the voucher;
3 ° the voucher has a validity of at least one year;
4 ° the voucher explicitly states that it was delivered as a result of the corona crisis.
§ 2. The traveler cannot refuse the voucher that meets the conditions referred to in paragraph 1.
Art. 2. The travel organizers keep a permanent record of all issued vouchers, their value and their holder.
Art. 3. The insurance contract referred to in Article 3 of the Royal Decree of 29 May 2018 on the protection against insolvency in the sale of package holidays, linked travel arrangements and travel services covers the reimbursement of the vouchers referred to in Article 1.
Art. 4. This Decree shall enter into force on the day of its publication in the Belgian Official Gazette and shall cease to have effect three months after its entry into force.
I appreciate your urgent response to our serious concerns.
With kind regards,
Heather

This is Exhibit "71" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Nadine Landry

From: Liz Barker
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 9:52 AM
To: Marcia Jones; Sébastien Bergeron; Valérie Lagacé; Tom Oommen; Scott Streiner; +_EC
Subject: RE: Revised statement

I agree with Marcia. The EU is sticking with its regime, so refunds are available in all instances where the carrier cancels the flight for whatever reason. However, where the passenger cannot travel/cancels their travel, they are stuck with the rules attached to their ticket.
Liz

> From: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Sent: March-23-20 9:47 AM
> To: Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Valérie Lagacé <Valerie.Lagace@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Tom Oommen <Tom.Oommen@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>; +_EC <_EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Subject: RE: Revised statement
>
> Hi all, I wanted to share this info sheet prepared by my team on what the legal regimes are in the different jurisdictions (prior to COVID-19).
>
> I believe this situation has accentuated what we already noted, that the APPR framework "should" provide for refund in situations outside the carrier's control, or reimbursement, however, it does not currently. Based on all my discussions to date, I would be concerned about the Agency attempting to layer on new requirements. I think we need to proceed with some caution here when doing what we can to signal that passengers should be treated fairly, which is of course very important.
>
> Thanks,
> Marcia
>
> > From: Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 9:38 AM
> > To: Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Valérie Lagacé <Valerie.Lagace@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Tom Oommen <Tom.Oommen@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>; +_EC <_EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Subject: RE: Revised statement
> >
> > I think the EU has landed on something different:
> > https://ec.europa.eu/commission/presscorner/detail/en/ip_20_485
> >
> > > From: Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > > Sent: March-23-20 9:29 AM
> > > To: Valérie Lagacé <Valerie.Lagace@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Tom Oommen <Tom.Oommen@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>; +_EC <_EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > > Subject: RE: Revised statement

I agree with Valerie : my least favorite option is to say nothing and let air carriers issue useless vouchers.

Having said this, my preference would be to give these vouchers no expiration date or something like a 5 years expiration date. Allowing airlines to give vouchers instead of cash is already a big move. For reference, the EU, at the exception of Belgium, hasn't gone that far yet. So, in the interest of striking a balance, I would be tempted to give passengers more time to use these vouchers.

Seb

Sébastien Bergeron
Chef de cabinet | Bureau du président et premier dirigeant
Office des transports du Canada | Gouvernement du Canada
sebastien.bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca |Tél. 819-712-0827

Chief of Staff | Office of the Chair and Chief Executive Officer
Canadian Transportation Agency | Government of Canada
Sebastien.bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca | Tél. 819-712-0827

> De : Valérie Lagacé <Valerie.Lagace@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Envoyé : 23 mars 2020 09:23
> À : Tom Oommen <Tom.Oommen@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>; +_EC < EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Objet : RE: Revised statement
>
> I agree with Tom on this. my least favorite option is to say nothing and let air carriers issue useless vouchers.
>
> > De : Tom Oommen <Tom.Oommen@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Envoyé : 23 mars 2020 09:21
> > À : Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>; +_EC < EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Objet : RE: Revised statement
> >
> > In my view, given the nature of the statement, suggesting that 24 months could be considered reasonable, is a good approach. Tom
> >
> > Sent from my Bell Samsung device over Canada's largest network.
> >
> > -------- Original message --------
> > From: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Date: 2020-03-23 9:09 AM (GMT-05:00)
> > To: +_EC < EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> > Subject: RE: Revised statement
> >
> > Hi again, everyone. One issue that's been raised by a Member: should we retain language on expiry dates and if so, is the current text the best approach? While it comes across as balanced, it may be a bit vague and beg immediate questions on what we'd see as reasonable. Alternatives:

- Say vouchers/credits shouldn't have any expiry date. This would be consistent with the APPR and spread people travelling on vouchers over a longer period, but might be seen negatively by carriers who are trying to manage liabilities as losses pile up.
- Indicate more specifically what we think is reasonable – perhaps 24 months. This would provide clarity, but might seem a bit arbitrary in a highly fluid situation. Passengers might also object, given that the APPR prohibit expiry dates (albeit for different circumstances).
- Remain silent on the matter. This would avoid the complications noted above, but we know short expiry periods are being used by some carriers and that passengers find this frustrating and inconsistent with the spirit (if not the letter) of the APPR.

Please email any views on this question in the next hour or so.

Thanks,

S

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Sunday, March 22, 2020 2:57 PM
To: +_EC < EC@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Revised statement

Hi, all. The attached version reflects feedback from Members. Please let me know this afternoon if you have any additional comments.

Valérie, let's have the secretariat ready to translate the statement and a s.64 decision tomorrow morning.

Thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

This is Exhibit "72" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Press release | 18 March 2020 | Brussels

COVID-19: Commission provides guidance on EU passenger rights

In our efforts to mitigate the economic impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Commission has today published guidelines to ensure EU passenger rights are applied in a coherent manner across the EU.

National governments have introduced different measures, including travel restrictions and border controls. The purpose of these guidelines is to reassure passengers that their rights are protected.

Commissioner for Transport Adina Vălean said: "In light of the mass cancellations and delays passengers and transport operators face due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the Commission wants to provide legal certainty on how to apply EU passenger rights. In case of cancellations the transport provider must reimburse or re-route the passengers. If passengers themselves decide to cancel their journeys, reimbursement of the ticket depends on its type, and companies may offer vouchers for subsequent use. Today's guidelines will provide much-needed legal certainty on how to apply EU passenger rights in a coordinated manner across our Union. We continue to monitor the rapidly evolving situation, and, if need be, further steps will be taken."

This guidance will help passengers, the industry and national authorities in this unprecedented situation, with important passenger travel restrictions imposed by national governments and knock-on effects on transport services across the EU. By introducing clarity, the guidelines are also expected to help reduce costs for the transport sector, which is heavily affected by the outbreak. The guidelines cover the rights of passengers when travelling by air, rail, ship or bus/coach, maritime and inland waterways, as well as the corresponding obligations for carriers.

If passengers face the cancellation of their journey, for example, they can choose between reimbursement of the ticket price or re-routing to reach their final destination at a later stage. At the same time, the guidelines clarify that the current circumstances are "extraordinary", with the consequence that certain rights – such as compensation in case of flight cancellation less than two weeks from departure date – may not be invoked.

Background

The EU is the only area in the world where citizens are protected by a full set of passenger rights – whether they travel by air, rail, ship, bus or coach. Carriers have to offer reimbursement (refund of tickets) or re-routing to passengers whose service has been cancelled. Carriers must also offer care in terms of meals and accommodation. In respect of compensation, the rules differ between transport modes.

More Information

Interpretative Guidelines on EU passenger rights regulations in the context of the developing situation with Covid-19

EU Passenger Rights

Overview of national measures by country

EU response to Coronavirus outbreak 735

#coronavirus

Contacts for media

Stefan DE KEERSMAECKER

Phone

+32 2 298 46 80

Mail

stefan.de-keersmaecker@ec.europa.eu

Sara SOUMILLION

Phone

+32 2 296 70 94

Mail

sara.soumillion@ec.europa.eu

Clemence ROBIN

Phone

+32 2 295 25 09

Mail

clemence.robin@ec.europa.eu

If you do not work for a media organisation, you are welcome to contact the EU through Europe Direct in writing or by calling 00 800 6 7 8 9 10 11.

IP/20/485

Share this page:

Twitter	Facebook
LinkedIn	E-mail

736

This is Exhibit "73" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

EUROPEAN COMMISSION

Brussels, 18.3.2020
C(2020) 1830 final

COMMUNICATION FROM THE COMMISSION

Commission Notice
Interpretative Guidelines on EU passenger rights regulations in the context of the developing situation with Covid-19

COMMISSION NOTICE

Interpretative Guidelines on EU passenger rights regulations in the context of the developing situation with Covid-19

Passengers and the European transport industry are hit hard by the Covid-19 outbreak. Containment measures of authorities, such as travel restrictions, lock-downs and quarantine zones, imply that transport may be one of the most severely affected sectors of this pandemic. The situation is stressful for many passengers, whose travel arrangements have been cancelled and/or who do not wish or are not allowed to travel anymore.

The European Union (EU) is the only area in the world where citizens are protected by a full set of passenger rights, whether they travel by air, rail, bus and coach or ship.

Given the unprecedented situation Europe has been experiencing due to the Covid-19 outbreak, the European Commission believes it would be helpful to clarify in this context the rights of passengers when travelling by air, rail, bus and coach or ship, as well as the corresponding obligations for carriers.

1. PURPOSE

These interpretative guidelines aim at clarifying how certain provisions of the EU passenger rights legislation apply in the context of the Covid-19 outbreak, notably with respect to cancellations and delays.

The guidelines complement the guidelines previously published by the Commission[1] and are without prejudice to the interpretation of the Court of Justice.

The guidelines cover the following passenger rights legislation:

- Regulation (EC) No 261/2004 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 February 2004 establishing common rules on compensation and assistance to passengers in the event of denied boarding and of cancellation or long delay of flights, and repealing Regulation (EEC) No 295/91[2]
- Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 23 October 2007 on rail passengers' rights and obligations[3];
- Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 24 November 2010 concerning the rights of passengers when travelling by sea and inland waterway and amending Regulation (EC) No 2006/2004[4],

---

1 Commission Notice — Interpretative Guidelines on Regulation (EC) No 261/2004 of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing common rules on compensation and assistance to passengers in the event of denied boarding and of cancellation or long delay of flights and on Council Regulation (EC) No 2027/97 on air carrier liability in the event of accidents as amended by Regulation (EC) No 889/2002 of the European Parliament and of the Council, OJ C 214, 15.6.2016, p. 5.; Communication from the Commission — Interpretative Guidelines on Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 of the European Parliament and of the Council on rail passengers' rights and obligations, OJ C 220, 4.7.2015, p. 1.

2 OJ L 46, 17.2.2004, p. 1.

3 OJ L 315, 3.12.2007, p. 14.

4 OJ L 334, 17.12.2010, p. 1.

- Regulation (EU) No 181/2011 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 February 2011 concerning the rights of passengers in bus and coach transport and amending Regulation (EC) No 2006/2004[5].

These guidelines do not cover Directive (EU) 2015/2302 on package travel and linked travel arrangements. [6]

2. GUIDANCE ACROSS TRANSPORT MODES

2.1. Right to choose between reimbursement and rerouting

The four Regulations make specific provisions for this right in the case of cancellation or of certain delays.

As regards re-routing[7], the circumstances of the COVID-19 outbreak may have an incidence on the right to choose re-routing at the "earliest opportunity".[8] Carriers may find it impossible to re-route the passenger to the intended destination within a short period of time. Moreover, it may not be clear for some time when re-routing will become possible. This situation may for example arise where a Member State suspends flights or stops trains, buses, coaches or ships arriving from certain countries. Depending on the case, therefore, the "earliest opportunity" for re-routing may be considerably delayed and/or subject to considerable uncertainty. Reimbursement of the ticket price or a re-routing at a later stage "at the passenger's convenience" might therefore be preferable for the passenger. Details are set out further below for each transport mode.

2.2. Situations where passengers cannot travel or want to cancel a trip

The EU's passenger rights regulations do not address situations where passengers cannot travel or want to cancel a trip on their own initiative. Whether or not a passenger is reimbursed in such cases depends on the type of ticket (reimbursable, possibility to rebook) as specified in the carrier's terms & conditions.

It appears that various carriers are offering vouchers to passengers, who do not want to (or are not authorised to) travel any more as a result of the outbreak of Covid-19. Passengers can use these vouchers for another trip with the same carrier within a timeframe established by the carrier.

This situation has to be distinguished from the situation where the carrier cancels the journey and offers only a voucher instead of the choice between reimbursement and re-routing. If the carrier proposes a voucher, this offer cannot affect the passenger's right to opt for reimbursement instead.

---

5 OJ L 55 28.2.2011, p. 1.

6 Directive (EU) 2015/2302 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 25 November 2015 on package travel and linked travel arrangements, amending Regulation (EC) No 2006/2004 and Directive 2011/83/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council and repealing Council Directive 90/314/EEC, OJ L 326, 11.12.2015, p. 1–33.

7 Some instruments also refer in parallel to a "continuation of the journey".

8 Points (a) and (b) of Article 8(1) of Regulation (EC) No 261/2004; points (a) and (b) of Article 16 of Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007; points (a) and (b) of Article 18(1) of Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010; points (a) and (b) of Article 19(1) of Regulation (EU) No 181/2011.

2.3. Specific national rules in the context of the Covid-19 outbreak

In some cases specific national rules have been adopted in the context of the Covid-19 outbreak, which create the obligation for carriers to refund passengers or issue a voucher to passengers in case the passenger could not take a flight that has been operated.

Such national measures do not fall under the scope of the EU passenger rights regulations. They are not addressed in these guidelines, which deal only with the interpretation of the rules on passenger rights adopted by the Union.

3. AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS (REGULATION (EC) NO 261/2004)

3.1. Information to passengers

Apart from the rules regarding information on the rights available, Regulation (EC) No 261/2004 does not contain specific provisions on information on travel disruptions. However, rights to compensation in case of cancellation are linked to the carrier failing to give notice sufficiently in advance. This aspect is thus covered by the considerations below on rights to compensation.

3.2. Right to reimbursement or re-routing

In the case of a flight cancellation by the airlines (no matter what the cause is), Article 5 obliges the operating air carrier to offer the passengers the choice among:

a) reimbursement (refund);
b) re-routing at the earliest opportunity, or
c) re-routing at a later date at the passenger's convenience.

Regarding reimbursement, in cases where the passenger books the outbound flight and the return flight separately and the outbound flight is cancelled, the passenger is only entitled to reimbursement of the cancelled flight, i.e. here the outbound flight.

However, if the outbound flight and the return flight are part of the same booking, even if operated by different air carriers, passengers should be offered two options if the outbound flight is cancelled: to be reimbursed for the whole ticket (i.e. both flights) or to be re-routed on another flight for the outbound flight (Interpretative Guidelines, Point 4.2).

As regards re-routing, and as explained above, “the earliest opportunity” may under the circumstances of the COVID-19 outbreak imply considerable delay, and the same may apply to the availability of concrete information on such “opportunity” given the high level of uncertainty affecting air traffic.

The application of Article 5 of Regulation (EC) No 261/2004 may have to take into consideration these circumstances. However, at any rate:

First, passengers should be informed about delays and/or uncertainties linked to them choosing re-routing instead of reimbursement.

Second, should a passenger choose nonetheless re-routing at the earliest opportunity, the carrier should be considered to have fulfilled its information obligation towards the passenger if it communicated on its own initiative, as soon as possible and in good time, the flight available for rerouting.

3.3. Right to care

According to Article 9 of the Regulation, which provides all relevant details, passengers who are affected by a flight cancellation must also be offered care by the operating air carrier, free of charge. This consists of meals and refreshments in a reasonable relation to the waiting time; hotel accommodation if necessary, and transport to the place of accommodation. Moreover, airports are to provide assistance to disabled passengers and passengers with reduced mobility in accordance with Regulation 1107/2006[9].

It is worth recalling that when the passenger opts for reimbursement of the full cost of the ticket, the right to care ends. The same happens when the passenger chooses re-routing at a later date at the passenger's convenience (Article 5(1)(b) in conjunction with Article 8(1)(c)).

The right to care subsists only as long as passengers have to wait for a rerouting at the earliest convenience (Article 5(1)(b) in conjunction with Article 8(1)(b)).

The intention underlying the Regulation is that the needs of passengers waiting for their return flight or re-routing are adequately addressed. The extent of adequate care will have to be assessed on a case-by-case basis, taking into account the needs of passengers in the circumstances and the principle of proportionality (i.e.: according to the waiting time). The price paid for the ticket or the length of the inconvenience suffered should not interfere with the right to care (Interpretative Guidelines Point 4.3.2).

According to the Regulation, the air carrier is obliged to fulfil the obligation of care even when the cancellation of a flight is caused by extraordinary circumstances, that is to say circumstances that could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.

The Regulation contains nothing that recognises a separate category of 'particularly extraordinary' events, beyond the 'extraordinary circumstances' referred to in Article 5(3) of the Regulation. The air carrier is therefore not exempted from all of its obligations, including those under Article 9 of the Regulation, even during a long period. Passengers are especially vulnerable in such circumstances and events.[10] In exceptional events, the intention of the Regulation is to ensure that adequate care is provided in particular to passengers waiting for re-routing under Article 8(1)(b) of the Regulation.

3.4. Right to compensation

Regulation 261/2004 also provides for fixed sum compensations in some circumstances. This does not apply to cancellations made more than 14 days in advance or where the cancellation is caused by 'extraordinary circumstances' that could not have been avoided

---

9 Regulation (EC) No 1107/2006 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 July 2006 concerning the rights of disabled persons and persons with reduced mobility when travelling by air, OJ L 204, 26.7.2006, p. 1–9.

10 Case C-12/11, McDonagh, ECLI:EU:C:2013:43, paragraph 30 and Point 4.3.3. of the Interpretative Guidelines.

even if all reasonable measures had been taken. For details, see Article 5(1) and Article 7 of the Regulation.

The Commission considers that, where public authorities take measures intended to contain the Covid-19 pandemic, such measures are by their nature and origin not inherent in the normal exercise of the activity of carriers and are outside their actual control.

Article 5(3) waives the right to compensation on condition that the cancellation in question "is caused" by extraordinary circumstances, which could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.

This condition should be considered fulfilled, where public authorities either outright prohibit certain flights or ban the movement of persons in a manner that excludes, de facto, the flight in question to be operated.

This condition may also be fulfilled, where the flight cancellation occurs in circumstances where the corresponding movement of persons is not entirely prohibited, but limited to persons benefitting from derogations (for example nationals or residents of the state concerned).

Where no such person would take a given flight, the latter would remain empty if not cancelled. In such situations, it may be legitimate for a carrier not to wait until very late, but to cancel the flight in good time (and even without being certain about the rights of the various passengers to travel at all), in order for appropriate organisational measures to be taken, including in terms of care for passengers owed by the carrier. In cases of the kind, and depending on the circumstances, a cancellation may still be viewed as "caused" by the measure taken by the public authorities. Again, depending on the circumstances, this may also be the case in respect of flights in the direction opposite to the flights directly concerned by the ban on the movement of persons.

Where the airline decides to cancel a flight and shows that this decision was justified on grounds of protecting the health of the crew, such cancellation should also be considered as "caused" by extraordinary circumstances.

The above considerations are not and cannot be exhaustive in that other specific circumstances in relation to Covid-19 may also fall under the ambit of Article 5(3).

4. RAIL PASSENGER RIGHTS (REGULATION (EC) NO 1371/2007)

4.1. Right to be informed

Before selling a ticket, railway undertakings and ticket vendors must provide passengers, upon request, with pre-journey information - including information on any activities likely to disrupt or delay services. Railway undertakings must also provide passengers with information during the journey – including information on delays, security and safety issues. Moreover, where railway undertakings and competent authorities, responsible for public service railway contracts, decide to discontinue a rail service, they must make the decision public and before it is implemented. Details of the right to travel information are set out in Article 8 and Annex II of Regulation (EC) No 1371/2011.

4.2. Right to reimbursement or continuation of the journey / re-routing

Article 16 of Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 sets out the rights in respect of this matter. In summary the following can be retained. Where it can reasonably be expected that the delay in the arrival at the final destination will be more than 60 minutes, passengers have the choice between reimbursement of the ticket price or to continue the journey or re-routing. In particular:

a) the right to the reimbursement concerns the cost of the ticket for the part or parts of the journey not made and for the parts of the journey already made if the journey is no longer serving the purpose for which the passenger was planning it, together with (where relevant) a return service to the first point of departure;
b) continuation of the journey or re-routing have to take place under comparable transport conditions. At the passenger's choice, they have to take place either at the earliest opportunity or at another point in time at his/her convenience.

As regards continuation of the journey/ re-routing, and as explained above, "the earliest opportunity" may under the circumstances of the COVID-19 outbreak imply considerable delay, and the same may apply to the availability of concrete information on such "opportunity" given the high level of uncertainty affecting rail traffic.

First, passengers should be informed about delays and/or uncertainties when offering them the choice between the two possibilities.

Second, should a passenger choose nonetheless continuation of the journey or re-routing at the earliest opportunity, the carrier should be considered to have fulfilled its information obligation towards the passenger if it communicated on its own initiative, as soon as possible and in good time, the train available for continuation or rerouting.

4.3. Right to assistance

In the case of a delay in arrival or departure, passengers have the right to receive information on the situation and the estimated departure and arrival time as soon as this information becomes available. In case of a delay exceeding 60 minutes, they also have the right to receive meals and refreshments within reasonable limits; accommodation where a stay of one or more nights becomes necessary where and when physically possible; transport to the railway station or to the alternative departure point or to the final destination, where and when physically possible, if the train is blocked on the track. Details are set out in Article 18(2) of Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007.

According to the Regulation, the railway undertaking is obliged to fulfil the above obligations even when the cancellation of a train is caused by circumstances such those linked to Covid-19. The Regulation contains nothing that would allow the conclusion that, under particular circumstances, the railway undertaking is exempted from its obligation to provide assistance in accordance with Article 18(2) of Regulation (EC), which may be required even during a long period where relevant. The intention of the Regulation is to ensure that adequate assistance is provided in particular to passengers waiting for re-routing at the earliest opportunity under Article 16. Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 provides that assistance to persons with disabilities and persons with reduced mobility must be adapted to the needs of those passengers, including as regards the information referred to above.

4.4. Right to compensation

Where passengers have not opted for reimbursement but ask for the continuation of the journey or re-routing, passengers have also the right to compensation. For delays of 60 to 119 minutes the compensation amounts to 25% of the ticket price, whereas for delays of 120 minutes and more the compensation is 50% of the ticket price. Details are set out in Article 17 of Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007,

Unlike in other transport modes, the existence of extraordinary circumstances, if any, does not affect the right to compensation in cases of delays (including those entailed by cancellations). [11]

5. BUS PASSENGER RIGHTS (REGULATION (EU) NO 181/2011)[12]

5.1. Right to be informed

According to Article 24 of the Regulation, carriers and bodies that manage terminals must, within their respective areas of competence, provide passengers with adequate information throughout their travel. Article 20 of the Regulation contains detailed provisions regarding information to be provided in case of cancellation or delay in departure.

5.2. Right to continuation of the journey / re-routing or reimbursement

In case of regular bus services with a scheduled distance of 250 km or more, Regulation (EU) No 181/2011 provides for rerouting or reimbursement in certain cases as specified in Article 19. Thus, notably, where a carrier reasonably expects the departure of a regular service from a terminal to be cancelled or delayed for more than 120 minutes, passengers have the right to choose between continuation or re-routing to the final destination at no additional cost at the earliest opportunity under comparable conditions or reimbursement of the full ticket price. This can be combined, where relevant, with a free of charge return service at the earliest opportunity to the first point of departure set out in the transport contract. The same choice is available to the passenger if the departure is cancelled or delayed from a bus stop.

As regards continuation of the journey/ re-routing, and as explained above, “the earliest opportunity” may under the circumstances of the COVID-19 outbreak imply considerable delay, and the same may apply to the availability of concrete information on such “opportunity” given the high level of uncertainty affecting bus and coach traffic.

First, passengers should be informed about delays and/or uncertainties when offering them the choice between continuation of the journey / re-routing and reimbursement.

---

11 See Case C-509/11 ÖBB Personenverkehr ECLI:EU:C:2013:613.

12 The rights to re-routing or reimbursement (point 4.2) and the right to care (point 4.3) and the right to compensation (point 4.4) does not apply to domestic services in Croatia, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Portugal, Slovakia, Slovenia, and to services with a significant part of the service (including at least one scheduled stop) operated outside the European Union in case of Croatia, Estonia, Greece, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Slovakia and Slovenia.

Second, should a passenger choose nonetheless re-routing at the earliest opportunity, the carrier should be considered to have fulfilled its information obligation towards the passenger if it communicated on its own initiative, as soon as possible and in good time, the service available for continuation or rerouting.

5.3. Right to assistance

Rights to assistance are set out in Article 21 of Regulation (EU) No 181/2011, and the following can be retained in summary. Where the departure of a long-distance service with a scheduled duration of more than 3 hours is cancelled or delayed for more than 90 minutes, passengers are entitled to snacks, meals or refreshments, in reasonable relation to the waiting time, provided they are available on the bus or in the terminal or can reasonably be supplied. Accommodation needs to be provided if passengers have to stay overnight – for up to 2 nights, at a maximum rate of €80 per night – and transport to their accommodation and return to the terminal.

This Regulation contains nothing that would allow the conclusion that the carrier can be exempted from all its obligations, including those for assistance. The intention of the Regulation is to ensure that adequate care is provided in particular to passengers waiting for re-routing under Article 21.

5.4. Right to compensation

In the case of bus services, the passenger has a right to compensation under the conditions set out in Article 19(2) of Regulation (EC) No 181/2011. It amounts to 50 % of the ticket price in case the service is cancelled, but is available only if the carrier fails to offer the passenger the choice between reimbursement and rerouting.

6. MARITIME AND INLAND WATERWAY PASSENGER RIGHTS (REGULATION (EU) NO 1177/2010)

6.1. Right to be informed

As further specified in detail in Article 16 of Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010, passengers must be informed of the situation as soon as possible and in any event not later than 30 minutes after the scheduled time of departure and of the estimated departure time and estimated arrival time as soon as that information is available.

6.2. Right to re-routing or reimbursement

Where a carrier reasonably expects a passenger service to be cancelled or delayed in departure from a port terminal for more than 90 minutes, the carrier must offer passengers a choice between two possibilities:

- re-routing to the final destination under comparable conditions, as set out in the transport contract, at the earliest opportunity and at no additional cost or
- reimbursement of the ticket price and, where relevant, a return service free of charge to the first point of departure, as set out in the transport contract, at the earliest opportunity.

Details are set out in Article 18 of Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010.

As regards continuation of the journey/ re-routing, and as explained above, "the earliest opportunity" may under the circumstances of the COVID-19 outbreak imply considerable delay, and the same may apply to the availability of concrete information on such "opportunity" given the high level of uncertainty affecting sea and inland waterway traffic.

First, passengers should be informed about delays and/or uncertainties when offering them the choice between re-routing and reimbursement.

Second, should a passenger choose nonetheless re-routing at the earliest opportunity, the carrier should be considered to have fulfilled its information obligation towards the passenger if it communicated on its own initiative, as soon as possible and in good time, the service available for rerouting.

The provisions on re-routing and reimbursement as well as compensation do not apply to cruise ships (Article 2 (1)(c)).

6.3. Right to assistance

Under the conditions set out in Article 17 of Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010, passengers are entitled to 1) assistance in the form of snacks, meals or refreshments, in proportion to the waiting time, provided they are available or can reasonably be supplied and 2) accommodation if passengers where a stay of one or more nights or a stay additional to that intended by the passenger becomes necessary – for up to 3 nights, at a maximum rate of €80 per night – and 3) transport to the accommodation and return to the terminal.

6.4. Right to compensation

Without losing the right to transport, passengers may request compensation from the carrier if they are facing a delay in arrival at the final destination as set out in the transport contract. The minimum level of compensation must be 25 % of the ticket price for varying delays, in function of the scheduled duration of the journey. If the delay exceeds double that duration, the compensation must be 50 % of the ticket price. Details are set out in Article 19 of Regulatin (EU) No 1177/2010.

Article 20(4) of Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010 provides for certain exemptions from the right to compensation, among other things, on account of extraordinary circumstances.

The Commission considers that, where public authorities take measures intended to contain the Covid-19 pandemic, such measures are by their nature and origin not inherent in the normal exercise of the activity of carriers and are outside their actual control.

Article 20(4) waives the right to compensation on condition that the cancellation in question "is caused" by extraordinary circumstances, hindering the performance of the passenger service which could not have been avoided even if all reasonable measures had been taken.

This condition should be considered fulfilled, where public authorities either outright prohibit certain transport services or ban the movement of persons in a manner that excludes, de facto, the transport service in question to be operated.

This condition may also be fulfilled, where the cancellation occurs in circumstances where the corresponding movement of persons is not entirely prohibited, but limited to persons benefitting from derogations (for example nationals or residents of the state concerned).

Where no such person would travel, the vessel or ship would remain empty if the service is not cancelled. In such situations, it may be legitimate for a carrier not to wait until very late, but to cancel the transport service in good time (and even without being certain about the rights of the various passengers to travel at all), in order for appropriate organisational measures to be taken, including in terms of care for passengers owed by the carrier. In cases of the kind, and depending on the circumstances, a cancellation may still be viewed as "caused" by the measure taken by the public authorities. Again, depending on the circumstances, this may also be the case in respect of transport services in the direction opposite to the services directly concerned by the ban on the movement of persons.

Where the carrier decides to cancel a transport service and shows that this decision was justified on grounds of protecting the health of the crew, such cancellation should also be considered as "caused" by extraordinary circumstances.

The above considerations are not and cannot be exhaustive in that other specific circumstances in relation to Covid-19 may also fall under the ambit of Article 20(4).

This is Exhibit "74" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amanda Hamelin

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 1:26 PM
To: +_EC
Subject: FW: Letter from Air Canada
Attachments: L_Suspension of APPR and ATPDR.pdf

For discussion during our 2:30 call.

S

From: Nathalie Ozumit
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 1:24 PM
To: Scott Streiner
Cc: Minister Marc Garneau (mintc@tc.gc.ca) ; Ferio Pugliese ; David Shapiro
Subject: Letter from Air Canada

SENT ON BEHALF OF DAVID J. SHAPIRO, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT, INTERNATIONAL & REGULATORY AFFAIRS & CHIEF LEGAL OFFICER

Dear Mr. Streiner,

Please see attached letter.

Kind regards,

AIR CANADA

Nathalie Ozumit
Adjointe de direction – Bureau du vice-président général – Affaires internationales et réglementaires et chef des Affaires juridiques
Executive Assistant – Office of the Executive Vice President, International and Regulatory Affairs and Chief Legal Officer

T 514 422-6104 | F 514 422-4147
nathalie.ozumit@aircanada.ca

AIR CANADA

751

David J. Shapiro
Executive Vice President, International & Regulatory Affairs & Chief Legal Officer
Vice-président général, Affaires internationales et réglementaires et chef des affaires juridiques

Centre Air Canada 1270
P.O. Box 7000, YUL 1276
Dorval, Québec, Canada H4Y 1J2

Direct Line: 514 422 5834
Facsimile: 514 422 0285
Email: david.shapiro@aircanada.ca

March 23, 2020

Private and Confidential
By E-mail

Mr. Scott Streiner
Office of the CEO
Canadian Transportation Agency
15 Eddy Street, 17th Floor
Gatineau, Quebec J8X 4B3

RE: Request for Exemption from the Air Passenger Protection Regulations ("APPR"), and from the Entry into Force of Certain Provisions of the Accessible Transportation for Persons with Disabilities Regulations ("ATPDR")

Dear Mr. Streiner,

I regret that I have to be writing with the degree of urgency that I am to request immediate relief from the ongoing application of APPR, and the imminent entry into force of ATPDR on June 25, 2020, as a result of the devastating impact that the COVID-19 crisis is having on airlines. These concerns were raised during the Agency's technical briefing on March 19th, 2020, and we were invited to put them in writing.

1- UNPRECEDENTED IMPACT ON AIRLINES

As you are well aware, with the world's borders being progressively shut down and a growing proportion of the world's population self-isolating, working from home and practising social distancing, the global airline industry is on the front line and has by and large come to a standstill. The COVID-19 crisis has already had a devastating impact on airline revenues, yet it seems that we may be only in the early stages of the deterioration. Like all airlines, Air Canada has had to implement drastic and unprecedented cost cutting measures, rapidly suspending the majority of its flights, internationally and transborder, and significantly reducing its domestic network as a direct result of the crisis.

2- APPR

Inadequacy of Determination No. A-2020-42

While the Agency's initiative[1] to exempt carriers from certain, specified provisions of APPR is appreciated, it stops well short of what is required to address the magnitude of the crisis we are confronting or to contribute to providing the real and tangible relief that airlines desperately need.

[1] Determination No. A-2020-42 of March 13, 2020.

First, by not clearly and unequivocally recognising that the scope and magnitude of the crisis is deeply affecting virtually everything[2] and that no airline operational decision is being made in isolation of it, without regard and responding to it, or without a heavy impact from it, the Agency fails to adequately account for the reality that all changes to schedules are measures needed to manage the devastating and overriding impact of the crisis and are a direct result of the crisis, as are all operational decisions impacting customers. In this environment, which has never been witnessed before and could not have been anticipated, and still cannot be planned for, virtually every operational occurrence addressed by APPR is driven by the crisis and therefore not within carriers' control.

It follows, therefore, that the narrow scope of the exemption (limited as it is to providing relief for situations within carriers' control) is equally problematic. Our staff has almost no ability to provide alternative travel arrangements, and our Customer Relations team do not have the capacity to respond to compensation requests within 30 days[3].

In these circumstances, compliance with APPR is not only impractical and unrealistic, but is, for the most part, impossible.

Request

Therefore, pursuant to s. 80 of the Canada Transportation Act ("Act"), we request that the Agency declare a complete suspension of the application of all obligations under APPR until further notice.

If this most sensible measure in these unprecedented circumstances is, for whatever reason, deemed not feasible, we request that the Agency at a minimum:

- Clearly recognize that all delays, cancellations, and denied boarding occurring at this time of crisis are outside of airlines' control, with no exceptions;

- Clarify that the uncontrollable nature of the crisis means that no refunds to passengers are required under APPR[4]. While this may be clear to the Agency and in Air Canada's tariffs, it is increasingly evident that it is not clear to the general public. Failure to clarify this will inevitably lead to a sharp and unnecessary increase in complaints and meritless lawsuits;

- Exempt airlines from the obligation to respond to compensation claims within 30 days[5];

- Exempt airlines from all obligations to provide alternate travel arrangements; and

- Ensure that all exemptions ordered by the Agency, including those found in Determination No. A-2020-42, are in effect until such time as the industry has fully recovered, which is, by all accounts, expected to take significantly longer than April 30, 2020, and at the very least, 90 days.

[2] Surprisingly, the Agency stated that whether "decisions that are influenced by the pandemic, including decisions to cancel and consolidate flights due to dropping passenger volumes (…) are within or outside carrier control would have to be assessed on a case-by-case basis". Given the extent of the pandemic and its impact on the industry, this could potentially result in literally millions of cases for the CTA and small claims courts to assess.
[3] As required under section 19(4) APPR.
[4] While para. 7 of Determination No. A-2020-42 does read that only rebooking obligations apply to situations outside carrier's control, a clear statement that no refunds apply would be extremely helpful in light of the current state of confusion in the public sphere.
[5] Section 19(4) APPR.

3- ATPDR

Air Canada has deployed its best efforts and made very significant progress over the intervening months to ensure compliance with ATPDR by June 25, 2020 while also managing many other competing regulatory initiatives[6] and operational urgencies such as the unforeseen and abrupt grounding of the Boeing 737 MAX (which as real and intense as it was, now pales as a crisis in comparison). Air Canada's resources, which have been stretched by these challenges for some time, are now stretched beyond any imaginable limits in managing the present crisis[7], so that work on necessary ATPDR changes is now, inevitably and definitively severely delayed through no fault of ours. Therefore, we request that the compliance deadlines be suspended (or, otherwise, at least, extended significantly).

Air Canada estimates that it is 95% compliant with the June 25, 2020 requirements. However, the cost and effort needed to comply with the remaining 5% is significant: it includes in-flight entertainment upgrades for systems that are already being phased out in the next few years, as well as training requirements that have such broad impact on front-line staff that costly external consultant support is required.

An essential precursor to adjusting and delivering our training material is the review of a number of policies, procedures and processes throughout many departments. To say that devoting time and resources now to this endeavor is wholly unrealistic is an understatement: in no realm of realty are any of our key resources responsible for these changes available to do so at this time of crisis. That would entail taking them away from managing the current crisis, which simply is not an option. So, irrespective of the cost of training, the initial design of training material is now inevitably significantly delayed.

Even if training were designed and ready to be delivered, the current environment is not one conducive to learning and absorbing new regulations and complex requirements. The purpose of ATPDR is to accomplish a culture change and commitment to accessibility. True change management requires a mindset shift and takes time, energy, focus and investment to achieve. All of these are, understandably, now in short supply.

Request

We therefore request, pursuant to s. 170(3) or 170(4) of the Act, that the Agency extend the deadline for compliance with ATPDR until further notice, or at the very least by 90 days.

Air Canada remains committed to fully meeting the obligations of ATPDR once the industry has firmly recovered from the COVID-19 crisis. Even during the crisis, Air Canada will attempt to continue its implementation efforts to the extent practicable in the circumstances. In compliance with the test set out in s. 170(4), we will take the necessary measures to comply as soon as we are able.

If for any reason a full suspension is deemed not feasible, even appreciating that we may not fully be in a position to comply, we request that the Agency indefinitely suspend all initiatives that require IT development, sizable investment, new and complex procedures, and significant change management. These are: allowing reservations to be made by email,[8] training,[9] accommodating manual folding

[6] Such initiatives include the Regulations Amending the Transportation Information Regulations (Air Travel Performance Data Collection), the Regulations Amending the Canadian Aviation Regulations (Parts I, VI and VII — Flight Crew Member Hours of Work and Rest Periods), and Air Passenger Protection Regulations.

[7] Including personnel from the MEDA Desk, AC Medical, Airports, Call Centres, eCommerce, In-Flight Services, System Operations Control, Customer Relations, Operations Excellence, Passenger Movement, Customer Journey Management and Legal

[8] S. 7-8 ATPDR.

[9] S. 15-23 ATPDR.

wheelchairs on board,[10] accessible IFE,[11] written confirmation of services[12], and retention of medical information or documents.[13]

For the many of the same reasons cited above, we also request an equivalent extension of the deadline to provide comments on the draft guidance materials on ATPDR, and that all work on Phase II of ATPDR be halted until the industry has fully recovered from the devastating effects of COVID-19. Any cost-benefit analysis for Phase II will have to recognise airlines' newly constrained capacity to take on additional costs in the current landscape.

4- Enforcement Leniency

Finally, in addition to the above, Air Canada requests the implementation of an explicit one-year period of leniency from enforcement action and fines for non-compliance on APPR and ATPDR, so that our workforce is free to focus on managing the overwhelming crisis at hand without being burdened or slowed by having to balance complex regulatory requirements. The Government of Canada has already established a solid precedent for the type of regulatory relief we are seeking.[14]

We have contacted Transport Canada and the Government of Canada with these requests and hope that all branches of government will work together to protect the sustainability of our industry.

We trust that you are sensitive to the importance and urgency of these matters and look forward to the Agency's full support during these exceedingly difficult times. Please do not hesitate to call to discuss if that might be useful.

Sincerely,

David J. Shapiro

cc: The Honorable Minister Marc Garneau, P.C., M.P.
Ferio Pugliese, Senior Vice President, Air Canada Express and Government Relations

[10] S. 43 ATPDR.
[11] S. 39 and 81 ATPDR.
[12] S. 58 ATPDR.
[13] S. 59 ATPDR.
[14] On March 13, 2020 the Department of Finance issued a statement of measures to support the economy and the financial sector. In that document, it said "In the face of current global developments, financial institutions should focus on managing this uncertainty rather than devoting resources to previously announced regulatory changes." It also granted other relief from current regulatory requirements, including lowering the Domestic Stability Buffer requirement for domestic systemically important banks OSFI also announced it will suspend all consultations on regulatory matters. https://www.canada.ca/en/department-finance/news/2020/03/canada-outlines-measures-to-support-the-economy-and-the-financial-sector.html

This is Exhibit "75" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Meeting - Mar. 23

Friday, March 20, 2020 3:40 PM

Attendance
- Scott Streiner
- Liz Barker
- Mireille Drouin
- Doug Smith
- Marcia Jones
- Tom Oommen
- Valérie Lagacé & Simon-Pierre Lessard

- Sébastien Bergeron
- Alysia Lau

Guests
- Tim Hillier

Debriefs
- SS: TC indicated Agency moved faster than they expected. Other travel restrictions expected. Agreement between SS and MK that agencies/departments should not issue piecemeal decisions. Call this evening between TC and Agency officials.

Messaging on CTA services
- SS: Where message says CTA pausing air disputes, should specify that Agency still receiving complaints.
- LB: Maintaining Agency services "to the extent possible" too vague and signaling slowdown of services when not true. Need to be more specific.
- TH to revise messaging - continuing normal activity, with exception of... passengers can file complaints, but response times may be different. Do not want to solicit air travel complaints.

Air carrier requests for additional measures
- SS prepared table comparing AC and AT asks.
- Statement that all situations in COVID context = Category 3 should be discussed at Members meeting.

Official languages considerations
- Official Language Commissioner wrote to all departments/agencies noting some information coming from departments only in one language. Reminder for Agency to be aware.

ATPDR Guidance Consultations
- MJ: Signal check on continuing consultations on ATPDR guidance.
- LB: Should not address this until AC request on all APPR/ATPDR is resolved.

Alysia Lau

Additional projects for staff
- MD: Training opportunities
- TO: DCB staff will focus on catching up on tasks.
- DS: Gathering information from staff nearing retirement or other long-time Agency employees.
- LB: Annotations of other pieces of legislation or regulations. SS: Challenge is having Legal participate/supervise.
- Chair's Office to develop list of projects. Tomorrow: start develop list of staff that would be suitable for each project. Branch Heads should inform managers this is coming.

Members Committee
- APPR supplementary guidance - MJ: yes, proposed approach to reflect comments SS and LB.
- Low impact amendments package - MJ: Yes, prepared to make presentation.
- SS to reflect on item 4. Leave on agenda.
- LB would like to postpone item 5. Would like more time to re-examine legal opinion.
- Stylist options - SPL asking to postpone this item
- SS: May not need a lot of in camera time - 15 min. + MJ's two items.

Haiku Contest
- SS: How to proceed? Should solicit, put it in staff update, Chair's Office to coordinate with Cynthia's team.
- DS: Suggest managers should share haiku contest, not Chair's Office. SS: Or Social Committee involvement? DS to ask Tammy Chrusch if she would like to partner with AL and Comms to develop this.

Other internal matters
- MD: School closures in Quebec until May 1. Should include this in daily staff update.
- Construction sites will be closed for 3 weeks.
- Year-end contracts: Current situation should not have impact on year-end. Should be normal year-end. Will issue communique to Branch Heads.
- 15 Eddy - will perform preventative bed bug inspections tomorrow.
- DS: Annual report. Directors still working on it but delayed. MJ: Intention is to keep regular sections of AR with additional section on response to COVID-19. Team is on track, looking to move draft along, but checking with TC to discuss delaying of timelines. SS: Should keep AR moving.

Varia
- TO: We received two requests for tariffs information. SS: Summary of what tariffs say about refunds/vouchers. MJ: Asked that tariffs team prioritize WJ, AC and AT tariffs.
- DS: VPN seemed spotty today. We have discussed rotating access to VPN. SB to reach out to MD to discuss VPN options.

This is Exhibit "76" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amanda Hamelin

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Monday, March 23, 2020 2:19 PM
To: +_EC
Subject: Summary of asks
Attachments: Asks.docx

Hi, all. Please have a look at the attached table and let me know during our 2:30 call if you think any key points from either letter have been missed. Thanks.

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

Item	AT	AC
APPR		Issue a blanket exemption from all APPR, or take the steps below
Classification of flight disruptions	State that all current disruptions are category 3	Same
Refunds	State that no refunds are owed	Same
Vouchers	Signal that vouchers are acceptable in lieu of cash refunds
Response time	Exempt airlines from the 30 day timeline	Same
Alternative travel arrangements	Exempt airlines from any obligation to provide alternative travel arrangements	Same
April 30	Extend the current exemptions for at least 90 days	Same
Enforcement	Suspend for 1 year	Same
ATPDR		A 90-day or longer delay to the "deadline for compliance" or, at least, to certain provisions

This is Exhibit "77" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Carrier Asks 24 March 2020

Tuesday, March 24, 2020 11:26 AM

Carrier Asks

Item	AT	AC
APPR		Issue a blanket exemption from all APPR, or take the steps below
Classification of flight disruptions	State that all current disruptions are category 3	Same
Refunds	State that no refunds are owed	Same
Vouchers	Signal that vouchers are acceptable in lieu of cash refunds
Response time	Exempt airlines from the 30 day timeline	Same
Alternative travel arrangements	Exempt airlines from any obligation to provide alternative travel arrangements	Same
April 30	Extend the current exemptions for at least 90 days	Same
ATPDR		Provide a 90-day or longer delay to the "deadline for compliance" for, at least, certain provisions
Enforcement of APPR and ATPDR	Suspend for 1 year	Same
Advance notice for service changes on domestic routes		Exempt AC from the 120-day notice requirement

Not a reasonable request — Heather Smith

Already addressed through the Agency's statement — Heather Smith

Agree to suspend until end of June — Heather Smith

Agree to extend until the end of June — Heather Smith

Not a reasonable ask — Heather Smith

OK for temporary suspensions, but not going to agree to permanent changes — Heather Smith

This is Exhibit "78" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 24, 2020 9:15 AM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron; Caitlin Hurcomb; Allan Burnside; Valérie Lagacé
Subject: RE: message to carriers - signals check

Hi, Marcia. Good (fast) work. A few tweaks, highlighted below.

We may also need to add something like, "Finally, the timeline for previously-announced special measures – exemptions from certain APPR requirements and a pause to all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers – has been extended from April 30, 2020 to ...", depending on the outcome of the Members call this morning.

Thanks,

S

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 9:05 AM
To: Scott Streiner
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron ; Caitlin Hurcomb ; Allan Burnside ; Valérie Lagacé
Subject: message to carriers - signals check

Scott, normally I would not ask you to review this type of email, but wanted to be sure you had no issue with the draft message below that I will be sending out this afternoon. Thanks to Cait for preparing this quickly.

The plan is to send it out to carriers en masse, but given the outreach from PIAC/CAA, I could also do a separate send out to each of them.

Thanks
Marcia

Good afternoon,
I am writing to provide an update on the latest steps the Canadian Transportation Agency has taken related to the COVID-19 pandemic. Today, the CTA issued decisions:

- Temporarily exempting all air carriers holding a domestic licence from the requirement in section 64 of the Canada Transportation Act to provide 120 days' notice and engage in consultations before temporarily suspending the operation of air services between points in Canada, while retaining that requirement for any permanent discontinuation of service. For more information, see Order X.
- Temporarily exempting all air carriers from the Air Passenger Protection Regulations deadline for responding to passenger claims for compensation, while requiring that responses be provided within 120 days of the end of the exemption to certain APPR provisions. For more information, see Order Y.

In addition, the CTA has released a statement providing guidance for addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place worldwide. In order to balance passenger protection and airline operating realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances, the CTA has indicated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time. Of course, any situation brought forward to the CTA will be evaluated on its own merits. The full statement is available on the CTA's website (insert link).

We will be sure to keep you informed of any further developments. Please don't hesitate to contact me with any questions.

Sincerely,

Marcia Jones
Dirigeante principale, Stratégies/Chief Strategy Officer
Office des transports du Canada/Canadian Transportation Agency
15, rue Eddy/15 Eddy Street
Gatineau, QC, K1A 0N9
(819) 953-0327
marcia.jones@otc-cta.gc.ca

This is Exhibit "79" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Vincent Turgeon
Sent: March 24, 2020 5:13 PM
To: Marcia Jones; Sébastien Bergeron
Cc: Alysia Lau; Tim Hillier; Martine Maltais
Subject: FW: Question urgente de La Presse

Importance: High

Hi, the media request below is the 3rd such request about refunds and vouchers. The first was received mid-week last week and remains unanswered.

In light of the web revision that is about to be posted on this topic, can we send the link to the journalists, with a short message stating we regret late response, and refer them to the statement which addresses their question?

Just for the question below, are we in a position to provide her with the number of complaints received citing that regulatory issue?

Also, our Twitter account has received dozens of questions on that same topic. Can I use that strategy for direct responses on email (@Info inbox) and on Twitter?

Please advise.

Vincent

From: Grammond, Stéphanie [mailto:sgrammond@lapresse.ca]
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 4:17 PM
To: Media Relations / Relations Medias <media@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: Question urgente de La Presse

Bonjour,
Au lieu de rembourser les clients dont les vols sont annulés à cause de la COVID-19, plusieurs transporteurs leur offrent un crédit valide pour 12-24 mois. En ces temps difficiles, les consommateurs qui sont nombreux à avoir perdu leur emploi préfèreraient avoir l'argent dans leurs poches.
Avez-vous beaucoup de plaintes à cet égard?
Est-il légal de la part des transporteurs de refuser de rembourser les clients à qui ils n'ont pas fourni le vol prévu?
Merci de me revenir d'ici la fin de la journée,
SG

Stéphanie Grammond
Chroniqueuse
La Presse, Affaires

T 514 285-7000, poste 4905
750, boulevard Saint-Laurent, Montréal (Québec) H2Y 2Z4
sgrammon@lapresse.ca
LaPresse.ca | LaPressePlus.ca

This is Exhibit "80" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 24, 2020 7:34 PM
To: Marcia Jones; Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: Answer
Attachments: Answer.docx

Hi, Marcia and Seb. Attached is a draft answer to possible questions on why we issued the statement, whether it shortchanges passengers, whether it puts fragile airlines at greater risk of failure, etc. Feel free to tweak – and I'm happy to discuss -- but we need to be ready when the calls come. Thanks.

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

- The Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations do not require refunds where a flight cancellation is outside an airline's control, which would include cancellations resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Airline tariffs have a wide range of provisions, but it's often unclear which tariff terms would apply to this unprecedented situation and whether the force majeure clauses in most tariffs would exempt airlines from paying anything.
- As a result, many passengers affected by the cancellations have been facing significant confusion about what their rights were and the possibility that they will lose the entire cost of their flights.
- At the same time, airlines have had to deal with huge drops in passenger volumes and have little to no ability to issue cash refunds.
- In these extraordinary circumstances – which were never anticipated by the legislation, the regulations, or the tariffs – the CTA concluded that the best way of balancing passenger protection with airline's current operating realities was to suggest that airlines issue vouchers or travel credits for the value of cancelled tickets, as long as those vouchers or credits don't expire too soon.
- We believe that this is a fair, sensible approach in these very difficult circumstances and that greater clarity and consistency of approach will be of benefit to for both passengers and airlines.

This is Exhibit "81" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: March 24, 2020 8:53 PM
To: Scott Streiner; Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: RE: Answer

Hi Scott, I was thinking of the same issue. I drafted up the following earlier today, for your consideration. I think with regard to the airlines, we are not trying to benefit them per se, but rather, ensure that Canadians can benefit from a variety of carriers, service offerings and routes in the future. The only reason we want to do this is for the benefit of Canadian passengers in the long term. It may be helpful to accentuate this.

Marcia

Q3. It does not seem fair to passengers who lost money that they would only get credits or vouchers. Can you explain?

The CTA believes that fair and robust air protection for passengers whose flights are cancelled in these circumstances is essential. That is why the CTA has issued a statement (insert link) indicating that providing vouchers or credits to passengers in these extraordinary circumstances may be appropriate. This measure goes beyond what is required for situations outside of the carrier's control under the Air Passenger Protection Regulations and, in some cases, goes beyond what carriers provide for in their tariffs.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic.

The issuance of vouchers or credits strikes a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances. It is important that passengers not suffer out of pocket, and also that the air industry survive and can continue to provide diverse service offerings to Canadians once the crisis has abated.

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 7:34 PM
To: Marcia Jones ; Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: Answer

Hi, Marcia and Seb. Attached is a draft answer to possible questions on why we issued the statement, whether it shortchanges passengers, whether it puts fragile airlines at greater risk of failure, etc. Feel free to tweak – and I'm happy to discuss -- but we need to be ready when the calls come. Thanks.

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

This is Exhibit "82" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Nadine Landry

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020 9:45 AM
To: Valérie Lagacé
Cc: Marcia Jones; Tom Oommen; Sébastien Bergeron; Lesley Robertson
Subject: Statement
Attachments: Statement.docx

Hi, all. After a lot of back-and-forth this morning, Liz and I have decided on a few additional tweaks to the statement. The final FINAL FINAL (!) version is attached.

No need for the call at 10.

Thanks,

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but ~~typically~~ may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them ~~airline~~ of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger ~~concerns~~ protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance ~~and must find other ways of getting home~~ should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

This is Exhibit "83" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 25, 2020 9:53 AM
To: Marcia Jones; Sébastien Bergeron
Cc: Liz Barker
Subject: RE: Answer

Hi, Marcia. As part of Liz's and my discussion of the statement this morning, we concluded that vouchers may not, in fact, go beyond what the APPR require, since they could, arguably be deemed a necessary alternative to itinerary completion where completion isn't possible. That's the sort of interpretation the Agency might could conceivably in future adjudications.

Could you please adjust the answer accordingly, emphasizing not "going beyond" but rather, "bringing greater greater clarity and consistency in unprecedented and unanticipated circumstances"?

Thanks.

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 8:53 PM
To: Scott Streiner ; Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: RE: Answer

Hi Scott, I was thinking of the same issue. I drafted up the following earlier today, for your consideration. I think with regard to the airlines, we are not trying to benefit them per se, but rather, ensure that Canadians can benefit from a variety of carriers, service offerings and routes in the future. The only reason we want to do this is for the benefit of Canadian passengers in the long term. It may be helpful to accentuate this.

Marcia

Q3. It does not seem fair to passengers who lost money that they would only get credits or vouchers. Can you explain?

The CTA believes that fair and robust air protection for passengers whose flights are cancelled in these circumstances is essential. That is why the CTA has issued a statement (insert link) indicating that providing vouchers or credits to passengers in these extraordinary circumstances may be appropriate. This measure goes beyond what is required for situations outside of the carrier's control under the Air Passenger Protection Regulations and, in some cases, goes beyond what carriers provide for in their tariffs.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic.

The issuance of vouchers or credits strikes a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances. It is important that passengers not suffer out of pocket, and also that the air industry survive and can continue to provide diverse service offerings to Canadians once the crisis has abated.

From: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 7:34 PM
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Answer

Hi, Marcia and Seb. Attached is a draft answer to possible questions on why we issued the statement, whether it shortchanges passengers, whether it puts fragile airlines at greater risk of failure, etc. Feel free to tweak – and I'm happy to discuss -- but we need to be ready when the calls come. Thanks.

S

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

This is Exhibit "84" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Nadine Landry

From: Liz Barker
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020 11:04 AM
To: Scott Streiner
Subject: RE: Answer

I understand Seb's point, to try to frame this, and your response, that it might overstate it. But given that it is consistent with your intent, that this be seen as guidance by all, it might be ok to overstate it slightly.
Liz

From: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Sent: March-25-20 10:43 AM
To: Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: Answer

Not sure we should call this guidance. That might slightly overstate it.

-------- Original message --------
From: Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: 2020-03-25 10:26 a.m. (GMT-05:00)
To: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>, Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: Answer

Scott,

I also like the tone of these lines. I like the fact that the emphasis is put on passengers, and that it clarifies what we want to do for them (first paragraph).

My only small suggestion would be as follows:

1. Sentence number one now says " we think passengers protection is essential" and the second sentence says, "so we issued a statement". I think we should use the word "guidance" instead of " statement" as it carries more weight. Going with something like "guidance in the form of a statement" could also make sense here. One downside of using "guidance" is that the end if this sentence now says "…may be appropriate", which could be deemed too vague to be considered "guidance".

Sébastien Bergeron

Chef de cabinet | Bureau du président et premier dirigeant

Office des transports du Canada | Gouvernement du Canada

sebastien.bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca |Tél. 819-712-0827

Chief of Staff | Office of the Chair and Chief Executive Officer

Canadian Transportation Agency | Government of Canada

Sebastien.bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca | Tél. 819-712-0827

De : Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Envoyé : 25 mars 2020 09:53
À : Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc : Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Objet : RE: Answer

Hi, Marcia. As part of Liz's and my discussion of the statement this morning, we concluded that vouchers may not, in fact, go beyond what the APPR require, since they could, arguably be deemed a necessary alternative to itinerary completion where completion isn't possible. That's the sort of interpretation the Agency might could conceivably in future adjudications.

Could you please adjust the answer accordingly, emphasizing not "going beyond" but rather, "bringing greater greater clarity and consistency in unprecedented and unanticipated circumstances"?

Thanks.

From: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 8:53 PM
To: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: RE: Answer

Hi Scott, I was thinking of the same issue. I drafted up the following earlier today, for your consideration. I think with regard to the airlines, we are not trying to benefit them per se, but rather, ensure that Canadians can benefit from a variety of carriers, service offerings and routes in the future. The only reason we want to do this is for the benefit of Canadian passengers in the long term. It may be helpful to accentuate this.

Marcia

Q3. It does not seem fair to passengers who lost money that they would only get credits or vouchers. Can you explain?

The CTA believes that fair and robust air protection for passengers whose flights are cancelled in these circumstances is essential. That is why the CTA has issued a statement (insert link) indicating that providing vouchers or credits to passengers in these extraordinary circumstances may be appropriate. This measure goes beyond what is required for situations outside of the carrier's control under the Air Passenger Protection Regulations and, in some cases, goes beyond what carriers provide for in their tariffs.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic.

The issuance of vouchers or credits strikes a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances. It is important that passengers not suffer out of pocket, and also that the air industry survive and can continue to provide diverse service offerings to Canadians once the crisis has abated.

From: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Sent: Tuesday, March 24, 2020 7:34 PM
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Answer

Hi, Marcia and Seb. Attached is a draft answer to possible questions on why we issued the statement, whether it shortchanges passengers, whether it puts fragile airlines at greater risk of failure, etc. Feel free to tweak – and I'm happy to discuss -- but we need to be ready when the calls come. Thanks. 784

S

Scott Streiner

Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada

Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency

scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

This is Exhibit "85" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Scott Streiner
Sent: March 25, 2020 1:35 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron; Liz Barker
Subject: Statement
Attachments: Statement.docx

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

This is Exhibit "86" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Nadine Landry

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020 1:55 PM
To: Renée Langlois
Cc: Tim Hillier; Vincent Turgeon; Valérie Lagacé; Caitlin Hurcomb
Subject: FW: Statement
Attachments: Statement.docx

Over to you! ☺

From: Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020 1:35 PM
To: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron <Sebastien.Bergeron@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Liz Barker <Liz.Barker@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Statement

Scott Streiner
Président et premier dirigeant, Office des transports du Canada
Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency
scott.streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca - Tél. : 819-997-9233 - ATS/TTY: 1-800-669-5575

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

This is Exhibit "87" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: George Petsikas <George.Petsikas@transat.com>
Sent: March 25, 2020 3:18 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Caitlin Hurcomb; Allan Burnside; Bernard Bussières; Howard Liebman
Subject: Re: Update: CTA measures/Mise à jour: mesures prises par l'OTC

Marcia

I confirm reception of your note hereunder on behalf of Transat.

Please accept our sincere thanks for turning this around and getting it out the door. We are mindful that Agency staff have been working very hard and diligently to assist both industry and consumers in this time of crisis so our appreciation is genuine.

Best regards and personal wishes to you, your family and colleagues for continued good health.

George

Get Outlook for Android

From: Marcia Jones
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020, 2:34 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Caitlin Hurcomb; Allan Burnside
Subject: Update: CTA measures/Mise à jour: mesures prises par l'OTC

Le français suit l'anglais.
Good afternoon,
I am writing to provide an update on the latest steps the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has taken related to the COVID-19 pandemic. Today, the CTA issued decisions:

- Temporarily exempting all air carriers holding a domestic licence from the requirement in section 64 of the Canada Transportation Act to provide 120 days' notice and engage in consultations before temporarily suspending the operation of air services between points in Canada, while retaining that requirement for any permanent discontinuation of service. For more information, see Order 2020-A-36.
- Temporarily exempting all air carriers from the Air Passenger Protection Regulations deadline for responding to passenger claims for compensation, while requiring that responses be provided within 120 days of the end of the exemption to certain APPR provisions. For more information, see Determination A-2020-47.
- Extending the previously announced exemptions from certain APPR requirements related to compensation and alternate travel arrangements from April 30, 2020 to June 30, 2020. For more information, see Determination A-2020-47.

- Extending the stay of all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers from April 30, 2020 to June 30, 2020. For more information, see Order 2020-A-37.

In addition, the CTA has released a statement providing guidance for addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place worldwide. In order to balance passenger protection and airline operating realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances, the CTA has indicated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time. A period of 24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases. Of course, any situation brought forward to the CTA will be evaluated on its own merits. The full statement is available on the CTA's website.

We will be sure to keep you informed of any further developments. Please don't hesitate to contact me with any questions.

_____

Bonjour,

Je vous écris pour faire le point sur les dernières mesures prises par l'Office des transports du Canada (OTC) dans le contexte de la pandémie de COVID-19. Aujourd'hui, l'OTC a rendu des décisions visant :

- à exempter temporairement tous les transporteurs aériens détenant une licence intérieure de l'obligation de donner un préavis de 120 jours, obligation prévue à l'article 64 de la Loi sur les transports au Canada, et de tenir des consultations avant de suspendre temporairement l'exploitation des services aériens entre des points situés au Canada; cette obligation est toutefois maintenue pour toute interruption de service permanente. Pour en savoir plus, consultez l'arrêté nº 2020-A-36;
- à exempter temporairement tous les transporteurs aériens de l'obligation de respecter le délai prévu dans le Règlement sur la protection des passagers aériens pour répondre aux demandes d'indemnité présentées par les passagers, en exigeant toutefois que les réponses soient fournies dans un délai de 120 jours à compter de la fin de la période d'exemption de l'application de certaines dispositions du RPPA. Pour en savoir plus, consultez la détermination n° A-2020-47;
- à prolonger du 30 avril au 30 juin 2020 les exemptions de l'application de certaines exigences du RPPA liées aux indemnités et aux arrangements de voyage alternatifs. Pour en savoir plus, consultez la détermination n° A-2020-47;
- à prolonger du 30 avril au 30 juin 2020 la suspension de toutes les activités liées au règlement des différends concernant les transporteurs aériens. Pour en savoir plus, consultez l'arrêté nº 2020-A-37.

De plus, l'OTC a publié une déclaration dans laquelle il donne des orientations pour faire face aux annulations massives de vols effectuées à l'échelle de la planète. Afin d'établir un équilibre entre la protection des passagers et les réalités opérationnelles des compagnies aériennes dans ces circonstances extraordinaires et sans précédent, l'OTC a indiqué que, de façon générale, une solution qui serait convenable dans le contexte actuel serait que les compagnies aériennes fournissent aux passagers touchés des bons ou des crédits pour des voyages futurs, à condition que ces bons ou ces crédits n'expirent pas dans un délai déraisonnablement court. Une période de 24 mois serait considérée comme raisonnable dans la plupart des cas. Bien entendu, toutes les situations présentées à l'OTC seront évaluées au cas par cas. La déclaration complète se trouve sur le site Web de l'OTC.

Nous ne manquerons pas de vous tenir informés de l'évolution de la situation. N'hésitez pas à communiquer avec moi si vous avez des questions.

Meilleures salutations,

Marcia Jones
Dirigeante principale, Stratégies/Chief Strategy Officer
Office des transports du Canada/Canadian Transportation Agency
15, rue Eddy/15 Eddy Street
Gatineau, QC, K1A 0N9
(613) 864-9918
marcia.jones@otc-cta.gc.ca

destinataire indiqué, soyez avisé que tout examen, divulgation, copie, impression, reproduction, distribution, autre utilisation de ce message et de ses pièces jointes est strictement interdit. Si vous avez reçu ce message alors que vous n'êtes pas un destinataire désigné, veuillez en aviser immédiatement l'émetteur et détruire ce message et les pièces jointes.

794

Confidentiality Warning:
This message, its content and any attachments are intended only for the use of the intended recipient(s), are confidential, and may be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any review, retransmission, conversion to hard copy, copying, circulation or other use of this message and any attachments is strictly prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please notify the sender immediately by return e-mail, and delete this message and any attachments from your system.

This is Exhibit "88" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Jason Kerr <jkerr@national.caa.ca>
Sent: March 25, 2020 4:11 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Allan Burnside; Caitlin Hurcomb; Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: RE: Update: CTA measures/Mise à jour: mesures prises par l'OTC

Thank you! This is just what I was looking for. I was just out a bit ahead.

CAA will review the CTA guidance on vouchers and may provide further comment.
We believe these government actions are reasonable and warranted for public health reasons. We believe Canadians should not be hit with large financial penalties for travel decisions out of their hands, especially at a time when unexpected economic stress has become a fact of life for most Canadians. Under these extraordinary circumstances it, CAA believes that, in our view, these extraordinary circumstances should permit an opportunity for passengers to access a cash refund, if not now then in the coming months, whether it is the airlines or government that make them whole. To the extent that credits remain an option, they should not be allowed to expire as they would under normal circumstances. It may be more than 12-24 months before a Canadian's financial situation is good enough to contemplate another trip. As well, some seniors may not be in a position to still travel 18 months from now.

Jason

Jason Kerr
SENIOR DIRECTOR / DIRECTEUR PRINCIPAL
Government Relations / Relations gouvernementales
100 – 46 Elgin Street
Ottawa, ON
Tel/Tél 343-998-6679
jkerr@national.caa.ca

From: Consultations aeriennes / Air Consultations (OTC/CTA)
Sent: March 25, 2020 4:01 PM
To: Marcia Jones
Cc: Allan Burnside ; Caitlin Hurcomb
Subject: Update: CTA measures/Mise à jour: mesures prises par l'OTC
Le français suit l'anglais.

Good afternoon,
I am writing to provide an update on the latest steps the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has taken related to the COVID-19 pandemic. Today, the CTA issued decisions:

- Temporarily exempting all air carriers holding a domestic licence from the requirement in section 64 of the Canada Transportation Act to provide 120 days' notice and engage in consultations before temporarily suspending the operation of air services between points in Canada, while retaining that requirement for any permanent discontinuation of service. For more information, see Order 2020-A-36.
- Temporarily exempting all air carriers from the Air Passenger Protection Regulations deadline for responding to passenger claims for compensation, while requiring that responses be provided within 120 days of the end of the exemption to certain APPR provisions. For more information, see Determination A-2020-47.
- Extending the previously announced exemptions from certain APPR requirements related to compensation and alternate travel arrangements from April 30, 2020 to June 30, 2020. For more information, see Determination A-2020-47.
- Extending the stay of all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers from April 30, 2020 to June 30, 2020. For more information, see Order 2020-A-37.

In addition, the CTA has released a statement providing guidance for addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place worldwide. In order to balance passenger protection and airline operating realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances, the CTA has indicated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time. A period of 24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases. Of course, any situation brought forward to the CTA will be evaluated on its own merits. The full statement is available on the CTA's website.
I also invite you to visit our webpage containing important information for travellers during COVID-19.
We will be sure to keep you informed of any further developments. Please don't hesitate to contact me with any questions.
Marcia Jones
Dirigeante principale, Stratégies/Chief Strategy Officer
Office des transports du Canada/Canadian Transportation Agency
15, rue Eddy/15 Eddy Street
Gatineau, QC, K1A 0N9
(613) 864-9918
marcia.jones@otc-cta.gc.ca

_____

Bonjour,
Je vous écris pour faire le point sur les dernières mesures prises par l'Office des transports du Canada (OTC) dans le contexte de la pandémie de COVID-19. Aujourd'hui, l'OTC a rendu des décisions visant :

- à exempter temporairement tous les transporteurs aériens détenant une licence intérieure de l'obligation de donner un préavis de 120 jours, obligation prévue à l'article 64 de la Loi sur les transports au Canada, et de tenir des consultations avant de suspendre temporairement l'exploitation des services aériens entre des points situés au Canada; cette obligation est toutefois maintenue pour toute interruption de service permanente. Pour en savoir plus, consultez l'arrêté nº 2020-A-36;
- à exempter temporairement tous les transporteurs aériens de l'obligation de respecter le délai prévu dans le Règlement sur la protection des passagers aériens pour répondre aux demandes d'indemnité présentées par les passagers, en exigeant toutefois que les réponses soient fournies dans un délai de 120 jours à compter de la fin de la période d'exemption de l'application de certaines dispositions du RPPA. Pour en savoir plus, consultez la détermination n° A-2020-47;
- à prolonger du 30 avril au 30 juin 2020 les exemptions de l'application de certaines exigences du RPPA liées aux indemnités et aux arrangements de voyage alternatifs. Pour en savoir plus, consultez la détermination n° A-2020-47;
- à prolonger du 30 avril au 30 juin 2020 la suspension de toutes les activités liées au règlement des différends concernant les transporteurs aériens. Pour en savoir plus, consultez l'arrêté nº 2020-A-37.

De plus, l'OTC a publié une déclaration dans laquelle il donne des orientations pour faire face aux annulations massives de vols effectuées à l'échelle de la planète. Afin d'établir un équilibre entre la protection des passagers et les réalités opérationnelles des compagnies aériennes dans ces circonstances extraordinaires et sans précédent, l'OTC a indiqué que, de façon générale, une solution qui serait convenable dans le contexte actuel serait que les compagnies aériennes fournissent aux passagers touchés des bons ou des crédits pour des voyages futurs, à condition que ces bons ou ces crédits n'expirent pas dans un délai déraisonnablement court. Une période de 24 mois serait considérée comme raisonnable dans la plupart des cas. Bien entendu, toutes les situations présentées à l'OTC seront évaluées au cas par cas. La déclaration complète se trouve sur le site Web de l'OTC.
Je vous invite également à visiter notre page web contenant des informations importantes pour les voyageurs pour la période de la COVID-19.
Nous ne manquerons pas de vous tenir informés de l'évolution de la situation. N'hésitez pas à communiquer avec moi si vous avez des questions.
Meilleures salutations,
Marcia Jones
Dirigeante principale, Stratégies/Chief Strategy Officer
Office des transports du Canada/Canadian Transportation Agency
15, rue Eddy/15 Eddy Street
Gatineau, QC, K1A 0N9
(613) 864-9918
marcia.jones@otc-cta.gc.ca

This is Exhibit "89" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Vincent Turgeon
Sent: March 25, 2020 4:05 PM
To: Tim Hillier; Marcia Jones
Subject: FW: Media Inquiry-URGENT

Importance: High

Hi Marcia and Tim, please advise. We just received this. We could simply respond that it is a clarification offered by the CTA.

Vincent

From: YVONNE COLBERT
Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020 3:53 PM
To: media
Subject: Media Inquiry-URGENT

Hello,
I am following up a voicemail I just left on your media line.
I am working on a story today about the airlines and their positions on providing credits versus refunds for tickets on flights that were cancelled by the airlines.

Is this from the CTA?

https://www.otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

It has no name attached to it and I would like to know who to attribute it to and on what legislative basis it is endorsing credits and not refunds?

I ask because the CTA has issued decisions that say airlines must refund passengers, even when the cancellation is beyond the airlines' control.

An August 29, 2013 decision from the Canadian Transport Agency states “The Agency agrees with Mr. Lukács, and finds that it is unreasonable for Porter to refuse to refund the fare paid by a passenger because of its cancellation of a flight, even if the cause is an event beyond Porter’s control.” I must finish my story today but I need confirmation from you that this link is legitimate and the release is from the CTA. I am hoping you can respond to my questions within the next few hours. Regards, Yvonne

https://www.otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

--
Yvonne Colbert
Consumer Watchdog
CBC Nova Scotia

902-420-4559 office
902-478-6425 cell
902-420-4116 newsroom
yvonne.colbert@cbc.ca

This is Exhibit "90" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

803

From: Liz Barker
Sent: March 25, 2020 4:11 PM
To: Scott Streiner
Cc: Sébastien Bergeron
Subject: RDIM-#2124145-v2-Web_FAQs_–_COVID-19.docx
Attachments: RDIM-#2124145-v2-Web_FAQs_–_COVID-19.docx

My comments in track changes.
Thanks
Liz

Web FAQs – COVID-19 Pandemic

Q1. I cancelled my flight reservation because of COVID-19 – does the airline have to refund my ticket?

The Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR) do not address situations where a passenger cancels their travel. In these cases, the airline must follow the policies set out in their tariff and fare rules. Contact your airline for more information.

Q2. The airline cancelled my flight because of COVID-19 – does the airline have to refund my ticket?

~~We~~ The CTA anticipates that most flight disruptions related to COVID-19 will be outside the airline's control. In these cases, the Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers complete their itineraries by rebooking them on the next available flight operated by them or a partner airline. However, an airline is not expected to rebook a passenger if they have completed their trip (including by a repatriation flight).

Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations and tariffs were not developed in anticipation of extraordinary circumstances such as these. While each case would need to be assessed on its merits, the CTA believes that refunds to passengers whose flights are cancelled in the form of vouchers or credits for future travel could be appropriate, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

This strikes a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

Commented [SB1]: I would delete all of this and simply provide an hyperlink to the statement on our website.

Commented [LB2]: Agreed. Or set quote of statement out here, clearly identified as a quote.

Q3. It does not seem fair to passengers who lost money that they would only get credits or vouchers. Can you explain?

Commented [SB3]:

The CTA believes that fair and robust air protection for passengers whose flights are cancelled in these circumstances is essential. That is why the CTA has issued a statement (insert link) indicating that providing vouchers or credits to passengers in these extraordinary circumstances may be appropriate. This measure provides a clear signal on the carrier's obligations in ~~brings greater clarity and consistency in unprecedented and unanticipated circumstances in~~ situations outside of their ~~carrier's~~ control under the Air Passenger Protection Regulations – which simply require the completion of the passenger's itinerary, when this may no longer be possible in today's environment – and, in some cases, goes beyond what carriers are to provide under their tariffs.

Commented [LB4]: Well robust air passenger protection would give them what they're entitled to, wouldn't it…? I think that this is the wrong word…

Commented [SB5]: guidance?

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic.

The issuance of vouchers or credits strikes a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances. It is important that passengers not suffer out of pocket, and also that the air industry survive and can continue to provide diverse service offerings to Canadians once the crisis has abated.

Q4. I am a Canadian trying to return home from abroad. Can the Government of Canada help cover costs?

The Government of Canada has announced the creation of the COVID-19 Emergency Loan Program to provide financial help for Canadians outside Canada.

Q5. How do the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR) apply to flight delays or cancellations during this pandemic?

In the event of a flight delay or cancellation, airlines must always keep passengers informed of their rights and the cause of a flight disruption.

We anticipate that most flight disruptions related to COVID-19 will be outside the airline's control. In these cases, airlines must make sure the passengers reach their destinations (re-booking them on other flights), but the regulations do not require that airlines provide standards of treatment or compensation.

In the current circumstances, airlines do not have to follow APPR requirements to rebook passengers using an airline with which they have no commercial agreement.

For more information, visit Important Information for Travellers During COVID-19.

Refunds to passengers for cancelled flights, in the form of travel credits or vouchers, may also be appropriate. For more information, please see the CTA's statement insert link)

Q6. I've made a claim for compensation with an airline – don't they have to respond within 30 days?

Commented [LB6]: Not sure we should say this. If obligation is on next available flight but there are no flights for a long time, then obligation moves to when they resume operations. Recognizing the extraordinary circumstances with a long term suspension of air services and ongoing government advisories and bans on travel to and from certain locations, this provision could be interpreted as requiring that vouchers be provided to permit completion of the itinerary at a point in the future, the timing of which is to be determined by the passenger based on the carrier's recovered schedules.

Commented [SB7]: Marcia's changes following your discussion with her re. guidance

Commented [LB8]: Would definitely not say this because I believe that if tariffs provide for nothing, they are out of compliance with the APPR.

Commented [LB9]: Not sure this is enough. I think we should be directing people to the GAC resources that Seb gave me in response to the two situations I sought advice on earlier this week. (as an aside, the three women are still stuck in India because they are unable to travel from GOA to Delhi to catch a repatriation flight due to the Indian govt's shutdown. Not a good situation)

Commented [SB10]: I would be tempted to only provide the 'For more information, visit…" line here

Commented [LB11]: I think there's value in providing this information as it incorporates both the reg and the subsequent orders related to COVID – 19.

Commented [LB12]: Not sure this is accurate. Would only apply in cases where travel had started. There's also the situation of people whose travel hasn't yet started and not sure this covers it that clearly.

Commented [LB13]: Or refunds

Commented [SB14]: guidance?

Commented [LB15]: I would prefer to not pull this sentence out of the statement like this. I would simply link to the statement now.

In the context of the significant declines in passenger volumes and disruptions to airline operations caused by the COVID-19 pandemic and to allow airlines to continue focusing on immediate and urgent operational demands, including bringing Canadians home from abroad, the airlines are temporarily exempted from the obligation to respond to claims for compensation in 30-days. This will remain valid until June 30, 2020 or any further date that the CTA may order. After that, the airline will have 120 days to respond to the claims received during that time.

Q7. I filed an air travel complaint with the CTA. Will it still be processed during the pandemic period?

~~In light of the extraordinary circumstances resulting from the Covid-19 pandemic, the CTA is temporarily pausing all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers until June 30, 2020, to permit them to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands. All air passenger complaints, including by persons with disabilities, will be processed in due course.~~

~~On or before June 30, 2020, the CTA will determine if the pause should end on that date or be extended to a later date.~~

During these difficult times, the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) continues to maintain its normal operations while our employees practice social distancing. Our dedicated employees are working remotely and are available through electronic means to provide service. You can continue to request CTA services, file applications, and do normal business with us through our normal channels.

Please note, however, that the CTA has temporarily paused all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers until June 30, 2020, to permit them to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands. While ~~you~~, passengers can continue to file air ~~passenger~~ travel complaints with us and all complaints will be processed in due course, we may not be able to respond quickly. On or before June 30, 2020, the Agency will determine if the pause should end on that date or be extended to a later date.

Q8. An airline just suspended their services in my region. Don't airlines have to provide a notice of 120 days before eliminating a service?

The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic is significant and continues to evolve as air carriers try to adjust to travel restrictions and rapidly dropping passenger volumes and revenues. Given these circumstances, the CTA has exempted all airlines from the normal 120 day notice requirement when temporarily reducing or suspending~~discontinuing~~ domestic air services until June 30, 2020. Once the exemption ends, airlines will be required to immediately resume those services. Services cannot be reduced or discontinued on a permanent basis unless the normal requirements for notice and consultation are followed.

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial, Strikethrough

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial, Font color: Red, Highlight

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial, Strikethrough

Formatted: Font: (Default) Arial

Commented [SB16]: I would go with the messaging we agreed upon the other day that also signals that we continue to maintain our normal operations…

Formatted

Commented [LB17]: agreed

If the CTA finds that the suspension of service on a certain route has caused or is likely to cause a community to become so isolated that it does not have access to critical services and goods, the CTA may lift the exemption. In this case, service would have to resume and the carrier providing the service would have to follow the normal advance notice requirements before suspending it.

This is Exhibit "91" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Registration - In-house Corporation

809

All Monthly Communication Reports for Transat A.T. Inc.

Annick Guérard, President & Chief Executive Officer (Corporation)

▼ Learn more...

Registrants are required to submit a monthly communication report for each oral and arranged communication with a designated public office holder. The name of the most senior paid officer (i.e. the registrant) will appear on all in-house monthly communication reports, whether or not he/she participated in the communication.

Note: Monthly Communication Reports are due on the 15th day of each month for communications that took place in the previous month.

Results below are sorted by posted date, beginning with the most recent.

Transat A.T. Inc.
In-house Corporation

Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Arun Thangaraj, Deputy Minister | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2023-07-18
Posted date: 2023-08-15
Communication number: 5101-574929

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Pablo Rodriguez, Minister of Heritage & Quebec Lieutenant | Canadian Heritage (PCH)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2023-07-06
Posted date: 2023-08-15
Communication number: 5101-574926

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Bud Sambasivam, Director, Policy | Office of the Minister of Finance | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Blake Oliver, Senior Policy Advisor | Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance of Canada | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Greg Reade, Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)

Affairs | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, International Relations, Tourism, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-06-02
Posted date: 2020-06-16
Communication number: 5101-476143

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Aneil Jaswal, Senior Policy Advisor, Office of the Minister of Finance | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Taxation and Finance, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-07
Posted date: 2020-06-16
Communication number: 5101-476141

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Taras Zalusky, Chief of staff, Office of the Minister of Employment, Workforce Development and Disability Inclusion | Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Employment and Training
Communication date: 2020-05-07

Posted date: 2020-06-16
Communication number: 5101-476140

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Jean-Yves Duclos, President of the Treasury Board | Treasury Board Of Canada Secretariat (TBS)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Taxation and Finance, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-03-28
Posted date: 2020-04-17
Communication number: 5101-471347

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister | Prime Minister's Office (PMO)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Taxation and Finance, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-03-25
Posted date: 2020-04-17
Communication number: 5101-471346

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the

Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Francois-Philippe Champagne, Minister of Foreign Affairs | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-03-21
Posted date: 2020-04-17
Communication number: 5101-471344

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Bill Morneau, Minister of Finance | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Taxation and Finance, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-03-19
Posted date: 2020-04-17
Communication number: 5101-471343

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Steven Guilbeault, Member of Parliament for Laurier-Sainte Marie | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-03-05

Communication date: 2020-03-05
Posted date: 2020-03-06
Communication number: 5101-466172

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Anthony Housefather, Member of Parliament for Mount-Royal | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Labour
Communication date: 2020-03-03
Posted date: 2020-03-06
Communication number: 5101-466173

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Marc Garneau, Minister of Transport | Transport Canada (TC)
- Miled Hill, Policy Advisor | Office of the Hon. Marc Garneau, PC, MP | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-03-02
Posted date: 2020-03-06
Communication number: 5101-466170

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Tony Baldinelli, Member of Parliament for Niagara-Falls | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-02-27
Posted date: 2020-03-06
Communication number: 5101-466169

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Todd Doherty, Member of Parliament for Cariboo-Prince George | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-02-27
Posted date: 2020-03-06
Communication number: 5101-466168

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Paul Halucha, Assistant Secretary to the Cabinet, Economic and Regional Development Policy | Privy Council Office (PCO)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-02-11
Posted date: 2020-03-06
Communication number: 5101-466171

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Francis Scarpaleggia, Member of Parliament for Lac-St-Louis | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-01-09
Posted date: 2020-01-09
Communication number: 5101-462277

View associated registration

Transat A.T. Inc.

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Mitch Davies, Senior Assistant Deputy Minister | Industry Sector | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)
- Mary Gregory, Acting Assistant Deputy Minister | Industry Sector | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)

Subject Matter of the communication: Industry, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-01-08

This is Exhibit "92" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Registration - In-house Corporation

818

All Monthly Communication Reports for Air Canada

Michael Rousseau, President and Chief Executive Officer (Corporation)

▼ Learn more...

Registrants are required to submit a monthly communication report for each oral and arranged communication with a designated public office holder. The name of the most senior paid officer (i.e. the registrant) will appear on all in-house monthly communication reports, whether or not he/she participated in the communication.

Note: Monthly Communication Reports are due on the 15th day of each month for communications that took place in the previous month.

Results below are sorted by posted date, beginning with the most recent.

Air Canada
In-house Corporation

Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Raymond Theberge, Commissioner of Official Languages | Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages (OCOL)

Subject Matter of the communication: Bilingualism/Official Languages
Communication date: 2023-06-21
Posted date: 2023-07-15
Communication number: 15009-572227

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Angad Dhillon, Chief of Staff to the Minister | Office of the Minister of Transport | Transport Canada (TC)
- Angad Dhillon, Chief of Staff to the Minister | Office of the Minister of Transport | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2023-06-14
Posted date: 2023-07-15
Communication number: 15009-572223

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Jennifer May, Ambassador to the People's Republic of China | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Communication date: 2020-06-16
Posted date: 2020-07-15
Communication number: 15009-477749

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Miled Hill, Senior Policy Advisor | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-06-01
Posted date: 2020-07-15
Communication number: 15009-477746

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Francois-Philippe Champagne, Minister Foreign Affairs | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Marta Morgan, Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Bruce Christie, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Heather Jeffrey, Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-21
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-476003

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Mary Ng, Minister of Small Business, Export Promotion and International Trade | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-13
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-475999

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-06
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-475998

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Melanie Joly, Minister Economic Development & Official Languages | Innovation, Science and

Official Languages | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-05
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-475996

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Ben Chin, Senior Advisor | Prime Minister's Office (PMO)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-04
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-475994

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Kevin Brosseau, Assistant Deputy Minister, Safety & Security | Transport Canada (TC)
- Aaron McCrorie, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister, Safety & Security | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-04
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-475992

View associated registration

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy | Transport Canada (TC)
- Ailish Campbell, Chief Trade Commissioner and ADM | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Bruce Christie, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Heather Jeffrey, Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Louis Marcotte, Chief Air Negotiator/Director General | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Kevin Brosseau, Assistant Deputy Minister, Safety & Security | Transport Canada (TC)
- Aaron McCrorie, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister, Safety & Security | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-05-04
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 15009-475968

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Chrystia Freeland, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Intergovernmental Affairs | Privy Council Office (PCO)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Trade, Transportation, Taxation and Finance
Communication date: 2020-04-28
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473529

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Navdeep Bains, Minister of Innovation, Science and Economic Development | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Trade, Transportation, Taxation and Finance, Industry
Communication date: 2020-04-27
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473528

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- William Morneau, Minister of Finance | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Labour, Transportation, Taxation and Finance
Communication date: 2020-04-26
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473527

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Aneil Jaswal, Senior Policy advisor | Minister's Office | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Labour, Taxation and Finance
Communication date: 2020-04-24
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473534

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Kevin Brosseau, Associate Deputy Minister | Safety and Security | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, National Security/Security
Communication date: 2020-04-23
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473535

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Marc Garneau, Minister of Transportation | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Trade, Transportation, Taxation and Finance
Communication date: 2020-04-23
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473526

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Aneil Jaswal, Senior Policy Advisor | Minister's Office | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Labour, Taxation and Finance
Communication date: 2020-04-20
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473533

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Heather Jeffrey, Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Richard Botham, Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation

Communication date: 2020-04-20
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473524

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Griffin Marsh, Chief of Staff | Minister's Office | Indigenous Services Canada (ISC)
- Katherine Koostachin, Senior Policy Advisor | Minister's Office | Indigenous Services Canada (ISC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Consumer Issues, Industry
Communication date: 2020-04-17
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473531

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Heather Jeffrey, Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-17
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473523

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Michael Keenan, Deputy Minister | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Trade, Transportation, Taxation and Finance
Communication date: 2020-04-16
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473525

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Paul Thoppil, Assistant Deputy Minister | Asia | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-16
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473522

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-15
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473521

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)
- Bruce Christie, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister | Trade Policy and Negotiations | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-14
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473520

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Andrew Marsland, Senior Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Miodrag Jovanovic, Associate Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Brian Ernewein, Assistant Deputy Minister | Tax Legislation | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Richard Botham, Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance

Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Labour, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-07
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473519

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-06
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473518

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Richard Botham, Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Andrew Marsland, Senior Assistant Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)
- Brian Ernewein, Assistant Deputy Minister | Tax Legislation | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, Labour, International Trade, Transportation, Taxation and Finance

Communication date: 2020-04-03
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473530

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-03
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473516

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-03
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473515

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister | Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: International Relations, International Trade, Transportation
Communication date: 2020-04-02
Posted date: 2020-05-15
Communication number: 15009-473513

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Paul Rochon, Deputy Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Taxation and Finance, Industry
Communication date: 2020-03-26
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471126

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy | Transport Canada (TC)
- Heather Jeffreys, Assistant Deputy Minister | Global

Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Elissa Golberg, Assistant Deputy Minister | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Industry
Communication date: 2020-03-20
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471107

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:
- Jude Welch, Chief of Staff | Minister's Office Labour | Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC)
- Miles Hopper, Policy Advisor | Minister's Office Labour | Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Taxation and Finance, Industry, Employment and Training
Communication date: 2020-03-20
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471100

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:
- Bill Morneau, Finance Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Taxation and Finance, Industry
Communication date: 2020-03-19
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471123

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister | Prime Minister's Office (PMO)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Taxation and Finance, Industry
Communication date: 2020-03-18
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471120

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Emmanueal Dubourg, Member of Parliament | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Bilingualism/Official Languages
Communication date: 2020-03-12
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471115

View associated registration

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Bill Morneau, Finance Minister | Finance Canada (FIN)

Subject Matter of the communication: Taxation and Finance, Industry
Communication date: 2020-03-09
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471119

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Lawrence Hanson, Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Industry
Communication date: 2020-03-05
Posted date: 2020-04-15
Communication number: 15009-471097

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Paul Halucha, Assistant Secretary to the Cabinet | Privy Council Office (PCO)

Privy Council Office (PCO)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Consumer Issues, Industry
Communication date: 2020-02-11
Posted date: 2020-03-16
Communication number: 15009-468372

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Marie-France Lalonde, MP | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Bilingualism/Official Languages
Communication date: 2020-02-11
Posted date: 2020-03-16
Communication number: 15009-467385

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Miles Hopper, Senior Policy Advisor | Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC)
- Ashley Michnowski, Policy Advisor | Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Labour
Communication date: 2020-02-05
Posted date: 2020-03-16
Communication number: 15009-467384

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Raymond Theberge, Commissioner of Official Languages | Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages (OCOL)
- Ghislaine Saikaley, Assistant Commissioner | Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages (OCOL)
- Pierre Leduc, Assistant Commissioner | Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages (OCOL)

Subject Matter of the communication: Bilingualism/Official Languages
Communication date: 2020-02-03
Posted date: 2020-03-16
Communication number: 15009-467375

View associated registration

Air Canada

In-house Corporation
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Dominic Cormier, Policy Advisor | Prime Minister's Office (PMO)

Subject Matter of the communication: Bilingualism/Official Languages
Communication date: 2020-01-24
Posted date: 2020-02-15
Communication number: 15009-464377

View associated registration

This is Exhibit "93" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Registration - In-house Organization

839

All Monthly Communication Reports for Association of Canadian Travel Agencies / association canadienne des agences de voyages

Wendy Paradis, President (Organization)

▼ Learn more...

Registrants are required to submit a monthly communication report for each oral and arranged communication with a designated public office holder. The name of the most senior paid officer (i.e. the registrant) will appear on all in-house monthly communication reports, whether or not he/she participated in the communication.

Note: Monthly Communication Reports are due on the 15th day of each month for communications that took place in the previous month.

Results below are sorted by posted date, beginning with the most recent.

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:
- Riley Schnurr, Senior Policy Advisor | Minister's Office | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)
- Randy Boissonnault, Minister of Tourism and Associate Minister of Finance | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)

Subject Matter of the communication: Tourism
Communication date: 2022-08-03
Posted date: 2022-08-03
Communication number: 6003-539028 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:
- Krista Apse, Director General | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)

Subject Matter of the communication: Economic Development
Communication date: 2022-03-14
Posted date: 2022-04-13
Communication number: 6003-528609 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

Communication number: 6003-482079 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Greg McLean, Member of Parliament | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Tourism, Small Business
Communication date: 2020-07-24
Posted date: 2020-08-14
Communication number: 6003-479856 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Kelsey MacDonald, Senior Policy Advisor | Office of Minister Melanie Joly | Rural Economic Development (Minister's Office)

Subject Matter of the communication: Tourism, Small Business
Communication date: 2020-05-22
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-475466 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Miled Hill, Senior Policy Advisor | Office of the Honourable Marc Garneau, Minister of Transport | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Tourism
Communication date: 2020-05-07
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-475460 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Natacha Engel, Senior Policy Advisor | Minister of Small Business, Export Promotion and International Trade Office | Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada (ISED)

Subject Matter of the communication: Tourism, Small Business
Communication date: 2020-05-06
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-475455 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies
In-house Organization

Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Brad Vis, Member of Parliament | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Tourism, Small Business
Communication date: 2020-05-04
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-475449 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Tony Baldinelli, Member of Parliament | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Transportation, Tourism, Small Business
Communication date: 2020-05-01
Posted date: 2020-06-14
Communication number: 6003-475259 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Blake Richards, M.P. | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Taxation and Finance, Transportation, Tourism
Communication date: 2020-04-20
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-472875 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Arthur Lam, Senior Policy Advisory in Minister Mary Ng's office | Export Development Canada (EDC)
- Yash Nanda, Special Assistanct Policy at Office of the Minister of Small Business, Export Promotion & International Trade | Export Development Canada (EDC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Taxation and Finance, Transportation, Tourism, Small Business
Communication date: 2020-04-09
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-472865 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Tony Clement, M.P. | House of Commons

Subject Matter of the communication: Taxation and Finance, Transportation, Tourism,

842

Small Business
Communication date: 2020-04-03
Posted date: 2020-06-15
Communication number: 6003-472862 View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Patricia Bovey, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Pierre-Hugues Boisvenu, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Leo Housakos, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- David Tkachuk, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Dennis Dawson, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Raymonde Gagne, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Grant Mitchell, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Terry Mercer, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)
- Rene Cormier, Senator | Standing Committee on Transport and Communications | Transport Canada (TC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Consumer Issues, Transportation
Communication date: 2018-02-28
Posted date: 2018-04-10
Communication number: 6003-423406 (amended from 6003-422588)
View associated registration

Association of Canadian Travel Agencies

In-house Organization
Designated Public Office Holders who participated in the communication:

- Marc Garneau, Minister of Transport | Transport Canada (TC)
- Omar Alghabra, MP Mississauga Centre | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Adel Boulazreg, Policy Advisor, Minister's Office | Transport Canada (TC)
- Michael Stephenson, Regional Affairs, Ministerial Regional Office, Ontario | Transport Canada (TC)
- Hector Lopez-Negrete, Executive Assistant to Omar Alghabra | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)
- Naila Mahmood, Communications and Outreach Assistant to Omar Alghabra | Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Subject Matter of the communication: Consumer Issues, International Relations, National Security/Security, Taxation and Finance, Transportation, Tourism
Communication date: 2017-08-15

This is Exhibit "94" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

844

"please refer to this link that will answer your question

Top Latest People Photos Videos

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · Mar 25
Replying to @johnpeterc88 @TV_SteveWilks and @AirCanada
Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media
1

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · Mar 25
Replying to @asha_jibril @TravelGoC and 2 others
Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media
2

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · Mar 25
Replying to @FerrisCatWheel @libbyconser and 5 others
Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media
2

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · Mar 25
Replying to @ungraceful_mi and @airtransat
Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media
1

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · Mar 25
Replying to @Ian_saucy and @WestJet
Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

845

This is Exhibit "95" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Nicole Beart
@Memory_Catcher

@OTC_gc - What recourse do people have to get their money back from #airlines? #Coronavirus has flights cancelled, borders closing, and yet the airlines are keeping the money of everyone who had #springbreak travel plans. @TravelGoC @Transport_gc

2:34 PM · Mar 21, 2020 · Twitter Web App

Tweet your reply

Reply

OTC.gc.ca @OTC_gc · Mar 25, 2020

Replying to @Memory_Catcher

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

J.P. Cavalier
@johnpeterc88

En réponse à @CTA_gc @TV_SteveWilks et @AirCanada

AC cancelled my flight (it was them, not me) and they still refuse to refund. You guys need to get your act together and actually protect consumers, not the airlines. This is ridiculous.

Traduire le Tweet

3:56 PM · 24 mars 2020 · Twitter Web App

2 J'aime

Tweetez votre réponse.

Répondre

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020

En réponse à @johnpeterc88 @TV_SteveWilks et @AirCanada

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

Sleepyhead Sam ☀️
@freckletoxo

En réponse à @ @NachoGreg et 4 autres personnes

no, we purchased in January for April 11th and refused a cash refund. Even though the border is closed.

Traduire le Tweet

1:57 PM · 23 mars 2020 · Twitter for iPhone

1 J'aime

Tweetez votre réponse. Répondre

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020

En réponse à @freckletoxo @FerrisCatWheel et 5 autres personnes

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

2

Canadian Dad @JBully17 · 25 mars 2020

@CP24 I know you recently shared a great article about @SunwingVacay flying back stranded Canadians but those who should be praised should be the Canadians at home that Sunwing won't refund their money. Get a reporter to look into it!
#covid19Canada

3 2

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020

En réponse à @JBully17

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

6

J.P. Cavalier
@johnpeterc88

En réponse à @CTA_gc @TV_SteveWilks et @AirCanada

AC cancelled my flight (it was them, not me) and they still refuse to refund. You guys need to get your act together and actually protect consumers, not the airlines. This is ridiculous.

Traduire le Tweet

3:56 PM · 24 mars 2020 · Twitter Web App

2 J'aime

Tweetez votre réponse.

Répondre

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020

En réponse à @johnpeterc88 @TV_SteveWilks et @AirCanada

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

1

Sleepyhead Sam ☀️
@freckletoxo

En réponse à @ @NachoGreg et 4 autres personnes

no, we purchased in January for April 11th and refused a cash refund. Even though the border is closed.

Traduire le Tweet

1:57 PM · 23 mars 2020 · Twitter for iPhone

1 J'aime

Tweetez votre réponse. Répondre

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020

En réponse à @freckletoxo @FerrisCatWheel et 5 autres personnes

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

2

@CTA_gc
Please assit us seeing a full refund from Air Canada regarding upcoming flights in April.
A voucher/credit is not what we need, a full refund is the only option during COVID19.

Traduire le Tweet

East Yorker @eastyorker_ · 17 mars 2020
@AirCanada @HarveyCashore
We have a state of emergency in Ontario, Air Canada won't issue a refund to families booked on flights in April.
So not Canadian, unjust and outside what one would expect in these times.
twitter.com/TorontoStar/st…

8:06 AM · 23 mars 2020 · Twitter for Android

Tweetez votre réponse. Répondre

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020
En réponse à @eastyorker_
Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-… Thank you. CTA social media

1

Mimi Nguyen
@ungraceful_mi

En réponse à @ungraceful_mi et @airtransat

The PASSENGER chooses how they get refunded. I believe this is a #lawsuit waiting to happen if you willfully make passengers take a credit that will expire in 12 months. @CTA_gc you may want to look into this company.

Traduire le Tweet

1:34 PM · 22 mars 2020 · Twitter for Android

1 J'aime

Tweetez votre réponse. Répondre

CTA.gc.ca @CTA_gc · 25 mars 2020

En réponse à @ungraceful_mi et @airtransat

Good afternoon, please refer to this link that will answer your question: otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-... Thank you. CTA social media

1

This is Exhibit "96" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: March 27, 2020 at 10:25:26 AM PDT
To: Tammy 2019 <tammylyn2019@gmail.com>
Subject: RE: SWOOP AIRLINES

Hello Tammy,

Thanks for following up.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that may relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

Best,

info@ Team
Office des transports du Canada / Gouvernement du Canada
info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Tél: 1-888-222-2592 / ATS: 1-800-669-5575
Suivez-nous : Twitter / YouTube

Canadian Transportation Agency / Government of Canada
info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Telephone 1-888-222-2592
Follow us: Twitter / YouTube

-----Original Message-----
From: Tammy 2019 <tammylyn2019@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, March 20, 2020 11:25 AM
To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Re: SWOOP AIRLINES

Hello,

Thank you for your response, but I don't understand the answer.

"However, they would have to make sure the passenger completes their itinerary." If the carrier doesn't - what form of compensation am I entitled to? A refund in the form of a future credit or a refund in the original form of payment?

I have them my money in exchange for a service they are unable to provide. This is also outside of my control and a financial burden to me. All I want is my money returned.

Any info/clarification would be appreciated.

Thank you.

Sent from my iPhone

On Mar 20, 2020, at 7:43 AM, Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca> wrote:

Hello Tammy,

Thanks for contacting the Canadian Transportation Agency.

Air Passenger Protection Regulations provide a list of situations considered 'outside the air carrier's control', including medical emergencies and orders or instructions from state officials. The CTA has identified a number of situations related to this pandemic that are considered 'outside of the air carrier's control'. These include flight disruptions to locations that are covered by a government advisory against travel or unnecessary travel due to COVID-19; https://rppa-appr.ca/eng/obligations-and-level-control

In these situations, air carriers would not be required to provide standards of treatment or compensation for inconvenience. However, they would have to make sure the passenger completes their itinerary.

Until April 30th, the time at which passengers will be entitled to compensation for inconvenience related to flight cancellations or delays will be adjusted, to provide air carriers with more flexibility to modify schedules and combine flights. Air carriers will be allowed to make schedule changes without owing compensation to passengers until 72 hours before a scheduled departure time (instead of 14 days), and air carriers will be obligated to compensate passengers for delays on arrival that are fully within the air carrier's control once those delays are 6 hours or more in length (instead of 3 hours).

The CTA has also exempted air carriers from offering alternative travel arrangements that include flights on other air carrier's with which they have no commercial agreement.

Best,

info@ Team

Office des transports du Canada / Gouvernement du Canada

info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Tél: 1-888-222-2592 / ATS: 1-800-669-5575

Suivez-nous : Twitter / YouTube

Canadian Transportation Agency / Government of Canada

info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Telephone 1-888-222-2592

Follow us: Twitter / YouTube

-----Original Message-----

From: Tammy 2019 <tammylyn2019@gmail.com>

Sent: Friday, March 20, 2020 1:08 AM

To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>

Subject: SWOOP AIRLINES

Hello,

I booked a flight with Swoop Airlines for next month and they are cancelling the flight and only offering me a future credit. The flight is from Abbotsford, B.C. to Las Vegas, Nevada and return.

Am I not entitled to a refund back to my card?

Thank you,

Tammy Pedersen

604-308-6926

This is Exhibit "97" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: March 27, 2020 at 1:57:05 PM EDT
To: Jenn Mossey <themosseys@rogers.com>
Subject: RE: trip cancelled

Hello,

Thanks for contacting the Canadian Transportation Agency.

The CTA has taken steps to address the major impact that the COVD-19 pandemic is having on the airlines industry by making temporary exemptions to certain requirements of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR). These exemptions apply to flight disruptions that occur from March 13, 2020 until June 30, 2020.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that may relieve the airline of such obligations in force majeure situations.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

You should first contact your airline to try and resolve the issues you have raised. Given circumstances, please be patient and provide your airline time to respond to you – a minimum of 30 days. If you do not hear back from your airline, or you are dissatisfied with the response you receive, you may file a complaint with the CTA.

If you decide to file, or have already filed, a complaint with the CTA, please note that in light of the extraordinary circumstances resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic, the CTA has decided to temporarily pause communications with airlines on complaints against them. This includes all new complaints received, as well as those currently in the facilitation process. The pause is currently set to continue until June 30, and is aimed at allowing the airlines to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands, like getting Canadians home.

Also, effective March 25, 2020, the deadline for a carrier to respond to claims filed by passengers for payment of the compensation for inconvenience is suspended until June 30, 2020 (or any further period that the Agency may order). Once the suspension is over, carriers will have 120 days to respond to claims received before or during the suspension.

Rest assured that once the pause is lifted, we will deal with every complaint. The delay will not change the outcome of our review.

Best,

info@ Team

Office des transports du Canada / Gouvernement du Canada

info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Tél: 1-888-222-2592 / ATS: 1-800-669-5575

Suivez-nous : Twitter / YouTube

Canadian Transportation Agency / Government of Canada

info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Telephone 1-888-222-2592

Follow us: Twitter / YouTube

From: Jenn Mossey <themosseys@rogers.com>
Sent: Friday, March 27, 2020 1:08 PM
To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: trip cancelled

Good Afternoon,

My trip was cancelled by Sunwing vacations. At which point they were offering a refund (they did this for ONE day).

I filled out the form online and got confirmation that I would be getting a refund as did I get the same paperwork from I-travel 2000.

They are now telling me that I will not be getting a refund but a voucher.

This was BEFORE you changed the policy to (in my opinion) suit the airlines.

We need our money back since we can’t afford to have that money tied up right now because my husband may lose his job permanently after all of this, so there will be no vacations.

Once something is in writing (an email) and they post the policy and you do what you are told during the posted policy you are owed the money.

I am attaching my documentation of confirmation and the policy that was posted when I completed my refund request.

I would like your assistance during these uncertain times.

My husband and I both work in trucking and are currently still working to keep goods flowing.

Jennifer Mossey

519-471-9949

Sent from my iPhone

This is Exhibit "98" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: Wed., Apr. 8, 2020, 10:57 a.m.
Subject: RE: Complaint about CTA Conduct
To: Trevor Smith <trevorsmith.gc@gmail.com>

Hello Trevor,

Thank you for sharing your concerns with us. We understand that air passengers are experiencing challenges and frustrations during these difficult times.

The situation passengers and airlines face as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic is without precedent. When the existing legislation, regulations, and airline tariffs were developed, none anticipated a once-in-a-century pandemic, worldwide disruptions in air travel, huge drops in passenger volumes, and mass layoffs across the airline sector.

Canada's legislative framework, which differs from those of other jurisdictions such as the United States and European Union, does not impose as a minimum obligation the requirement to refund passengers if a flight is cancelled due to situations outside of the airline's control, such as a global pandemic. We recognize, however, that in the context of widespread flight cancellations, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned travels could be left out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights.

In these extraordinary circumstances, it would not be unreasonable for airlines to provide vouchers or credits, even if this is not clearly required in certain situations, and for passengers to accept them.

This approach strikes a balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities during this unprecedented situation. It could help ensure that passengers do not simply lose the full value of their flights and that, over the longer term, the air sector is able to continue providing diverse services.

Any complaint filed with the CTA will, of course, be assessed on its merits, taking into consideration all relevant facts and the law.

If you would like more information, please consult the statement the CTA issued on March 25, 2020.

Thank you again for your message.

Best,

info@ Team

Office des transports du Canada / Gouvernement du Canada

info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Tél: 1-888-222-2592 / ATS: 1-800-669-5575

Suivez-nous : Twitter / YouTube

Canadian Transportation Agency / Government of Canada

info@otc-cta.gc.ca / Telephone 1-888-222-2592

Follow us: Twitter / YouTube

From: Trevor Smith <trevorsmith.gc@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, March 27, 2020 2:48 PM
To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Complaint about CTA Conduct

This is an official complaint in regards to the recent action of the Canadian Transportation Agency. The statement titled "Statement on Vouchers" dated March 25, 2020 is reckless and irresponsible. The statement is not based on any case law and/or Tribunal decisions, and clearly lacks any merit. It willfully disregards the rights of Canadian consumers and shows a clear bias towards the airline industry.

Please, tell me what guarantees we have as consumers that these vouchers will be worth anything in the next 24 months? Will the Canadian government repay the millions of dollars consumers lose when the vouchers are worthless? Doubtful.

Show me within case law where Force Majeure has ever been applied to circumstances such as these. Show me a ruling where Force Majeure has been applied to events in the future, where a customer is not actually sitting in an airport, staying at a resort, or enroute to a destination when an unforeseeable event occurs.

Explain to me why you feel a business would be allowed to sit on a consumer's money for years without providing a service? I must have missed the memo where we became banks for airlines. I must have also missed the memo that we are on the hook to keep airlines afloat during unprecedented times. I have to put food on my table during these unforeseen times and now you expect me to borrow an airline my money for the next two years and trust that they will pay me back. Give me a break. It is not a sensible balance to allow airlines to keep our money so they can pay their executives and lay off thousands of employees. If you want to protect the airline industry, then allow Canadians to choose to support the industry. Don't tell them they have to when they don't. It is the choice of Canadian's to use the services of an airline in the future, not yours. It is also very much our money, not yours or the airlines!!!!

The CTA hasn't honoured the mandate they swore to uphold in the slightest. Instead, the Canadian Transportation Agency just helped large airlines bully their customers into waiving their rights.

Bottom line, there is no legal support for this statement. I am demanding this statement be retracted and that the Canadian Transportation Agency issue a written apology to Canadian consumers.

Sincerely,

Trevor Smith

From: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: April 14, 2020 at 10:23:15 AM MDT
To: dale smith <smith_d@shaw.ca>
Subject: RE: Airtransat Will not Refund $$$ Formal complaint

Hello Dale,

Thank you for sharing your concerns with us. We understand that air passengers are experiencing challenges and frustrations during these difficult times.

The situation passengers and airlines face as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic is without precedent. When the existing legislation, regulations, and airline tariffs were developed, none anticipated a once-in-a-century pandemic, worldwide disruptions in air travel, huge drops in passenger volumes, and mass layoffs across the airline sector.

Canada's legislative framework, which differs from those of other jurisdictions such as the United States and European Union, does not impose as a minimum obligation the requirement to refund passengers if a flight is cancelled due to situations outside of the airline's control, such as a global pandemic. We recognize, however, that in the context of widespread flight cancellations, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned travels could be left out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights.

In these extraordinary circumstances, it would not be unreasonable for airlines to provide vouchers or credits, even if this is not clearly required in certain situations, and for passengers to accept them.

This approach strikes a balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities during this unprecedented situation. It could help ensure that passengers do not simply lose the full value of their flights and that, over the longer term, the air sector is able to continue providing diverse services.

Any complaint filed with the CTA will, of course, be assessed on its merits, taking into consideration all relevant facts and the law. If you would like to file an air travel complaint with the CTA, you may do so here; https://rppa-appr.ca/eng/file-air-travel-complaint

If you would like more information, please consult the statement the CTA issued on March 25, 2020; https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Thank you again for your message.

Yours truly,
The CTA Team

-----Original Message-----
From: dale smith <smith_d@shaw.ca>
Sent: Sunday, April 5, 2020 2:52 PM
To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Airtransat Will not Refund $$$ Formal complaint

o Whom It May Concern:

My Wife and I had a Holiday booked through Amore Away Travel Consultant Cherie Weber and Air Transat for the booking of April 10, 2002 to April 17, 2020 to Cancun Mexico.

Obviously the flight was cancelled by Air Transat due to the Convid Pandemic and they are not refunding our monies in the amount of $4,160.00.

I would like to point out the the US issued the following ruling to the Air Lines to refund customers due to flight cancellations:

https://www.transportation.gov/briefing-room/us-department-transportation-issues-enforcement-notice-clarifying-air-carrier-refund

I would like to submit this formal complaint to Canadian Tranportation Agency and have them look into the Flight Cancellations for many Canadians and rule that the Canadian Airlines refund clients in which their flights were cancelled.

I have submitted a registered letter the Air Transat requesting a refund but have not heard anything back as of yet. They are saying they will issue travel vouchers, this should not be the only option as they have received our monies and we should expect a refund as they have cancelled our Flights and this was out of our control.

Thank-You,
Dale Smith
Medicine ,Alberta
smith_d@shaw.ca

From: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: Fri, Apr 17, 2020 at 9:50 AM
Subject: RE: CTA statement regarding vouchers and refunds
To: Richard T <richardswtang@gmail.com>

Hello Richard,

Thank you for sharing your concerns with us. We understand that air passengers are experiencing challenges and frustrations during these difficult times.

The situation passengers and airlines face as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic is without precedent. When the existing legislation, regulations, and airline tariffs were developed, none anticipated a once-in-a-century pandemic, worldwide disruptions in air travel, huge drops in passenger volumes, and mass layoffs across the airline sector.

Canada's legislative framework, which differs from those of other jurisdictions such as the United States and European Union, does not impose as a minimum obligation the requirement to refund passengers if a flight is cancelled due to situations outside of the airline's control, such as a global pandemic. We recognize, however, that in the context of widespread flight cancellations, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned travels could be left out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights.

In these extraordinary circumstances, it would not be unreasonable for airlines to provide vouchers or credits, even if this is not clearly required in certain situations, and for passengers to accept them.

This approach strikes a balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities during this unprecedented situation. It could help ensure that passengers do not simply lose the full value of their flights and that, over the longer term, the air sector is able to continue providing diverse services.

Any complaint filed with the CTA will, of course, be assessed on its merits, taking into consideration all relevant facts and the law.

If you would like more information, please consult the statement the CTA issued on March 25, 2020; https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Thank you again for your message.

Yours truly,

The CTA Team

From: Richard T <richardswtang@gmail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 3, 2020 3:34 PM
To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: CTA statement regarding vouchers and refunds

Hi there,

Considering that the CTA released a statement that was neither an official decision, and in fact goes against current CTA decisions in place, various transborder tariffs, Air Passenger Rights section 17(2) and 17(7), and also various provincial laws that indicate refund in the form of original payment should be issued, why has CTA gone against these regulations? Considering that thousands of Canadian families are now being laid off, the money could be used to support themselves during this Covid-19 crisis. Your statement, while not legally binding, on March 25 has effectively made all airlines and credit card companies to work together and deny refunds and chargebacks. Your ill advised statement has effectively caused further financial difficulty for thousands of Canadians. You should follow in the steps as the US Department of Transportation and order airlines to uphold their tariffs, provincial law, the existing CTA decisions, as they in effect are breaking the law. CTA you are behind in the times and a government agency that does not support Canadians when in need. It is very clear. The reality while this global event is something that was unforeseen, it is the cost of doing business, and they cannot go back on the contracts and laws they've agreed.

Please respond accordingly, and hope you go back on your statement and inform all airlines they have an obligation to fulfill. I did not authorize my credit card to be charge for future credit. CTA effectively made that happen.

Richard

From: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: April 20, 2020 at 11:56:45 AM EDT
To: Paola Ferguson <fergusonpjc@hotmail.com>
Subject: RE: Airlines refusing refund in original form of payment

Hello,

Thank you for sharing your concerns with us. We understand that air passengers are experiencing challenges and frustrations during these difficult times.

The situation passengers and airlines face as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic is without precedent. When the existing legislation, regulations, and airline tariffs were developed, none anticipated a once-in-a-century pandemic, worldwide disruptions in air travel, huge drops in passenger volumes, and mass layoffs across the airline sector.

Canada's legislative framework, which differs from those of other jurisdictions such as the United States and European Union, does not impose as a minimum obligation the requirement to refund passengers if a flight is cancelled due to situations outside of the airline's control, such as a global pandemic. We recognize, however, that in the context of widespread flight cancellations, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned travels could be left out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights.

In these extraordinary circumstances, it would not be unreasonable for airlines to provide vouchers or credits, even if this is not clearly required in certain situations, and for passengers to accept them.

This approach strikes a balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities during this unprecedented situation. It could help ensure that passengers do not simply lose the full value of their flights and that, over the longer term, the air sector is able to continue providing diverse services.

Any complaint filed with the CTA will, of course, be assessed on its merits, taking into consideration all relevant facts and the law.

If you would like more information, please consult the statement the CTA issued on March 25, 2020; https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Thank you again for your message.

Yours truly,
The CTA Team

-----Original Message-----
From: Paola Ferguson <fergusonpjc@hotmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, April 16, 2020 3:56 PM
To: Info <Info@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: Airlines refusing refund in original form of payment

Good Afternoon,

I am writing to you about the issue regarding airlines refusing to issue a refund to Canadian consumers who either have had their flights cancelled or who no longer wish to travel due to the current pandemic. Other federal governments in other countries, like the United States, have already directed airlines to refund money to consumers in the original form of payment as is outlined in the signed contracts all consumers possess.
https://www.cnn.com/2020/04/03/politics/airlines-canceled-flights-refunds/index.html

Your organization can help all Canadians deal with the economic hardships this pandemic has caused. Many people have lost jobs and airlines, who are protecting their businesses, are holding these funds unfairly. What is the plan of the CTA to address this issue?

Thank you for your attention to this matter. Please email me at fergusonpjc@hotmail.com or call me at the number below.

Sent from my iPhone

This is Exhibit "99" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Fwd: Air travel complaint: 20-84843

Reine Desrosiers <reinedesrosiers@gmail.com> Mon, Apr 20, 2020 at 2:58 PM
To: Gabor Lukacs <lukacs@airpassengerrights.ca>

---------- Forwarded message ---------
From: Canadian Transportation Agency <pta-atc@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Date: Mon., Apr. 6, 2020, 7:05 p.m.
Subject: Air travel complaint: 20-84843
To: <reinedesrosiers@gmail.com>

Thank you. We have successfully received your complaint. Your case number is 20-84843

Suspension of all air dispute resolution activities

CTA Operations during the COVID-19 crisis

During these difficult times, the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) continues to maintain its normal operations while our employees practice social distancing. Our dedicated employees are working remotely and are available through electronic means to provide service. You can continue to request CTA services, file applications, and do normal business with us through our normal channels.

Dispute resolutions involving air carriers during the COVID-19 crisis

If you have not already done so, you should first contact your airline to try and resolve the issues you have raised. Given circumstances, please be patient and provide your airline time to respond to you – a minimum of 30 days. If you do not hear back from your airline, or you are dissatisfied with the response you receive, you may file a complaint with the CTA.

Please note that the CTA has temporarily paused all dispute resolution activities involving air carriers until June 30, 2020, to permit them to focus on immediate and urgent operational demands. While you can continue to file air passenger complaints with us and all complaints will be processed in due course, we may not be able to respond quickly. On or before June 30, 2020, the Agency will determine if the pause should end on that date or be extended to a later date.

Also, effective March 25, 2020, the deadline for a carrier to respond to claims filed by passengers for payment of the compensation for inconvenience is suspended until June 30, 2020 (or any further period that the Agency may order). Once the suspension is over, carriers will have 120 days to respond to claims received before or during the suspension.

Air carriers' obligations during the global COVID-19 pandemic

The CTA has taken steps to address the major impact that the COVD-19 pandemic is having on the airlines industry by making temporary exemptions to certain requirements of the Air Passenger Protection Regulations (APPR). These exemptions apply to flight disruptions that occur from March 13, 2020 until June 30, 2020.

Statement on Vouchers for flight disruptions

Status of Your Complaint

You can check the status of your complaint online. Please note it can take up to 24 hours for your case to process before your status is available online.

Need immediate help during your trip?

Official Global Travel Advisory from the Government of Canada

IMPORTANT NOTICE FOR BAGGAGE COMPLAINTS – TIME LIMITS IN EFFECT

- 7 day time limit for damaged baggage or missing items:
  You must submit a written claim with your airline within 7 days of receipt of your baggage if your claim relates to damaged baggage or missing items.

- 21 day time limit for lost baggage:
  You must submit a written claim with your airline within 21 days for baggage that is potentially lost.

Failure to submit a written claim to the airline within the set time limits could result in the carrier denying your claim. All claims are subject to proof of loss so be sure to include all out of pocket expenses.

Note: You can update your case file by emailing pta-atc@otc-cta.gc.ca or by faxing 819-953-6019.

20-84843_2020-04-06T185531.pdf
382K

This is Exhibit "100" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

sunwing

Travel Agent Special Update

March 27, 2020

Dear travel agents,

We would like to thank you for your continued support and patience. As you can imagine, we are moving quickly during this unprecedented time. That is why, as part of our efforts to keep our employees and customers safe, we were the first airline in Canada to suspend all southbound flights and focus solely on bringing our customers home.

Last week, we expanded our repatriation efforts to offer vacant seats free to any Canadian stranded in destination on our ongoing northbound flights. On March 23rd, we completed our repatriation efforts by bringing home more than 60,000 people including 3,300 stranded Canadians that were non-Sunwing customers.

Initially, we offered customers booked on our flights during this suspension the choice between a future travel credit valid for 12 months and a full cash refund. However, after the Government of Canada's non-essential travel advisory, we adjusted our policy to be aligned with all other Canadian airlines and tour operators. This decision is also consistent with the ruling made by the Canadian Transportation Agency on March 26, 2020. All customers booked on our flights will receive a future travel credit and, as a further gesture, we have extended the validity of this credit for two years. Your commission for bookings will be protected; however, no further commission will be paid when customers re-book using their future travel credit.

While we understand that some customers would have preferred a refund, we are confident that during the next two years they will be able to take the flights or vacations they had planned.

We want to reiterate that any customer who purchased travel insurance is still eligible for a refund in accordance with the terms of their policy. Customers that purchased the Worry Free Cancellation Waiver may be entitled to a partial refund with their future travel credit. These partial refunds will be processed as quickly as possible as we continue to work through adjusting thousands of backlogged files. We ask for your patience as we work through our backlog.

As a reminder, all our southbound flights up to and including April 30, 2020, have been cancelled. We have introduced a new flexible policy for departures between May 1 and June 30, 2020 where final payments can be provided up to 25 days before the departure date (as opposed to the standard 45 days).

Please continue to check our website for important updates.

Thank you for your continued support and stay well.

This is Exhibit "101" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

sunwing

880

Travel Agent Special Update
March 27, 2020

COVID-19 Frequently Asked Questions

Where can I find more information about COVID-19?

Canadians are encouraged to consult the destination page on www.travel.gc.ca for the latest advice – the Public Health Agency of Canada (PHAC) is constantly updating this page with advice for travellers based on the latest science available. Anyone travelling should also register with the Government of Canada at www.travel.gc.ca/register prior to travel.

I've tried emailing and calling, why is it taking so long for someone to get back to me?

We know that it can be frustrating waiting for a reply, and we apologize for the long delays. As you can imagine, we have been inundated with calls and emails from concerned customers. Over the past few weeks we have handled over 77,000 calls. Our focus has been ensuring the safety of all our passengers and staff during this challenging time and bringing Canadians home. All our operations were moved from our head offices in Toronto and Montreal to be home-based in order to keep our employees safe per government recommendations regarding social distancing. Now that our repatriation efforts are completed and we have ensured the safety of our employees, we're answering your calls and messages as quickly as possible. Please note that all files with departures between March 17th and April 30th are being processed by our finance team as quickly as possible and there is no need to contact us.

My clients are scheduled to travel between now and April 30, 2020 – what do I need to do?

Customers with departure dates for flights or vacation packages between March 17th and April 30th are eligible to receive a future travel credit in the value of the original amount paid. No action is needed from you or your customers to receive this. Their original booking number will be the code of their future travel credit. We will communicate formally via the email address we have on file (including group travel bookings). You and your client do not need to contact us. This credit can be redeemed against future travel for travel up to 24 months from original departure date to anywhere Sunwing Airlines operates.

Why are my clients receiving a future travel voucher instead of a full cash refund?

While we initially offered customers booked on our flights a choice between a future travel credit valid for 12 months and a full cash refund, after the announcement of the Government of Canada's non-essential travel advisory, we adjusted our policy to be aligned with all other Canadian airlines and tour operators. This decision is also consistent with the ruling made by the Canadian Transportation Agency on March 26, 2020. All customers booked on our flights will be offered a future travel credit, and as a further gesture, we have extended the validity of this credit to two years.

My clients submitted a request for a refund before the policies changed – will they still receive a refund?

All non-processed refund requests were automatically transferred over to our new policy and customers will be receiving a future travel credit. We understand that some customers would have preferred a refund, but we are confident that during the next two years they will be able to take the flights or vacations they had planned.

sunwing

COVID-19 Frequently Asked Questions

What is the future travel credit process and how does it work?

We've made the travel credit process quite simple for our customers to redeem. When your clients are ready to rebook their vacation, the previous booking number is the key to their credit. Customers will only need to answer security questions to access and apply this credit to their new booking. If they do not use the full amount, it will remain as a credit on file and can be used at a later date.

When will booking cancellations be processed?

Our finance team has been working around the clock to process thousands of files. We hope to have the majority of them complete by April 9, 2020.

My clients purchased the Worry Free Cancellation Waiver – will they receive a refund?

Sunwing's Worry Free Cancellation Waiver lets customers cancel their vacation for any reason up to three hours prior to departure. Depending on when your clients cancelled, they may be entitled to a partial refund in combination with a future travel voucher. Please see our website for full terms and conditions. These partial refunds will be processed as quickly as possible as we continue to work through adjusting thousands of backlogged files. We ask for your patience as we work through our backlog.

What are my clients' next steps if they purchased travel insurance through an insurance provider?

Once your clients' file has been processed, we will let them know via the email address on file. At that point, they can then provide this document to their insurance provider who will guide them through next steps.

My clients made a deposit on a vacation departing after May 1 – what are their options?

We have adjusted our policy to make it more flexible for customers on final payment. We have introduced a new flexible policy for departures between May 1 and June 30, 2020 where final payments can be provided up to 25 days before the departure date (as opposed to the standard 45 days). By extending our final payment window, your clients can make a more informed decision about their travel. Please note that all other terms and conditions apply and cancelling will result in the loss of your clients' deposit.

When will I receive my commission?

All commissions are paid 21 days prior to departure dates and all bookings with unpaid commissions will be looked at in the next couple of weeks. We need to finalize all booking cancellations before we can issue commissions payments and we appreciate your patience.

Is my commission protected with future travel credits?

Your commission for bookings will be protected; however, no further commission will be paid when customers rebook using their future travel credit.

Can my clients still make a future booking?

Of course! Our sales centre and website are fully operational with our schedule for the upcoming summer and winter seasons in place and up to date. Our team is also ready to assist with all you group and wedding bookings. New bookings can be made on available packages departing from May 1, 2020 onwards.

This is Exhibit "102" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Chats

Search

Your Story | Donald | Chrystal | Karina

WestJet
We understand the c... · 10:01 pm

FlySwoop
To talk to an agent, pl... · 3:29 pm

Maureen Bowman
sorry the link won't w... · 3:13 pm

Alan Jackson
Alan sent a photo. · 1:55 pm

Kalpna Joshi
Kalpna sent a photo. · 8:15 am

Dave Christopher
Dave sent an attachment. · Mon

WestJet

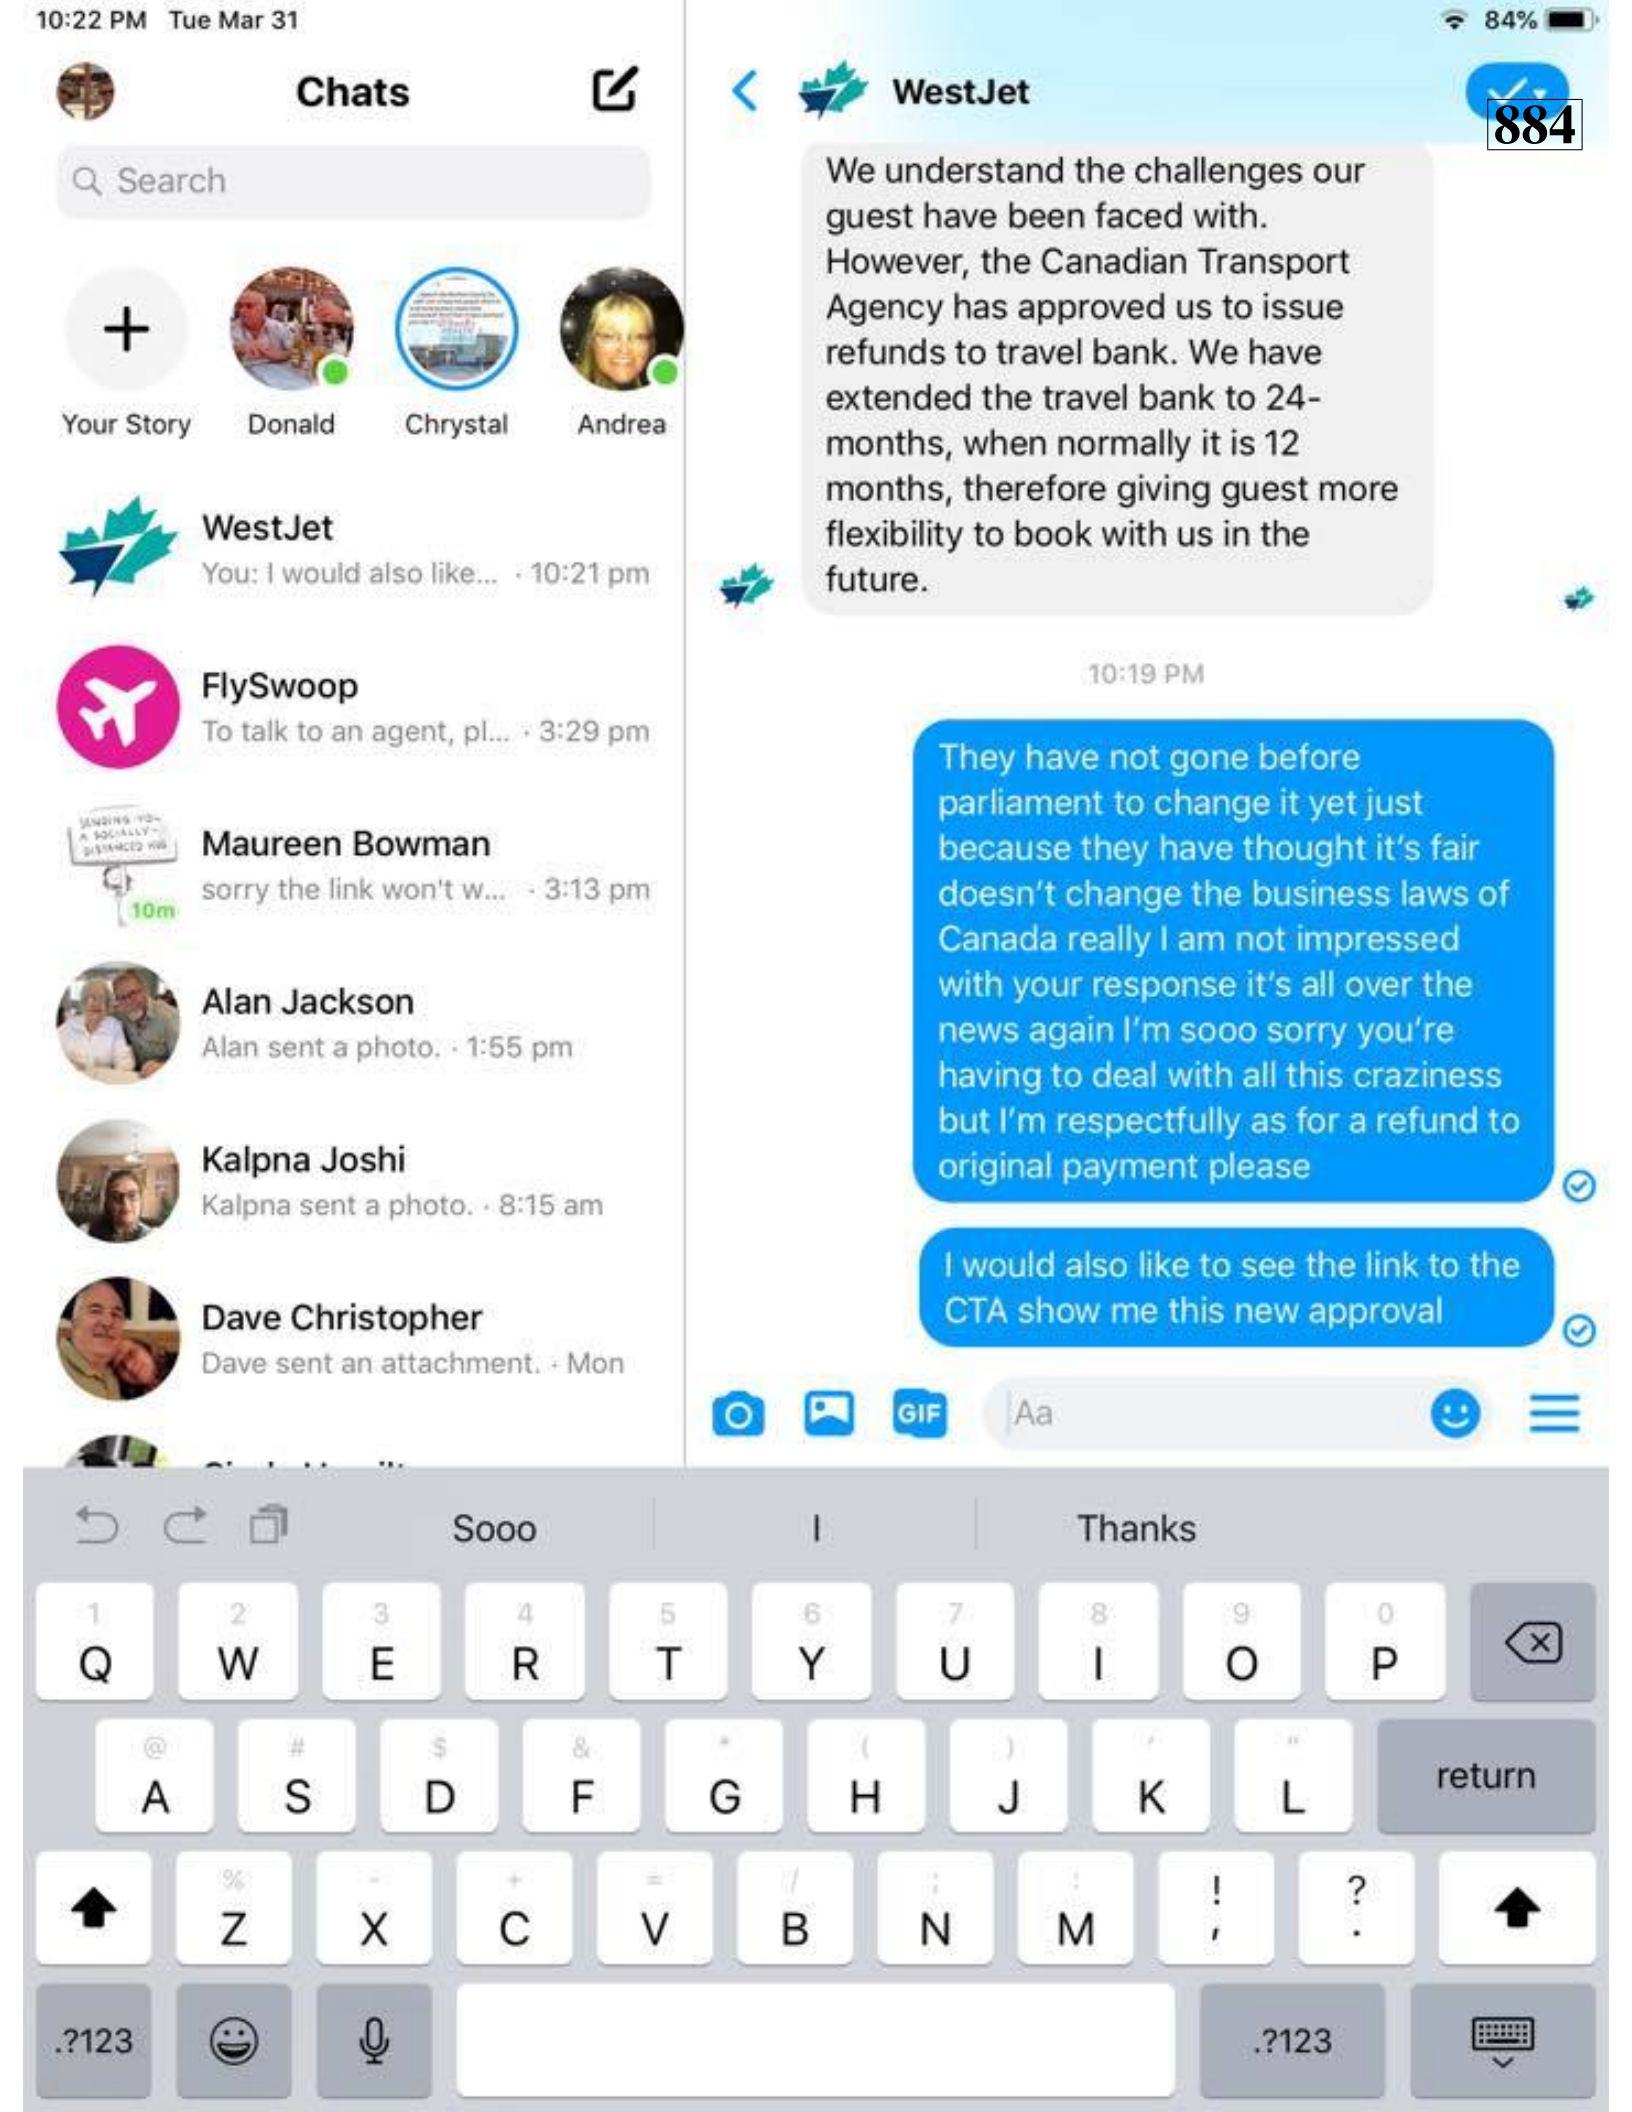
883 canceled theses flights and have actually broken our contract for the services we agreed to when I booked. It's in your service agreement for my refund,the Ontario service laws and the new government laws too. Please I do understand it's a crazy time for all of you too,but I am requesting a refund because my children are having to also deal with the fallout of this through thier employment . Yes things are changing daily so if we have to help them we would like to,since we are retired and on a budget too

We understand the challenges our guest have been faced with. However, the Canadian Transport Agency has approved us to issue refunds to travel bank. We have extended the travel bank to 24-months, when normally it is 12 months, therefore giving guest more flexibility to book with us in the future.

Aa

Sooo | I | Thanks

Q W E R T Y U I O P
A S D F G H J K L return
Z X C V B N M
.?123 .?123



10:22 PM Tue Mar 31
84%
Chats
Search
Your Story
Donald
Chrystal
Andrea
WestJet
You: I would also like... · 10:21 pm
FlySwoop
To talk to an agent, pl... · 3:29 pm
Maureen Bowman
sorry the link won't w... · 3:13 pm
10m
Alan Jackson
Alan sent a photo. · 1:55 pm
Kalpna Joshi
Kalpna sent a photo. · 8:15 am
Dave Christopher
Dave sent an attachment. · Mon
WestJet
884
We understand the challenges our guest have been faced with. However, the Canadian Transport Agency has approved us to issue refunds to travel bank. We have extended the travel bank to 24-months, when normally it is 12 months, therefore giving guest more flexibility to book with us in the future.
10:19 PM
They have not gone before parliament to change it yet just because they have thought it's fair doesn't change the business laws of Canada really I am not impressed with your response it's all over the news again I'm sooo sorry you're having to deal with all this craziness but I'm respectfully as for a refund to original payment please
I would also like to see the link to the CTA show me this new approval
GIF
Aa
Sooo
I
Thanks
Q W E R T Y U I O P
A S D F G H J K L return
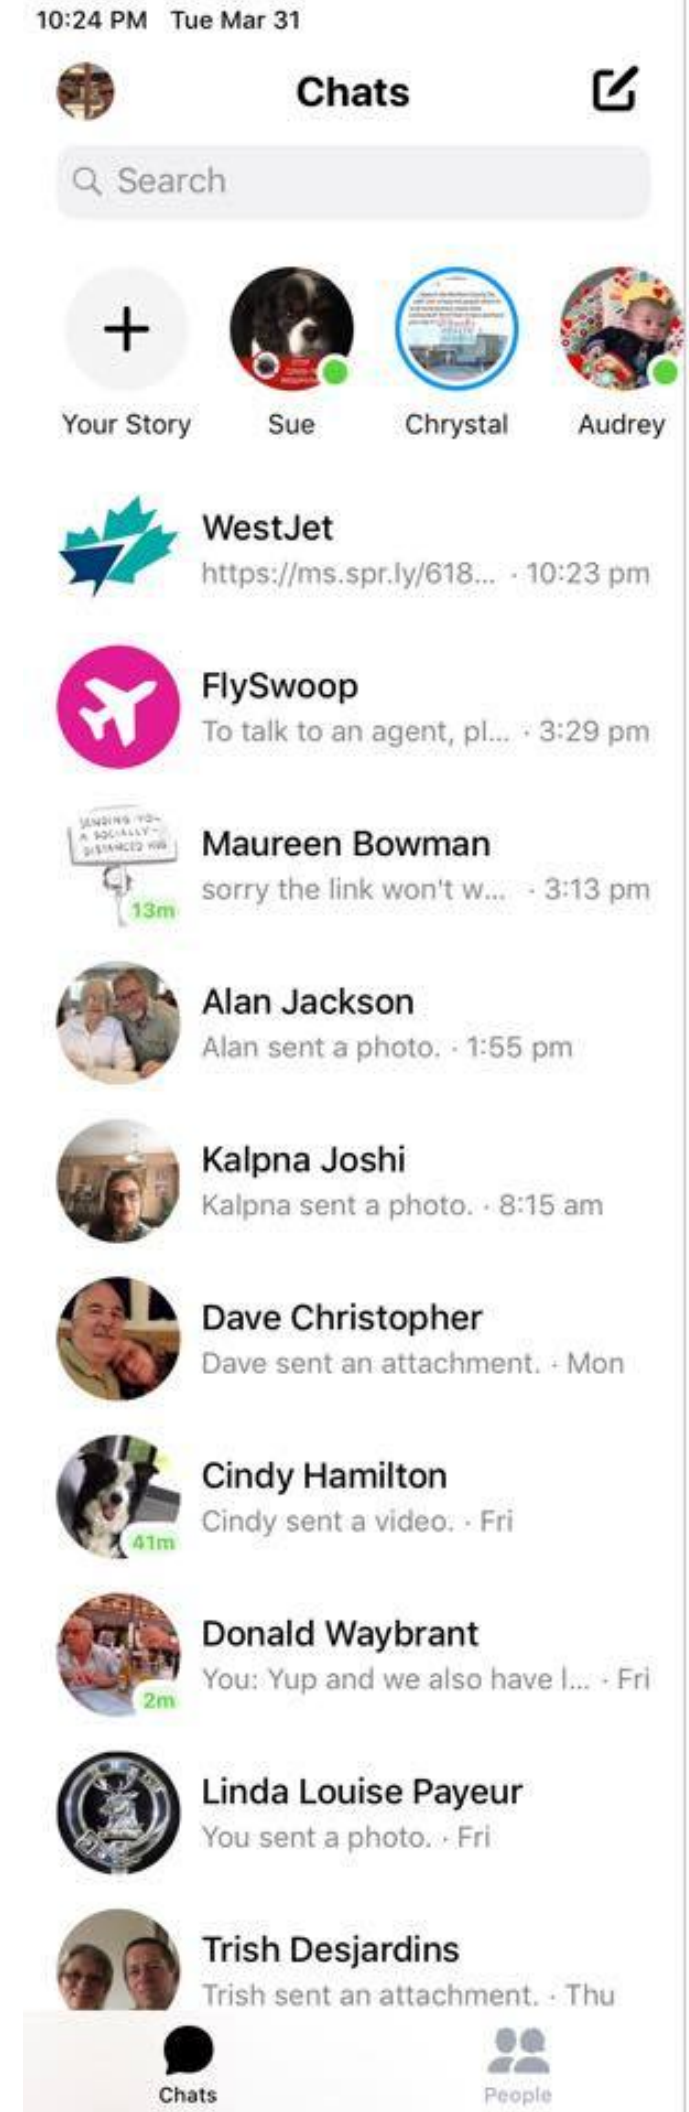
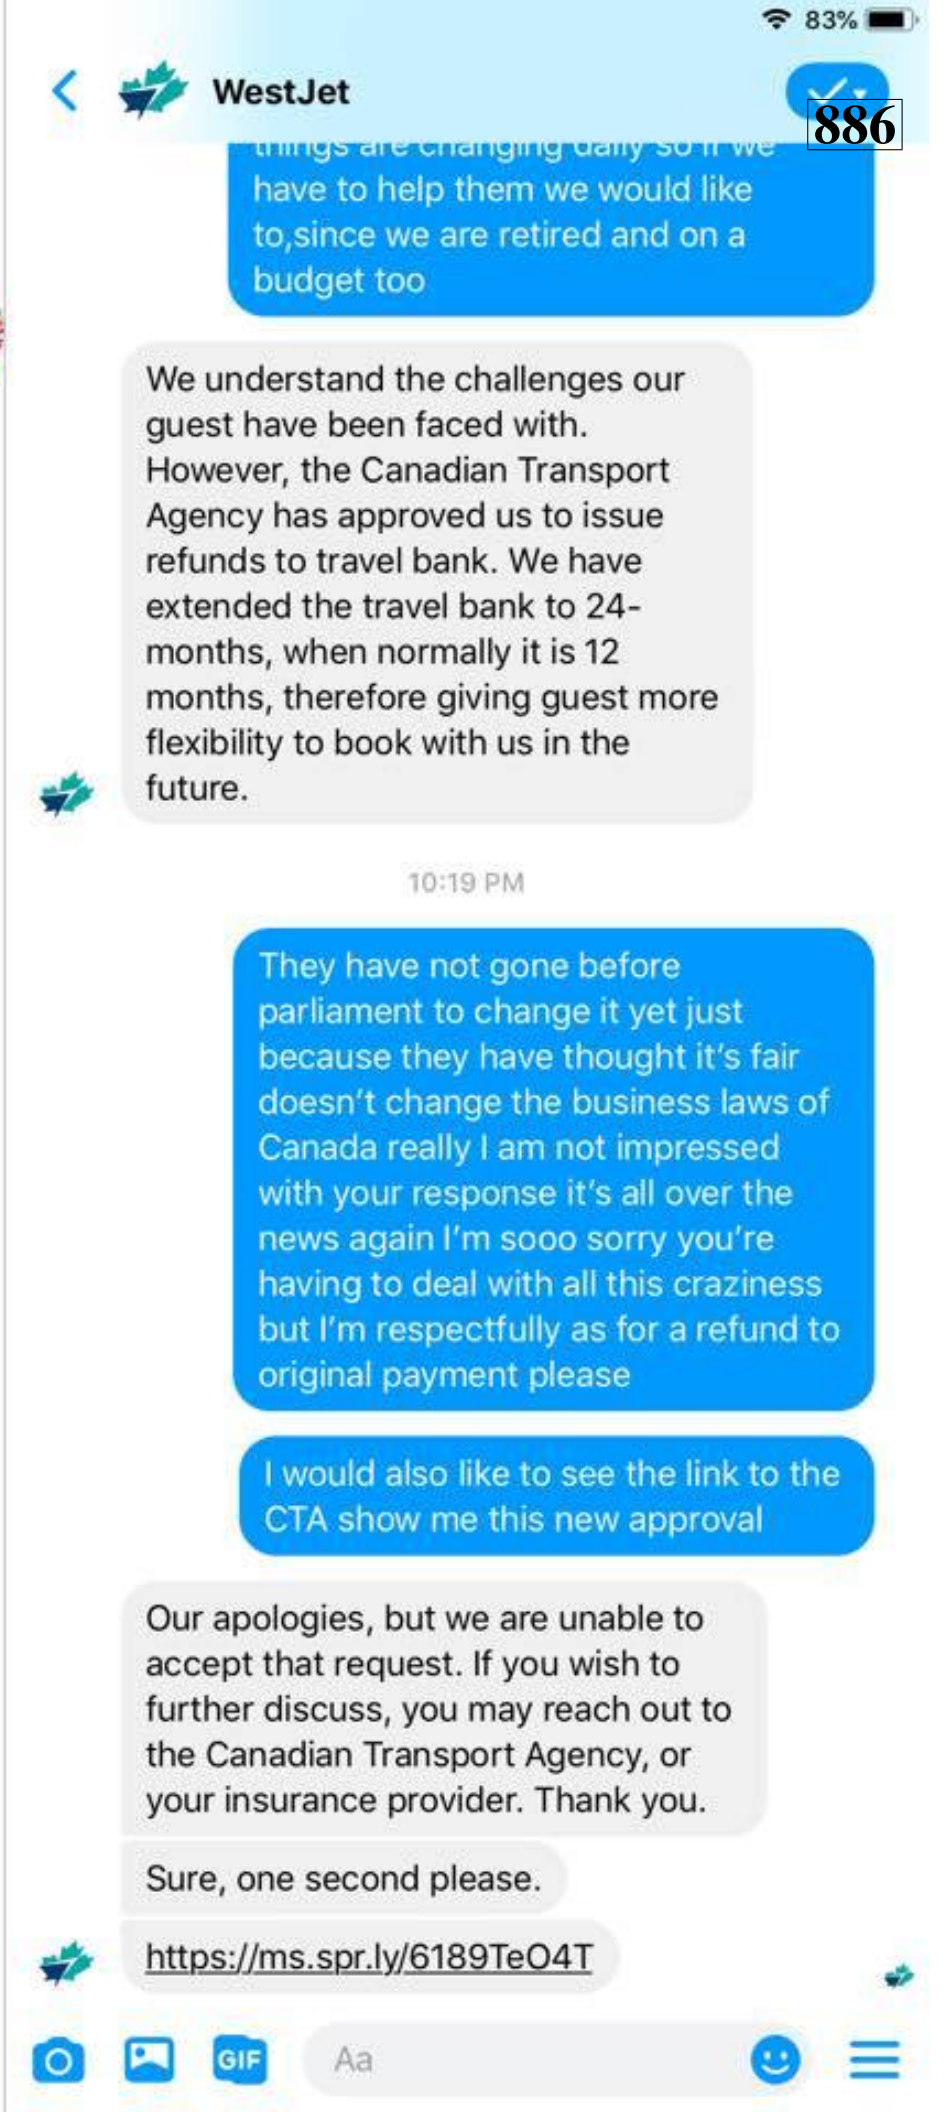
Z X C V B N M
.?123
.?123

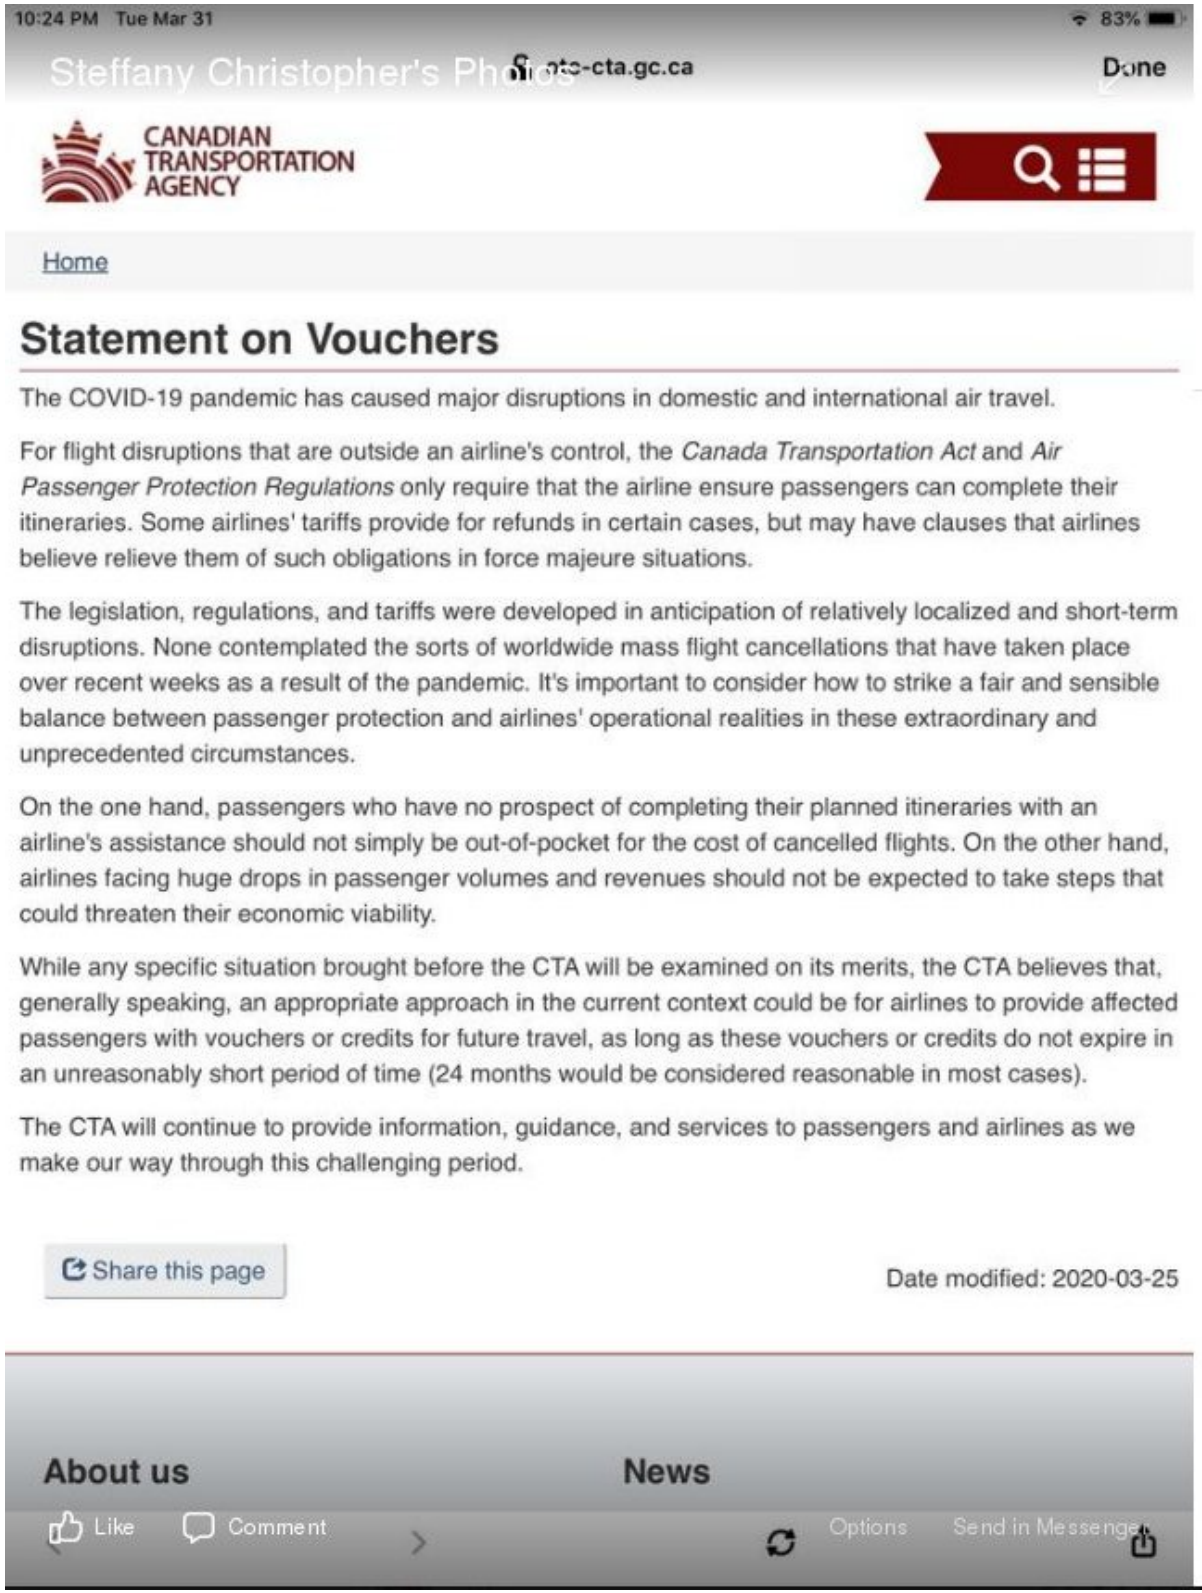
10:22 PM Tue Mar 31
84%
Chats
Search
Your Story
Donald
Chrystal
Sue
WestJet
Sure, one second pl... · 10:22 pm
FlySwoop
To talk to an agent, pl... · 3:29 pm
Maureen Bowman
sorry the link won't w... · 3:13 pm
11m
Alan Jackson
Alan sent a photo. · 1:55 pm
Kalpna Joshi
Kalpna sent a photo. · 8:15 am
Dave Christopher
Dave sent an attachment. · Mon
WestJet
flexibility to book with us in the future.
10:19 PM
They have not gone before parliament to change it yet just because they have thought it's fair doesn't change the business laws of Canada really I am not impressed with your response it's all over the news again I'm sooo sorry you're having to deal with all this craziness but I'm respectfully as for a refund to original payment please
I would also like to see the link to the CTA show me this new approval
Our apologies, but we are unable to accept that request. If you wish to further discuss, you may reach out to the Canadian Transport Agency, or your insurance provider. Thank you.
Sure, one second please.
GIF
Aa
Sooo
I
Thanks
return
.?123
.?123



10:24 PM Tue Mar 31
Chats
Search
Your Story
Sue
Chrystal
Audrey
WestJet
https://ms.spr.ly/618... · 10:23 pm
FlySwoop
To talk to an agent, pl... · 3:29 pm
Maureen Bowman
sorry the link won't w... · 3:13 pm
13m
Alan Jackson
Alan sent a photo. · 1:55 pm
Kalpna Joshi
Kalpna sent a photo. · 8:15 am
Dave Christopher
Dave sent an attachment. · Mon
Cindy Hamilton
Cindy sent a video. · Fri
41m
Donald Waybrant
You: Yup and we also have l... · Fri
2m
Linda Louise Payeur
You sent a photo. · Fri
Trish Desjardins
Trish sent an attachment. · Thu
Chats
People



83%
WestJet
have to help them we would like to,since we are retired and on a budget too
We understand the challenges our guest have been faced with. However, the Canadian Transport Agency has approved us to issue refunds to travel bank. We have extended the travel bank to 24-months, when normally it is 12 months, therefore giving guest more flexibility to book with us in the future.
10:19 PM
They have not gone before parliament to change it yet just because they have thought it's fair doesn't change the business laws of Canada really I am not impressed with your response it's all over the news again I'm sooo sorry you're having to deal with all this craziness but I'm respectfully as for a refund to original payment please
I would also like to see the link to the CTA show me this new approval
Our apologies, but we are unable to accept that request. If you wish to further discuss, you may reach out to the Canadian Transport Agency, or your insurance provider. Thank you.
Sure, one second please.
https://ms.spr.ly/6189TeO4T
GIF
Aa



10:24 PM Tue Mar 31
83%
Steffany Christopher's Photos cts-cta.gc.ca
Done
CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY
Home
Statement on Vouchers
The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.
For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.
The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.
On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.
While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).
The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.
Share this page
Date modified: 2020-03-25
About us
News
Like
Comment
Options
Send in Messenger

Steffany Christopher
9 mins
When I opened it
1 Comment
Like

This is Exhibit "103" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Air Canada Concierge <concierge@aircanada.ca>
Date: April 1, 2020 at 12:29:49 EDT
To: Michael Foulkes <Michael.foulkes@rogers.com>
Subject: Re: Booking MMHHTM

Hello / Bonjour Mr. Foulkes,

I would like to attach two links from the Canadian Transportation Agency website as they may help clarify some of your questions. The CTA has issued temporary exemptions to the Air Passenger Protection Regulations regarding refund request and extension of ticket validity.

https://www.otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/content/canadian-transportation-agency-issues-temporary-exemptions-certain-air-passenger-protection

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Kind Regards.

Yda

Air Canada
Concierge Desk / Bureau Concierge
concierge@aircanada.ca

From: Michael Foulkes <michael.foulkes@rogers.com>
Sent: Wednesday, April 1, 2020 12:24
To: Air Canada Concierge <concierge@aircanada.ca>
Subject: Re: Booking MMHHTM

Thank you for your prompt reply.

I don't believe these options are in accordance with applicable tariffs or Canadian or EU regulations. Before choosing which way to proceed I will look into this more closely, as well as consult with both the Expedia for TD and TD Visa where the booking was made.

Thank you again for your response. Best personal regards for your well-being.

Michael Foulkes

MICHAEL A FOULKES | 67 THORNCREST ROAD ETOBICOKE ONTARIO CANADA M9A 1S8 | TEL: +1-416-999-9422 | FAX: +1-416-234-9618 | MICHAEL.FOULKES@ROGERS.COM

On Apr 1, 2020, at 9:53 AM, Air Canada Concierge <concierge@aircanada.ca> wrote:

Hello / Bonjour Mr. Foulkes,

Thank you for contacting the Air Canada Concierge Desk.

I am sorry hear that your return flight was cancelled. Due to the COVID-19 crisis, our schedule change policy has been modified. Itineraries that have been affected by an schedule change (in your case cancel flight) actioned after the 19th of March are not refunded. Your flight was cancelled on the 27th of March. We can offer you two options:

- Put your reservation aside for future use. You will have no change fee for the first re-booking (which is 500cad per passenger). You have 24 months to use this credit since the day of the schedule change; in this case 27 March 2022.
- Refund your ticket with a cancellation penalty of 600cad per passenger.

Please let me know how you will like to proceed.

Kind Regards.

Yda

Air Canada

Concierge Desk / Bureau Concierge
concierge@aircanada.ca

From: Michael Foulkes <michael.foulkes@rogers.com>
Sent: Wednesday, April 1, 2020 09:32
To: Air Canada Concierge <concierge@aircanada.ca>
Subject: Booking MMHHTM

I received the attached email from Air Canada on Monday regarding a previously booked flight. I would appreciate your assistance in having this reservation refunded.

I request a full refund for this reservation as the return portion has apparently already been cancelled by Air Canada. I have not received any formal notification of the cancellation, but the May 31 return from Dublin Ireland (on the same booking reference) has disappeared from my Air Canada App itinerary and is no longer shown on your schedule. It is my understanding that under these circumstances, a cash refund is applicable and I would appreciate it you could direct this request to the appropriate area to have it processed.

If this is not possible, I would appreciate a written explanation.

Thank you.

Michael Foulkes
718-542-434

MICHAEL A FOULKES | 67 THORNCREST ROAD ETOBICOKE ONTARIO CANADA M9A 1S8 | TEL: +1-416-999-9422 | FAX: +1-416-234-9618 | MICHAEL.FOULKES@ROGERS.COM

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Air Canada" <communications@Mail.aircanada.com>
Subject: Confirm or cancel your booking / Confirmation ou annulation de votre réservation
Date: March 30, 2020 at 8:00:16 PM EDT
To: <MICHAEL.FOULKES@ROGERS.COM>
Reply-To: "Air Canada" <communications@Mail.aircanada.com>

Web version

AIR CANADA

VERSION FRANÇAISE

Confirm or cancel your booking

Booking reference: MMHHTM

As the global impact of COVID-19 continues to evolve, we would like to know whether this has impacted your travel plans.

I wish to confirm my booking
If you still plan to fly from Toronto (YYZ) to London (LHR), please review any applicable entry requirements here. If you are eligible to fly, please confirm below:

CONFIRM MY BOOKING

I wish to cancel my booking
Alternatively, we can appreciate that you may wish to alter your upcoming trip from Toronto (YYZ) to London (LHR), or are not able to travel due to new entry restrictions found here.

To give you more flexibility, we've waived change fees and are making an exception on non-refundable fares by providing the unused ticket value to be used towards a future ticket purchase. If you would like to cancel your booking but have been unable to reach your travel agency, you may be able to do so directly on our easy Air Canada self-service form.

Can I cancel my Travel Agency flight booking online with Air Canada directly?

I purchased a flight only:

• Yes, you can cancel your flight and receive 100% of the unused value of your ticket as a future travel credit. This credit is valid for travel before March 31, 2021.

CANCEL MY BOOKING

I purchased a package (flight + hotel, car rental, etc.):

• No, unfortunately you will need to connect directly with your travel agency.

Your patience and understanding is greatly appreciated as we continue to adapt to this dynamic situation.

ENGLISH VERSION ↑

Confirmation ou annulation de votre réservation

Numéro de réservation : MMHHTM

Alors que l'impact mondial de la COVID-19 continue d'évoluer, nous souhaitons savoir si la pandémie a des conséquences sur vos plans de voyage.

Je souhaite confirmer ma réservation
Si vous prévoyez toujours de voyager au départ de Toronto (YYZ) et à destination de Londres (LHR), veuillez passer en revue ici les exigences d'entrée applicables. Si vous êtes autorisé à voyager, veuillez le confirmer ci-dessous :

CONFIRMER MA RÉSERVATION

Je souhaite annuler ma réservation
Il se peut aussi que vous souhaitiez annuler la réservation de votre voyage à venir au départ de Toronto (YYZ) et à destination de Londres (LHR), ou que vous ne puissiez voyager en raison des nouvelles restrictions d'entrée que vous trouverez ici.

Pour vous donner plus de flexibilité, nous avons annulé les frais de modification et faisons une exception pour les tarifs non remboursables : vous pouvez obtenir un crédit intégral à utiliser pour un prochain voyage. Si vous souhaitez annuler votre réservation, mais que vous n'êtes pas en mesure de communiquer avec votre agence de voyages, vous pouvez le faire directement au moyen du formulaire en libre-service d'Air Canada, facile à utiliser.

Puis-je annuler en ligne, directement auprès d'Air Canada, ma réservation faite à l'origine par une agence de voyages?

J'ai uniquement acheté un billet d'avion :

• Oui, vous pouvez annuler votre vol et recevoir la valeur intégrale de votre billet inutilisé sous la forme d'un crédit pour un voyage effectué d'ici le 31 mars 2021.

ANNULER MA RÉSERVATION

J'ai acheté un forfait (vol + hôtel, voiture de location, etc.) :

• Non, vous devez malheureusement communiquer directement avec votre agence de voyages.

Nous vous remercions de votre patience et de votre compréhension dans ce contexte de changements rapides.

This is Exhibit "104" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: AC Medical <acmedical@aircanada.ca>
Date: Fri., Mar. 27, 2020, 1:30 p.m.
Subject: 21MAR BELISLE AHREN N4N4CA additional information
To: Ahren Belisle <belisle.ahren@gmail.com>

Good day Mr. Belisle,

Thank you for your email.

Please be advised that we will not be able to accommodate your request.

As mention previously the maximum we can provide is to keep your ticket as a credit for 24 months (2 years).

If I look at this link you provided this seems to be a law for resale agency we are an direct seller and provider as an airline.

The policy we follow at the moment is supported by the CTA (Canadian air transportation agency).

Please contact customer relation directly for any additional question as this is not something the medical desk can assist you with any further.

https://accc-prod.microsoftcrmportals.com/en-CA/air-canada-contact-us/

Best regards,

Nancy

AC_logo

Medical Desk/ Bureau Médical

T 1-800-667-4732 | 514-369-7039 | F 1-888-334-7717

MON-FRI: 6AM – 8PM ET | SAT-SUN: 6AM - 6PM ET

LUN-VEN: 0600-2000 | SAM-DIM: 0600-1800 heure de l'est

ACmedical@aircanada.ca

From: Ahren Belisle <belisle.ahren@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, March 26, 2020 3:11 PM
To: AC Medical <acmedical@aircanada.ca>
Subject: Re: Verbal disability NANCY WILL SPEAK TO GABE ON 27MAR

How do I get this cert? What tangible Code do I get?

I request a refund or a gift card with no expiry instead.

I've attached the law

Kind Regards,

Ahren Belisle

On Wed., Mar. 25, 2020, 2:11 p.m. AC Medical, <acmedical@aircanada.ca> wrote:

> Good day,
>
> The credit is valid for 24 Months (2 years).
>
> This is the policy we have been given, if you wish to communicate with customer relations in regards to this policy you can do so by emailing then via the Air Canada website.
>
> Regards,
>
> Jesyka
>
> From: Ahren Belisle <belisle.ahren@gmail.com>
> Sent: Wednesday, March 25, 2020 11:53 AM
> To: AC Medical <acmedical@aircanada.ca>
> Subject: Re: Verbal disability
>
> I actually meant 2021 in my original email. A voucher that is only good until December 2020 is not sufficent in this crisis as I will not be traveling by then.
>
> My flights got cancelled by the airline and as per the law, I am entitled to a full refund.
>
> I will accept a gift card with no expiry date, or a refund. A voucher that must be used by December is not sufficent. Please respond.
>
> Kind Regards,
>
> Ahren Belisle
>
> On Mon., Mar. 16, 2020, 4:46 p.m. AC Medical, <acmedical@aircanada.ca> wrote:
>
> > Good day,
> >
> > Thank you for your email.

Air Canada's good will policy is applicable.

We are waiving a 1 time change fee, any fare difference is applicable.

You must begin travel by 18 December 2020.

The flights have been cancelled, and the ticket is being held as a credit.

You may refer to your booking reference N4N4C when rebooking.

Best regards,

Linda

Medical Desk/ Bureau Médical

T 1-800-667-4732 | 514-369-7039 | F 1-888-334-7717

MON-FRI: 6AM – 8PM ET | SAT-SUN: 6AM - 6PM ET

LUN-VEN: 0600-2000 | SAM-DIM: 0600-1800 heure de l'est

ACmedical.aircanada.ca

From: Ahren Belisle <belisle.ahren@gmail.com>
Sent: Monday, March 16, 2020 4:37 PM
To: AC Medical <acmedical@aircanada.ca>
Subject: Verbal disability

Hello, I have a speech disability and I would like to cancel my flight from yyz to yvr on Saturday.

Reservation code n4n4ca

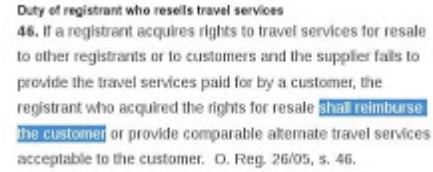
Last name Belisle.

I will accept credit for future travel in 2020. Can you help me in this medium?

cheers,

Ahren Belisle

3 attachments



Duty of registrant who resells travel services

46. If a registrant acquires rights to travel services for resale to other registrants or to customers and the supplier fails to provide the travel services paid for by a customer, the registrant who acquired the rights for resale shall reimburse the customer or provide comparable alternate travel services acceptable to the customer. O. Reg. 26/05, s. 46.

FB_IMG_1585249781078.jpg
18K

image001.jpg
4K

image001.jpg
4K

This is Exhibit "105" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Gmail

Air Transat (@airtransat) has sent you a Direct Message on Twitter!

1 message

Air Transat (via Twitter) <notify@twitter.com> Thu, Mar 26, 2020 at 3:55 PM
To: Adam Bacour <flitox@laposte.net>

Air Transat sent you a Direct Message.

Hello, Sorry for the late reply. As you can imagine, we've been receiving high volumes of messages in the past few days, and we're working hard to respond as soon as possible. We strongly believe that the 24-month credit offered to our customers to compensate for their cancelled travel plans is a flexible proposition in these exceptional circumstances. We also continue to be flexible in our payment terms to meet the needs of our customers. In this regard, the Canadian Transportation Agency recently issued an opinion on the subject, which supports our decision and emphasizes that the solution proposed by Transat, among others, is appropriate given the current situation. Jessica_AirTransat

Reply

This is Exhibit "106" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

From: Swoop <support@flyswoop.freshdesk.com>
Sent: March 28, 2020 4:44 AM
To: susanannsimpson@msn.com <susanannsimpson@msn.com>
Subject: Re: REFUND ON CREDIT CARD NOT A CREDIT VOUCHER

Hi Susan,

Thank you for reaching out.
We do understand that a refund would be preferred, however we are only offering Swoop credits at this time for cancelled flights.

On March 25, the Canadian Transportation Agency clarified its position on providing credit for travel due to the uncertain times we are in. This clarification stated that airlines could offer travel credit for cancelled flights, and the credit should be valid for a reasonable amount of time, which was indicated to be 24 months. If you would like more information please visit the CTA's website here: https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Kind regards,

Aris
Traveller Support
Swoop Inc. | FlySwoop.com

> On Wed, 25 Mar at 9:00 AM , Susan Simpson <susanannsimpson@msn.com> wrote:
> I have e-mailed you 8 times to privacy@flyswoop.com and as of today, Wednesday March 25th I have not heard a word from you either by e-mail or phone.
> I HAD NOT PURCHASED A TRAVEL CREDIT/VOUCHER. TRAVEL CREDIT IS IRRELEVANT TO THIS DISCUSSION. THE GOVERNMENT HAS ISSUED A WARNING TO ALL NOT TO TRAVEL ... I AM TAKING THIS SERIOUSLY ALONG WITH EVERYONE ELSE. I HAVE COPIES OF ALL MY OTHER E-MAILS THAT I HAVE SENT TO YOU AND WOULD GLADLY FORWARD THEM ON TO YOU. MY E-MAIL ADDRESS IS: susanannsimpson@msn.com
> Here is a copy of my last e-mail I sent you on March 23rd at 10:57a.m.
> Susan Simpson
> Mon 2020-03-23 10:57 AM
>
> - privacy@flyswoop.com
>
> Here I am again....still no reply from you on my other 7 e-mails.
> I called you again this morning and on hold for 31 minutes and was then cut off.

I can't afford these calls from Cambridge, Ontario to Calgary.
I am really angry now and so frustrated with your Public Relations...
As I've said before I totally understand you are overwhelmed with all of this Covid-19.
But even an e-mail or call to say that you will at least look into my file would be common courtesy.
I will not be travelling to Tampa or anywhere that Swoop flies so therefore I would like my FULL REFUND that I am entitled to.
Under the advice from the Government we have been told NOT to travel and I am taking that seriously like many others.
As I mentioned before I accepted the Terms and Conditions when I cancelled my flight for Sunday, March 22nd (you cancelled my return on April 6) because I had no other choice. YOU CAN HAVE YOUR VOUCHER BACK ALL I WANT IS MY REFUND ON MY CREDIT CARD.
I have been given counsel and I am ENTITLED to a FULL REFUND ON MY CREDIT CARD.
The Ontario's Frustrated Contracts Act states that I should be able to get a FULL REFUND on my credit card and NOT a CREDIT VOUCER, that will be of no use to me at all.
I WOULD GREATLY APPRECIATE A REPLY FROM A SUPERVISOR!!
Thank you
Susan Simpson
1-519-623-7610
Reservation Code: X4K2RF

This is Exhibit "107" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

TravelOnly
@travelonly

Like | Follow | Share | ... | Get Quote | Send Message

Home
Reviews
Photos
Videos
Posts
Events
About Community
Contest
Pinterest
Welcome
Create a Page

TravelOnly
March 25 at 5:12 PM ·

To all of our amazing clients - thank you for putting your trust in TravelOnly and our amazing advisors. Over the course of the past two weeks, our advisors have been on hold for upwards of 12+ hours to help you get home or cancel or rebook your trips. No doubt this will continue for the foreseeable future -- we are here for you and hope that you will remember the value of using a travel advisor in the future!

Some of you have reached out to enquire how the new Air Passenger Protection Regulations would impact the requirements of airlines when flights were cancelled and/or rebooked.

The Canadian Transportation Agency has provided a statement which provides direction for you and your travel advisor regarding the issuing of future travel vouchers. In summary, the CTA believes that providing affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel is appropriate and reasonable. We understand that you may have questions on your voucher and how to use it for future travel and we encourage you to reach out to your TravelOnly advisor or our offices for assistance at any time. Please note that most vouchers will be issued within the next 4-6 weeks depending on the airline and travel supplier.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

NADIAN
ANSPORT
ENCY

OTC-CTA.GC.CA
Statement on Vouchers | Canadian Transportation Agency
The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel. For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's...

17 23 Shares

Like | Comment | Share | Buffer

Write a comment...

Create Post

Write a post...

4.6 4.6 out of 5 · Based on the opinion of 81 people

Community See All

Invite your friends to like this Page
7,778 people like this
7,728 people follow this 45 check-ins

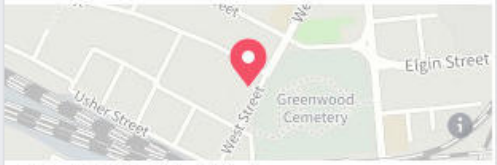
About See All



202-325A West Street
Brantford, Ontario N3R 3V6
Get Directions
+1 866-496-9862
Send M
Chat (20)
www.travelonly.com
Travel Service · Cruise Agency
Price Range $$
Opens Monday
Closed Now
Suggest Edits

Page Transparency See More

Facebook is showing information to help you better understand the purpose of a Page. See actions taken by the people who manage and post content.

Page created - February 6, 2012

Pages Liked by This Page

This is Exhibit "108" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Tactful and tough, agents have effective strategies for dealing with refund demands

Friday, April 3, 2020
Posted by Kathryn Folliott

This story originally ran in the April 2, 2020 issue of Travelweek magazine. To get Travelweek delivered to your agency for free, subscribe here.

TORONTO — Financial concerns are mounting. Work and stress levels are at all-time highs. The retail travel sector is facing never-before-seen challenges amid the coronavirus pandemic. And unbelievably this has all come to a head in just a few short weeks.

Not surprising then that the last thing any travel agent wants to hear from a client right now is 'forget the voucher, I want a refund'.

Thankfully unprecedented times call for unprecedented measures and in recent days both the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) and the Ontario government have come out with new directives in favour of vouchers / future travel credits, aimed at mitigating the impact of the hundreds of thousands of cancellations brought on by the coronavirus pandemic.

Travel agents understand that clients want refunds. They also understand that if suppliers and retailers are on the hook for refunds amid a global health crisis, with all of the worldwide border closures and travel restrictions that have followed in its wake, then an entire industry will be on the brink of collapse.

Some say travel advisors who have been in the habit of taking the client's side in any dispute with a supplier may have to think twice before doing that this time, adding that there's a fine line to be walked, between client and supplier, if the advisor's relationship with both is to survive this pandemic.

Agents facing a financial hit with commission recalls or worse when clients pursue refunds or credit card chargebacks say they're using every skill at their disposal, from tact to tough talk, to deal with refund requests.

"SUPPLIERS HAVE BEEN VERY GENEROUS, ESPECIALLY THE CRUISE LINES"

Uniglobe Travel's Michelle Whalen knows first-hand the disappointment of missing out on a trip. Her own anniversary cruise was cancelled amid the coronavirus pandemic. "I see all these suppliers and their staff layoffs and partners I've come to have a good rapport with, they will lose their jobs. The Caribbean countries who rely on tourism dollars. My heart goes out to them. I'm not in any way going to demand a refund."

Whalen says most of her clients are willing to accept vouchers and even happier when they saw that some suppliers were extending the expiry date to up to 24 months. “Many of my clients are keen travellers and will be travelling again at some point. Suppliers have been very generous, especially the cruise lines.”

The downside of the vouchers is that the pricing, itinerary and availability “may not be as desirable” as when clients first booked. Explaining the situation to a client, Whalen says: “I gently said I know it’s disappointing you’re not getting the same trip next time at the same price but they are being flexible, they’re offering a 10% bonus.”

Whalen adds: “I explained that [suppliers] can’t possibly refund everyone’s money at once or the companies would be bankrupt making future travel even more difficult. I’ve tried to highlight to clients that it’s not about the almighty dollar – these suppliers really do care about helping people.”

More news: [Air Canada to reduce capacity and temporarily reduce workforce in Q2]

“Airline staff, tour operator staff are experiencing layoffs just like my clients’ workplaces – they have bills to pay, families to feed as well.”

“NONE CONTEMPLATED THE WORLDWIDE MASS FLIGHT CANCELLATIONS”

The small but vocal minority of travellers pursuing refunds has made its case for refunds in consumer media and Facebook groups. Earlier this week came word of a class action suit against airlines including Air Canada, WestJet, Swoop, Sunwing and Transat.

On March 25 the Canadian Transportation Agency waded into the fray, issuing a special statement saying that while specific cases may get further analysis, in general, vouchers are appropriate in these extraordinary circumstances.

The CTA added that legislation, regulations, and tariffs currently on the books “were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic.”

Striking a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines’ operational realities is key, said the CTA.

COMP FUND IS STILL OUT OF DATE AND INADEQUATE: ACTA

This week in Ontario the provincial government announced a number of regulatory amendments to the Travel Industry Act, 2002. In addition to measures aimed at reducing the burden on TICO registrants, the updates include a time-limited exemption that would allow registrants to choose to provide only a voucher in cases where a supplier failed to provide travel services. Also new, eligibility for Comp Fund reimbursements will be expanded to cover consumers with vouchers who do not receive their travel services, potentially due to the failure of a registrant.

ACTA applauded the moves, while cautioning that the funding model for the Comp Fund is still out of date and inadequate. “The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the vulnerability of the significantly inadequate Fund, and as such, ACTA will continue to lobby for recommended changes for the benefit of Ontario travel agencies, and the consumers they represent,” says ACTA President Wendy Paradis.

“IT IS NOT POSSIBLE FOR OUR SUPPLIERS TO ABSORB THESE LOSSES”

Tripcentral.ca President Richard Vanderlubbe says: “While it is understandable that customers are expecting refunds, and from a ‘moral’ point of view, they have paid for something that they have not received, this is not how the global travel industry functions.”

Vanderlubbe, who served on the TICO board for many years and who is a long-time advocate for modernizing the Comp Fund, adds: “It is not possible for our suppliers to absorb these losses, and if they were required to provide refunds, it would bankrupt most of them. Bankrupt suppliers will cause cascading losses for travel agencies due to non-payment of outstanding commissions, and damage future travel plans on the books. Further, bankruptcies will hurt us all by reducing consumer confidence.”

More news: Holland America CEO speaks out as Zaandam, Rotterdam still stranded

For this reason, he says, “we support suppliers policies of future travel credit, and point out that the federal government, TICO and others are supporting. The best thing for our customers and the industry is that all of our businesses remain solvent."

"YOU HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO PURCHASE CANCELLATION INSURANCE ... AND YOU DECLINED TO DO SO"

A letter that Vanderlubbe and his team have ready for any client making persistent refund requests or launching credit card chargebacks is strongly worded but fair, and explains the situation from the retailer's side. The letter cites the CTA statement and reads, in part: "We too are experiencing financial damage from the COVID19 pandemic, paying our staff for more than 5 weeks now with little or no revenue coming, in order to help our customers return home, process future travel credits, and we will be re-booking for months later."

The letter also notes: "The Federal Government has issued a plain language statement which you can read from the link below [https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers] that states that, as far as the air travellers protection regime goes, it was never intended to cover acts of God, or a force majeure situation. In short, they state that a future travel credit for 2 years is sufficient compensation under this circumstance.

"Further, the Travel Industry Council of Ontario, that administers the Ontario Travel Industry Act, has issued a statement that 'under Ontario law, there is no requirement for a travel company to refund or offer alternative travel services if a government travel advisory is in effect'. In short, our suppliers are not even obligated to provide a future travel credit, but they are.

"Your chargeback through your credit card is unreasonable given that you are being offered a travel credit good for two years, and that you had the opportunity to purchase cancellation insurance at the time of booking, and you declined to do so.

"We ask that you contact your credit card company and 'reverse the chargeback request'. We need evidence of this in order to process your future travel credit."

TICO has issued a FAQ for consumers inquiring about voucher use, a FAQ that's helpful for retailer and supplier registrants as well. The FAQ can be found at TICO's website at tico.ca.

Tags: COVID-19, TICO

Next Post >>

This is Exhibit "109" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Source: Canadian Life and Health Insurance Association

April 01, 2020 16:34 ET

Advisory: Travel cancellation insurance and airline vouchers or credits

TORONTO, April 01, 2020 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Some travel insurance policies provide coverage that may pay for costs that consumers cannot recover when trips are cancelled. In past, travel service providers usually provided consumers with refunds where the service provider was unable to provide service. Over the past month, many service providers have changed this practice and are now offering vouchers or credits that consumers can use for future travel.

On March 25, 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency updated its endorsement of the use of vouchers or credits as an appropriate approach for Canada's airlines as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time.

Travel insurers are advising policyholders that if you have been offered this type of full credit, or voucher for future use by an airline, train or other travel provider, in many instances, under the terms of your insurance policy you will not be considered to have suffered an insurable loss.

Customers are encouraged to consider the above and review the terms of your policy prior to submitting a claim for trip cancellation coverage. You should also check your insurer's website for guidance that may be posted. Each insurer will assess the particulars of each circumstance in accordance with the terms and conditions of your policy.

Disputes over refunds and credits should be directed to your travel service provider, transportation carrier or the Canadian Transportation Agency.

You can find the contact information for your insurer in your contract or at: https://www.olhi.ca/for-insurers/member-list/

About the CLHIA

The CLHIA is a voluntary association whose member companies account for 99 per cent of Canada's life and health insurance business. The industry provides a wide range of financial security products such as life insurance, annuities (including RRSPs, RRIFs and pensions) and supplementary health insurance to almost 29 million Canadians. It also holds over $850 billion in assets in Canada and employs more than 156,000 Canadians.

For more information:

Kevin Dorse
Assistant Vice President, Strategic Communications and Public Affairs
(613) 691-6001 / kdorse@clhia.ca

This is Exhibit "110" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Halifax, NS

lukacs@AirPassengerRights.ca

March 30, 2020

VIA EMAIL and FAX

Canadian Transportation Agency

Dear Madam or Sir:

Re: "Statement on Vouchers" – Cease and Desist

It has come to our attention that on or around March 25, 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency [CTA] published a "Statement on Vouchers" on its website purporting to offer unsolicited opinions on an ongoing controversy between passengers and airlines:

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Said statement creates the false impression of a legally binding determination by the CTA, and misleads consumers about their rights. Indeed, it has been represented and/or used in such a manner by various air carriers in their dealings with passengers.

This is unacceptable.

We request that the CTA remove the aforementioned statement from its website without delay and inform the public that the statement is not a legal ruling whatsoever, by no later than Tuesday, March 31, 2020 at noon Eastern Time.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours very truly,

Dr. Gábor Lukács

Enclosed: "Statement on Vouchers"

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Home

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified:
2020-03-25

This is Exhibit "111" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

RE: "Statement of Vouchers" -- Cease and Desist secretariat <Secretariat.Secretariat@otc-cta.gc.ca> Mon, Mar 30, 2020 at 5:35 PM

To: Gabor Lukacs <lukacs@airpassengerrights.ca>
Cc: "Services Juridiques / Legal Services (OTC/CTA)" <Servicesjuridiques/LegalServicesOTC/CTA@otc-cta.gc.ca>, Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>

The Agency acknowledges receipt of your submission.

Your submission will be reviewed and ?you will be contacted if it is incomplete or otherwise inadequate.

Kind regards,

Secrétariat
Office des transports du Canada / Gouvernement du Canada secretariat@otc-cta.gc.ca / Site Web www.otc-cta.gc.ca
Tél. : 819-997-7047 / Télécopieur 819-953-5253 / ATS : 1-800-669-5575

Secretariat
Canadian Transportation Agency / Government of Canada
secretariat@otc-cta.gc.ca / Web site www.otc-cta.gc.ca
Tel: 819-997-7047 / Facsimile 819-953-5253 / TTY: 1-800-669-5575

-----Original Message-----
From: Gabor Lukacs <lukacs@AirPassengerRights.ca>
Sent: Monday, March 30, 2020 3:43 PM
To: secretariat <Secretariat.Secretariat@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Services Juridiques / Legal Services (OTC/CTA) <Servicesjuridiques/LegalServicesOTC/CTA@otc-cta.gc.ca>; Scott Streiner <Scott.Streiner@otc-cta.gc.ca>
Subject: "Statement of Vouchers" -- Cease and Desist

Dear Madam or Sir,

Please refer to the attached letter.

Yours very truly,
Dr. Gabor Lukacs

--
Dr. Gabor Lukacs, Founder and Coordinator
Air Passenger Rights
Tel : (647) 724 1727
Web : http://AirPassengerRights.ca
Twitter : @AirPassRightsCA
Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/AirPassengerRights/

This is Exhibit "112" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

The latest general information on the Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is available on Coronavirus.gov. For USDOT specific COVID-19 resources, please visit our page.

In This Section

Contact Us

Office of Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings
Aviation Consumer Protection Division
1200 New Jersey Ave, SE
Washington, DC 20590
United States
Phone: (202) 366-2220
TTY / Assistive Device Number:
(202) 366-0511
Business Hours:
8:30am-5:00pm ET, M-F

Fly Rights

A Consumer Guide to Air Travel

CONTENTS

Notice: We make every effort to keep Fly-Rights up to date, but airlines frequently change the way they do business. So by the time you read this, a few procedures we explain may be different.

Introduction

The elimination of government regulation of airline fares and routes has resulted in lower fares and a wide variety of price/service options. In this new commercial environment, consumers have had to take a more active role in choosing their air service by learning to ask a number of questions:

- Am I more concerned with price or with schedule? Am I willing to fly at a less convenient time if it means saving $25?
- Will the airline penalize me for changing my reservation/
- Will I have to pay extra for checked bags or for seat assignments?
- What will the airline do for me if it cancels my flight?
- This booklet is designed to explain your rights and responsibilities as an air traveler and to show you how to avoid problems. We hope it helps you become a more resourceful consumer.

Air Fares

Because of the emphasis on price competition, consumers may choose from a wide variety of air fares. It is easy to compare fares and schedules on the Web, using airline web sites or third-party reservation services. You can also contact a travel agent, another ticket outlet, or the airlines serving the places you want to travel to. (Some airlines and other outlets charge a fee for tickets purchased by means other than the Web. On the other hand, a few airlines may charge a fee for tickets that are purchased via the Web.) You can also be alert to newspaper and radio ads, where airlines advertise many of the discounts available in your city. Finally, be alert to new companies serving the market. They may offer lower fares or different services than older established airlines. Here are some tips to help you decide among air fares:

- Be flexible in your travel plans in order to get the lowest fare. The best deals may be limited to travel on certain days of the week (particularly midweek or Saturday) or certain hours of the day (e.g., early-morning flights or overnight "red eyes"). When searching flights and fares on the Web you can usually specify whether your dates are flexible, and in the search results the fares are generally listed from lowest to highest. If you are shopping by phone or in person, after you get a fare quote ask the reservations agent if you could save even more by leaving a day earlier or later, or by taking a different flight on the same day.
- Plan as far ahead as you can. Some airlines set aside only a few seats on each flight at the lower rates. The real bargains often sell out very quickly. On the other hand, air carriers sometimes make more discount seats available later. If you had decided against a trip because the price you wanted was not available when you first inquired, try again, especially just before the advance-purchase deadline. Flights for holiday periods may sell out months ahead of time, although in many cases you can find a seat if you elect to travel on the holiday itself, e.g. Christmas Day or Thanksgiving Day.
- Some airlines may have discounts that others don't offer. In a large metropolitan area, the fare could depend on which airport you use. Also, a connection (change of planes) or a one-stop flight is sometimes cheaper than a nonstop.
- Be aware that many airlines charge extra for checked baggage, advance seat assignments, meals, or other services. Airlines include information on these fees on their web sites.
- If you have a connection involving two airlines, ask whether your bags will be transferred. Ask whether your ticket will be good on another carrier at no extra charge if your flight is canceled or experiences a lengthy delay, and whether the first airline will pay for meals or a hotel room during the wait.
- Most discount fares are non-refundable; if you buy one of these fares and you later cancel your trip, you will not get your money back. In many cases you can apply your ticket to another trip in the future, but there may be a steep fee. Many fares also have a penalty for changing flights or dates even if you don't want a refund. You may also have to pay any difference in air fares if your fare-type is not available on the new flight.
- After you buy your ticket, call the airline or travel agent once or twice before departure to check the fare. Fares change all the time, and if the fare you paid goes down before you fly, some airlines will refund the difference (or give you a transportation credit for that amount). But you have to ask.
- Differences in air fares can be substantial. Careful comparison shopping among airlines does take time, but it can lead to real savings.

Schedules and Tickets

Once you decide when and where you want to go, and which airline you want to use, you will usually have to purchase a ticket in order to hold a confirmed seat. However, many large airlines will hold a reservation for 24 hours or so without payment. Others require payment at the time you make a reservation but will provide a full refund if you cancel in the first day or so. When available, both of these procedures permit you to hold a seat and a fare for a short time while continuing to shop for a better deal. Be aware of the following considerations when selecting a flight and buying a ticket:

- Check the on-time performance percentage for flights that you are considering. On-time performance percentages for individual flights of the larger U.S. airlines are available by phone from those airlines upon request. These airlines are also required to post this information on their web sites, with special notice for flights that experienced serious delays or cancellations. If you are deciding between two flights with similar schedules and fares, you may want to choose the one with the better on-time record. (Only the largest U.S. airlines are required to maintain and provide on-time performance data.) You can see aggregate information about airline and airport on-time performance and a list of the most frequently delayed flights in DOT's monthly Air Travel Consumer Report. Also, the web site of DOT's Bureau of Transportation Statistics (www.bts.gov) contains detailed on-time performance data for the large U.S. airlines that are required to report this information.
- When you buy a ticket, be sure all of the information is recorded accurately. Before you click "Submit" or make a final commitment to a reservations agent, review all of the essential information ? the spelling of your name, the flight numbers and travel dates, and the cities you are traveling between. Use the form of your name that is on the photo ID that you will show at the airport. (For an international flight, this will be your passport.) If there is more than one airport at either city, be sure you check which one you'll be using. It's also important to give the airline more than one telephone number and an email address so they can let you know if there is any change in its schedule.
- A "direct" (or "through") flight with a single flight number can have one or more intermediate stops. A connection (change of planes) nearly always has a separate flight number for each flight, but sometimes the two flights are listed on the same line in schedules. Look carefully at the "Stops" column and the departure and arrival times to determine whether the flight suits your needs.
- If you are flying to a small city and your flight number has four digits, you may be booked on a commuter airline that has an agreement with the major carrier in whose name the flight is advertised and sold. Look for disclosures of these so-called "code-share" flights in the schedules, or ask the reservations agent. DOT requires that you be provided this information.
- As soon as you receive your ticket or email confirmation, check to make sure all the information on it is correct, especially your name, the airports (if any of the cities have more than one) and the flight dates. Pursue any necessary corrections immediately.
- You will need to show a government-issued photo I.D. when you fly. It is important that your name as it appears on the ticket is the same as it appears on the I.D. you will be using. If your name has recently changed and the name on your ticket and your I.D. are different (or will be different by the time of your trip), bring documentation of the change (e.g., a marriage certificate or court order).
- Many European countries ("the Schengen states") require that your passport be valid for at least three months beyond your planned date of departure from the Schengen area. For more information see the Department of State's Schengen web page at http://travel.state.gov/content/passports/en/go/schengen-fact-sheet.html.
- Re-check the departure and arrival times of your flights a few days before your trip; schedules sometimes change. On international trips, some airlines may require that you reconfirm your onward or return reservations at least 72 hours before each flight. If you don't, your reservations may be canceled.
- Bring your ticket or printed confirmation to the airport. You may also be able to print your boarding pass from the carrier's web site within 24 hours of departure. This speeds your check-in and helps you avoid some of the tension you might otherwise feel if you had to wait in a slow-moving line at the airport.
- Payment by credit card provides certain protections under federal credit laws. When a refund is due, the airline must forward a credit to your card company within seven business days after receiving a complete refund application; however, the credit may take a month or two to appear on your statement. If you paid by credit card for a refundable fare and you have trouble getting a refund that you are due (e.g., you have a refundable fare, or you have a nonrefundable fare and the airline canceled your flight and you did not travel as a result), report this in writing to your credit card company. If you write to them within 60 days from the time that they mailed your first monthly statement showing the charge for the airline ticket, the card company should credit your account even if the airline doesn't. This procedure is particularly useful if your airline ceases operations before your flight.

NOTE: In some cases tickets purchased overseas in foreign currency can only be refunded in that same currency and country, due to foreign government monetary restrictions. Keep this in mind if you are considering buying a ticket in a foreign country.

Delayed and Cancelled Flights

Airlines don't guarantee their schedules, and you should realize this when planning your trip. There are many things that can-and often do-make it impossible for flights to arrive on time. Some of these problems, like bad weather, air traffic delays, and mechanical issues, are hard to predict and often beyond the airlines' control.

If your flight is delayed, try to find out how late it will be. But keep in mind that it is sometimes difficult for airlines to estimate the total duration of a delay during its early stages. In so- called "creeping delays," developments occur which were not anticipated when the carrier made its initial estimate of the length of the delay. Weather that had been forecast to improve can instead deteriorate, or a mechanical problem can turn out to be more complex than initially evaluated. If the problem is with local weather or air traffic control, all flights will probably be late and there's not much you or the airline can do to speed up your departure. If your flight is experiencing a lengthy delay, you might be better off trying to arrange another flight, as long as you don't have to pay a cancellation penalty or higher fare for changing your reservations. (It is sometimes easier to make such arrangements by phone than at a ticket counter.) If you find a flight on another airline, ask the first airline if it will endorse your ticket to the new carrier; this could save you a fare collection. Remember, however, that there is no rule requiring them to do this.

If your flight is canceled, most airlines will rebook you on their first flight to your destination on which space is available, at no additional charge. If this involves a significant delay, find out if another carrier has space and ask the first airline if they will endorse your ticket to the other carrier. Finding extra seats may be difficult, however, especially over holidays and other peak travel times.

Each airline has its own policies about what it will do for delayed passengers waiting at the airport; there are no federal requirements. If you are delayed, ask the airline staff if it will pay for meals or a phone call. Some airlines, often those charging very low fares, do not provide any amenities to stranded passengers. Others may not offer amenities if the delay is caused by bad weather or something else beyond the airline's control. Contrary to popular belief, for domestic itineraries airlines are not required to compensate passengers whose flights are delayed or canceled. As discussed in the chapter on overbooking, compensation is required by law on domestic trips only when you are "bumped" from a flight that is oversold. On international itineraries, passengers may be able to recover reimbursement under Article 19 of the Montreal Convention for expenses resulting from a delayed or canceled flight by filing a claim with the airline. If the claim is denied, you may pursue the matter in court if you believe that the carrier did not take all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the damages caused by the delay.

If the purpose of your trip is to close a potentially lucrative business deal, give a speech or lecture, attend a family function, or connect to a cruise, you might want to allow a little extra leeway and take an earlier flight. In other words, airline delays aren't unusual, and defensive planning is a good idea when time is your most important consideration.

Some flights are delayed on the airport "tarmac" before taking off or after landing. DOT rules prohibit most U.S. airlines from allowing a domestic flight to remain on the tarmac for more than three hours unless:

- the pilot determines that there is a safety or security reason why the aircraft cannot taxi to the gate and deplane its passengers, or
- Air traffic control advises the pilot that taxiing to the gate (or to another location where passengers can be deplaned) would significantly disrupt airport operations.

U.S. airlines operating international flights to or from most U.S.airports must each establish and comply with their own limit on the length of tarmac delays on those flights. On both domestic and international flights, U.S. airlines must provide passengers with food and water no later than two hours after the tarmac delay begins. While the aircraft remains on the tarmac lavatories must remain operable and medical attention must be available if needed.

When booking your flight remember that a departure early in the day is less likely to be delayed than a later flight, due to "ripple" effects of delays throughout the day. Also, if an early flight does get delayed or canceled, you have more rerouting options. If you book the last flight of the day and it is canceled, you could get stuck overnight. You may select a connection (change of planes) over a nonstop or direct flight because of the convenient departure time or lower fare. However, a change of planes always involves the possibility of a misconnection. If you have a choice of connections and the fares and service are equivalent, choose the one with the least-congested connecting airport, so it will be easier to get to your second flight. You may wish to take into consideration the potential for adverse weather if you have a choice of connecting cities. When making your reservation for a connection, always check the amount of time between flights. Ask yourself what will happen if the first flight is delayed; if you don't like the answer, pick another flight or "construct" a connection that allows more time.

Overbooking

Overbooking is not illegal, and most airlines overbook their scheduled flights to a certain extent in order to compensate for "no-shows." Passengers are sometimes left behind or "bumped" as a result. When an oversale occurs, the Department of Transportation (DOT) requires airlines to ask people who aren't in a hurry to give up their seats voluntarily, in exchange for compensation. Those passengers bumped against their will are, with a few exceptions, entitled to compensation.

Voluntary Bumping

Almost any planeload of airline passengers includes some people with urgent travel needs and others who may be more concerned about the cost of their tickets than about getting to their destination on time. DOT rules require airlines to seek out people who are willing to give up their seats for compensation before bumping anyone involuntarily. Here's how this works. At the check-in or boarding area, airline employees will look for volunteers when it appears that the flight has been oversold. If you're not in a rush to arrive at your next destination, you can give your reservation back to the airline in exchange for compensation and a later flight. But before you do this, you may want to get answers to these important questions:

- When is the next flight on which the airline can confirm your seat? The alternate flight may be just as acceptable to you. On the other hand, if the airline offers to put you on standby on another flight that's full, you could be stranded.
- Will the airline provide other amenities such as free meals, a hotel room, transfers between the hotel and the airport, and a phone card? If not, you might have to spend the money it offers you on food or lodging while you wait for the next flight.

DOT has not mandated the form or amount of compensation that airlines offer to volunteers. DOT does, however, require airlines to advise any volunteer whether he or she might be involuntarily bumped and, if that were to occur, the amount of compensation that would be due. Carriers can negotiate with their passengers for mutually acceptable compensation. Airlines generally offer a free trip or other transportation benefits to prospective volunteers. The airlines give employees guidelines for bargaining with passengers, and they may select those volunteers willing to sell back their reservations for the lowest price. If the airline offers you a free ticket or a transportation voucher in a certain dollar amount, ask about restrictions. How long is the ticket or voucher good for? Is it "blacked out" during holiday periods when you might want to use it? Can it be used for international flights?

Involuntary Bumping

DOT requires each airline to give all passengers who are bumped involuntarily a written statement describing their rights and explaining how the carrier decides who gets on an oversold flight and who doesn't. Those travelers who don't get to fly are frequently entitled to denied boarding compensation in the form of a check or cash. The amount depends on the price of their ticket and the length of the delay:

- If you are bumped involuntarily and the airline arranges substitute transportation that is scheduled to get you to your final destination (including later connections) within one hour of your original scheduled arrival time, there is no compensation.
- If the airline arranges substitute transportation that is scheduled to arrive at your destination between one and two hours after your original arrival time (between one and four hours on international flights), the airline must pay you an amount equal to 200% of your one-way fare to your final destination that day, with a $675 maximum.
- If the substitute transportation is scheduled to get you to your destination more than two hours later (four hours internationally), or if the airline does not make any substitute travel arrangements for you, the compensation doubles (400% of your one-way fare, $1350 maximum).
- If your ticket does not show a fare (for example, a frequent-flyer award ticket or a ticket issued by a consolidator), your denied boarding compensation is based on the lowest cash, check or credit card payment charged for a ticket in the same class of service (e.g., coach, first class) on that flight.
- You always get to keep your original ticket and use it on another flight. If you choose to make your own arrangements, you can request an "involuntary refund" for the ticket for the flight you were bumped from. The denied boarding compensation is essentially a payment for your inconvenience.
- If you paid for optional services on your original flight (e.g., seat selection, checked baggage) and you did not receive those services on your substitute flight or were required to pay a second time, the airline that bumped you must refund those payments to you.

Like all rules, however, there are a few conditions and exceptions:

- To be eligible for compensation, you must have a confirmed reservation. A written confirmation issued by the airline or an authorized agent or reservation service qualifies you in this regard even if the airline can't find your reservation in the computer, as long as you didn't cancel your reservation or miss a reconfirmation deadline.

- Each airline has a check-in deadline, which is the amount of time before scheduled departure that you must present yourself to the airline at the airport. For domestic flights most carriers require you to be at the departure gate between 10 minutes and 30 minutes before scheduled departure, but some deadlines can be an hour or longer. Check-in deadlines on international flights can be as much as three hours before scheduled departure time. Some airlines may simply require you to be at the ticket/baggage counter by this time; most, however, require that you get all the way to the boarding area. Some may have deadlines at both locations. If you miss the check-in deadline, you may have lost your reservation and your right to compensation if the flight is oversold.

As noted above, no compensation is due if the airline arranges substitute transportation which is scheduled to arrive at your destination within one hour of your originally scheduled arrival time.

If the airline must substitute a smaller plane for the one it originally planned to use, the carrier isn't required to pay people who are bumped as a result. In addition, on flights using aircraft with 30 through 60 passenger seats, compensation is not required if you were bumped due to safety-related aircraft weight or balance constraints.

The rules do not apply to charter flights, or to scheduled flights operated with planes that hold fewer than 30 passengers. They don't apply to international flights inbound to the United States, although some airlines on these routes may follow them voluntarily. Also, if you are flying between two foreign cities -- from Paris to Rome, for example -- these rules will not apply. The European Commission has a rule on bumpings that occur in an EC country; ask the airline for details, or go to http://ec.europa.eu/transport/passengers/air/air_en.htm.

Airlines set their own "boarding priorities" -- the order in which they will bump different categories of passengers in an oversale situation. When a flight is oversold and there are not enough volunteers, some airlines bump passengers with the lowest fares first. Others bump the last passengers to check in. Once you have purchased your ticket, the most effective way to reduce the risk of being bumped is to get to the airport early. For passengers in the same fare class the last passengers to check in are usually the first to be bumped, even if they have met the check-in deadline. Allow extra time; assume that the roads are backed up, the parking lot is full, and there is a long line at the check-in counter.

Airlines may offer free tickets or dollar-amount vouchers for future flights in place of a check for denied boarding compensation. However, if you are bumped involuntarily you have the right to insist on a check if that is your preference. Once you cash the check (or accept the free flight), you will probably lose the ability to pursue more money from the airline later on. However, if being bumped costs you more money than the airline will pay you at the airport, you can try to negotiate a higher settlement with their complaint department. If this doesn't work, you usually have 30 days from the date on the check to decide if you want to accept the amount of the check. You are always free to decline the check (e.g., not cash it) and take the airline to court to try to obtain more compensation. DOT's denied boarding regulation spells out the airlines' minimum obligation to people they bump involuntarily. Finally, don't be a "no-show." If you are holding confirmed reservations you don't plan to use, notify the airline. If you don't, they will cancel all onward or return reservations on your trip.

Baggage

Between the time you check your luggage in and the time you claim it at your destination, it may have passed through a maze of conveyor belts and baggage carts. Once airborne, baggage may tumble around the cargo compartment if the plane hits rough air. In all fairness to the airlines, however, relatively few bags are damaged or lost. With some common-sense packing and other precautions, your bags will likely be among the ones that arrive safely.

Packing

You can pack to avoid problems. Certain items should never be put into a piece of luggage that you plan to check into the baggage compartment:

- Small valuables: cash, credit cards, jewelry, an expensive camera.
- Critical items: medicine, keys, passport, tour vouchers, business papers.
- Irreplaceable items: manuscript, heirlooms.
- Fragile items: eyeglasses, glass containers, liquids.

Things like this should be carried on your person or packed in a carry-on bag. Remember, the only way to be sure your valuables are not damaged or lost is to keep them with you. Full flights sometimes run out of room in the cabin for full-size carry-on bags. In those situations the airline must sometimes "gate check" the carry-on baggage of the last passengers to board the flight. This happens near the door to the aircraft. Pack your carry-on bag in a manner so that if it must be gate-checked you can quickly remove the fragile, valuable and critical items described above. For example, consider packing all such items in a small, soft bag that will fit under the seat in front of you, and make sure that this small bag is easily accessible in your carry-on bag.

Although only a tiny percentage of checked bags are permanently lost, your bag might be delayed for a day or two. Don't put perishables in a checked bag; they may spoil if it is delayed. It is wise to put items that you will need during the first 24 hours in a carry-on bag (e.g. toiletries, a change of underwear). Check with the airline for its limits on the size, weight, and number of carry-on pieces. As of this writing, on most flights you are allowed to carry on one bag plus one personal item (e.g., purse, briefcase, camera bag, laptop computer bag).

If you are using more than one airline, check with all of them. Inquire about your flight; different airplanes can have different limits. Don't assume that the flight will have closet space for every carry-on garment bag; yours may have to be checked. If you plan to go shopping at your destination and bring your purchases aboard as carry-on, keep the limits in mind. If you check these purchases, however, carry the receipts separately; they may be necessary for a claim if the merchandise is lost or damaged. Don't put anything into a carry-on bag that could be considered a weapon (e.g. certain scissors, pocket knives). Check the web site of the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) for restrictions on carry-on baggage by click "Travelers."

As with carry-ons, checked baggage is subject to limits. Some airlines permit one or two checked bags at no charge; other carriers charge for even one checked bag. There can also be an extra charge if you exceed the airline's limits on the size, weight or number of the bags.

On some flights between two foreign cities, your allowance may be lower and may be based primarily on the weight of the checked bags rather than the number of pieces. The same two bags that cost you nothing to check when you started your trip could result in expensive excess-baggage charges under a weight system. Ask the airlines about the limit for every segment of your international trip before you leave home, especially if you have a stopover of a day or two or if you are changing carriers.

The bags you check should be labeled ? inside and out ? with your name and phone number. Add the name and phone number of a person to contact at your destination if it's practical to do so. Almost all of the bags that are misplaced by airlines do turn up sooner or later. With proper labeling, the bag and its owner can usually be reunited within a few hours.

Don't overpack a bag. This puts pressure on the latches, making it easier for them to pop open. If you plan to check any glassware, musical instruments or other fragile items, they should be packed in a container specifically designed to survive rough handling, preferably a factory-sealed carton or a padded hard-shell carrying case.

Check-in

Don't check in at the last minute. Even if you make the flight, your bag may not. If you miss the airline's check-in deadline, the carrier might not assume liability for your bag if it is delayed or lost. If you have a choice, select flights that minimize the potential for baggage disruption. The likelihood of a bag going astray increases from #1 to #4 below (i.e., #1 is safest): 1) nonstop flight; 2) direct or 'through' flight (one or more stops, but no change of aircraft); 3) online connection (change of aircraft but not airlines); and 4) interline connection (change of aircraft and airlines)

When you check in, remove straps and hooks from garment bags that you are sending as checked baggage. These can get caught in baggage processing machinery, causing damage to the bag.

The airline will put baggage destination tags on your luggage and give you the stubs to use as claim checks. Make sure you get a stub for every bag. Don't throw them away until after you get your bags back and you check the contents. Not only will you need them if a claim is necessary, but you may need to show them to security upon leaving the baggage-claim area.

Your bags may only be checked to one of your intermediate stops rather than your destination city if you must clear Customs short of your final destination, or if you are taking a connection involving two airlines that don't have an interline agreement. Be sure all of the tags from previous trips are removed from your bag, since they may cause your bag to go astray.

Claiming your bags

Many bags look alike. After you pull what you think is your bag off the carousel, check the name tag or the bag tag number. If your bag arrives open, unlocked or visibly damaged, check right away to see if any of the contents are missing or damaged. Report any problems to the airline before leaving the airport; insist on having a report created. Open your suitcase immediately when you get to where you are staying. Any damage to the contents or any pilferage should be immediately reported to the airline by telephone. Make a note of the date and time of the call, and the name and telephone number of the person you spoke with. Follow up as soon as possible with a certified letter to the airline.

Damage

If your suitcase arrives smashed or torn, the airline will usually pay for repairs. If it can't be fixed, they will negotiate a settlement to pay you its depreciated value. The same holds true for belongings packed inside. Airlines may decline to pay for damage caused by the fragile nature of the broken item or inadequate packing, rather than the airline's rough handling. Air carriers might also refuse to compensate you for damaged items inside the bag when there's no evidence of external damage to the suitcase. When you check in, airline personnel may let you know if they think your suitcase or package may not survive the trip intact. Before accepting a questionable item, they may ask you to sign a statement in which you agree to check it at your own risk. But even if you do sign this form, the airline might be liable for damage if it is caused by its own negligence shown by external injury to the suitcase or package.

Delayed bags

If you and your suitcase don't connect at your destination, don't panic. The airlines have very sophisticated systems that track down the vast majority of misplaced bags and return them to their owners within hours. In many cases they will absorb reasonable expenses you incur while they look for your missing belongings. You and the airline may have different ideas of what's reasonable, however, and the amount it will pay is subject to negotiation.

If your bags don't come off the conveyor belt, report this to airline personnel before you leave the airport. Insist that they create a report and give you a copy, even if they say the bag will be in on the next flight. Get an appropriate phone number for following up (not the Reservations number). Don't assume that the airline will deliver the bag without charge when it is found; ask the airline about this. Most carriers set guidelines for their airport employees that allow them to disburse some money at the airport for emergency purchases. The amount depends on whether or not you're away from home and how long it takes to track down your bags and return them to you. If the airline does not provide you a cash advance, it may still reimburse you later for the purchase of necessities. Discuss with the carrier the types of articles that would be reimbursable, and keep all receipts. If the airline misplaces sporting equipment, it will sometimes pay for the rental of replacements. For replacement clothing or other articles, the carrier might offer to absorb only a portion of the purchase cost, on the basis that you will be able to use the new items in the future. (The airline may agree to a higher reimbursement if you turn the articles over to them.)

When you've checked in fresh foods or any other perishable goods and they are ruined because their delivery is delayed, the airline won't reimburse you. Carriers may be liable if they lose or damage perishable items, but they won't accept responsibility for spoilage caused by a delay in delivery.

Airlines are liable for provable consequential damages up to the amount of their liability limit (see below) in connection with the delay. If you can't resolve the claim with the airline's airport staff, keep a record of the names of the employees with whom you dealt, and hold on to all travel documents and receipts for any money you spent in connection with the mishandling. (It's okay to surrender your baggage claim tags to the airline when you fill out a form at the airport, as long as you get a copy of the form and it notes that you gave up the tags.) Contact the airline's baggage claims office or consumer office when you get home.

Lost luggage

Once your bag is declared (permanently) lost, you will have to submit a claim. This usually means you have to fill out a second, more detailed form. Check on this; failure to complete the second form when required could delay your claim. Missing the deadline for filing it could invalidate your claim altogether.

The airline will usually refer your claim to a central office, and the negotiations between you and the airline will begin. If your flight was a connection involving two carriers, the final carrier is normally the one responsible for processing your claim even if it appears that the first airline lost the bag. Airlines don't automatically pay the full amount of every claim they receive. First, they will use the information on your form to estimate the value of your lost belongings. Like insurance companies, airlines consider the depreciated value of your possessions, not their original price or the replacement costs. If you're tempted to exaggerate your claim, don't. Airlines may completely deny claims they feel are inflated or fraudulent. They often ask for sales receipts and other documentation to back up claims, especially if a large amount of money is involved. If you don't keep extensive records, you can expect to negotiate with the airline over the value of your goods. Generally, it takes an airline anywhere from four weeks to three months to pay passengers for their lost luggage. When airlines tender a settlement, they may offer you the option of free tickets on future flights in a higher amount than the cash payment. Ask about all restrictions on these tickets, such as "blackout" periods.

Limits on liability

Airlines assert a limit on their liability for delayed, lost or damaged checked baggage. When your luggage and its contents are worth more than the liability limit, you may want to purchase "excess valuation," if available, from the airline as you check in. This is not insurance, but it will increase the carrier's potential liability. The airline may refuse to sell excess valuation on some items that are especially valuable or breakable, such as antiques, musical instruments, jewelry, manuscripts, negotiable securities and cash.

On domestic trips, the airline can invoke a liability ceiling that is regulated by DOT and that is adjusted for inflation every two years. That limit is currently $3,500 per passenger.

On international round trips that originate in the United States, the liability limit is set by a treaty called the Montreal Convention. This treaty also governs liability on international round trips that originate in another country that has ratified this Convention, and one-way trips between the U.S. and such a country. This international limit is reviewed for inflationary adjustment every five years; it is currently 1,131 Special Drawing Rights. The SDR is a currency surrogate that floats daily; check with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to see the current exchange rate. At this writing 1,131 SDRs was worth about $1,545. The international limit applies to domestic segments of an international journey. In certain very limited circumstances, this may be the case even if the domestic and international flights are on separate tickets and you claim and re-check your bag between the two flights.

Keep in mind that the liability limits are maximums. If the depreciated value of your property is worth less than the liability limit, this lower amount is what you will be offered. If the airline's settlement doesn't fully reimburse your loss, check your homeowner's or renter's insurance; it sometimes covers losses away from the residence. Some credit card companies and travel agencies offer optional or even automatic supplemental baggage coverage.

Special liability requirements apply to the domestic transportation of assistive devices used by passengers with disabilities. For more information, read our page about wheelchairs and assistive devices or the publication New Horizons: Information for the Air Traveler with a Disability.

Hazardous Items

There are restrictions on carrying materials that could be hazardous in an aircraft environment. For example, matches are not permitted in checked bags. For details on hazardous materials, go to www.faa.gov >> Travelers, and www.tsa.gov >> Travelers.

Smoking

Under U.S. government rules, smoking is prohibited on all scheduled-service flights of U.S. airlines. As a general matter, foreign airlines must also ban smoking on all scheduled-service flight segments in, to and from the United States. Cigar and pipe smoking is banned on all U.S.-carrier flights (both scheduled and charter).

On flights where smoking is not banned by law (e.g., charter flights), airlines must have a non-smoking section and must accommodate in that section every passenger who has complied with the airline's check-in deadline and who wishes to be seated there. On these flights, carriers are not required to have a smoking section. An airline is free to ban smoking on a particular flight, or on all of its flights.

None of the regulations described in this chapter apply to charter flights performed with small aircraft by on-demand air taxi operators.

Passengers with Disabilities

The Air Carrier Access Act and the DOT rule that implements it set out procedures designed to ensure that individuals with disabilities have the same opportunity as anyone else to enjoy a pleasant flight. For information about these provisions, see the DOT publication New Horizons: Information for the Air Traveler With a Disability.

Frequent-Traveler Programs

Most if not all major airlines participate in frequent-traveler plans. These programs allow you to earn free trips, upgrades (e.g., from Coach to First Class) or other awards based on how often you fly on that airline or its partner carriers. In most programs you can also earn credit by using specified hotels, rental car companies, credit cards, etc. It doesn't cost anything to join a program, and you can enroll in the programs of any number of different airlines. However, you will want to determine which program best suits your needs before you accumulate a lot of miles. Here are some things to look at when selecting a frequent-traveler program.

- Does the airline fly where you're likely to want to go?
- Are there tie-ins with other carriers, especially those with international routes? Is some of the airline's service provided by commuter-carrier "partners"? In both cases, can you earn credits and use awards on those other airlines?
- How many miles (or trips) are required for particular awards?
- Is there a minimum award per flight (e.g., you are only flying 200 miles but the airline always awards at least 500)?
- Is there a deadline for using accumulated miles?
- Carefully examine the number and length of any "blackout periods" during which awards cannot be used. For example, on some carriers the Thanksgiving blackout may last a week.
- If you are planning a big trip involving air travel and are thinking about joining that airline's frequent-flyer program, enroll before you travel. Airlines usually won't credit mileage that was flown before you became a member.

After you join a program, there are other things that you should know:

- Airlines reserve the right to make changes to their programs, sometimes on short notice. The number of miles required for particular awards might be raised, requiring you to use your old mileage (i.e., your current balance) under the more restrictive new rules. The airline may cease service on a route that you were particularly interested in, or it may even stop serving the city you live in. The carrier may eliminate attractive frequent-flyer tie-ins with particular airlines or hotel chains.
- Cashing in your mileage frequently will limit your losses in case the carrier changes the rules, merges, or goes out of business. Accumulating a larger mileage balance will entitle you to bigger awards, however.
- Carriers often limit the number of seats on each flight for which frequent-flyer awards can be used. You may not be able to get reservations on your first- or second-choice dates or flights.
- Awards can often be issued in the name of immediate family members. However, if you sell or give an award to someone not named on the award or the travel document and the airline finds out, the recipient could have his or her ticket confiscated, and the carrier may penalize the program member's account balance.
- Ask the airline how mileage is registered; you will probably have to identify yourself as a program member when you book your flight or when you check in.
- Keep your ticket (or email confirmation) and your boarding passes until you receive a statement from the frequent-flyer program reflecting the correct mileage earnings for that trip. If a problem arises, get the names of the people you speak with and keep notes of your conversations.

Contract Terms

Throughout this booklet, we have tried to provide you general information about airline travel. It is important to realize, however, that each airline has specific rules that make up your contract of carriage. These rules may differ among carriers. They include provisions such as check-in deadlines, refund procedures, responsibility for delayed flights, and many other things.

Domestic Travel

For domestic travel, an airline may provide all of its contract terms on or with your ticket at the time you buy it. Some small "commuter" carriers use this system. Other airlines may elect to "incorporate terms by reference." This means that you are not given all the airline's rules with your ticket [The proof has a weird symbol here; it should be a dash] most of them are contained in a separate document which you can inspect on request or on the airline’s web site. If an airline elects to "incorporate by reference" it must provide conspicuous written notice with each ticket that: 1) it incorporates terms by reference, and 2) these terms may include liability limitations, claim-filing deadlines, check-in deadlines, and certain other key terms. The airline must also:

- Ensure that passengers can receive an explanation of key terms identified on the ticket from any location where the carrier's tickets are sold, including travel agencies;
- Make available for inspection the full text of its contract of carriage at each of its own airport and city ticket offices;
- Mail a free copy of the full text of its contract of carriage upon request.

DOT also requires most U.S.airlines to post their contracts of carriage on their web site, if they have one.

There are additional notice requirements for contract terms that affect your air fare. Airlines must provide a conspicuous written notice on or with the ticket concerning any "incorporated" contract terms that restrict refunds, impose monetary penalties, or permit the airline to raise the price after you've bought the ticket.

If an airline incorporates contract terms by reference and fails to provide you the required notice about a particular rule, you will not be bound by that rule. In addition, a DOT rule prohibits airlines from changing a term in your contract after you buy your ticket if the change will have a significant negative effect on you.

International Travel

Not all of the detailed requirements for disclosing domestic contract terms apply to international travel. Where they do not, the airline must keep a copy of its "tariff" rules at its airport and city ticket offices. On flights to or from the U.S., you have a right to examine these rules.

The most important point to remember, whether your travel is domestic or international, is that you should not be afraid to ask questions about a carrier's rules. You have a right to know the terms of your contract of carriage. It is in your best interest, as well as that of the airline, for you to ask in advance about any matters of uncertainty.

Travel Scams

Unlike most products, travel services usually have to be paid for before they are delivered. This creates opportunities for disreputable individuals and companies. Some travel packages turn out to be very different from what was presented or what the consumer expected. Some don't materialize at all! If you receive an offer by phone or mail for a free or extremely low-priced vacation trip to a popular destination (often Hawaii or Florida), there are a few things you should look for:

- Does the price seem too good to be true? If so, it probably is.
- Are you pressured to make an immediate decision?
- Is the carrier simply identified as "a major airline," or does the representative offer a collection of airlines without being able to say which one you will be on?
- Is the representative unable or unwilling to give you a street address for the company?
- Are you told you can't leave for at least two months? (The legal deadline for disputing a credit card charge is 60 days, and most scam artists know this.)

If you encounter any of these symptoms, proceed cautiously. Ask for written information to be sent to you; any legitimate travel company will be happy to oblige. If they don't have a brochure, ask for a day or two to think it over; most bona fide deals that are good today will still be good two days from now. If they say no to both requests, this probably isn't the trip for you. Some other advice:

- If you are told that you've won a free vacation, ask if you have to buy something else in order to get it. Some packages have promoted free air fare, as long as you buy expensive hotel arrangements. Others include a free hotel stay, but no air fare.
- If you are seriously considering the vacation offer and are confident you have established the full price you will pay, compare the offer to what you might obtain elsewhere. Frequently, the appeal of free air fare or free accommodations disguises the fact that the total price is still higher than that of a regular package tour.
- Get a confirmed departure date, in writing, before you pay anything. Eye skeptically any promises that an acceptable date will be arranged later. If the package involves standby or waitlist travel, or a reservation that can only be provided much later, ask if your payment is refundable if you want to cancel, and don't pay any money you can't afford to lose.
- If the destination is a beach resort, ask the seller how far the hotel is from the beach. Then ask the hotel.
- Determine the complete cost of the trip in dollars, including all service charges, taxes, processing fees, etc.
- If you decide to buy the trip after checking it out, paying by credit card gives you certain legal rights to pursue a chargeback (credit) if promised services aren't delivered.

For further advice, see "Other Sources of Information" at the end of this brochure for details on how to order the Federal Trade Commission's pamphlet Telemarketing Travel Fraud.

To Your Health

Flying is a routine activity for millions of Americans, and raises no health considerations for the great majority of them. However, there are certain things you can do to ensure that your flight is as comfortable as possible. Changes in pressure can temporarily block the Eustachian tube, causing your ears to 'pop' or to experience a sensation of fullness. To equalize the pressure, swallow frequently; chewing gum sometimes helps. Yawning is also effective. Avoid sleeping during descent; you may not swallow often enough to keep ahead of the pressure change.

Babies are especially troubled by these pressure changes during descent. Having them feed from a bottle or suck on a pacifier will often provide relief. Avoid flying if you have recently had abdominal, eye or oral surgery, including a root canal. The pressure changes that occur during climb and descent can result in discomfort. If you have an upper respiratory or sinus infection, you may also experience discomfort resulting from pressure changes. Postpone your trip if possible. (Check to see if your fare has cancellation or change penalties.) A final tip on pressure changes: they cause your feet to swell. Try not to wear new or tight shoes while flying.

Alcohol and coffee both have a drying effect on the body. Airliner cabin air is relatively dry to begin with, and the combination can increase your chances of contracting a respiratory infection. If you wear contact lenses, the low cabin humidity and/or consumption of alcohol or coffee can reduce your tear volume, leading to discomfort if you don't blink often enough. Lens wearers should clean their lenses thoroughly before the flight, use lubricating eye drops during the flight, read in intervals, and take the lenses out if they nap. (This may not apply to extended wear lenses; consult your practitioner.) If you take prescription medications, bring enough to last through your trip. Take along a copy of the prescription, or your doctor's name and telephone number, in case the medication is lost or stolen. The medicine should be in the original prescription bottle in order to avoid questions at security or Customs inspections. Carry it in a pocket or a carry-on bag; don't pack it in a checked bag, in case the bag is lost.

You can minimize the effects of jet lag in several ways:

- Get several good nights' sleep before your trip.
- Try to take a flight that arrives at night, so you can go straight to bed.
- Sleep on the plane (although not during descent).
- During the flight do isometric exercises, eat lightly, and drink little or no alcohol.

A condition known as Deep Venous Thrombosis can occur in some people who don’t exercise their legs for several hours ? for example, during an airline flight. Consider walking up and down the aisle once or twice, and search the web for exercises that you can do at your seat to minimize the risk of developing this condition during a flight.

Try to use a rest room in the airport terminal before departure. On some flights the cabin crew begins beverage service shortly after the "Fasten Seat Belts" sign is turned off, and the serving cart may block access to the lavatories.

Airline Safety and Security

Air travel is so safe you'll probably never have to use any of the advice we're about to give you. But if you ever do need it, this information could save your life. Airline passengers usually take safety for granted when they board an airplane. They tune out the crew's pre-flight announcements or reach for a magazine instead of the cards that show how to open the emergency exit and what to do if the oxygen mask drops down. Because of this, people may be needlessly hurt or killed in accidents they could survive. Every time you board a plane, here are some things you should do:

- Carry-on bags must be properly stowed in overhead bins or under the seat in front of you. Be careful about what you put into the storage bins over your seat. Their doors may pop open during an accident or even a hard landing, spilling their contents. Also, passengers in aisle seats have been injured by heavy items falling out of these compartments when people are stowing or retrieving belongings at the beginning or end of a flight.
- As soon as you sit down, fasten and unfasten your seat belt a couple of times. Watch how it works. In an emergency you don't want to waste time fumbling with the buckle.
- Before take-off, there will be a briefing about safety procedures, pointing out emergency exits and explaining seat belts, life vests and oxygen masks. Listen carefully and if there's anything you don't understand ask the flight attendants for help.

The plastic card in the seat pocket in front of you will review some of the safety information announced by the flight attendant. Read it. It also tells you about emergency exits and how to find and use emergency equipment such as oxygen masks. As you're reading the card look for your closest emergency exit, and count the number of rows between yourself and this exit. Remember, the closest exit may be behind you. Have a second escape route planned in case the nearest exit is blocked. This is important because people sometimes head for the door they used to board the plane, usually in the front of the first class cabin. This wastes time and blocks the aisles. If the oxygen masks should drop, you must tug the plastic tube slightly to get the oxygen flowing. If you don't understand the instructions about how the mask works, ask a flight attendant to explain them to you.

When the plane is safely in the air, the pilot usually turns off the "fasten seat belt" sign. He or she usually suggests that passengers keep their belts buckled anyway during the flight in case the plane hits rough air. This is a good idea; there have been a number of instances of unexpected turbulence in which unbelted passengers were seriously injured and even killed when they were thrown about the cabin. Just as seat belts should always be worn in cars, in airplanes they should always be fastened when you are in your seat.

If you are ever in an aviation accident, you should remember these things:

- Stay calm.
- Listen to the crew members and do what they say. The cabin crew's most important job is to help you evacuate safely.
- Before you try to open any emergency exit yourself, look outside the window. If you see a fire outside the door, don't open it or the flames may spread into the cabin. Try to use your alternate escape route.
- Remember, smoke rises. So try to stay down if there's smoke in the cabin. Follow the track of emergency lights embedded in the floor; they lead to an exit. If you have a cloth, put it over your nose and mouth.

After an air accident, the National Transportation Safety Board always talks to survivors to try to learn why they were able to make it through safely. They've discovered that, as a rule, it does help to be prepared. Avoiding serious injury or surviving an air accident isn't just a matter of luck; it's also a matter of being informed and thinking ahead.

Are you one of those people who jumps up while the aircraft is still taxiing, gathers up coat, suitcase and briefcase, and gets ready to sprint? If so, resist the urge. Planes sometimes make sudden stops when they are taxiing to the airport gate, and passengers have been injured when they were thrown onto a seat back or the edge of a door of an overhead bin. Stay in your seat with your belt buckled until the plane comes to a complete halt and the 'fasten seat belt' sign is turned off.

Never smoke in airplane restrooms. Smoking was banned there after an accident killed 116 people in only 4 minutes, apparently because a careless smoker left a burning cigarette butt in the trash bin. There is a steep fine for disabling a lavatory smoke detector.

Security procedures are administered by the Transportation Security Administration, an agency of the Department of Homeland Security. For more information, go to www.tsa.gov and click "For Travelers." Note in particular the identification provisions, and restrictions concerning carry-on baggage (particularly the "3-1-1" procedure for liquids and gels in carry-on bags), and the list of prohibited items. At this writing, cabin baggage is generally limited to one carry-on bag plus one personal item (e.g. purse, briefcase, camera bag, laptop computer).

Complaining

DOT rules require U.S. airlines to provide information on how to file a complaint with the carrier. This information must appear on their web sites, on all e-ticket confirmations, and upon request at any of the airline's ticket counters or gates. When passengers comment on airline service, most airlines do listen. They track and analyze the complaints and compliments they receive and use the information to determine what the public wants and to identify problem areas that need attention. They also try to resolve individual complaints. A DOT rule requires that airlines acknowledge a written complaint within 30 days and send a substantive response within 60 days of receiving the complaint.

Like other businesses, airlines have a lot of discretion in how they respond to problems. While you do have certain rights as a passenger, your demands for compensation will probably be subject to negotiation and the kind of action you get often depends in large part on the way you go about complaining. Start with the airline. Before you contact DOT for help with an air travel problem, you should give the airline a chance to resolve it. As a rule, airlines have trouble-shooters at the airports (they're usually called Customer Service Representatives) who can take care of many problems on the spot. They can often arrange meals and hotel rooms for stranded passengers, write checks for denied boarding compensation, arrange luggage resolutions, and settle other routine claims or complaints

If you can't resolve the problem at the airport and want to file a complaint, it's best to write or email the airline's consumer office at its corporate headquarters. DOT requires most U.S. airlines to state on their web sites how and where complaints can be submitted. There may be a form on the airline's web site for this purpose. Take notes at the time the incident occurred and jot down the names of the carrier employees with whom you dealt. Keep all of your travel documents (ticket or confirmation, baggage check stubs, boarding pass, etc.) as well as receipts for any out-of-pocket expenses that were incurred as a result of the mishandling. Here are some helpful tips should you choose to write.

- If you send a letter, type it and, if at all possible, limit it to two pages.
- Include your daytime telephone number (with area code).
- No matter how angry you might be, keep your letter or email businesslike in tone and don't exaggerate what happened. If the complaint sounds very vehement or sarcastic, you might wait a day and then consider revising it.
- Describe what happened, and give dates, cities, and flight numbers or flight times.
- Where possible, include copies, never the originals, of tickets and receipts or other documents that can back up your claim.
- Include the names of any employees who were rude or made things worse, as well as anyone who might have been especially helpful.
- Don't clutter your complaint with a litany of petty gripes that can obscure what you're really angry about.
- Let the airline know if you've suffered any special inconvenience or monetary losses.
- Say just what you expect the carrier to do to make amends. An airline may offer to settle your claim with a check or some other kind of compensation, possibly free transportation. You might want a written apology from a rude employee or reimbursement for some loss you incurred ? but the airline needs to know what you want before it can decide what action to take.
- Be reasonable. If your demands are way out of line, you are rude or sarcastic, or you use vulgar language, at best your letter might earn you a polite apology and a place in the airline's crank files.

If you follow these guidelines, the airlines will probably treat your complaint seriously. Your letter will help them to determine what caused your problem, as well as to suggest actions the company can take to keep the same thing from happening to other people.

Contacting the Department of Transportation (DOT)

Complaints about airline service may be registered with DOT's Aviation Consumer Protection Division (ACPD). You can call, write or use our web-based complaint form.

You may call the ACPD 24 hours a day at 202-366-2220 (TTY 202-366-0511) to record your complaint. You may send us a letter at:

Aviation Consumer Protection Division, C-75
U.S. Department of Transportation
1200 New Jersey Ave, S.E.
Washington, D.C. 20590

To send us a complaint, comment or inquiry electronically, please use our web form at: /airconsumer/file-consumer-complaint

If you write, please be sure to include your address and a daytime telephone number, with area code. Complaints from consumers help us spot problem areas and trends in the airline industry. We use our complaint files to document the need for changes in DOT's consumer protection regulations and, where warranted, as the basis for enforcement action (i.e., where a serious breach of the law has occurred). In addition, every month we publish a report with information about the number of complaints we receive about each airline and what problems people are having. You can find this Air Travel Consumer Report on our web site. That publication also has statistics that the airlines file with us on flight delays, oversales and mishandled baggage.

If your complaint is about something you feel is a safety hazard, write to the Federal Aviation Administration at:

Federal Aviation Administration
Aviation Safety Hotline, AAI-3
800 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20591

Or call 1-866-TELL-FAA (1-866-835-5322).

Questions or concerns about aviation security should be directed to the Transportation Security Administration:

Phone (toll-free): 1-866-289-9673

E-mail: TSA-ContactCenter@dhs.gov

Or write to:

Transportation Security Administration

601 South 12th Street
Arlington, VA 20598

Your Last Resort

If nothing else works, small claims court might be the best way for you to help yourself. Many localities have these courts to settle disputes involving relatively small amounts of money and to reduce the red tape and expense that people generally fear when they sue someone. An airline can generally be sued in small claims court in any jurisdiction where it operates flights or does business. You can usually get the details of how to use the small claims court in your community by contacting your city or county office of consumer affairs, or the clerk of the court. As a rule, small claims court costs are low, you don't need a lawyer, and the procedures are much less formal and intimidating than they are in most other types of courts. See the DOT publication Tell It to the Judge.

Last updated: Friday, October 4, 2019

Office of the Assistant Secretary for Research and Technology

Bureau of Transportation Statistics

Volpe Center

PRIORITIES

Safety

Innovation

Infrastructure

POLICIES, RIGHTS, AND LEGAL

USA.gov

Privacy Policy

FOIA

Budget and Performance

No FEAR Act

Ethics

Web Policies and Notices

Accessibility

This is Exhibit "113" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
WASHINGTON, D.C.

ENFORCEMENT NOTICE REGARDING REFUNDS BY CARRIERS GIVEN THE UNPRECEDENTED IMPACT OF THE COVID-19 PUBLIC HEALTH EMERGENCY ON AIR TRAVEL

The U.S. Department of Transportation's Office of Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings (Aviation Enforcement Office), a unit within the Office of the General Counsel, is issuing this notice to remind the traveling public, and U.S. and foreign carriers, operating at least one aircraft having a seating capacity of 30 or more seats, that passengers should be refunded promptly when their scheduled flights are cancelled or significantly delayed. Airlines have long provided such refunds, including during periods when air travel has been disrupted on a large scale, such as the aftermath of the September 11, 2001 attacks, Hurricane Katrina, and presidentially declared natural disasters. Although the COVID-19 public health emergency has had an unprecedented impact on air travel, the airlines' obligation to refund passengers for cancelled or significantly delayed flights remains unchanged.

The Department is receiving an increasing number of complaints and inquiries from ticketed passengers, including many with non-refundable tickets, who describe having been denied refunds for flights that were cancelled or significantly delayed. In many of these cases, the passengers stated that the carrier informed them that they would receive vouchers or credits for future travel. But many airlines are dramatically reducing their travel schedules in the wake of the COVID-19 public health emergency. As a result, passengers are left with cancelled or significantly delayed flights and vouchers and credits for future travel that are not readily usable.

Carriers have a longstanding obligation to provide a prompt refund to a ticketed passenger when the carrier cancels the passenger's flight or makes a significant change in the flight schedule and the passenger chooses not to accept the alternative offered by the carrier.[1] The longstanding obligation of carriers to provide refunds for flights that carriers cancel or significantly delay does not cease when the flight disruptions are outside of the carrier's control (e.g., a result of government restrictions).[2] The focus is not on whether the flight disruptions are within or outside the carrier's

[1] See Enhancing Airline Passenger Protections, 76 Fed. Reg. 23110-01, at 23129 (Apr. 25, 2011) ("We reject . . . assertions that carriers are not required to refund a passenger's fare when a flight is cancelled if the carrier can accommodate the passenger with other transportation options after the cancellation. We find it to be manifestly unfair for a carrier to fail to provide the transportation contracted for and then to refuse to provide a refund if the passenger finds the offered rerouting unacceptable (e.g., greatly delayed or otherwise inconvenient) and he or she no longer wishes to travel.")

[2] U.S. Dept. of Transportation, Aviation Consumer Protection, Refunds, https://www.transportation.gov/individuals/aviation-consumer-protection/refunds (March 4, 2020) ("Am I Entitled to a Refund? When the airline is at fault: Passengers are often entitled to a refund of the ticket price and associated fees when the airline is at fault. . . . Cancelled Flight – A passenger is entitled to a refund if the airline cancelled a flight, regardless of the reason, and the passenger chooses not to be rebooked on a new flight on that airline. . . . Schedule Change/Significant Delay – A passenger is entitled to a refund if the airline made a significant schedule change and/or significantly delays a flight and the passenger chooses not to travel.").

control, but rather on the fact that the cancellation is through no fault of the passenger. [3] Accordingly, the Department continues to view any contract of carriage provision or airline policy that purports to deny refunds to passengers when the carrier cancels a flight, makes a significant schedule change, or significantly delays a flight to be a violation of the carriers' obligation that could subject the carrier to an enforcement action.[4]

In recognition of the fact that the COVID-19 public health emergency has had major impacts on the airline industry, the Aviation Enforcement Office will exercise its prosecutorial discretion and provide carriers an opportunity to become compliant before taking further action. Specifically, the Aviation Enforcement Office will refrain from pursuing an enforcement action against a carrier that provided passengers vouchers for future travel in lieu of refunds for cancelled or significantly delayed flights during the COVID-19 public health emergency so long as: (1) the carrier contacts, in a timely manner, the passengers provided vouchers for flights that the carrier cancelled or significantly delayed to notify those passengers that they have the option of a refund; (2) the carrier updates its refund policies and contract of carriage provisions to make clear that it provides refunds to passengers if the carrier cancels a flight or makes a significant schedule change; and (3) the carrier reviews with its personnel, including reservationists, ticket counter agents, refund personnel, and other customer service professionals, the circumstances under which refunds should be made.

The Aviation Enforcement Office will monitor airline policies and practices and take enforcement action as necessary.

Questions regarding this notice may be addressed to the Office of Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings (C-70), U.S. Department of Transportation, 1200 New Jersey Avenue, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20590.

By:

Blane A. Workie
Assistant General Counsel for
Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings

Dated: April 3, 2020

An electronic version of this document is available at http://www.dot.gov/airconsumer

[3] Id.

[4] See Enhancing Airline Passenger Protections, 76 Fed. Reg. 23110-01, at 23129 (Apr. 25, 2011) (citing July 15, 1996 Industry Letter which advises carriers that "applying . . . nonrefundability/penalty provisions in situations in which the change of flight time or travel date has been necessitated by carrier action or 'an act of god', e.g., where the carrier cancels a flight for weather or mechanical reasons . . . is grossly unfair and it violates 49 U.S.C. 41712, as would any contract of carriage or tariff provision mandating such a result" and putting carriers on notice that the Department "will aggressively pursue any cases of this type that come to our attention").

This is Exhibit "114" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
WASHINGTON, D.C.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS REGARDING AIRLINE TICKET REFUNDS GIVEN THE UNPRECEDENTED IMPACT OF THE COVID-19 PUBLIC HEALTH EMERGENCY ON AIR TRAVEL

The U.S. Department of Transportation (Department) is continuing to receive a high volume of air travel service complaints and inquiries given the unprecedented impact of the Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) public health emergency on air travel. In a typical month, the Department receives approximately 1,500 air travel service complaints and inquiries. However, in March 2020 and April 2020, more than 25,000 air travel service complaints and inquiries were filed,[1] many of which concern refunds.[2] Airlines and ticket agents have also requested guidance about their refund obligations.

The Department's Office of Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings (Aviation Enforcement Office), a unit within the Office of the General Counsel, is providing answers to some of the most common questions about refunds to help consumers understand their rights and to ensure airlines and ticket agents are complying with aviation consumer protection requirements. To the extent this notice includes guidance on how regulated entities may comply with existing regulations, it does not have the force and effect of law and is not meant to bind the regulated entities in any way. Regulated entities may rely on this document as a safeguard from Departmental enforcement as described herein.

1. What rights do passengers have if an airline cancels a flight or makes a significant schedule change? What is a "significant change" or "cancellation" requiring a refund?

As explained in the Department's Enforcement Notice issued on April 3, 2020, airlines have an obligation to provide a refund to a ticketed passenger when the carrier cancels or significantly changes the passenger's flight, and the passenger chooses not to accept an alternative offered by the carrier.[3] However, neither the term "significant change" nor "cancellation" is defined in regulation or statute. Based on the Aviation Enforcement Office's review of the refund policies and practices of U.S. and foreign air carriers, airlines define "significant change" and "cancellation" differently when fulfilling their obligation to provide refunds.

---

[1] The Department will provide information about the number of air travel service complaints and inquiries received in March 2020 through its Air Travel Consumer Report (ATCR) to be issued later this month. The number of air travel service complaints received in April 2020 will be available in the ATCR issued in June 2020. The ATCR is normally released by the end of the second week of each month and is available at www.transportation.gov/individuals/aviation-consumer-protection/air-travel-consumer-reports.

[2] The monthly ATCR contains a table that displays the categories of complaints received, including a separate category for refund complaints. The refund complaint data for March 2020 will be available in the May 2020 ATCR, and the refund complaint data for April 2020 will be available in the June 2020 ATCR.

[3] Enforcement Notice Regarding Refunds by Carriers Given the Unprecedented Impact of the COVID-19 Public Health Emergency on Air Travel (April 3, 2020) at www.transportation.gov/airconsumer/enforcement_notice_refunds_apr_3_2020. See also 14 CFR § 259.5(b)(5), and Enhancing Airline Passenger Protections, 76 Fed. Reg. 23110-01, at 23129 (Apr. 25, 2011).

Because "cancellation" and "significant change" are not defined in the context of ticket refunds, airlines may develop reasonable interpretations of those terms.[4] However, the Aviation Enforcement Office expects carriers to honor those reasonable interpretations in implementing their refund obligations and will focus its enforcement actions on instances where a carrier has disregarded the requirement to offer refunds, failed to honor its refund policies, or where it is determined that the carrier's refund policies or practices are otherwise "unfair or deceptive" within the meaning of 49 U.S.C. § 41712.[5]

2. What rights do passengers have if they choose not to travel due to safety or health concerns related to the COVID-19 public health emergency?

Passengers who purchase a non-refundable ticket on a flight to, within, or from the United States that is still being operated without a significant change, but would like to change or cancel their reservation, are generally not entitled to a refund or a travel voucher for future use on the airline. This is true even if the passenger wishes to change or cancel due to concerns related to the COVID-19 public health emergency. Although not required, many airlines are providing travel credits or vouchers that can be used for future travel for those passengers electing to cancel their travel due to health or safety concerns related to COVID-19. In reviewing refund complaints against airlines, the Department will closely examine any allegation that an airline misled a passenger about the status of a flight to avoid having to offer a refund.

3. What rights do passengers have if they purchased their airline ticket from an online travel agency?

Ticket agents are required to make "proper" refunds when service cannot be performed as contracted on a flight to, within, or from the United States.[6] The Department interprets the requirement for ticket agents to provide "proper" refunds to include providing refunds in any instance when the following conditions are met: (i) an airline cancels or significantly changes a flight, (ii) an airline acknowledges that a consumer is entitled to a refund, and (iii) passenger funds are possessed by a ticket agent. In enforcing the requirement for ticket agents to make "proper" refunds, the Aviation Enforcement Office will focus on the totality of the circumstances.

4. May airlines and ticket agents retroactively apply new refund policies?

The Department interprets the statutory prohibition against unfair or deceptive practices to cover actions by airlines and ticket agents applying changes retroactively to their refund policies that affect consumers negatively. The refund policy in place at the time the passenger purchased the ticket is the policy that is applicable to that ticket. The Aviation Enforcement Office would consider the denial of refunds in contravention of the policies that were in effect at the time of the ticket purchase to be an unfair and deceptive practice.[7]

---

[4] The Aviation Enforcement Office would consider a practice of retroactively applying a new definition of cancellation or significant change that disadvantages passengers who purchased tickets under a more generous cancellation or significant change definition to be unfair and deceptive.

[5] Under 49 USC § 41712, the Department is authorized to investigate and decide whether a U.S. air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent engaged in an unfair or deceptive practice in air transportation or the sale of air transportation. The Department is also authorized to issue orders to stop an unfair or deceptive practice after notice and opportunity for a hearing.

[6] See 14 CFR § 399.80(l), which states that a ticket agent's failure or refusal to make proper refunds promptly when service cannot be performed as contracted, or a ticket agent's representation that such refunds are obtainable only at some other point, constitutes an unfair or deceptive practice.

[7] The Department considers a practice to be unfair to consumers if it (1) causes or is likely to cause substantial injury to consumers, (2) cannot be reasonably avoided by consumers, and (3) is not outweighed by countervailing benefits to consumers or to competition. The Department considers a practice to be "deceptive" to consumers if it is likely to mislead a consumer, acting reasonably under the circumstances, with respect to a material matter.

5. May airlines or ticket agents offer credits or vouchers to consumers in lieu of refunds?

Airlines and ticket agents can offer consumers alternatives to a refund, such as credits or vouchers, so long as the option of a refund is also offered and clearly disclosed if the passenger is entitled to a refund. Further, any restrictions that apply to the credits and vouchers, such as the period in which credits must be used or any fees charged for using the credit, must be clearly disclosed to consumers. If an airline, by representation or omission, engages in conduct that is likely to mislead consumers about their right to a refund, or the value of a voucher or credit that is offered, the Aviation Enforcement Office would deem such conduct to be a deceptive practice.[8]

6. How quickly must airlines and ticket agents process refunds?

Airlines and ticket agents are required to make refunds promptly. For airlines, prompt is defined as being within 7 business days if a passenger paid by credit card, and within 20 days if a passenger paid by cash or check.[9] For ticket agents, prompt is not defined.[10] The Aviation Enforcement Office recognizes that, given the significant volume of refund requests resulting from the COVID-19 public health emergency, processing refunds may take longer than normal and will determine the timeliness of refund processing for ticket agents based on the totality of the circumstances, such as the volume of incoming refund requests and steps taken to address the increased volume. Also, the Aviation Enforcement Office will use its enforcement discretion and not take action against airlines for not processing refunds within the required timeframes if, under the totality of the circumstances, they are making good faith efforts to provide refunds in a timely manner.

7. What is the enforcement approach of the Aviation Enforcement Office?

Given the unprecedented impact of the COVID-19 public health emergency on the aviation industry, the Aviation Enforcement Office intends to exercise its enforcement discretion and first provide carriers and ticket agents an opportunity to become compliant. The Aviation Enforcement Office will continue to monitor airline policies and practices and take enforcement action as necessary and appropriate.

Questions regarding this notice may be addressed to the Office of Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings (C-70), U.S. Department of Transportation, 1200 New Jersey Avenue, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20590. You may also send questions regarding this notice by email at C70Notice@dot.gov.

By:

Blane A. Workie
Assistant General Counsel for
Aviation Enforcement and Proceedings

Dated: May 12, 2020

An electronic version of this document is available at http://www.dot.gov/airconsumer.

---

[8] Id.

[9] 14 CFR § 259.5(b)(5).

[10] The Department has initiated a rulemaking that would, among other things, require large travel agencies to adopt certain minimum customer service standards that provide a consistent level of consumer protection regardless of where consumers purchase airline tickets and related air transportation services. See www.reginfo.gov/public/do/eAgendaViewRule?pubId=201910&RIN=2105-AE57.

This is Exhibit "115" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Home

FAQs: Statement on Vouchers

The CTA has been asked a number of questions about its Statement on Vouchers. Below are answers to the most frequently-posed questions.

What is the purpose of the Statement on Vouchers?

The Statement on Vouchers, although not a binding decision, offers suggestions to airlines and passengers in the context of a once-in-a-century pandemic, global collapse of air travel, and mass cancellation of flights for reasons outside the control of airlines.

This unprecedented situation created a serious risk that passengers would simply end up out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. That risk was exacerbated by the liquidity challenges faced by airlines as passenger and flight volumes plummeted.

For flights cancelled for reasons beyond airlines' control, the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, which are based on legislative authorities, require that airlines ensure passengers can complete their itineraries but do not obligate airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs.

The statement indicated that the use of vouchers could be a reasonable approach in the extraordinary circumstances resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic, when flights are cancelled for reasons outside airlines' control and passengers have no prospect of completing their itineraries. Vouchers for future travel can help protect passengers from losing the full value of their flights, and improve the odds that over the longer term, consumer choice and diverse service offerings -- including from small and medium-sized airlines -- will remain in Canada's air transportation sector. Of course, as noted in the statement, passengers can still file a complaint with the CTA and each case will be decided on its merits.

Why did the CTA talk about vouchers when US and EU regulators have said that airlines should give refunds?

The American and European legislative frameworks set a minimum obligation for airlines to issue refunds when flights are cancelled for reasons outside their control. Canada's doesn't. That's the reason for the difference in the statements.

Some jurisdictions have relaxed the application or enforcement of requirements related to refunds in light of the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, including European countries that have approved the issuance of vouchers instead of refunds.

Do I have to accept a voucher if I think I'm owed a refund?

The Statement on Vouchers suggests what could be an appropriate approach in extraordinary circumstances, but doesn't affect airlines' obligations or passengers' rights.

Some airline tariffs might not provide for a refund and others might include force majeure exceptions to refund provisions.

If you think that you're entitled to a refund for a flight that was cancelled for reasons related to the COVID-19 pandemic and you don't want to accept a voucher, you can ask the airline for a refund.

Sometimes, the airline may offer a voucher that can be converted to a refund if the voucher hasn't been used by the end of its validity period. This practice reflects the liquidity challenges airlines are facing as a result of the collapse of air travel while giving passengers added protection in the event that they ultimately can't take advantage of the voucher.

If you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, you can file a complaint with the CTA, which will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff. Each case will be decided on its merits.

Date modified:
2020-04-22

This is Exhibit "116" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Abou-Hamad, Betricia

From: Keenan, Michael <michael.keenan@tc.gc.ca>
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2020 9:48 AM
To: Roy, Marc; Butcher, Amy; McCloskey, Shane; Hill, Miled
Subject: FW: FAQs
Attachments: FAQs on statement.docx; ATT00001.htm

From: Hanson, Lawrence
Sent: Tuesday, April 21, 2020 7:21 PM
To: Keenan, Michael <michael.keenan@tc.gc.ca>
Cc: Stacey, Colin <colin.stacey@tc.gc.ca>; Millette, Vincent <vincent.millette@tc.gc.ca>; Little, Jennifer <jennifer.little@tc.gc.ca>; Maheu, Caroline <Caroline.Maheu@tc.gc.ca>
Subject: Fwd: FAQs

FYI
Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

> From: Marcia Jones <Marcia.Jones@otc-cta.gc.ca>
> Date: April 21, 2020 at 7:07:14 PM EDT
> To: "Hanson, Lawrence" <lawrence.hanson@tc.gc.ca>
> Subject: FAQs
>
> Hi Lawrence,
> I just wanted to give you a heads up the CTA intends to post these tomorrow. The Chair's office is also advising MINO about these.
>
> The intent is to diffuse legal risk head on, in relation to litigation that has been launched by a consumer advocate. The FAQs also clarify some misperceptions.
>
> Please let me know if you have any questions or wish to discuss.
>
> Thanks,
> Marcia

FAQs

The CTA has been asked a number of questions about its Statement on Vouchers. Below are answers to the most frequently-posed questions.

What is the purpose of the Statement on Vouchers?

The Statement on Vouchers, although not a binding decision, offers suggestions to airlines and passengers in the context of a once-in-a-century pandemic, global collapse of air travel, and cancellation of many flights for reasons outside the control of airlines.

This unprecedented situation created a serious risk that passengers would simply end up out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights That risk was exacerbated by the liquidity challenges faced by airlines as passenger and flight volumes plummeted.

The Air Passenger Protection Regulations, which were developed based on legislative authorities, do not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons outside their control. Given this, the statement indicated that the use of vouchers could be a reasonable approach in these extraordinary circumstances when flights are cancelled for reasons outside of an airline's control. Vouchers for future travel can help protect passengers from losing the full value of their flights, and improve the odds that over the longer term, consumer choice and diverse service offerings -- including from small and medium-sized airlines -- will remain in Canada's air transportation sector. Of course, as noted in the Statement, passengers can file a complaint with the CTA and each case will be heard on its merits.

Why did the CTA talk about vouchers when US and EU regulators have said that airlines should give refunds?

The American and European legislative frameworks set a minimum obligation for airlines to issue refunds when flights are cancelled for reasons outside the airline's control. Canada's doesn't. That's the reason for the difference in the statements.

Some jurisdictions have relaxed the application or enforcement of requirements related to refunds, including European countries that have approved the issuance of vouchers instead of refunds.

Do I have to accept a voucher if I think I'm owed a refund?

The Statement on Vouchers suggests what could be an appropriate approach in extraordinary circumstances, but doesn't affect airlines' obligations or passengers' rights.

Some airline tariffs might not provide for a refund and others might include force majeure exceptions to refund provisions.

If you think that you're entitled to a refund for a flight that was cancelled for reasons related to the COVID-19 pandemic and you don't want to accept a voucher, you can ask the airline for a refund.

Sometimes, the airline may offer a voucher that can be converted to a refund if the voucher hasn't been used by the end of its validity period. This practice reflects the liquidity challenges airlines are facing as a result of the collapse of air travel while giving passengers added protection in the event that they ultimately can't take advantage of the voucher.

If the airline refuses to provide a refund and you think you are entitled to one, or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, you can file a complaint with the CTA, which will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff. Each case will be determined on its merits.

This is Exhibit "117" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

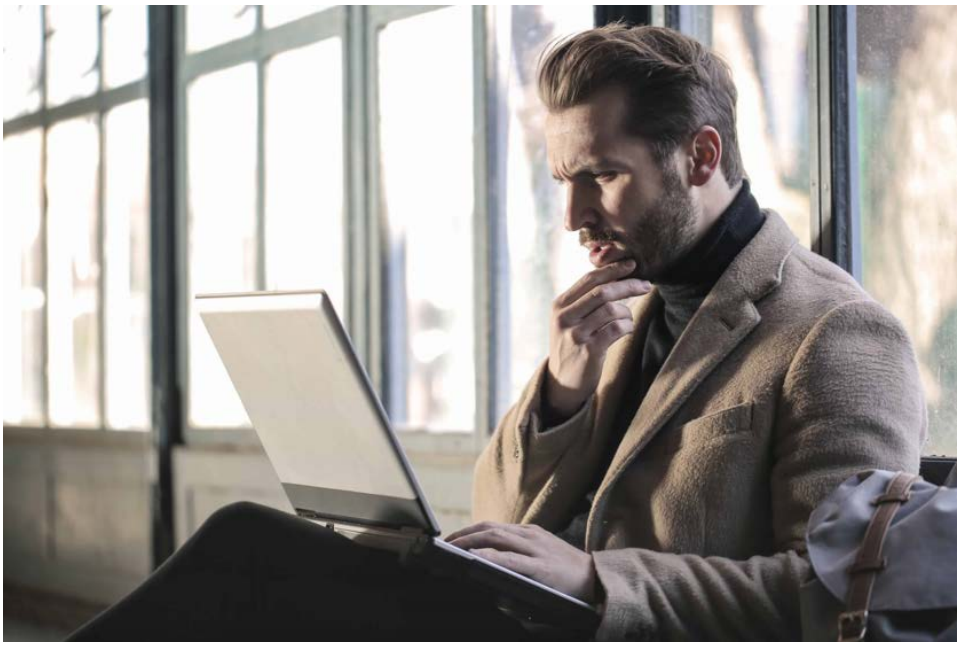
affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

The CTA Says Their Previous Statement On Refunds Essentially Meant Nothing



Andrew D'Amours (https://flytrippers.com/author/andrew/) - April 24, 2020 - Canada News (https://flytrippers.com/category/travel-news/canada-news/) / Travel News (https://flytrippers.com/category/travel-news/) - 1 Comment (https://flytrippers.com/cta-statement-refunds-update/#comments)

Andrew D'Amours (https://flytrippers.com/author/andrew/)
Flytrippers cofounder

Earlier this month, the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) opted to be complicit in the airlines' ploy to give you travel credits (instead of the refunds you are entitled to if they cancel your flight). But exactly as we predicted after they made their first statement, the CTA just put out a new page saying that the first statement essentially meant nothing.

Confused?

Many of you are… for everything that relates to refunds. That's normal, it's complicated. We'll make this new information as simple as it can be.

And we'll soon clarify things with new and improved content with clear bullet point step-by-steps on how to get a refund, so you can do it yourself. And at our readers' request, we'll offer an affordable assistance service to do everything for you (which will be risk-free: no refund = no payment) if you don't have time or don't want to do it.

You can sign up to get the free content first or add your name to our waitlist (https://forms.gle/Edr6vwJU6fEHNZt79) for the service.

Contents [hide]

Refunds Basics

If you already know everything, you can skip this quick overview, but I want to very clearly summarize the key facts about refunds, and clarify what many people seem to not be sure about (based on the messages we receive).

The fact is, DESPITE WHAT AIRLINES TELL YOU, you are 100% entitled to full cash refunds for:

- flights to or from the United States (on ANY airline)
- return flights from the European Union (on ANY airline)
- flights to or from the European Union (on EU airlines)

There is NO debate or grey area.

Just because the airline is telling you that they don't have to refund… does not mean it's true. It's absolutely not. Obviously you shouldn't just take their word for it.

Warning: we are not saying it will necessarily be easy or quick (and we never did). We are saying that the regulation is clear and yes you are owed a refund.

Of course, airlines don't want to pay, it's a huge cost… and they know most passengers will just give up. They're counting on it. That's exactly why we'll offer that risk-free service (https://forms.gle/Edr6vwJU6fEHNZt79) to do the work for you if a travel credit is not what you want.

By the way, I've said it before, I love airlines (https://flytrippers.com/refund-not-airline-credit-coronavirus/) and I completely understand that it's a horrible situation for them… but it's horrible for travelers too. If airlines want help in the form of taxpayer money, that's one thing. But that has absolutely nothing to do with the money that belongs to travelers who didn't get the service they paid for.

You should also be eligible for full refunds for all other flights from Canada too… but our government wanted you to be in the business of providing interest-free loans to multi-billion corporations, whether you want to or not. Despite previous rulings and general contractual laws.

That is what our infographic told you on April 6th:

See what we wrote about Canadian airlines, apart from US & EU flights? "For now only travel credits, but wait as long as you can: this might change."

Here we are (sort of).

CTA Situation Reminder

While Canada says it is a leader in consumer protection, here's what happened.

European Union: they published a statement reaffirming that the "no matter the reason" in the "refunds are owed when a flight is canceled by the airline no matter the reason" regulation actually meant "no matter the reason". What a shocking concept, I know.

USA: The US Department of Transportation came out with a very strongly-worded statement reaffirming the right to refunds for US flights, on US and foreign carriers. Yes, even the US, the country that everyone assumes always sides with corporations.

Canada? The CTA put out an unsigned, vague statement legitimizing travel credits and allowing airlines to confiscate the money travelers are entitled to. Despite their own previous rulings saying that refunds are owed even when the reason for cancelation is outside the airline's control.

And it didn't get better.

The CTA Backtracks (But Not Really)

We told you that the CTA's initial "statement on vouchers (https://flytrippers.com/canadian-airlines-get-the-right-to-offer-credits-instead-of-the-refund-you-should-get/)" was not binding and that it was not a decision. That's why our headline was that airlines had gotten the "right" to give vouchers (with rights in quotation marks—because it wasn't really the case) when most gave the impression that you should give up and let airlines keep your money.

(We also told you it seemed like a way to buy some time for airlines, so we told you to wait before doing anything if your flight was not imminent, since there's absolutely no point in canceling in advance anyway (https://flytrippers.com/canceling-trips-covid-19/)).

So now the CTA has confirmed that it wasn't a binding decision. But that's pretty much it, sadly. Back to square one…

Some media outlets shared this new information with headlines about the CTA changing its position. It's not quite a change… the CTA is just saying that the first position meant nothing. But nothing has "changed".

The CTA has just added a new page on its website: "FAQs: Statement on Vouchers (https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/faqs-statement-vouchers)".

Heres' the first FAQ (emphasis is mine):

> What is the purpose of the Statement on Vouchers?
>
> The Statement on Vouchers, although not a binding decision, offers suggestions to airlines and passengers

Great right? When you need to get your money back (many have lost income due to the crisis), the public organization whose mandate includes "providing consumer protection for air passengers" is just casually giving "suggestions" instead of doing what its US and EU counterparts have done weeks ago (telling airlines to refund you).

Here is another FAQ (emphasis is mine):

> Do I have to accept a voucher if I think I'm owed a refund?
>
> The Statement on Vouchers suggests what could be an appropriate approach in extraordinary circumstances, but doesn't affect airlines' obligations or passengers' rights

The CTA's initial statement "doesn't affect" anything, so in other words, it meant nothing. And instead of now saying something that means something, or fully retracting their initial statement that essentially meant nothing, now they're publishing FAQs to tell you that it essentially meant nothing.

That's it.

They are using the excuse that our regulation is not as explicit as it is elsewhere, but we debunked that in great detail in the first post (https://flytrippers.com/canadian-airlines-get-the-right-to-offer-credits-instead-of-the-refund-you-should-get/#rulings).

Finally, here's what the CTA says at the very very end, in the 5th and last paragraph of the last FAQ (bolding is mine):

> If you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, you can file a complaint with the CTA, which will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff. Each case will be decided on its merits.

Their initial statement never even mentioned the word "complaint".

The bottom line is that the CTA had a second chance to do the right thing and simply require refunds. But they instead opted for another page full of meaningless mumbo jumbo to lull consumers, and they made sure it looked just as complicated. It seems clear that they are strongly hoping that most just get discouraged and give up.

But we will be here to make sure that's not the case, and won't let this go. Personally, I find it almost insulting. We expect this from airlines and their lobby, but it's embarrassing from the agency that is supposed to also defend travelers.

What This Means For You

In short, I want to be very upfront: it's still not a slam-dunk, unlike for US and EU flights, unfortunately.

For those two jurisdictions, it's very clear that you are entitled to a refund. For all other destinations, Canadian airlines will definitely keep telling you that they won't give you a refund (in fact, they are still even saying that for EU and US flights even though it's an even more blatant lie).

Yes, this new information by the CTA confirms the first statement meant nothing… but we already knew that. And it sadly doesn't clarify things as well as the EU & US governments did.

The CTA could literally not have taken a more passive position. Thanks for nothing.

They happen to refer to each airline's "tariff" (the "contract of carriage"), again letting airlines decide what protection passengers get from airlines.

(Disappointing? Yes. Surprising? No. The Canadian government was so proud to launch passenger compensation regulation in 2019 (https://flytrippers.com/airline-passenger-compensation-in-canada/), but those rules are much better for airlines that they are for passengers. Not to mention they don't even explicitly include the right to a refund, unlike in the US and EU.)

Some common complaints about airlines are exaggerated… but we can all agree that airlines are not going to put the passenger's interest before theirs in a time of crisis. Which is exactly why a time of crisis is when we need the CTA to defend passengers more than ever.

We are nothing against these huge corporations. But yes, it's still possible to stand your ground.

Since this new information was just published, we'll look more into this and put together an up-to-date step-by-step on how to get a refund for this particular case as well. We'll have that ready for you very quickly. There are also petitions and class actions being organized around Canada. We'll tell you about those too.

Sign up to be the first to get updates and all our refund tips

Summary

960

The CTA just published a page to confirm that their initial statement on refunds was not a binding decision, that it was just a suggestion, and that it affects nothing. In other words, this update is just to let you know that the first statement essentially meant nothing. And now it's still not clear at all, because we're back to square one.

What do you think of this update? Tell us in the comments below.

Help us spread the word about our flight deals and travel tips by sharing this article and most importantly bookmark Flytrippers so we can help you navigate the world of low-cost travel!

Cover image: confused man (photo credit: Bruce Mars)

Advertiser Disclosure: Flytrippers receives a commission on links featured in this blog post. We appreciate if you use them, especially given it never costs you anything more to do so, and we thank you for supporting the site and making it possible for us to keep finding the best travel deals and content for you. In the interest of transparency, know that we will NEVER recommend a product or service we do not believe in or that we do not use ourselves, as our reputation and credibility is worth far more than any commission. This principle is an essential and non-negotiable part of all our partnerships: we will never give any third-party any control whatsoever on our content. For more information on our advertiser disclosure, click here.

This post may contain affiliate links that could provide you with exclusive discounts and could provide a small commission to Flytrippers at absolutely no cost to you. Thank you for using our links to support us, to allow us to provide valuable travel deals and content for free, and to help us accomplish our mission of helping you travel more for less. We will never recommend a product or service if we don't believe in it and no third party ever gets any control over our content. Click here (https://flytrippers.com/terms-conditions/) for more details.

Share this post to help us help more people travel more for less:

TAGS: CORONAVIRUS (HTTPS://FLYTRIPPERS.COM/TAG/CORONAVIRUS/)

← Previous Post
This New Plane Seat Concept Is Designed For Post-Coronavirus Air Travel (https://flytrippers.com/coronavirus-plane-seat-concept/)

Next Post →
A Free Printable World Map For Your Kids To Color And Learn (https://flytrippers.com/printable-world-map-for-kids-to-color/)

961

(https://flytrippers.com/author/andrew/)

Andrew D'Amours (Https://Flytrippers.com/Author/Andrew/)

Andrew is the co-founder of Flytrippers. He is passionate about traveling the world but also, as a former management consultant, about the travel industry itself. He shares his experiences to help you save money on travel. As a very cost-conscious traveler, he loves finding deals and getting free travel thanks to travel rewards points... to help him visit every country in the world (current count: 64/193 Countries, 47/50 US States & 9/10 Canadian Provinces).

YOU MIGHT ALSO LIKE

(https://flytrippers.com/usa-test-requirement/)

US pre-entry test requirement: ultimate guide (https://flytrippers.com/usa-test-requirement/)

June 10, 2022

(https://flytrippers.com/cyprus-pay-for-travelers-healthcare-coronavirus/)

This Mediterranean Island Will Pay For Your Healthcare And Hotel If You Are Infected (https://flytrippers.com/cyprus-pay-for-travelers-healthcare-coronavirus/)

June 1, 2020

(https://flytrippers.com/how-canadians-travel-united-states/)

How Canadians can travel to the United State (entry rules for all nationalities) (https://flytrippers.com/how-canadians-travel-united-states/)

May 1, 2023

THIS POST HAS ONE COMMENT

Maryam APRIL 26, 2020 REPLY

This is very informative thank you. I have booked a trip to Portugal for July for a reunion that won't happen anymore and am hoping to get a refund. I would like to know how to go about it. I know that the other travellers won't make it either at a later date. So a credit won't be a satisfactory solution.

Leave a Reply

962

Your comment here...

Name (required) Email (required) Website

Notify me of follow-up comments by email.

Search

This is Exhibit "118" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Ricky Zhang • April 24, 2020

Refunds on Cancelled Flights: What's the Latest in Canada?

One developing story that I've had my eyes on in the midst of the pandemic is the response of Canada's airlines to customers who have been affected by flights that have been cancelled by the airline.

As I wrote about a few weeks ago, while customers are entitled to a full refund to the original form of payment under the law, the airlines have banded together to offer only travel credits that are valid for the next 24 months instead.

Spearheaded by Dr. Gabor Lukacs of the Air Passenger Rights organization, Canadian travellers had no choice but to stand up for their rights, both by resorting to credit card chargebacks to obtain their rightful refunds and by drawing an increasing amount of media attention to the matter.

So, how have things played out over the last few weeks?

Canada's Airlines Have Not Covered Themselves in Glory

Longtime readers will know that I do my best to take a balanced view of any contentious issue, giving due consideration to both sides' perspectives and looking at the bigger picture whenever possible.

And when it first became apparent that Canada's airlines were refusing to provide refunds, I was keen to remind readers that they were doing so as a matter of survival: put simply, if they paid out refunds to everyone who was due a refund, they would run out of cash and liquidate, and there wouldn't be any airlines left.

However, I've been thoroughly disappointed by how our airlines have acted throughout the whole ordeal, and while I'd still encourage travellers to think about the long-term well-being of the travel industry before initiating chargebacks, I must say that my sympathy for the airlines is dwindling day by day the longer that their anti-consumer policies drag on.

We've seen many other airlines around the world working with customers by offering creative incentives to accept travel vouchers, such as a 15% or 20% increase in the value of the vouchers compared to the original ticket, or perhaps a token amount of frequent flyer miles in exchange for the inconvenience of accepting vouchers.

On the other hand, Canada's airlines have been steadfast in their position, even going to such lengths as unilaterally issuing travel vouchers without communicating with customers at all, as well as misleading customers by citing a "Statement on Vouchers" by the Canadian Transport Agency (CTA) as though it was a legally binding ruling, which it is not.

What exactly is this "Statement on Vouchers", you ask?

The Canadian Transport Agency Posts a Statement...

On March 25, the CTA posted the Statement on Vouchers on its website, which you can read here. The relevant section, which comments on the airlines' practice of providing 24-month travel vouchers in lieu of refunds, reads as follows:

> While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

Needless to say, it was highly disappointing to see the CTA siding with the airlines on this one.

Don't forget: the Department of Transportation in the USA were quick to remind the airlines of their responsibilities under the law to provide refunds. Considering the unprecedented situation, the DOT was happy to give airlines some leeway in terms of the timing of the refunds, but still clarified that the refunds must be issued eventually, and that 24-month travel vouchers were certainly not a reasonable alternative if the customer did not accept them.

Meanwhile, the European Union issued a similar directive, clarifying that "in case of cancellations, the transport provider must reimburse or re-route the passengers," and rejecting airlines' calls for an exemption to the legislation in light of the circumstances.

And yet, here we are in Canada, where the CTA's Statement on Vouchers, despite being merely an impulsive, unattributed statement with no legal grounding, nevertheless gave readers the illusion of a legally binding ruling. It therefore served no purpose other than to give the airlines further ammunition to reinforce their unlawful position when dealing with customers.

As soon as the statement was published on March 25, airlines began referencing it when telling customers that they were not entitled to refunds, even though the statement was by no means a legally binding ruling. Similarly, and perhaps even more worryingly, we've seen travel insurance providers cite the statement and deny insurance claims on the basis that airlines providing travel vouchers are taking an "appropriate approach" as per the CTA.

(Having said that, most instances of credit card chargeback claims seem to be grounded in the law rather than the Statement of Vouchers, which is at least good news.)

For an agency with a self-proclaimed commitment to "ensuring effective monitoring and enforcement of industry compliance with legislative and regulatory provisions", the CTA's stance on vouchers is laughable to say the least.

...But Is Forced to Backtrack

Thankfully, Canadian travellers did not put up with the CTA's efforts to mislead the public. Quite incredibly, the Air Passenger Rights organization swiftly issued a cease-and-desist letter to the CTA, which was then expedited by the Federal Court of Appeal.

Feeling the heat, the CTA has since clarified its statement in its April 22 release titled "FAQs: Statement on Vouchers", in which it says very little of actual value, but at least clearly backs away from its original position; perhaps the most noteworthy snippet is the CTA conceding that the original Statement on Vouchers was "not a binding decision".

However, further portions of the CTA's FAQs continue to mislead, such as falsely citing "European countries that have approved the issuance of vouchers instead of refunds", as well as these paragraphs under the title "Do I have to accept a voucher if I think I'm owed a refund?":

> If you think that you're entitled to a refund for a flight that was cancelled for reasons related to the COVID-19 pandemic and you don't want to accept a voucher, you can ask the airline for a refund.
>
> Sometimes, the airline may offer a voucher that can be converted to a refund if the voucher hasn't been used by the end of its validity period. This practice reflects the liquidity challenges airlines are facing as a result of the collapse of air travel while giving passengers added protection in the event that they ultimately can't take advantage of the voucher.
>
> If you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, you can file a complaint with the CTA, which will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff. Each case will be decided on its merits.

Telling customers that "you can ask the airline for a refund", when the airlines have spent the past month boldly denying customers' refund requests, is willful ignorance at best.

And inviting customers to "file a complaint with the CTA" if they aren't satisfied... well, it shouldn't take a genius to figure out what the likely outcome of such a complaint would be, given the CTA's clear and obvious bias in favour of the airlines, would it?

It's quite telling that the CTA makes no reference to the single most effective channel for claiming the full refund that you're legally entitled to, which is to file a credit card chargeback for services not delivered.

While there were initially a few reports that credit card companies were refusing to initiate chargebacks related to air travel (perhaps due to being overwhelmed by the volume of requests), most instances in the past few weeks have worked out in favour of the customer, with the credit card company crediting the amount back to the traveller's credit card while the dispute is being assessed.

Of course, it's still too early to say how the airlines are responding to credit card chargebacks, as merchants generally have 45 days to respond with evidence on their side.

We'll therefore continue to mark this story as "developing", although there are early signs that, through a combination of making use of the consumer protection measures at their disposal and the relentless advocacy by Air Passenger Rights, Canadian travellers are slowly turning the tide against our airlines' unlawful policies regarding refunds on cancelled flights.

Once again, my sincere thanks and admiration go out to Dr. Gabor Lukacs for his tireless work, and I'd encourage you to join the Air Passenger Rights Facebook group if you're seeking help with getting a refund of your own, as well as to leave a comment below if you've gone through the experience of pursuing a refund so that your fellow passengers may benefit from it.

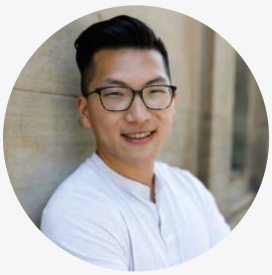
970

Refunds on Cancelled Flights

Prince of Travel is Canada's leading resource for using frequent flyer miles, credit card points, and loyalty programs to travel the world at a fraction of the price.

Join our Sunday newsletter to get weekly updates delivered straight to your inbox.

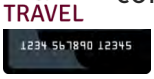
Have a question? Just ask.



Ricky Zhang
Ricky's love for travelling and learning more about the world is unbounded. He's on a mission to document and understand every square inch of the globe, and travelling on points will be an essential tool along his journey.

Top Offers

Business Platinum Card from American Express
100,000 MR points



90,000 Aeroplan points

American Express Platinum Card

90,000 MR points

TD® Aeroplan® Visa Infinite Privilege* Card

115,000 Aeroplan points†

Latest News

What's Happening with Aeroplan Partner Award Availability?

Insights • Sep 2, 2023

Review: EVA Air A330 Business Class Taipei to Sapporo

Reviews • Sep 2, 2023

HSBC World Elite® Mastercard®: September 2023 Offer Worth $350+

Deals • Sep 1, 2023

Recent Discussion

Unfortunately, Westjet has essentially stopped flying to Europe from Canadian airports east of Calgary. After accumulating about 1000 Westjet dollars they are unusable. Can't even use them on Air France's...

Ron • 20 hours ago

What's Happening with Aeroplan Partner Award Availability?

No so long ago I could regularly book transocean business class on Aeroplan from Vancouver with no problem. But that was then. Since the dynamic pricing model was introduced it...

Bob • 2 days ago

Upcoming Changes to MBNA Alaska Airlines Mastercards

Still no word on really any partnership with AA. If there was an existing relationship, it would have been marketed right at the bat. I dont want to spend $120...

Mike • 2 days ago

Amex Membership Rewards Cards: 25% Points Back on Redemptions

Thanks the work you guys do!

Der • 2 days ago

25% Transfer Bonus from Amex US MR to Air France/KLM Flying Blue has there ever been an amex transfer to flying blue for Canadian mr amex holders?

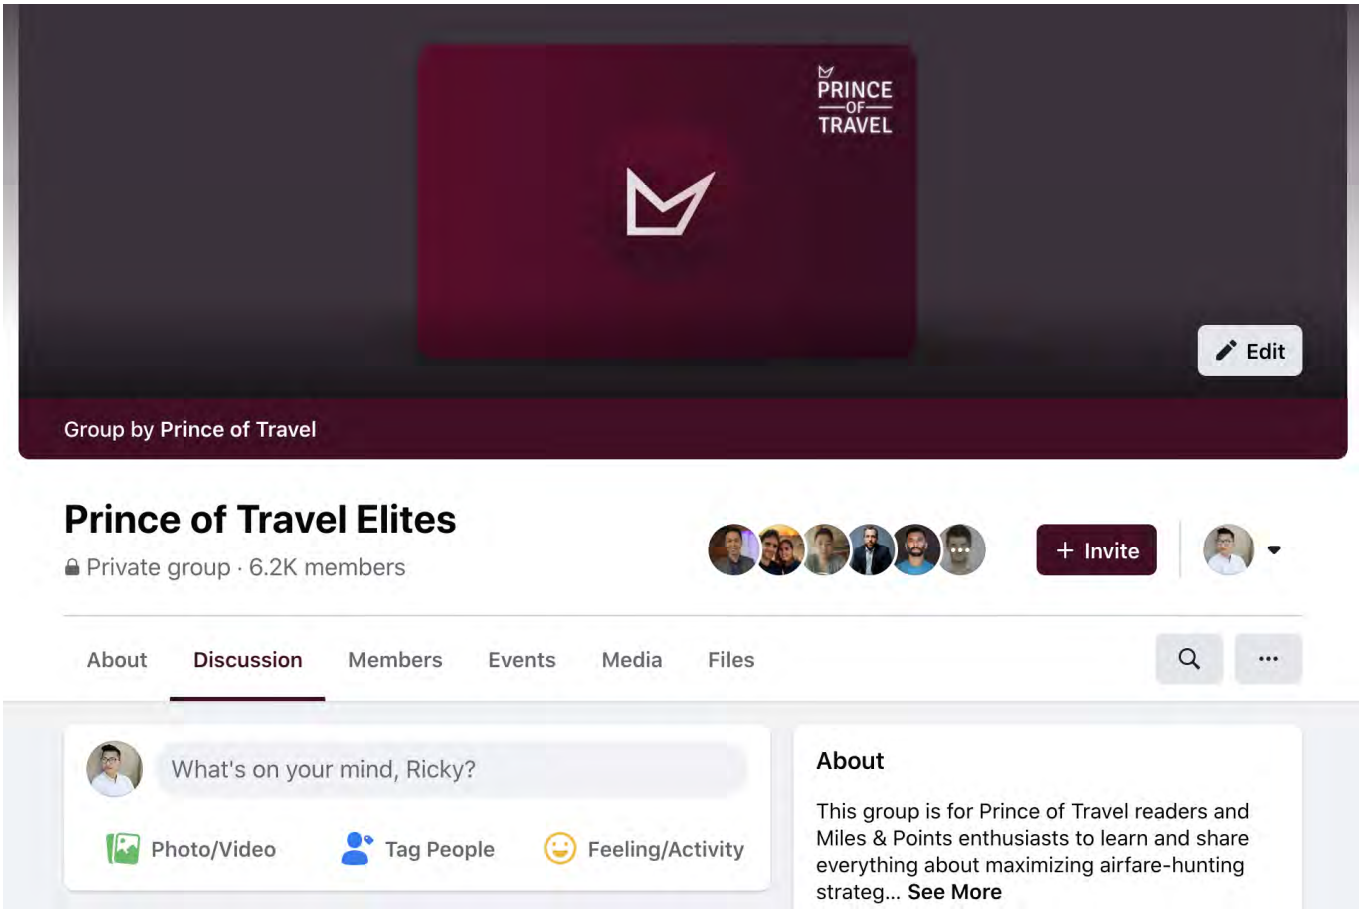
Prince of Travel Elites



973

This is Exhibit "119" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Home

Statement on Vouchers

This non-binding statement on vouchers was issued on March 25, 2020, in the face of unprecedented and extraordinary circumstances impacting domestic and international air travel. Because the law does not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons beyond their control, there was a real risk that many passengers would end up getting nothing for cancelled flights. This statement was intended to help ensure that didn't happen.

This statement changes nothing with respect to airline obligations and passenger rights under individual airline tariffs. Any passenger who believes they're owed a refund under the relevant tariff and hasn't received one can file a complaint with us. All complaints are dealt with on their merits.

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

FAQs: Statement on Vouchers

The CTA has been asked a number of questions about its Statement on Vouchers. Below are answers to the most frequently-posed questions.

What is the purpose of the Statement on Vouchers?

The Statement on Vouchers, although not a binding decision, offers suggestions to airlines and passengers in the context of a once-in-a-century pandemic, global collapse of air travel, and mass cancellation of flights for reasons outside the control of airlines.

This unprecedented situation created a serious risk that passengers would simply end up out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. That risk was exacerbated by the liquidity challenges faced by airlines as passenger and flight volumes plummeted.

For flights cancelled for reasons beyond airlines' control, the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, which are based on legislative authorities, require that airlines ensure passengers can complete their itineraries but do not obligate airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs.

The statement indicated that the use of vouchers could be a reasonable approach in the extraordinary circumstances resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic, when flights are cancelled for reasons outside airlines' control and passengers have no prospect of completing their itineraries. Vouchers for future travel can help protect passengers from losing the full value of their flights, and improve the odds that over the longer term, consumer choice and diverse service offerings -- including from small and medium-sized airlines -- will remain in Canada's air transportation sector. Of course, as noted in the statement, passengers can still file a complaint with the CTA and each case will be decided on its merits.

Why did the CTA talk about vouchers when US and EU regulators have said that airlines should give refunds?

The American and European legislative frameworks set a minimum obligation for airlines to issue refunds when flights are cancelled for reasons outside their control. Canada's doesn't. That's the reason for the difference in the statements.

Some jurisdictions have relaxed the application or enforcement of requirements related to refunds in light of the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, including European countries that have approved the issuance of vouchers instead of refunds.

Do I have to accept a voucher if I think I'm owed a refund?

The Statement on Vouchers suggests what could be an appropriate approach in extraordinary circumstances, but doesn't affect airlines' obligations or passengers' rights.

Some airline tariffs might not provide for a refund and others might include force majeure exceptions to refund provisions.

If you think that you're entitled to a refund for a flight that was cancelled for reasons related to the COVID-19 pandemic and you don't want to accept a voucher, you can ask the airline for a refund.

Sometimes, the airline may offer a voucher that can be converted to a refund if the voucher hasn't been used by the end of its validity period. This practice reflects the liquidity challenges airlines are facing as a result of the collapse of air travel while giving passengers added protection in the event that they ultimately can't take advantage of the voucher.

If you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, you can file a complaint with the CTA, which will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff. Each case will be decided on its merits.

Date modified:

2020-03-25

This is Exhibit "120" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

979

CSD OUT

The following information will be included on the electronic submission to MasterCard.

ARN	[redacted]
Cardholder Number
Chargeback Reference Number
Amount	9365.48
Sender Memo	See Merchant Response
IPM	2700

[redacted]

DISPUTE RESPONSE - R

Merchant #: 82036670016 [redacted] Reason Code: 53 Amount: 9365.48

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): __/__/___ Credit Amount: _____

Check all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

___ Copy of a Signed and/or Electronically captured sales slip
___ Copy of a Signed cancellation policy or order form
___ Copy of a Signed order form
___ AVS of Y or M and SIGNED proof of delivery to AVS confirmed address
___ Signed rental agreement or Hotel/Motel folio
___ Copy of the Recurring billing agreement
___ T & E Documentation showing loyalty transactions related to this purchase
___ T & E – Documentation showing subsequent purchases made throughout the service period
___ Proof that the ticket was received for passenger transport
___ Proof the name on the flight manifest matches the Cardholder name on purchased itinerary
___ Proof of CVC2 in lieu of imprint
___ Proof of authorization
___ Proof of Verified by Visa, MasterCard Secure Code, AMEX Safe Key, or Discover Protect Buy
_x_ Other Documentation (Please Describe): PAX ARE ELIGIBLE FOR CREDIT

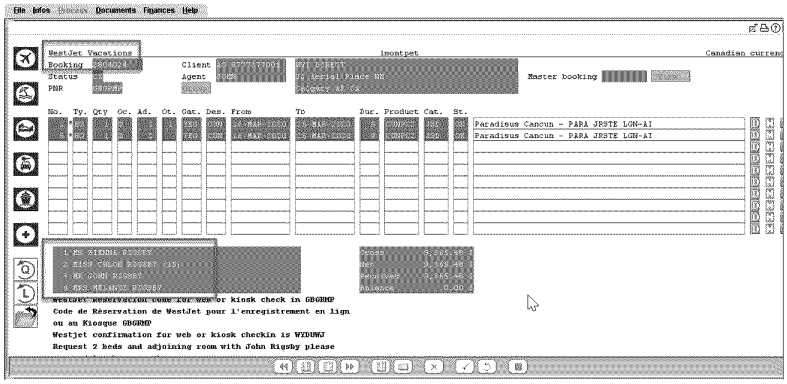
Merchant Comments

WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. The customer is entitiled to receive a credit in the amount of 9365 WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months. According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis. https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers SN

CB387844525

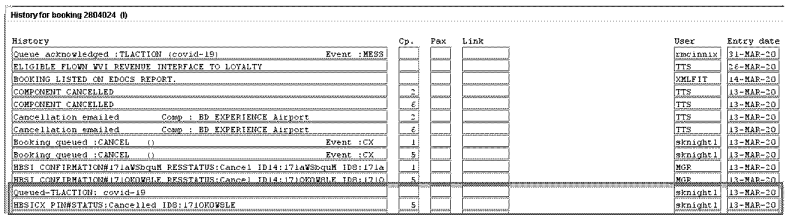
COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for the RIGSBY family to travel from Edmonton to Cancun from March 16 – 25, 2020.



Pax	Last name	First name	Middle name	Title	G	Telephone	Age	Birthdate	Traveller number
1	RIGSBY	SIENNA		MS	F	(250)719-3541		24-APR-1999
2	RIGSBY	CHLOE		MISS	F	(250)719-3541	15	08-SEP-2004
3	RIGSBY	JOHN		MR	M	(250)719-3541		05-DEC-1974	603015060
4	RIGSBY	MELANIE		MRS	F	(250)719-3541		07-JUL-1970

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled on March 13, 2020.



History for booking 2604024 (I)

History	Cp.	Pax	Link	User	Entry date
Queue acknowledged :TLACTION (covid-19) Event :MESS				rmcinnis	31-MAR-20
ELIGIBLE FLOWN WVI REVENUE INTERFACE TO LOYALTY				TTS	26-MAR-20
BOOKING LISTED ON EDOCS REPORT.				XMLFIT	14-MAR-20
COMPONENT CANCELLED	2			TTS	13-MAR-20
COMPONENT CANCELLED	6			TTS	13-MAR-20
Cancellation emailed Comp : BD EXPERIENCE Airport	2			TTS	13-MAR-20
Cancellation emailed Comp : BD EXPERIENCE Airport	6			TTS	13-MAR-20
Booking queued :CANCEL () Event :CX	1			sknight1	13-MAR-20
Booking queued :CANCEL () Event :CX	5			sknight1	13-MAR-20
HBSI CONFIRMATION#171aWSbquM RESSTATUS:Cancel ID14:171aWSbquM ID8:171a	1			MGR	13-MAR-20
HBSI CONFIRMATION#171OKOWSLE RESSTATUS:Cancel ID14:171OKOWSLE ID8:171O	5			MGR	13-MAR-20
Queued-TLACTION: covid-19				sknight1	13-MAR-20
HBSICX PIN#STATUS:Cancelled ID8:171OKOWSLE	5			sknight1	13-MAR-20

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.

CB387844525

Flexible change and cancel policy for existing WestJet Vacations bookings

For vacation packages booked prior to March 3rd for travel in April, May or June 2020:

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Value of cancelled vacations will be returned in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue
- If you change your vacation, the difference in price will apply if the new package is higher value

Please contact us to change or cancel your flight. If you initially booked through a third party, please contact your travel agent directly.

Note:

- Changes or cancellations more than 24 hours from purchase, will be returned as WestJet dollars, valid for 24 months from date of issue.
- Policy does not apply to Group bookings.
- March and April, no hotel restrictions.
- Policy cannot be applied to packages with the following hotels in May: Disney, Universal, Hard Rock Resorts, Playa Resorts, Atlantis, Sandals Resorts, Beaches Resorts, and Grand Pineapple Resorts.

After your $0 one-time change, if you cancel your booking:

- more than 45 days prior to departure, there will be a $250 CAD cancellation fee per person with the balance refunded to Westjet dollars.
- 44-22 days prior to departure, there will be a 50% cancel fee per person with the balance refunded to Westjet dollars.
- within 21 days prior to departure will be a full forfeit.
- These terms and conditions apply to Economy, Premium and Business cabin bookings.

After your $0 one-time change, any additional change must be made at least 21 days prior to departure, for a $100 CAD change fee per person plus any difference in package price (if new package price is lower the amount is forfeited)

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable.

The customer is entitiled to receive a credit in the amount of 9365 WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

CB387844525

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

The customer is encouraged to contact their travel agency or WestJet Vacations at their earliest convenience to set up their credit.

WestJet believes refunding with travel credits or WestJet Dollars is an appropriate and responsible approach in extraordinary circumstances such as the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet has consistently provided our guests with options when their travel has been impacted by the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet's policy is in line with the Canadian Transportation Agency's guidelines.

There are no exceptions at this time. Therefore, a refund to the original form of payment is not due.

May 5, 2020

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to WestJet Vacations booking 2802024 for the Rigsby family.

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through May 4. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's WestJet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sabrina #5041
Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
WESTJET Love Where You're Going

Canada-U.S. Border Restrictions

On March 21, 2020, the Government of Canada implemented a restriction on all non-essential travel at the Canada-U.S. border. Currently, this restriction has been extended until May 21, 2020.

https://www.canada.ca/en/public-health/services/diseases/2019-novel-coronavirus-infection/latest-travel-health-advice.html#_Canada-U.S._border_restrictions_1

Canada-U.S. border restrictions

As of April 22, 2020, the 30-day restriction on all non-essential (discretionary) travel at the Canada-U.S. border that was implemented on March 21, 2020, was extended for an additional 30 days until May 21, 2020. Examples of non-essential travel include:

- tourism
- recreation
- entertainment

If you are healthy and must cross the border for work or other essential (non-discretionary) purposes, you may continue to do so. Some examples of essential travel purposes are:

- work and study
- critical infrastructure support
- economic services and supply chains
- shopping for essential goods, such as:
  - medication
  - items necessary for the health and safety of an individual or family
- health, immediate medical care, safety and security

Some persons working in the health care field are considered exempt from the border prohibition. This is the case as long as they do not provide direct care for people over 65 years of age within the first 14 days of their entry into Canada.

Official Global Travel Advisory

As per the Government of Canada, there is an advisory to avoid ALL non-essential travel outside of Canada until futher notice.

https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/advisories#wb-cont

Government of Canada | Gouvernement du Canada

Français

Search Travel.gc.ca

MENU

Home > Travel > Travel abroad

Official Global Travel Advisory

Avoid non-essential travel outside of Canada until further notice.

As foreign governments implement strict travel restrictions and as fewer international transportation options are available, you may have difficulty returning to Canada or may have to remain abroad for an indeterminate period.

If you are outside of Canada:

- you may have difficulty obtaining essential products and services
- you may face strict movement restrictions and quarantines
- your insurance may not cover your travel or medical expenses
- we may have limited capacity to offer you consular services.

If you are currently outside Canada or you are returning home, see COVID-19 safety and security advice for Canadians abroad.

If you need financial help to return to Canada, see COVID-19: Financial help for Canadians outside Canada.

WestJet's Position on the COVID-19 Pandemic

On March 22, 2020, WestJet annouced the suspension of commerical operations for ALL transborder and international flights. Currently, there are no mandatory restrictions on domestic flights within Canada.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/coronavirus

Coronavirus | COVID 19

Recently we announced the suspension of our commercial operations for all transborder (United States, including Hawaii) and international (Europe, Mexico, Caribbean, Central America) flights as of Sunday, March 22.

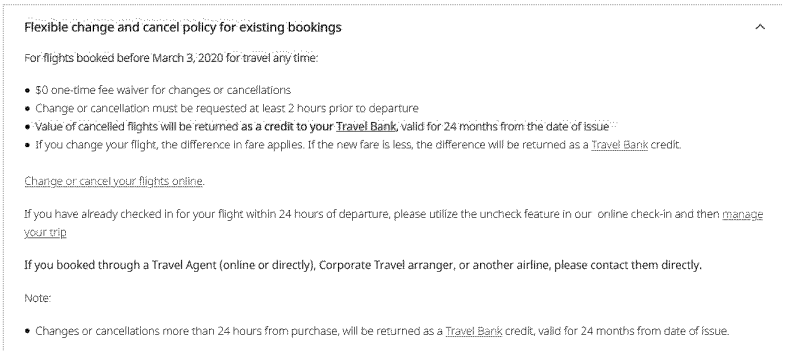
Whether we are flying or not, we are always here for our guests. During this downtime, we will be doing everything we can to accommodate your changing travel needs. We will also continue to ensure our aircraft meet the highest safety and health standards. We are ready to fly when you are.

Since the situation with Coronavirus (COVID-19) is evolving day by day, we have implemented a flexible change policy so you can adjust your travel plans without worry.

WestJet implemented a flexible Change/Cancel policy for all existing and new bookings.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

For ALL flights booked before March 3, 2020 for travel any time, the value of cancelled flights will be returned as a WestJet credit, valid for 24 months from the date of issue.



Flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings

For flights booked before March 3, 2020 for travel any time:

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Change or cancellation must be requested at least 2 hours prior to departure
- Value of cancelled flights will be returned as a credit to your Travel Bank, valid for 24 months from the date of issue
- If you change your flight, the difference in fare applies. If the new fare is less, the difference will be returned as a Travel Bank credit.

Change or cancel your flights online.

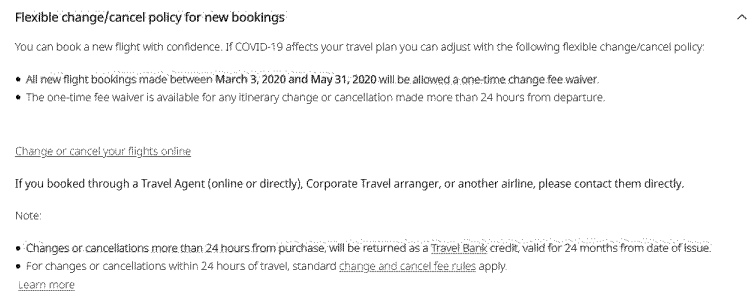
If you have already checked in for your flight within 24 hours of departure, please utilize the uncheck feature in our online check-in and then manage your trip

If you booked through a Travel Agent (online or directly), Corporate Travel arranger, or another airline, please contact them directly.

Note:

- Changes or cancellations more than 24 hours from purchase, will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months from date of issue.

All new flight bookings made after March 3, 2020 may be cancelled and returned as a WestJet credit, valid for 24 months from the date of issue.



Flexible change/cancel policy for new bookings

You can book a new flight with confidence. If COVID-19 affects your travel plan you can adjust with the following flexible change/cancel policy:

- All new flight bookings made between March 3, 2020 and May 31, 2020 will be allowed a one-time change fee waiver.
- The one-time fee waiver is available for any itinerary change or cancellation made more than 24 hours from departure.

Change or cancel your flights online

If you booked through a Travel Agent (online or directly), Corporate Travel arranger, or another airline, please contact them directly.

Note:

- Changes or cancellations more than 24 hours from purchase, will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months from date of issue.
- For changes or cancellations within 24 hours of travel, standard change and cancel fee rules apply

Learn more

The decision to issue a WestJet credit instead of a refund to the original form of payment is in accordance with the Canadian Transportation Agency's guidelines.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

This is Exhibit "121" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Servus CU
PO Box 30495
Tampa, FL 33630-3495
1-800-600-5249, FAX 1-800-253-1220

Account #: [redacted]
2nd Account #:
Claim Number: [redacted]

990

MADDISON R TOPPE
[redacted]

06/19/2020

Dear MADDISON R TOPPE:

Thank you for your recent inquiry regarding the transaction(s) noted on the last page of this letter.

We have completed our investigation of the dispute which included a thorough review of all applicable transaction details as well as the documents that may have been received by you or the merchant. Additionally, we have exercised all investigation and resolution options available to us through the Dispute Resolution Process.

Due to the nature of the dispute, we are required to obtain additional information and/or documentation to pursue a chargeback. We previously requested this information from you but, as of this date, we have not received it. See the attached letter copy showing this request. Based on the information we have available, we have concluded that the transaction is valid.

You were previously issued a conditional credit. Due to the above listed reason, we must reapply the $800.00 charge to your account. The debit will be included in your balance and will be due for payment as reflected on your next statement.

We regret that we are unable to offer additional assistance. If you have not done so already, you may wish to contact the merchant to attempt to resolve this dispute directly with them. Please retain a copy of this letter and all documentation relative to your claim for your records. If you have any additional questions please contact us and reference your claim number. We appreciate the opportunity to be of service.

[redacted]

You have the right to request a copy of any document(s) that we relied upon in making our determination. Upon your request, we shall promptly provide a copy of the document(s).

991

Sincerely,
Chargeback Services

[redacted]

TXN Date	Merchant Name	TXN Amount	Reference Number	TXN ID
02/24/2020	WESTJET	$800.00	55503800056004034282586	221657249
02/27/2020	WESTJET	$749.79	55503800059004032277031	221657254

[redacted]

Servus CU
PO Box 30495
Tampa, FL 33630-3495
1-800-600-5249, FAX 1-800-253-1220

Account #: XXXXXXXXXXXX9394
2nd Account #:
Claim Number: D2010501672

993

MADDISON R TOPPE
[redacted]

06/02/2020

Dear MADDISON R TOPPE:

Thank you for your recent inquiry regarding the transaction(s) noted on the last page of this letter.

You received provisional credit for this transaction in the amount of $749.79.

The merchant has provided information concerning your claim: The merchant has provided information where they believe no error has occurred. Please carefully review the attached documents the merchant has provided. The merchant has stated a refund should not be granted due to the agreement, however has provided a credit voucher valid for up to two years. Does this resolve your dispute? Were you aware of the merchant's policy? If not, please provide any policies described initially at the time of purchase, concerning refunds, cancellations, or other policies described. Also, if you have been in recent contact with the merchant, please include correspondence between you and the merchant, including dates/attempted dates of contact with specific merchant responses. Please provide proof of your cancellation including the method and the date of your cancellation, as well as the credit slip showing you are due a refund.

1. Please notify us if you have concerns with the information provided by the merchant. If you have additional documentation that supports your claim, please provide it with your response. You may contact us at the phone number listed above or notify us in writing by mail or fax. Please use a copy of this letter as your coversheet if notifying by mail or fax.

2. If you agree that this is a valid charge, please notify our office referencing your claim number by 06/12/2020, at 1-800-600-5249 to confirm the charge.

[redacted]

If a response is not received by 06/12/2020, we will conclude our investigation and make a decision on your claim based on the information that we currently have available.

Please retain a copy of this letter and all documentation relative to your claim for your records. If you have any additional questions, please contact us and reference your claim number. We appreciate the opportunity to be of service.

Sincerely,
Chargeback Services

TXN Date	Merchant Name	TXN Amount	Reference Number	TXN ID
02/24/2020	WESTJET	$800.00	55503800056004034282586	221657249
02/27/2020	WESTJET	$749.79	55503800059004032277031	221657254

[redacted]

DISPUTE RESPONSE - R

Merchant #: 82036670024 Case #: 387984347 Reason Code: 53 Amount: 749.79

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): __/__/____ Credit Amount: _____

Check all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

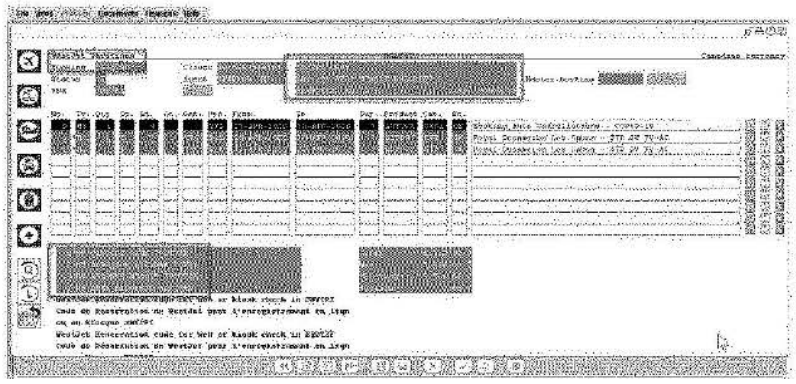
___ Copy of a Signed and/or Electronically captured sales slip
___ Copy of a Signed cancellation policy or order form
___ Copy of a Signed order form
___ AVS of Y or M and SIGNED proof of delivery to AVS confirmed address
___ Signed rental agreement or Hotel/Motel folio
___ Copy of the Recurring billing agreement
___ T & E Documentation showing loyalty transactions related to this purchase
___ T & E – Documentation showing subsequent purchases made throughout the service period
___ Proof that the ticket was received for passenger transport
___ Proof the name on the flight manifest matches the Cardholder name on purchased itinerary
___ Proof of CVC2 in lieu of imprint
___ Proof of authorization
___ Proof of Verified by Visa, MasterCard Secure Code, AMEX Safe Key, or Discover Protect Buy
_x_ Other Documentation (Please Describe): PAX IS ELIGIBLE FOR CREDIT

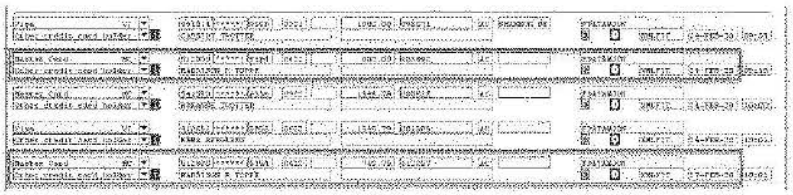
Merchant Comments
WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. The customer is entitled to receive a credit for the full value of the amount paid in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months. According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis. https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

CB387984347

COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for 4 passengers, including Ms. Maddison Toppe to travel from Calgary to San Jose del Cabo from April 23 – 30, 2020.

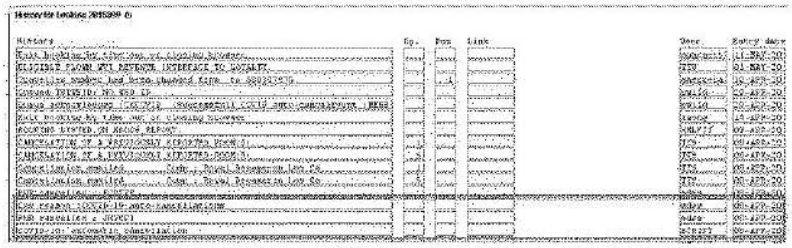




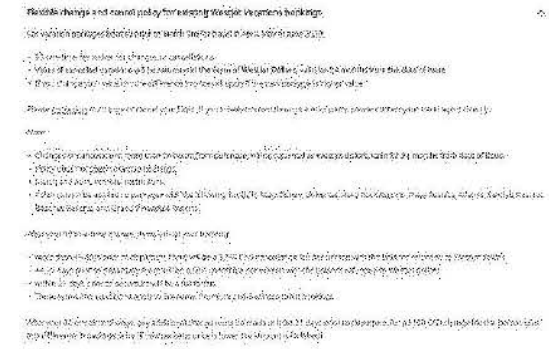
The reservation was made through a travel agency, TRAVEL ONLY.

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled on April 8, 2020.

CB387984347



Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.



https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable.

The customer is entitled to receive a credit for the full value of the amount paid in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

CB387984347

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

The customer is encouraged to contact their travel agency or WestJet Vacations at their earliest convenience to set up their credit.

WestJet believes refunding with travel credits or WestJet Dollars is an appropriate and responsible approach in extraordinary circumstances such as the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet has consistently provided our guests with options when their travel has been impacted by the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet's policy is in line with the Canadian Transportation Agency's guidelines.

There are no exceptions at this time. Therefore, a refund to the original form of payment is not due.

1000

WESTJET

May 14, 2020

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to Ms. Maddison Toppe's WestJet Vacations booking [redacted]

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through May 4. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's WestJet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sabrina #5041
Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
WESTJET Love Where You're Going

This is Exhibit "122" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

FINANCIAL

1002

2020-06-13

Case Number: [redacted]

*0000057

BYRON THORBURN

[redacted]

Re: Credit Card account number ending in 1857

Dear BYRON THORBURN,

This letter is in response to your inquiry, received 2020-04-21, and regarding your request for an investigation of the transaction listed below.

Case Amount	Merchant Name	Transaction Date
4,570.00	WESTJET Q19	2020-01-09

As part of the investigation regarding the disputed transaction mentioned above the merchant has responded in an attempt to resolve your inquiry. Please review the attached information and determine if you now agree that the charge is valid.

If you do not agree, further supporting documentation is required from you. Please provide a letter negating the merchant's rebuttal; the letter must be signed and dated, as per the MasterCard Worldwide rules that we are required to follow. Please keep copies of the documentation that you are sending, along with fax confirmation, or registered mail/courier tracking number.

It is very important that your valid supporting documentation be received prior to 2020-06-21 in order for us to proceed with your dispute. If it is not received by the date stated, we will be unable to assist you further and will consider this case closed. The disputed transaction will be reposted to your account and appear on your next statement. After this time, if you choose to pursue this matter further, you must contact the merchant directly as indicated in your Cardholder Agreement.

Please provide the requested documentation promptly so that we may continue to assist you. If you have any further questions please call 1-866-223-9111.

Thank you for your continued use of your President's Choice Financial® MasterCard®.

Sincerely,

Dispute Representative
President's Choice Financial MasterCard

PS 421076

DISPUTE RESPONSE - R

1003

Merchant #: 82036670016 Case #: [redacted] Reason Code: 53 Amount: 4570.00

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): __/__/___ Credit Amount: _____

Check all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

___ Copy of a Signed and/or Electronically captured sales slip
___ Copy of a Signed cancellation policy or order form
___ Copy of a Signed order form
___ AVS of Y or M and SIGNED proof of delivery to AVS confirmed address
___ Signed rental agreement or Hotel/Motel folio
___ Copy of the Recurring billing agreement
___ T & E Documentation showing loyalty transactions related to this purchase
___ T & E – Documentation showing subsequent purchases made throughout the service period
___ Proof that the ticket was received for passenger transport
___ Proof the name on the flight manifest matches the Cardholder name on purchased itinerary
___ Proof of CVC2 in lieu of imprint
___ Proof of authorization
___ Proof of Verified by Visa, MasterCard Secure Code, AMEX Safe Key, or Discover Protect Buy
_x_ Other Documentation (Please Describe): PAX ARE ENTITLED TO CREDIT

Merchant Comments

WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. Therefore, a refund is not due. We have included a letter of intent with intructions on how the passengers can obtain their credit. According to communications regarding Best Practices issued by acquirers, Issuers should recommend that the cardholder attempt to contact the affected merchant to resolve the dispute. SN

WESTJET

June 8, 2020

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to Thornburn family's WestJet Vacations booking 2774293.

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through June 30, 2020. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

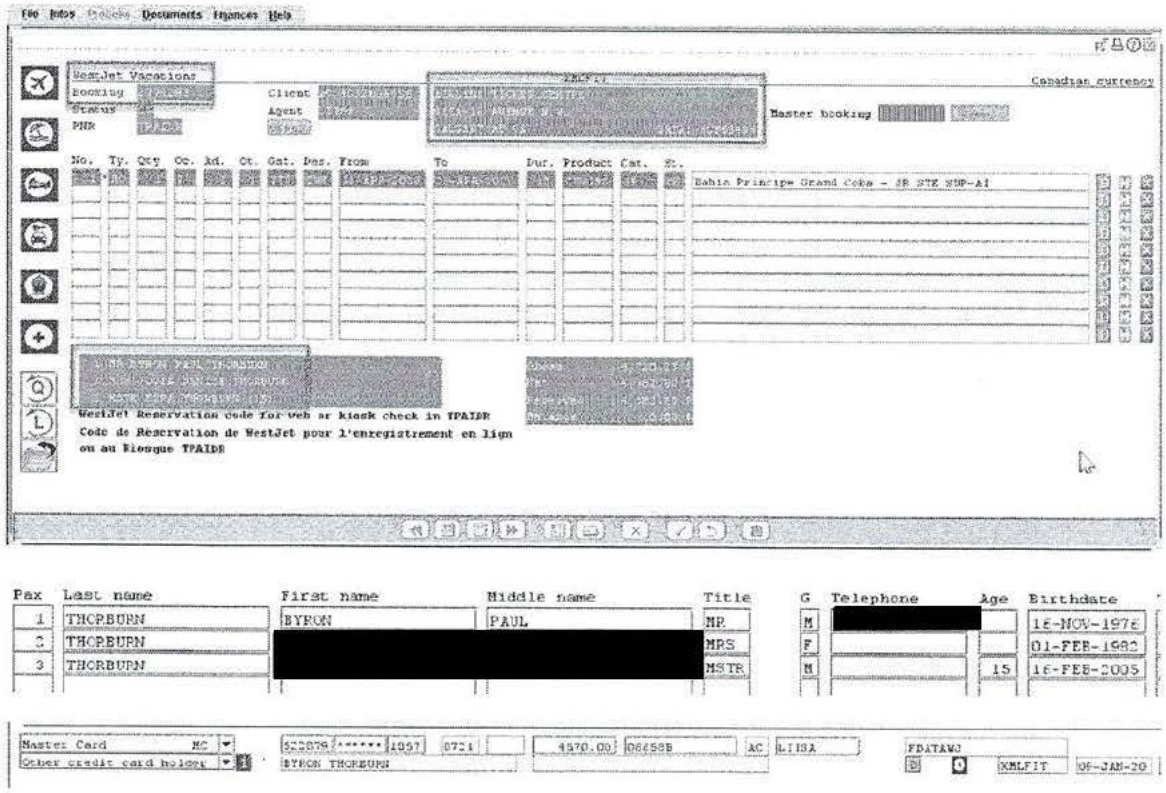
In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's WestJet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sabrina #5041
Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
WESTJET Love Where You're Going

COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for the THORNBURN family to travel from Calgary to Cancun from April 13 – 23, 2020.



The reservation was booked through a travel agency, AIRLINE TICKET CENTRE.

Agency	40328966560 IATA 60563436
Name	AIRLINE TICKET CENTRE
Address	9172-16 AVENUE N.E.
Zip Code	T2M 0K3
City	CALGARY
Country	Canada CA
Province/State	Alberta AB
E-mail	fly@airlineticketcentre.ca
Web site

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled by WestJet Vacations on March 27, 2020.

This is Exhibit "123" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CSD OUT

The following information will be included on the electronic submission to MasterCard.

ARN	55503800061004036318399
Cardholder Number	[redacted]
Chargeback Reference Number	9019417993
Amount	4098.00
Sender Memo	See Merchant Response
IPM	2700

1008

DISPUTE RESPONSE - R

Merchant #: 82036670016 Case #: [redacted] Reason Code: 53 Amount: 4098.00

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): __/__/___ Credit Amount: _____

Check all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

___ Copy of a Signed and/or Electronically captured sales slip
___ Copy of a Signed cancellation policy or order form
___ Copy of a Signed order form
___ AVS of Y or M and SIGNED proof of delivery to AVS confirmed address
___ Signed rental agreement or Hotel/Motel folio
___ Copy of the Recurring billing agreement
___ T & E Documentation showing loyalty transactions related to this purchase
___ T & E – Documentation showing subsequent purchases made throughout the service period
___ Proof that the ticket was received for passenger transport
___ Proof the name on the flight manifest matches the Cardholder name on purchased itinerary
___ Proof of CVC2 in lieu of imprint
___ Proof of authorization
___ Proof of Verified by Visa, MasterCard Secure Code, AMEX Safe Key, or Discover Protect Buy
_x_ Other Documentation (Please Describe): PAX ARE ELIGIBLE FOR CREDIT

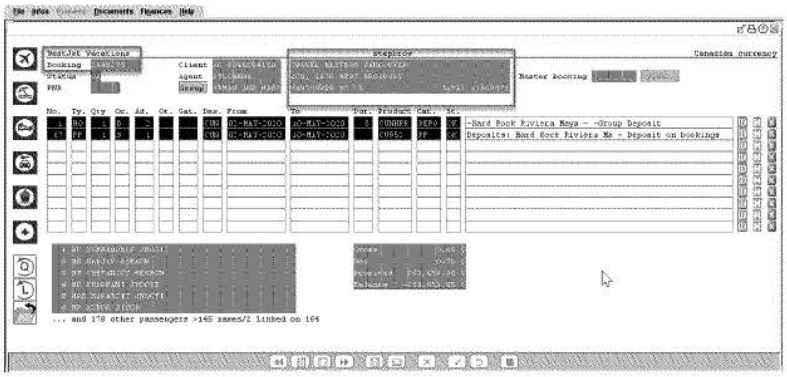
Merchant Comments

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through July 21, 2020. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

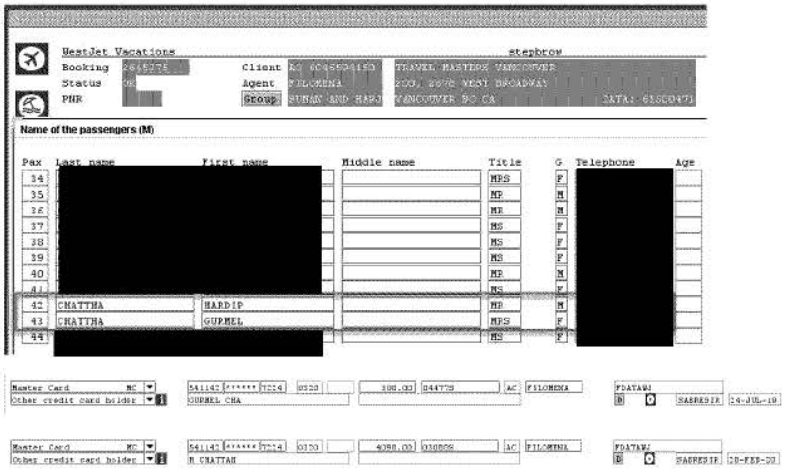
CB388970675

COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for a group booking listed under SUMAN & HARJ WEDDING to travel to Cancun from May 2 – 10, 2020.



The cardholder is listed as GURMEL & HARDIP CHATTHA.



The reservation was booked through a travel agency, TRAVEL MASTERS VANCOUVER.

CB388970675

Agency	6046594150	IATA	61500471
Name	TRAVEL MASTERS VANCOUVER
Address	200, 2678 WEST BROADWAY
Zip Code	V6K2G3
City	VANCOUVER
Country	Canada CA
Province/State	British Columbia BC
E-mail	vancouver@travelmasters.ca
Web site

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled on April 6, 2020.

History for booking 2645275 (I)

History	Cp.	Pax	Link	User	Entry date
Exit booking by time out or closing browser				cdemanti	15-JUN-20
Exit booking by time out or closing browser				stepbrow	28-APR-20
Exit booking by time out or closing browser				stepbrow	06-APR-20
Booking queued :CANCEL () Event :CX		35		stepbrow	06-APR-20

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.

Flexible change and cancel policy for existing WestJet Vacations bookings

For vacation packages booked prior to March 3rd for travel in April, May or June 2020:

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Value of cancelled vacations will be returned in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue
- If you change your vacation, the difference in price will apply if the new package is higher value

Please contact us to change or cancel your flight. If you initially booked through a third party, please contact your travel agent directly.

Note:

- Changes or cancellations more than 24 hours from purchase, will be returned as WestJet dollars, valid for 24 months from date of issue.
- Policy does not apply to Group bookings.
- March and April, no hotel restrictions.
- Policy cannot be applied to packages with the following hotels in May: Disney, Universal, Hard Rock Resorts, Playa Resorts, Atlantis, Sandals Resorts, Beaches Resorts, and Grand Pineapple Resorts.

After your $0 one-time change, if you cancel your booking:

- more than 45 days prior to departure, there will be a $250 CAD cancellation fee per person with the balance refunded to Westjet dollars.
- 44-22 days prior to departure, there will be a 50% cancel fee per person with the balance refunded to Westjet dollars.
- within 21 days prior to departure will be a full forfeit.
- These terms and conditions apply to Economy, Premium and Business cabin bookings.

After your $0 one-time change, any additional change must be made at least 21 days prior to departure, for a $100 CAD change fee per person plus any difference in package price (if new package price is lower the amount is forfeited)

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

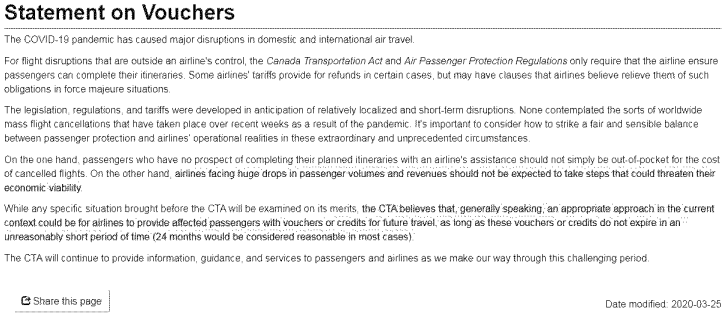
WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable.

CB388970675

The customer is entitiled to receive a credit for the full transaction amount in WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers



Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

The customer is encouraged to contact their travel agency or WestJet Vacations at their earliest convenience to set up their credit.

WestJet believes refunding with travel credits or WestJet Dollars is an appropriate and responsible approach in extraordinary circumstances such as the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet has consistently provided our guests with options when their travel has been impacted by the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet's policy is in line with the Canadian Transportation Agency's guidelines.

There are no exceptions at this time. Therefore, a refund to the original form of payment is not due.

July 17, 2020

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to WestJet Vacations booking #2645275, for Gurmel & Hardip Chattha.

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through July 21, 2020. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's WestJet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sabrina #5041
Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
WESTJET Love Where You're Going

This is Exhibit "124" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CIBC

JOANNE PHILLIPS
[redacted]

July 17, 2020

Dear JOANNE PHILLIPS,

Subject: Disputed Credit Card Transaction (Time Sensitive)
Credit Card Number ending in 5140

We are following up regarding the transaction billed to your CIBC credit card account for $1,723.32 by WESTJET, on MAR 01, 2020. We want to help resolve this matter for you.

Temporary credit given while investigating
After you brought this transaction to our attention, we applied a credit on JUN 19, 2020 to your CIBC credit card account statement. We then asked for proof of the transaction from the merchant.

Please review and choose a course of action
The merchant has now provided us with a copy of the transaction receipt, which is enclosed for your records.

- Reply: If you would like to dispute this transaction, please use one of these options:
  1. Complete and sign the attached 'Dispute Letter'. Return it by AUG 01, 2020 to:

     CIBC Credit Card Services
     PO Box 4058, Station A
     Toronto ON
     M5W 1L8

     Once we receive it we can investigate this matter further for you.
  2. Call us at 1 866 385-1344 (in Canada and the U.S.) or 416 256-6871 (from elsewhere) to start the investigation right away.
- Don't Reply: If we do not receive a response from you by AUG 01, 2020, we will consider this matter resolved. We will then re-apply the transaction amount to your credit card account which will appear as an amount owing on your next statement and we will close our file.

For more information
It is always a good idea to keep an eye on your credit card purchases. To learn more about what to do for a transaction that you do not believe is valid, or for information about disputed transactions, please visit our website at www.cibc.com/charges.

Case ID: D-1430721

July 17, 2020

RE: Credit Card Number ending in 5140

It is extremely important that only one option is selected, the required information is completed, and the wording is not altered. Be sure to include any supporting documentation. If section 2 is selected, you also need to provide specific details on how you attempted to contact and resolve the dispute with the merchant, including the merchant's response to your attempt to resolve the dispute.

Merchant: WESTJET
Transaction Amount: $1,723.32
Transaction Date: MAR 01, 2020

Section 1

☐ I certify that I have reviewed the evidence provided, including any new details and/or merchant name, and I state that I did not make, authorize, or participate in this transaction nor did I authorize anyone else to make this transaction to my account.

Note: Selecting this option requires cancellation of your card and reissuance of a new credit card and account number.

Section 2

I certify that I did make a purchase with this merchant. However, I was unsuccessful in resolving a dispute with the merchant, and:

☐ I have not received any goods or services, which were expected to be received/performed on _____ (date). I enclose a copy of my agreement with the merchant and the invoice.

☐ The amount has been altered. I authorized the merchant to charge my CIBC credit card account in the amount of $ _____ . Enclosed is my copy of the transaction receipt to support this claim.

☐ I paid for the purchase by other means (e.g., cash, traveller's cheques, money order). I enclose a copy of my receipt as proof to support my claim.

☐ I returned the merchandise on _____ (date) and asked the merchant for a full credit. Enclosed is a copy of the return slip and/or credit slip.

☐ I notified the merchant of the cancelled reservation on _____ (date). The cancellation number provided by the merchant is _____ . No services have been received for this transaction and a credit has not been issued to my CIBC credit card account.

OR

☐ I did make a purchase with this merchant in the amount of $ _____ . However, I did not make, authorize or participate in the transaction I am disputing above. My credit card was in my possession at the time this transaction occurred. Enclosed is my receipt for the purchase I did make for $ _____ .

If we do not receive a response by AUG 01, 2020, we will consider this transaction to be valid and payable by you.

Date (mmm/dd/yyyy)	Print Name		Signature (sign within box)
	JOANNE PHILLIPS	X

Date (mmm/dd/yyyy)	Name of Authorized User (if applicable)		Authorized User's Signature (if applicable) (sign within box)
		X

[redacted]

Case ID: [redacted]

Acquirer Collaboration Dispute Response Questionnaire - Consumer Disputes
Dispute Reason Code 13.1, 13.2, 13.3, 13.4, 13.5, 13.6, 13.7, 13.8, 13.9

ROL Case Number: [redacted]

Transaction Information

Cardholder Account Number: [redacted]
Transaction Amount: 1723.32
TransDate (MM/DD/YY): 03/01/2020
Dispute Reason Code: 13
MO/TO / ECI Indicator: 7
Transaction Identifier:

Tran type: D
Acquirer Reference Number: 74450770062004029376782
Chargeback CPD (MM/DD/YY): 06/20/2020
Dispute Condition Code: 1
Merchant Category Code: 3180
Jurisdiction: Visa Canada Domestic

Dispute Response Information :

___ Accept Partial
_x_ Decline
Acceptance Amount: 0.00
Why are you not accepting full liability?
COMP EVID

Response Reason :

_x_ Compelling Evidence
___ Credit Processed
___ Invalid Dispute

Invalid dispute reason:

Explanation:
See attachment

Credit Information

Credit Date (CCYY-MM-DD): Acquirer Reference Number: Credit Amount:

DISPUTE RESPONSE 1017

Merchant #: 82036670016 Case #: [redacted] Reason Code: 1310 Amount: 1723.32

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): ____/____/_____ Credit Amount: _____

Select all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.
Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

_x_ 01 - Documentation to prove the cardholder is in possession of and/or using the merchandise
___ 02 - Signed Delivery form, copy of cardholder identification as proof goods were picked up at merchant location
___ 03- Address Verification Method, or AVS of Y or M and proof of delivery
___ 04 - Digital goods download, Download Date (MM/DD/CCYY): Time (HH:MM):

(2 or more optional selections must be selected):

___ Purchaser IP Address: and Device Geographic Location:

___ Device ID: and Device Name:

___ Purchaser Name: and Purchaser Email:

___ Profile Setup or Application Access
___ Merchant Website or Application Access
___ Same Device and Previous Transaction on Same Card Not Disputed
ARN*: Transaction Date (MM/DD/CCYY)*:

___ 05 - Delivery to cardholder at place of employment
___ 06 - T & E Loyalty transactions related to purchase
___ 07 - T & E Subsequent purchases made throughout service period
___ 08 - Passenger Transport proof ticket received, scanned at gate or other information (e.g. frequent flyer miles)
___ 10 - Authorized signer known by the cardholder

- Input data required if corresponding option is selected (checked off).

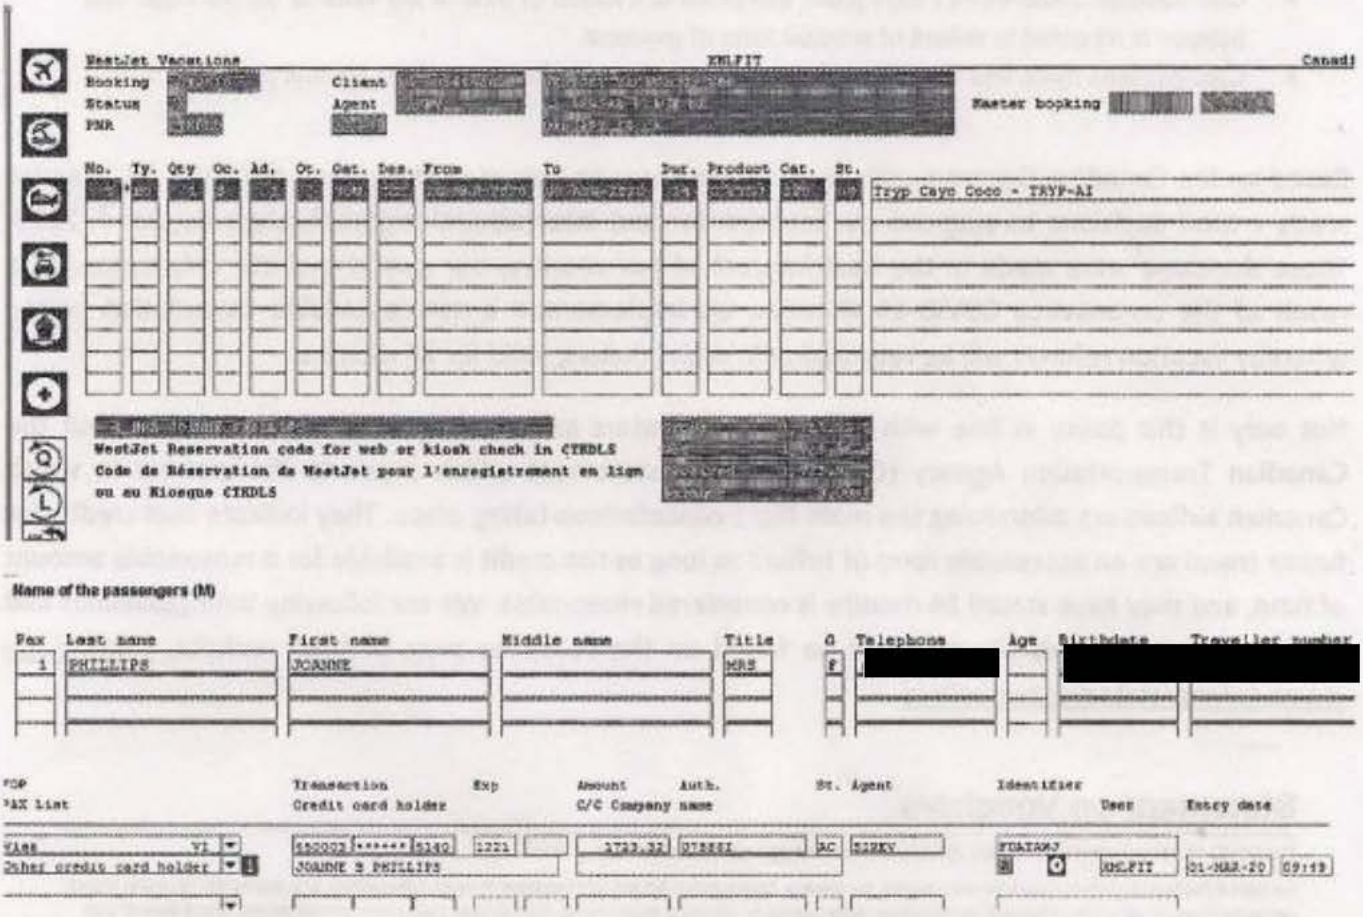
Merchant Comments
GUEST IS ELIGIBLE FOR FULL TRAVEL CREDIT AS PER FLEXIBLE POLICY AND CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY GUIDELINES. PLS SEE ATTACHED -SM

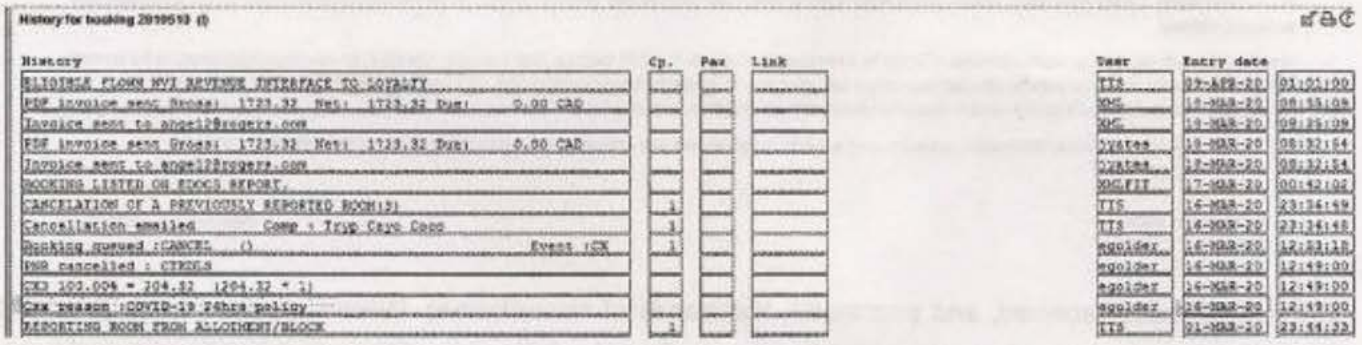
NON-REFUNDABLE BOOKING. COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with an ALL INCLUSIVE WestJet Vacations package for JOANNE PHILLIPS who was scheduled to travel from Ottawa to Cayo Coco o March 25, returning on April 8, 2020.



The reservation was booked on March 1, 2020 directly by the customer on WestJet Vacations' website.

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled on March 16, 2020.



COVID-19 PANDEMIC FLEXIBLE POLICY

The customer agreed to the following terms and conditions when the reservation was completed:

- Cancellations 45 days or more are subject to a $250 CAD cancellation fee per guest. All remaining funds with the exception of any supplier rates and non-refundable EBB(s), if applicable, are refunded to original form of payment. The fee is waived for Premium/Business packages when at least one flight segment is booked in Premium or Business.
- Cancellations made 44 - 21 days prior, will result in a forfeit of 50% of the value of the package. The balance is refunded to refund of original form of payment.
- Cancellations made less than 21 days prior will result in 100% forfeit of the amount paid.

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through August 4, 2020. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which will be available for 2 years. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however

This is Exhibit "125" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

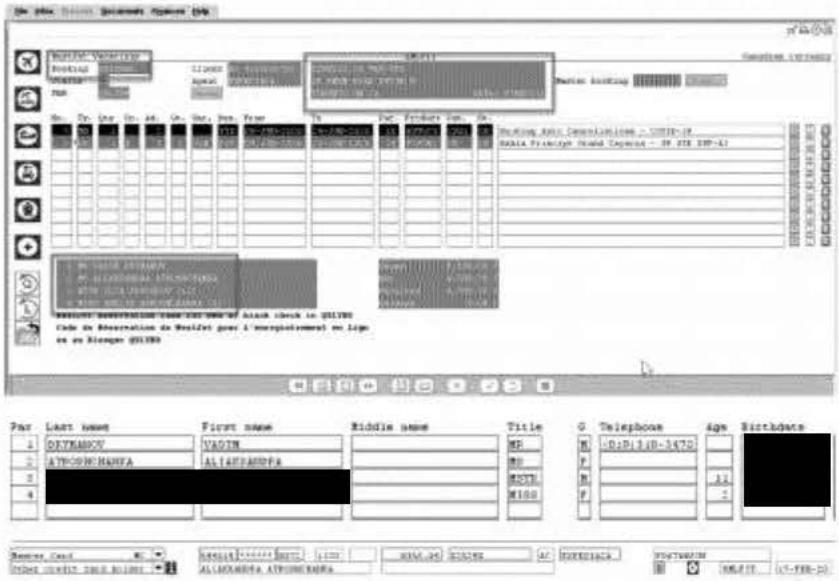
_____

Signature

Merchant Comments
Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure. This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf SN

ON-REFUNDABLE BOOKING. COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for the Dryhanov – Atroschanka party to travel from Ottawa to Puerto Plata from June 9 – 23, 2020.



The reservation was booked through a travel agency, EXPEDIA.CA

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled on May 13, 2020.

History for booking 2[illegible]

History	Cp.	Pax	Link	User	Entry date
BOOKING LISTED ON EPOCH REPORT.				ONLFIT	[illegible]
CANCELLATION OF A PREVIOUSLY REPORTED BOOKING	1			TTS	[illegible]
Cancellation emailed Comp : [illegible]	1			TTS	[illegible]
[illegible]				[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]				[illegible]	[illegible]
PNR cancelled : [illegible]				[illegible]	[illegible]
Cxl reason :COVID-19 auto-cancellation				[illegible]	[illegible]
COVID-19: automatic cancellation				SCRIPT	[illegible]

COVID-19 PANDEMIC FLEXIBLE POLICY

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.

Flexible change and cancel policy for existing WestJet Vacations bookings

For vacation packages booked prior to March 3rd for travel through August 4, 2020:

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Change or cancel up to 24 hours from departure
- Value of cancelled vacations will be returned in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue
- If you change your vacation, the difference in price will apply if the new package is higher value

Please contact us to change or cancel your vacation package.

If you booked through a Travel Agent (online or directly), Corporate Travel arranger, or another airline, please contact them directly.

Note:

- Policy does not apply to Group bookings
- Policy cannot be applied to packages with the following hotels: Disney, Universal, Hard Rock Resorts, Atlantis, Sandals Resorts, Beaches Resorts, and Grand Pineapple Resorts.

After your $0 one-time change/cancel, standard terms and conditions apply.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable.

Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure.
This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf

The customer is entitled to receive a credit for the full transaction amount in WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

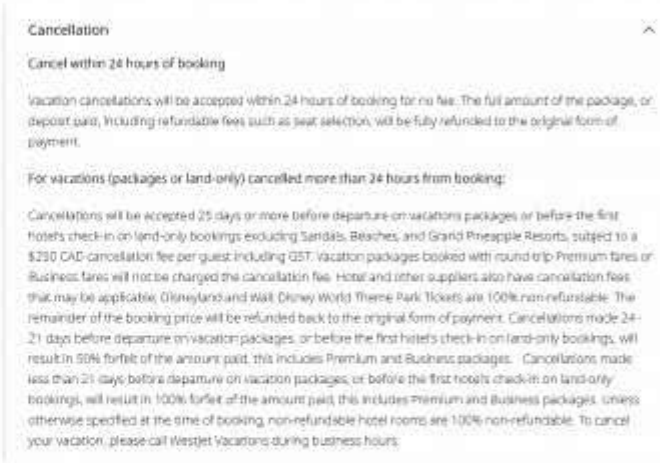
Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

WestJet believes refunding with travel credits or WestJet Dollars is an appropriate and responsible approach in extraordinary circumstances such as the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet has consistently provided our guests with options when their travel has been impacted by the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet's policy is in line with the Canadian Transportation Agency's guidelines.

The customer is encouraged to contact their travel agency or WestJet Vacations at their earliest convenience to set up their credit.

Should the customer wish to not accept a credit, WestJet has implemented a $0 one-time change/cancel policy to all existing bookings. After the $0 one-time change/cancel, the standard terms and conditions on cancellations are:



Cancellation

Cancel within 24 hours of booking

Vacation cancellations will be accepted within 24 hours of booking for no fee. The full amount of the package, or deposit paid, including refundable fees such as seat selection, will be fully refunded to the original form of payment.

For vacations (packages or land-only) cancelled more than 24 hours from booking:

Cancellations will be accepted 25 days or more before departure on vacations packages or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings excluding Sandals, Beaches, and Grand Pineapple Resorts, subject to a $250 CAD cancellation fee per guest including GST. Vacation packages booked with round trip Premium fares or Business fares will not be charged the cancellation fee. Hotel and other suppliers also have cancellation fees that may be applicable. Disneyland and Walt Disney World Theme Park Tickets are 100% non-refundable. The remainder of the booking price will be refunded back to the original form of payment. Cancellations made 24-21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 50% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Cancellations made less than 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 100% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Unless otherwise specified at the time of booking, non-refundable hotel rooms are 100% non-refundable. To cancel your vacation, please call Westjet Vacations during business hours.

For all Sandals, Beaches, Grand Pineapple Resort (packages or land-only) bookings:

Cancellations will be accepted 45 days or more before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, subject to a $250 CAD cancellation fee per guest including GST. Vacation packages booked with round-trip Premium fares or Business fares will not be charged the cancellation fee. Hotel and other suppliers also have cancellation fees that may be applicable. The remainder of the booking price will be refunded back to the original form of payment. Cancellations made 44 - 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 50% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Cancellations made less than 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 100% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Unless otherwise specified at the time of booking, non-refundable hotel rooms are 100% non-refundable. To cancel your vacation, please call Westjet Vacations during business hours.

In summary, the customer may cancel the booking 25 days prior to departure for a refund to the original form of payment, minus a cancellation fee of $250 per person including GST. If the customer cancels 24-21 days prior to departure, there is a 50% forfeit of the amount paid and the rest will be refunded to the original form of payment. If the customer cancels less than 21 days prior to departure, there is a 100% forfeit of the amount paid.

At this time, there are no exceptions being made to refund the FULL amount paid to the original form of payment. Therefore, a full refund is not due.

WESTJET

July 30, 2020

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to WestJet Vacations Booking #2810960, for the Dryhanov – Atroschanka party.

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through August 21, 2020. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's WestJet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sabrina #5041
Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
WESTJET Love Where You're Going

Please note the cancellation of this reservation falls under force majeure. This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder[us]-tariff.pdf :

- Event of force majeure means any unforeseeable circumstances beyond the carrier's control, the consequences of which could not have been avoided even if all due care had been exercised including, but without limitation, meteorological and geological conditions, acts of god, strikes, riots, civil commotions, embargoes, wars, hostilities, disturbances, unsettled international conditions, shortage of fuel or facilities, or labour disputes, either actual, threatened or reported.
- Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure.
- In the event of a conflict between traveller's rights provisions and those of any other rule in this tariff, the traveller's rights provisions rule shall prevail, except with respect to force majeure. The traveller's rights provisions do not make the airline responsible for acts of nature or the acts of third parties. The carrier is legally obligated to maintain the highest standards of aviation safety and cannot be encouraged to fly when it is not safe to do so. Similarly, the carrier cannot be help responsible for inclement weather or the actions of third parties such as acts of government or air traffic control, airport authorities, security agencies, law enforcement or customs and immigration officials.
- The carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to times that appear on the passenger's tickets due to force majeure. However, in the case of international transportation, a passenger may invoke the provisions of the convention regarding liability in the case of passenger delay. (see rule 55).
- The carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to flight times that appear on guests' tickets due to an event of force majeure.

This is Exhibit "126" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

FINANCIAL

1028

2020-08-05

Case Number: [redacted]

*0000091
ANTHONY M MCCULLOUGH
[redacted]

Re: Credit Card account number ending in 7528

Dear ANTHONY M MCCULLOUGH,

This letter is in response to your inquiry, received 2020-05-13, and regarding your request for an investigation of the transaction listed below.

Case Amount	Merchant Name	Transaction Date
2,283.72	WESTJET	2020-03-08

As part of the investigation regarding the disputed transaction mentioned above the merchant has responded in an attempt to resolve your inquiry. Please review the attached information and determine if you now agree that the charge is valid.

If you do not agree, further supporting documentation is required from you. Please provide A progressive letter is required negating the merchant's rebuttal; the letter must be signed and dated., as per the MasterCard Worldwide rules that we are required to follow. Please keep copies of the documentation that you are sending, along with fax confirmation, or registered mail/courier tracking number.

It is very important that your valid supporting documentation be received prior to 2020-08-13 in order for us to proceed with your dispute. If it is not received by the date stated, we will be unable to assist you further and will consider this case closed. The disputed transaction will be reposted to your account and appear on your next statement. After this time, if you choose to pursue this matter further, you must contact the merchant directly as indicated in your Cardholder Agreement.

Please provide the requested documentation promptly so that we may continue to assist you. If you have any further questions please call 1-866-223-9111.

Thank you for your continued use of your President's Choice Financial® MasterCard®.

Sincerely,

Dispute Representative
President's Choice Financial MasterCard

PS 421076

Cancellation

Cancel within 24 hours of booking

Vacation cancellations will be accepted within 24 hours of booking for no fee. The full amount of the package or deposit paid, including refundable fees such as seat selection, will be fully refunded to the original form of payment.

For vacations (packages or land-only) cancelled more than 24 hours from booking:

Cancellations will be accepted 25 days or more before departure on vacations packages or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings excluding Sandals, Beaches, and Grand Pineapple Resorts, subject to a $250 CAD cancellation fee per guest including GST. Vacation packages booked with round-trip Premium fares or Business fares will not be charged the cancellation fee. Hotel and other suppliers also have cancellation fees that may be applicable. Disneyland and Walt Disney World Theme Park Tickets are 100% non-refundable. The remainder of the booking price will be refunded back to the original form of payment. Cancellations made 24 - 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 50% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Cancellations made less than 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 100% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Unless otherwise specified at the time of booking, non-refundable hotel rooms are 100% non-refundable. To cancel your vacation, please call WestJet Vacations during business hours.

For all Sandals, Beaches, Grand Pineapple Resort (packages or land-only) bookings:

Cancellations will be accepted 45 days or more before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, subject to a $250 CAD cancellation fee per guest including GST. Vacation packages booked with round-trip Premium fares or Business fares will not be charged the cancellation fee. Hotel and other suppliers also have cancellation fees that may be applicable. The remainder of the booking price will be refunded back to the original form of payment. Cancellations made 44 - 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 50% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Cancellations made less than 21 days before departure on vacation packages, or before the first hotel's check-in on land-only bookings, will result in 100% forfeit of the amount paid, this includes Premium and Business packages. Unless otherwise specified at the time of booking, non-refundable hotel rooms are 100% non-refundable. To cancel your vacation, please call WestJet Vacations during business hours.

In summary, the customer may cancel the booking 25 days prior to departure for a refund to the original form of payment, minus a cancellation fee of $250 per person including GST. If the customer cancels 24-21 days prior to departure, there is a 50% forfeit of the amount paid and the rest will be refunded to the original form of payment. If the customer cancels less than 21 days prior to departure, there is a 100% forfeit of the amount paid.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers

Statement on Vouchers

Share this page

Date published: 2020-03-25

WestJet believes refunding with travel credits or WestJet Dollars is an appropriate and responsible approach in extraordinary circumstances such as the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet has consistently provided our guests with options when their travel has been impacted by the COVID-19 crisis. WestJet's policy is in line with the Canadian Transportation Agency's guidelines.

The customer is encouraged to contact their travel agency or WestJet Vacations at their earliest convenience to set up their credit.

Should the customer wish to not accept a credit, WestJet has implemented a $0 one-time change/cancel policy to all existing bookings. After the $0 one-time change/cancel, the standard terms and conditions on cancellations are:

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this reservation was cancelled May 13, 2020.

History for booking 2822968 (I)

History	Cp.	Pax	Link	User	Entry date
BOOKING LISTED ON EDOCS REPORT				XMLFIT	14-MAY-20
CANCELATION OF A PREVIOUSLY REPORTED ROOM(S)	1			TTS	13-MAY-20
Cancellation emailed Comp : Occidental at Xcaret D	1			TTS	13-MAY-20
Queue acknowledged :CXLCAMD - (successful) COVID auto-cancelEvent :HE35				[illegible]	13-MAY-20
PNR cancelled : DXUDHI				aden	13-MAY-20
CXL reason :(COVID-19 auto-cancellation)				aden	13-MAY-20
COVID-19: automatic cancellation				SCRIPT	13-MAY-20

COVID-19 PANDEMIC FLEXIBLE POLICY

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.

Flexible change and cancel policy for existing WestJet Vacations bookings

For vacation packages booked prior to March 3rd for travel through August 4, 2020

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Change or cancel up to 24 hours from departure
- Value of cancelled vacations will be returned in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue
- If you change your vacation, the difference in price will apply if the new package is higher value

Please contact us to change or cancel your vacation package.

If you booked through a Travel Agent (online or directly), Corporate Travel arranger, or another airline, please contact them directly.

Note:

- Policy does not apply to Group bookings.
- Policy cannot be applied to packages with the following hotels: Disney, Universal, Hard Rock Resorts, Atlantis, Sandals Resorts, Beaches Resorts, and Grand Pineapple Resorts.

After your $0 one-time change/cancel, standard terms and conditions apply.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

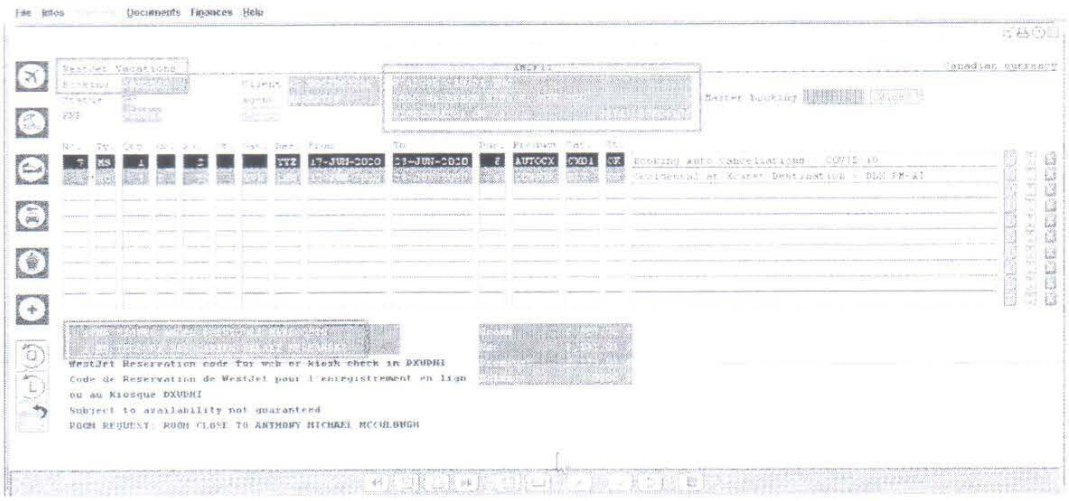
Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable.

Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure.
This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf

The customer/cardholder is entitled to receive a credit for the full transaction amount in WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months.

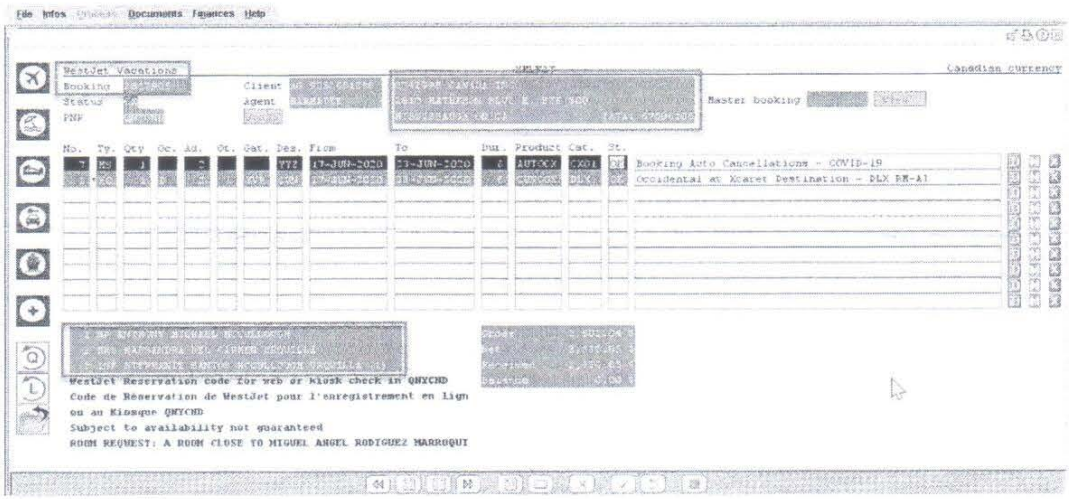
NON-REFUNDABLE BOOKING. COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY AVAILABLE.

This transaction is associated with an ALL INCLUSIVE WestJet Vacations package MIGUEL MARROQUIN & TEODORA HERNANDEZ to travel from Vancouver to Cancun from June 17 – 23, 2020.



Pax	Last name	First name	Middle name	Title	G	Telephone	Age	Birthdate
1	RODRIGUEZ MARROQUIN	MIGUEL	ANGEL	MR	M	(778)982-9092		03-NOV-1965
2	PELAEZ HERNANDEZ	TEODORA	DEL CARMEN	MS	F			22-MAR-1963

The reservation was paid for by ANTHONY MCCULLOUGH, who was scheduled to travel on the same itinerary on another reservation.



WESTJET

July 28, 2020

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing you today regarding the chargeback you processed related to WestJet Vacations Booking #2822968, with the cardholder is listed as Anthony McCullough.

Based on the Canadian Government's recommendations to help stop the spread of COVID-19, WestJet made critical decisions to suspend our transborder and international flights through August 21, 2020. These decisions were made in the best interest of our country, our guests and our employees. As a result of the coronavirus COVID-19 situation we implemented a non-refundable cancellation policy, whereby flight refunds will be returned as a Travel Bank credit, valid for 24 months, and vacation refunds will be returned as WestJet dollars, also valid for 24 months.

Not only is this policy in line with other tour operators experiencing similar repercussions, but recently the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) released a statement which supports the manner in which Canadian airlines are addressing the mass flight cancellations taking place. They indicate that credits for future travel are an acceptable form of refund as long as the credit is available for a reasonable amount of time, and they have stated 24 months is considered reasonable. We are following their guidelines and their statement on this situation can be found on the following page of their website, https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers.

We have already received, and processed, thousands of cancellations. Where we have been provided WestJet Rewards account numbers, we have deposited the full value of the trip to either a travel bank (for air only itineraries), or a WestJet Dollars account (for WestJet Vacations package bookings), which of course will be available for 2 years. For guests who do not have a WestJet Rewards account, we have requested that they create one so we can provide them this same reimbursement. We understand some guests may prefer a different form of refund, however in order to be fair to everyone who finds themselves in this same situation, we cannot make exceptions for some and not to others.

In this case, and given the circumstances, we kindly request you reverse the chargeback so that we can provide this guest the same resolution that all other guests have received, and accepted. Upon receiving the guest's WestJet Rewards account number, we will in good faith, provide them the value of their trip in a credit available to them for 24 months.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sabrina #5041
Manager, Payment Fraud Operations
WESTJET Love Where You're Going

Please note the cancellation of this reservation falls under force majeure. This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf :

- Event of force majeure means any unforeseeable circumstances beyond the carrier's control, the consequences of which could not have been avoided even if all due care had been exercised including, but without limitation, meteorological and geological conditions, acts of god, strikes, riots, civil commotions, embargoes, wars, hostilities, disturbances, unsettled international conditions, shortage of fuel or facilities, or labour disputes, either actual, threatened or reported.
- Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure.
- In the event of a conflict between traveller's rights provisions and those of any other rule in this tariff, the traveller's rights provisions rule shall prevail, except with respect to force majeure. The traveller's rights provisions do not make the airline responsible for acts of nature or the acts of third parties. The carrier is legally obligated to maintain the highest standards of aviation safety and cannot be encouraged to fly when it is not safe to do so. Similarly, the carrier cannot be help responsible for inclement weather or the actions of third parties such as acts of government or air traffic control, airport authorities, security agencies, law enforcement or customs and immigration officials.
- The carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to times that appear on the passenger's tickets due to force majeure. However, in the case of international transportation, a passenger may invoke the provisions of the convention regarding liability in the case of passenger delay. (see rule 55).
- The carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to flight times that appear on guests' tickets due to an event of force majeure.

DISPUTE RESPONSE - R

1035

Merchant #: 820366700124 Case #: [redacted] Reason Code: 53 Amount: 2283.72

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued. Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): __/__/___ Credit Amount: _____

Check all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

___ Copy of a Signed and/or Electronically captured sales slip
___ Copy of a Signed cancellation policy or order form
___ Copy of a Signed order form
___ AVS of Y or M and SIGNED proof of delivery to AVS confirmed address
___ Signed rental agreement or Hotel/Motel folio
___ Copy of the Recurring billing agreement
___ T & E Documentation showing loyalty transactions related to this purchase
___ T & E – Documentation showing subsequent purchases made throughout the service period
___ Proof that the ticket was received for passenger transport
___ Proof the name on the flight manifest matches the Cardholder name on purchased itinerary
___ Proof of CVC2 in lieu of imprint
___ Proof of authorization
___ Proof of Verified by Visa, MasterCard Secure Code, AMEX Safe Key, or Discover Protect Buy
_X_ Other Documentation (Please Describe): CARDHOLDER IS ENTITLED TO CREDIT

Merchant Comments

Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure. This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf SN

This is Exhibit "127" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

DISPUTE RESPONSE - R

Merchant #: 82036670016 Case #: [redacted] Reason Code: 53 Amount: 4441.26

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): __/__/___ Credit Amount: _____

Check all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

___ Copy of a Signed and/or Electronically captured sales slip
___ Copy of a Signed cancellation policy or order form
___ Copy of a Signed order form
___ AVS of Y or M and SIGNED proof of delivery to AVS confirmed address
___ Signed rental agreement or Hotel/Motel folio
___ Copy of the Recurring billing agreement
___ T & E Documentation showing loyalty transactions related to this purchase
___ T & E – Documentation showing subsequent purchases made throughout the service period
___ Proof that the ticket was received for passenger transport
___ Proof the name on the flight manifest matches the Cardholder name on purchased itinerary
___ Proof of CVC2 in lieu of imprint
___ Proof of authorization
___ Proof of Verified by Visa, MasterCard Secure Code, AMEX Safe Key, or Discover Protect Buy _x_ Other Documentation (Please Describe): PAX HAS BEEN CREDITED

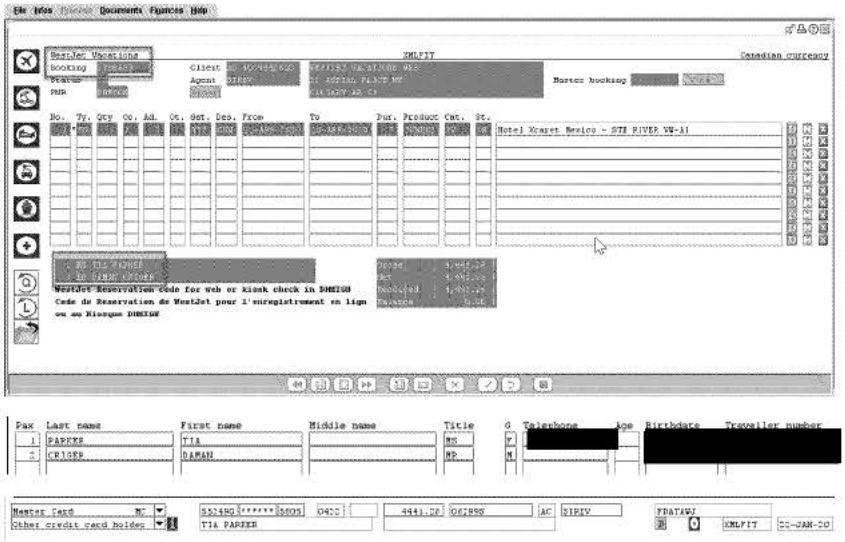
Merchant Comments

Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure. This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf In accordance with WestJet Vacations' flexible cancellation policy, this reservation was cancelled. The full amount was returned to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars. The amount of $4442 was deposited in account # 545711633, under the name TIA PARKER. The funds are valid for 24 months. SN

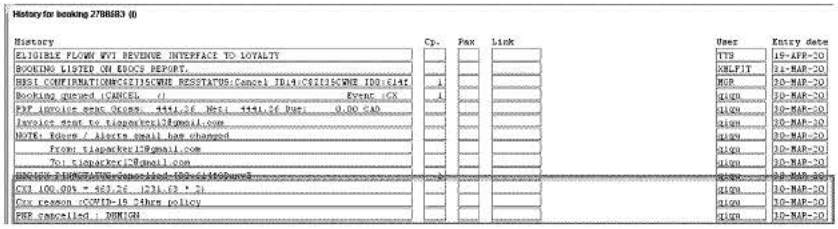
CB389648726

COVID-19 FLEXIBLE POLICY APPLIED TO THIS RESERVATION.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for TIA PARKER & DAMAN CRIGER to travel from Toronto to Cancun from April 11 – 18, 2020.



This reservation was cancelled on March 30, 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. A credit was issued, in the form of WestJet Dollars and deposited into the account under the name TIA PARKER.



Credited Tia Parker 545711631 4442 WSD. Removed from tracker.

By morawfor
Date created 07-APR-2020
Time created 15:19:38

CB389648726

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.

Flexible change and cancel policy for existing Westjet Vacations bookings

For vacation packages booked prior to March 3rd for travel in April, May or June 2020:

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Value of cancelled vacations will be returned in the form of Westjet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue
- If you change your vacation, the difference in price will apply if the new package is higher value

Please contact us to change or cancel your flight. If you initially booked through a third party, please contact your travel agent directly.

Note:

- Changes or cancellations more than 24 hours from purchase, will be returned as Westjet dollars, valid for 24 months from date of issue.
- Policy does not apply to Group bookings.
- March and April, no hotel restrictions.
- Policy cannot be applied to packages with the following hotels in May: Disney, Universal, Hard Rock Resorts, Playa Resorts, Adamils, Sandals Resorts, Beaches Resorts, and Grand Pineapple Resorts.

After your $0 one-time change, if you cancel your booking:

- more than 45 days prior to departure, there will be a $250 CAD cancellation fee per person with the balance refunded to Westjet dollars
- 44-22 days prior to departure, there will be a 50% cancel fee per person with the balance refunded to Westjet dollars
- within 21 days prior to departure will be a full forfeit.
- These terms and conditions apply to Economy, Premium and Business cabin bookings.

After your $0 one-time change, any additional change must be made at least 21 days prior to departure, for a $100 CAD change fee per person plus any difference in package price (if new package price is lower the amount is forfeited)

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

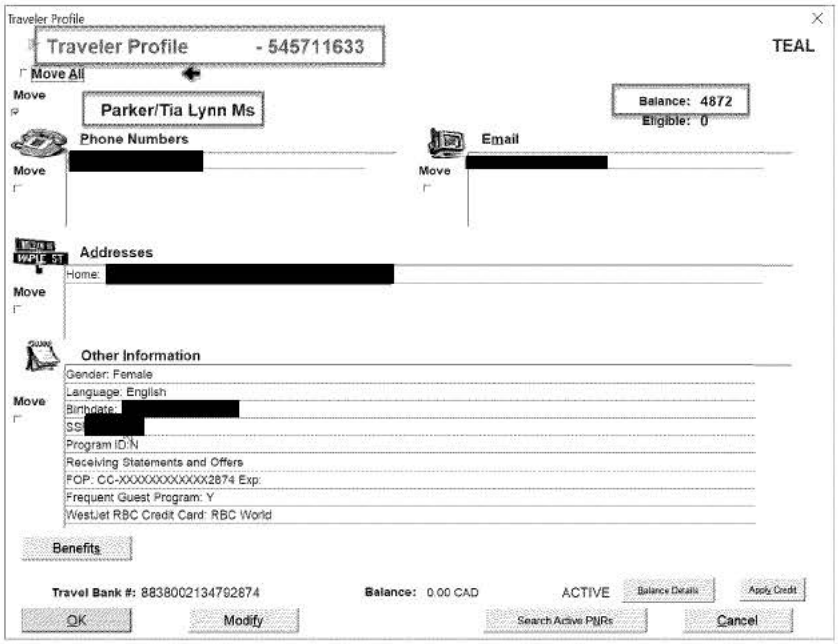
Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable.

Uncontrollable schedule irregularity means a flight delay, cancellation or diversion that is considered to be not within the carrier's control including but not limited to situations of force majeure.
This information is available in our Tariffs, which are located on our website www.westjet.com under https://www.westjet.com/assets/wj-web/documents/en/about-us/legal/international-transborder(us)-tariff.pdf

In accordance with WestJet Vacations' flexible cancellation policy, this reservation was cancelled. The full amount was returned to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars.

The amount of $4442 was deposited in account # [redacted] under the name TIA PARKER. The funds are valid for 24 months.

CB389648726



According to communications regarding Best Practices issued by acquirers, Issuers should recommend that the cardholder attempt to contact the affected merchant to resolve the dispute.

Airlines

Example: An airline is unable to provide services to or from the affected areas and credit is not issued.

Issuers are reminded that cardholders must first attempt to resolve the dispute with the merchant. If the dispute cannot be resolved with the merchant, the acquirer is responsible for services not rendered.

WestJet has made every attempt to offer a reasonable solution for all parties involved by offering free changes or free cancellations with a full credit for future use.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this type of global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/important-information-travellers-during-covid-19

CB389648726

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canadian Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations require that airlines ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and reasonable balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

Any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits. The CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

Full details of the flexible change and cancel policy can be found on WestJet's website.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/legal/travel-terms-conditions/westjet-vacations

WestJet urges your financial institution not to institute any chargebacks and to decline the request for several compelling reasons discussed in detail below:

- WestJet fully complied with all applicable regulations governing passenger refunds, including those of the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA).
- WestJet fully complied with its contract of carriage as set forth in WestJet's applicable Tariff[1] (collectively, the Tariff).
- The Tariff did not require a cash/credit card refund to the guest, and consequently there is no basis for a chargeback.

A. Background

The COVID-19 global pandemic has had drastic and unprecedented effects on the global airline industry. The devastating impacts have affected Canada and the world and, as a result, the Canadian government instituted measures to stop the spread of COVID-19.

The Canadian government implemented several restrictions. Many non-Canadian nationals were banned from entering Canada, including those travelling for an optional or discretionary purpose, including tourism, recreation, and entertainment. Those who could travel to/from Canada and Canadian citizens were subject to quarantine or isolation on arrival. It has also urged its citizens to avoid all non-essential travel outside of Canada.

COVID-19 and the resulting travel bans, restrictions, recommendations, and advisories from the various governments were outside of WestJet's control, as the CTA has acknowledged.[2] They essentially shut-down most passenger traffic, particularly with respect to discretionary, leisure travelers who are, by far, the largest segment of WestJet travellers.

---

1 See https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/legal/tariffs/index .

2 See Canadian Transportation Agency issues temporary exemptions to certain Air Passenger Protection Regulations provisions to address the COVID-19 pandemic, CTA, dated March 13, 2020 ("APPR also provide a list of situations considered 'outside the air carrier's control', including medical emergencies and orders or instructions from state officials. The CTA has identified a number of situations related to this pandemic that are considered 'outside of the air carrier's control'. These include flight disruptions to locations that are covered by a government advisory against travel or unnecessary travel due to COVID-19."), available at https://rppa-appr.ca/eng/notice/canadian-transportation-agency-issues-temporary-exemptions-certain-air-passenger-protection-0

As a result, like large and small airlines around the world, WestJet was compelled to significantly reduce its flight schedules and workforce. In order to conserve liquidity, WestJet was also compelled to reduce certain goodwill guest service policies that went above and beyond what passengers were entitled to under the applicable regulations and the Tariff. Rather, WestJet strictly followed the terms of its Tariff, applicable fare rules, and CTA regulations.

However, in the spirit of goodwill to our guests, WestJet went above and beyond its Tariff by providing credit refunds to guests who were not entitled to any refunds. Thus, WestJet provided guests whose non-refundable flight reservations were cancelled on or after March 18, 2020, due to COVID-19 force majeure circumstances, with Travel Bank credits.

As explained further below, the Tariff permits WestJet to provide a credit rather than a refund in the original form of payment, as WestJet is not liable for such cancellations due to a "force majeure" event (as was the case here).

WestJet's COVID-19 refund policy, wherein it provides a travel credit for non-refundable tickets of cancelled flights and may potentially provide the option for a full refund in the original form of payment at a later date, is an approach that was established as a matter of goodwill for guests. But, WestJet is not required to provide cash refunds for non-refundable tickets under the Tariff in force majeure circumstances beyond its control.

B. WestJet Complied With Applicable Governmental Regulations.

Despite the challenges and airline industry turmoil resulting from the global COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet complied with applicable regulations of the CTA. WestJet's policy of offering travel vouchers as travel bank credits for cancelled, non-refundable tickets under these force majeure circumstances is consistent with the CTA's Air Passenger Protection Regulations ("APPR"), its policies[3].

The APPR establish airline obligations toward passengers, including minimum compensation levels, standards of treatment, and possible administrative monetary penalties for non-compliance.[4] APPR Section 10 enumerates situations where a flight has been delayed or cancelled for reasons "outside the carrier's control, including but not limited to the following:

> . . .
> (f) a security threat;
> (g) airport operation issues;
> (h) a medical emergency;
> . . . and
> (I) an order or instruction from an official of a state or a law enforcement agency or from a person responsible for airport security."[5]

When there is a delay or cancellation "due to situations outside the carrier's control, it must:

> (a) provide passengers with the information set out in section 13;
> (b) in the case of a delay of three hours or more, provide alternate travel arrangements, in the manner set out in section 18, to a passenger who desires such arrangements; and
> (c) in the case of a cancellation or a denial of boarding, provide alternate travel arrangements in the manner set out in section 18."[6]

Notably, APPR Section 18 – which governs alternate travel arrangements in situations outside of a carrier's control – does not require a cash/credit card refund for cancellations beyond the control of the carrier. It requires carriers to provide "alternate travel arrangements free of charge" as set forth therein "to ensure that passengers complete their itinerary as soon as feasible."[7] The CTA recently reaffirmed that position:

---

[3] See Statement on Vouchers, CTA, March 25, 2020 ("Statement on Vouchers"), available at https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers
[4] See generally https://laws.justice.gc.ca/eng/regulations/SOR-2019-150/index.html
[5] APPR, Section 10(1).
[6] APPR, Section 10(3) (emphasis added).
[7] APPR, Section 18(1).

> "For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries."[8]

> "For flights cancelled for reasons beyond airlines' control, the Air Passenger Protection Regulations, which are based on legislative authorities, require that airlines ensure passengers can complete their itineraries but do not obligate airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs."[9]

Even when a cash/credit card refund is warranted (which is not the case here), the CTA has recognized that in light of the unprecedented challenges resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic:

> "While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases)."[10]

And, the CTA has granted "air carriers an extension to the required timeline to respond to passenger requests for compensation. Airlines have until October 28, 2020, to respond to all compensation requests that were pending as of March 25, 2020, or submitted between March 25, 2020, and September 29, 2020."[11]

C. WestJet Fully Complied with Its Applicable Tariff.

WestJet has provided travel credits to guests who purchased non-refundable tickets for flights cancelled due to the COVID-19 global pandemic, government travel restrictions, and health/safety concerns. Because WestJet's actions are explicitly permitted under the Tariff, there is no basis for instituting a chargeback against WestJet.

WestJet's Tariff contains its contract of carriage and governs the relationship between its guests and WestJet. The Tariff negates any liability on behalf of WestJet with respect to this chargeback.

---

8 Statement on Vouchers.
9 FAQs: Statement on Vouchers, available at https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/faqs-statement-vouchers
10 Statement on Vouchers.
11 See https://rppa-appr.ca/eng/notice/important-information-travellers-during-covid-19

The impacts of COVID-19, including travel bans forcing WestJet to cancel its flights, were not foreseeable and were completely beyond WestJet's control, as the CTA has recognized. These circumstances qualify as "force majeure" events under the Tariff. The Tariff provides that nothing makes "the airline responsible for acts of nature or the acts of third parties," and it states that "the carrier cannot be hel[d] responsible for inclement weather or the actions of third parties such as acts of government or air traffic control, airport authorities, security agencies, law enforcement or customs and immigration officials." Under the Tariff, WestJet can "refuse to transport" any guest when "it is necessary or advisable to: (a) Comply with any government regulation. . . . [or] (c) Address events of force majeure." COVID-19-related flight cancellations fall under both the "force majeure" and government regulation/order provisions.

Of critical importance, the Tariff is clear – in multiple provisions – that there is no liability for cancellations caused by "force majeure" events. With respect to liability for "force majeure" events, the Tariff states: "The carrier will not guarantee and will not be held liable for cancellations or changes to flight times that appear on guests' tickets due to an event of force majeure." Although these provisions establish that WestJet has no liability for COVID-19-related cancellations, WestJet nevertheless provided Guest with Travel Bank credits for the full value of his cancelled tickets. This was well within WestJet's contractual rights and indeed beyond WestJet's contractual obligations.

Not only is there clear language excusing WestJet from liability for force majeure events, but a chargeback is not appropriate because these were non-refundable tickets. But, any provision in the Tariff pertaining to refunds would apply in situations when there are cancellations outside the airline's control only where the passenger has purchased refundable tickets. Any such refund provision would not apply to non-refundable tickets.

Guests often choose to purchase non-refundable fares because they are sold at a lower price point, but they carry certain risks in the event the travel does not occur. The lower price for non-refundable tickets is often a trade-off for passengers agreeing to a restriction that allows carriers to manage inventory and cash flow.

In short, the Tariff and Terms and Conditions govern the relationship between WestJet and our guests. WestJet complied with its Tariff and its Terms and Conditions.

This is Exhibit "128" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Case [redacted] Reject 927.05CAD

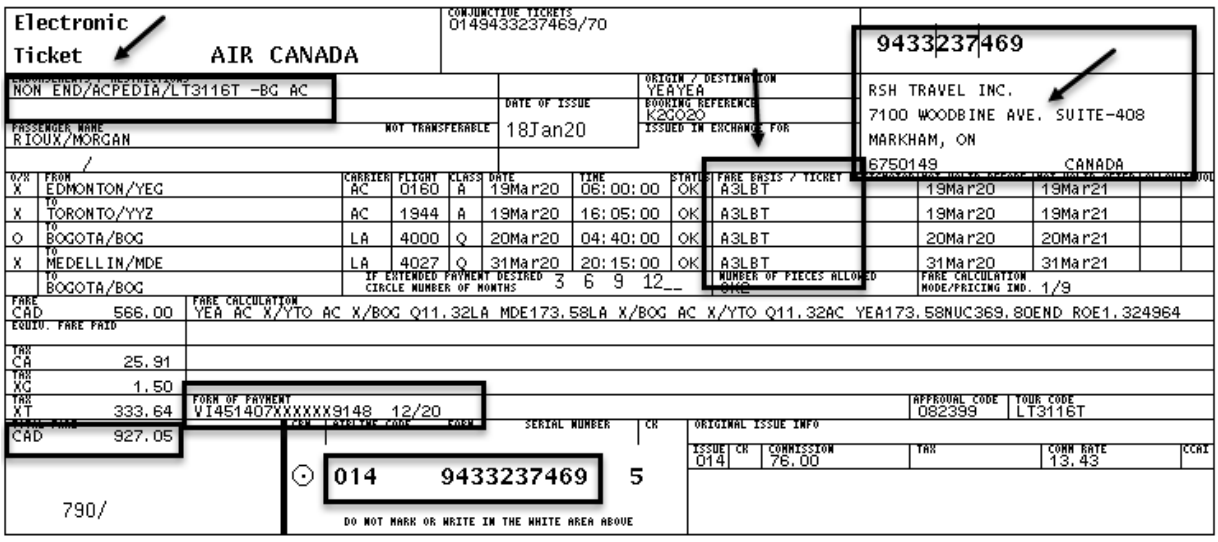
Please reverse these chargebacks. Ticket 0149433237469 are unused and nonrefundable. The cardholder purchased the tickets on the Royal Scenic Holiday website and had to click 'I accept, purchase' accepting the nonrefundable/no changes fare rules.. Due to Government travel restrictions, Air Canada has implemented a COVID-19 Goodwill Policy- passengers can still use the full value of the ticket for future travel (additional fare may apply). It is imperative the passenger retains their ticket number to use as a credit for future travel.
The nonrefundable fare rules are applicable if the passenger does NOT take advantage of Air Canada's COVID-19 Goodwill Policy. As these tickets were booked online, any ticket changes can also be done on Air Canada's website.
Attached is a copy of the ticket, the nonrefundable fare rules, the online click 'I accept, purchase', the nonrefundable/no changes fare rules and Air Canada's COVID-19 Goodwill Policy.

We confirm that flights were cancelled for reasons listed below:
"As and from February 1, 2020, all of Air Canada's route suspensions were directly caused by the factors beyond its control, principally the COVID-19 pandemic and the government measures put in place to contain its spread. As a result, Air Canada's policy of issuing long term credits with respect to non-refundable tickets for the flight cancellations relating to those suspended routes is compliance with applicable law (as confirmed in the Canadian Transport Agency's guidance updated March 25, 2020, …"… the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time…" (https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/statement-vouchers))"

Copy of the original tickets purchased: +



Electronic Ticket AIR CANADA

CONJUNCTIVE TICKETS 0149433237469/70

9433237469

NON END/ACPEDIA/LT3116T -BG AC

ORIGIN / DESTINATION YEAYEA

RSH TRAVEL INC.
7100 WOODBINE AVE. SUITE-408
MARKHAM, ON
6750149 CANADA

PASSENGER NAME RIOUX/MORGAN

NOT TRANSFERABLE

DATE OF ISSUE 18Jan20

BOOKING REFERENCE K2GO2O

ISSUED IN EXCHANGE FOR

O/W	FROM / TO	CARRIER	FLIGHT	CLASS	DATE	TIME	STATUS	FARE BASIS / TICKET
X	EDMONTON/YEG	AC	0160	A	19Mar20	06:00:00	OK	A3LBT		19Mar20	19Mar21
X	TORONTO/YYZ	AC	1944	A	19Mar20	16:05:00	OK	A3LBT		19Mar20	19Mar21
O	BOGOTA/BOG	LA	4000	Q	20Mar20	04:40:00	OK	A3LBT		20Mar20	20Mar21
X	MEDELLIN/MDE	LA	4027	Q	31Mar20	20:15:00	OK	A3LBT		31Mar20	31Mar21
	BOGOTA/BOG

IF EXTENDED PAYMENT DESIRED CIRCLE NUMBER OF MONTHS 3 6 9 12__

NUMBER OF PIECES ALLOWED OKE

FARE CALCULATION MODE/PRICING IND. 1/9

FARE CAD 566.00

FARE CALCULATION YEA AC X/YTO AC X/BOG Q11.32LA MDE173.58LA X/BOG AC X/YTO Q11.32AC YEA173.58NUC369.80END ROE1.324964

EQUIV. FARE PAID

TAX CA 25.91

TAX XG 1.50

TAX XT 333.64

FORM OF PAYMENT VI451407XXXXXX9148 12/20

APPROVAL CODE 082399

TOUR CODE LT3116T

TOTAL FARE CAD 927.05

CRN SYS TKT CODE FORM SERIAL NUMBER CR

ORIGINAL ISSUE INFO

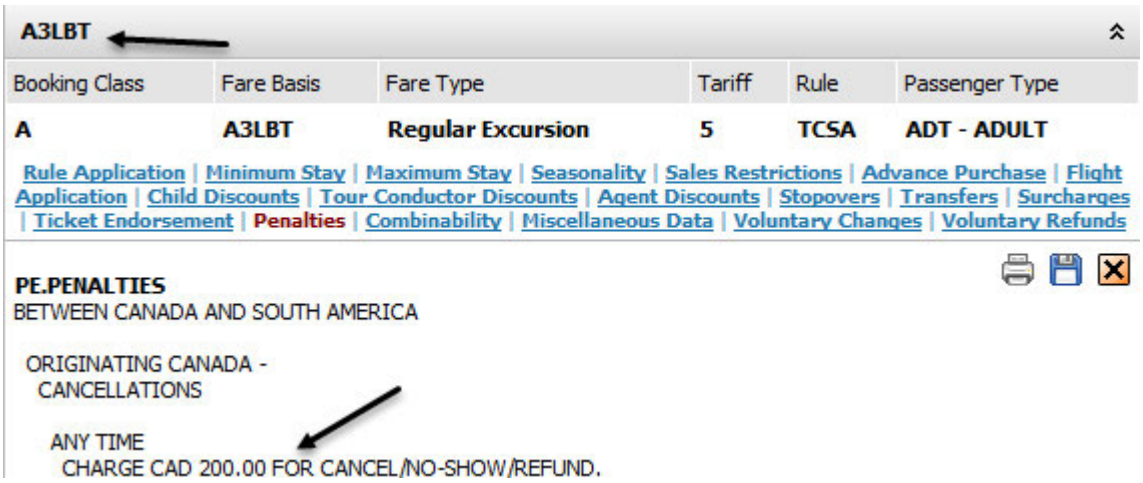
ISSUE	CR	COMMISSION	TAX	COMM RATE	CCAI
014		76.00		13.43

790/

014 9433237469 5

DO NOT MARK OR WRITE IN THE WHITE AREA ABOVE

Fare rules accepted at time of booking:



A3LBT

Booking Class	Fare Basis	Fare Type	Tariff	Rule	Passenger Type
A	A3LBT	Regular Excursion	5	TCSA	ADT - ADULT

Rule Application | Minimum Stay | Maximum Stay | Seasonality | Sales Restrictions | Advance Purchase | Flight Application | Child Discounts | Tour Conductor Discounts | Agent Discounts | Stopovers | Transfers | Surcharges | Ticket Endorsement | Penalties | Combinability | Miscellaneous Data | Voluntary Changes | Voluntary Refunds

PE.PENALTIES
BETWEEN CANADA AND SOUTH AMERICA

ORIGINATING CANADA - CANCELLATIONS

ANY TIME
CHARGE CAD 200.00 FOR CANCEL/NO-SHOW/REFUND.

AIR CANADA'S UPDATED GOODWILL POLICY:

Guidance for obtaining the Goodwill credit for future travel can be found on Air Canada.com under the Covid 19 policies.

https://www.aircanada.com/ca/en/aco/home/book/travel-news-and-updates/2020/covid-19.html

We have implemented highly flexible and expanded booking options. You can make a one-time change without a fee for all new or existing bookings made through June 30, 2020 for original travel between March 1, 2020 and June 30, 2021. If you booked directly with Air Canada and you need to cancel for any reason, you can convert your ticket to an Air Canada Travel Voucher that has no expiry date or to Aeroplan Miles with an additional 65% bonus miles.

You can make a one-time change without a fee or cancel your existing booking and rebook later if your original travel is between March 1, 2020 and June 30, 2021.

If you booked with a travel agent or any online travel agency (for example, Expedia or Priceline), kindly contact them directly for changes or cancellations. Each partner has a unique booking system that we are unable to access in order to adjust your booking.

If you booked directly with Air Canada (including aircanada.com, the Air Canada Mobile App, and our Contact Centres) or Kayak, Google Flights, and Skyscanner, you can change or cancel your booking by visiting Manage My Booking.

Terms and Conditions

- Ticket must be issued on or before June 30, 2020.
- For original travel between March 1, 2020 and June 30, 2021.
- If you need to change any flight, your new travel must be completed by June 30, 2022. No change fee will apply.
- If you booked directly with Air Canada and you need to cancel any flight, you can convert the remaining value of all tickets in a booking to an Air Canada Travel Voucher that is fully transferrable and never expires or to Aeroplan Miles with an additional 65% bonus miles as of June 1, 2020. No change fee will apply. Learn more.
- Booking can be changed or cancelled up to 2 hours prior to departure.
- Refundable tickets will be refunded as per the fare rules; a cancellation fee may still apply.

This is Exhibit "129" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

CIBC

MARLAINA BOSKERS
[redacted]

May 27, 2020

Dear MARLAINA BOSKERS,

Subject: Disputed Credit Card Transaction (Time Sensitive)
Credit Card Number ending in [redacted]

We are following up regarding the transaction billed to your CIBC credit card account for $994.10 by SWOOP RESERVATION, on JAN 28, 2020. We want to help resolve this matter for you.

Temporary credit given while investigating
After you brought this transaction to our attention, we applied a credit on MAY 05, 2020 to your CIBC credit card account statement. We then asked for proof of the transaction from the merchant.

Please review and choose a course of action
The merchant has now provided us with a copy of the transaction receipt, which is enclosed for your records.

- Reply: If you would like to dispute this transaction, please use one of these options:
  1. Complete and sign the attached 'Dispute Letter'. Return it by JUN 11, 2020 to:

     CIBC Credit Card Services
     PO Box 4058, Station A
     Toronto ON
     M5W 1L8

     Once we receive it we can investigate this matter further for you.
  2. Call us at 1 866 385-1344 (in Canada and the U.S.) or 416 256-6871 (from elsewhere) to start the investigation right away.
- Don't Reply: If we do not receive a response from you by JUN 11, 2020, we will consider this matter resolved. We will then re-apply the transaction amount to your credit card account which will appear as an amount owing on your next statement and we will close our file.

For more information
It is always a good idea to keep an eye on your credit card purchases. To learn more about what to do for a transaction that you do not believe is valid, or for information about disputed transactions, please visit our website at www.cibc.com/charges.

[redacted]

Case ID: D-1311760

May 27, 2020

We're always here to help
If you wish to proceed, please let us know soon. If you have any questions, please contact us at 1 866 629-8397 (in Canada and the U.S.) or 416 784-7100 (from elsewhere) and one of our Representatives will be pleased to assist you.

Thank you for relying on your CIBC credit card. CIBC is committed to providing banking that fits your life, and we look forward to serving you.

Sincerely,

Adrienne Kelly
Director
CIBC Credit Card Client Service Operations

May 27, 2020

RE: Credit Card Number ending in [redacted]

It is extremely important that only one option is selected, the required information is completed, and the wording is not altered. Be sure to include any supporting documentation. If section 2 is selected, you also need to provide specific details on how you attempted to contact and resolve the dispute with the merchant, including the merchant's response to your attempt to resolve the dispute.

Merchant: SWOOP RESERVATION
Transaction Amount: $994.10
Transaction Date: JAN 28, 2020

Section 1

☐ I certify that I have reviewed the evidence provided, including any new details and/or merchant name, and I state that I did not make, authorize, or participate in this transaction nor did I authorize anyone else to make this transaction to my account.

Note: Selecting this option requires cancellation of your card and reissuance of a new credit card and account number.

Section 2

I certify that I did make a purchase with this merchant. However, I was unsuccessful in resolving a dispute with the merchant, and:

☐ I have not received any goods or services, which were expected to be received/performed on _____ (date). I enclose a copy of my agreement with the merchant and the invoice.

☐ The amount has been altered. I authorized the merchant to charge my CIBC credit card account in the amount of $ _____ . Enclosed is my copy of the transaction receipt to support this claim.

☐ I paid for the purchase by other means (e.g., cash, traveller's cheques, money order). I enclose a copy of my receipt as proof to support my claim.

☐ I returned the merchandise on _____ (date) and asked the merchant for a full credit. Enclosed is a copy of the return slip and/or credit slip.

☐ I notified the merchant of the cancelled reservation on _____ (date). The cancellation number provided by the merchant is _____ . No services have been received for this transaction and a credit has not been issued to my CIBC credit card account.

OR

☐ I did make a purchase with this merchant in the amount of $ _____ . However, I did not make, authorize or participate in the transaction I am disputing above. My credit card was in my possession at the time this transaction occurred. Enclosed is my receipt for the purchase I did make for $ _____ .

If we do not receive a response by JUN 11, 2020, we will consider this transaction to be valid and payable by you.

Date (mmm/dd/yyyy)	MARLAINA BOSKERS Print Name	X	Signature (sign within box)
Date (mmm/dd/yyyy)	Name of Authorized User (if applicable)	X	Authorized User's Signature (if applicable) (sign within box)

Case ID: D-1311760

Acquirer Collaboration Dispute Response Questionnaire - Consumer Disputes
Dispute Reason Code 13.1, 13.2, 13.3, 13.4, 13.5, 13.6, 13.7, 13.8, 13.9

1056

ROL Case Number: [redacted]

Transaction Information

Cardholder Account Number: [redacted]
Transaction Amount: 994.10
TransDate (MM/DD/YY): 01/28/2020
Dispute Reason Code: 13
MO/TO / ECI Indicator: 7
Transaction Identifier:

Tran type: D
Acquirer Reference Number: 74450770029004032016211
Chargeback CPD (MM/DD/YY): 05/06/2020
Dispute Condition Code: 1
Merchant Category Code: 4511
Jurisdiction: Visa Canada Domestic

Dispute Response Information :

___ Accept Partial
_x_ Decline
Acceptance Amount: 0.00
Why are you not accepting full liability?
COMP EVID

Response Reason :

_x_ Compelling Evidence
___ Credit Processed
___ Invalid Dispute

Invalid dispute reason:

Explanation:
See attachment

Credit Information

Credit Date (CCYY-MM-DD): Acquirer Reference Number: Credit Amount:

DISPUTE RESPONSE - C

1057

Merchant #: 82041880014 Case #[redacted] Reason Code: 1310 Amount: 994.10

___ Accept dispute: By selecting this action, you are accepting FULL financial liability for this dispute.
___ Credit Issued: Credit Date (MM/DD/CCYY): ____/____/_____ Credit Amount: _____

Select all conditions that apply to your response and include supporting documentation as required by the Issuer.
Please ensure the case number is written in the upper right hand corner of each page.

_x_ 01 - Documentation to prove the cardholder is in possession of and/or using the merchandise
___ 02 - Signed Delivery form, copy of cardholder identification as proof goods were picked up at merchant location
___ 03- Address Verification Method, or AVS of Y or M and proof of delivery
___ 04 - Digital goods download, Download Date (MM/DD/CCYY): Time (HH:MM):
(2 or more optional selections must be selected):
___ Purchaser IP Address: and Device Geographic Location:

___ Device ID: and Device Name:

___ Purchaser Name: and Purchaser Email:

___ Profile Setup or Application Access
___ Merchant Website or Application Access
___ Same Device and Previous Transaction on Same Card Not Disputed
ARN*: Transaction Date (MM/DD/CCYY)*:
___ 05 - Delivery to cardholder at place of employment
___ 06 - T & E Loyalty transactions related to purchase
___ 07 - T & E Subsequent purchases made throughout service period
___ 08 - Passenger Transport proof ticket received, scanned at gate or other information (e.g. frequent flyer miles)
___ 10 - Authorized signer known by the cardholder

- Input data required if corresponding option is selected (checked off).

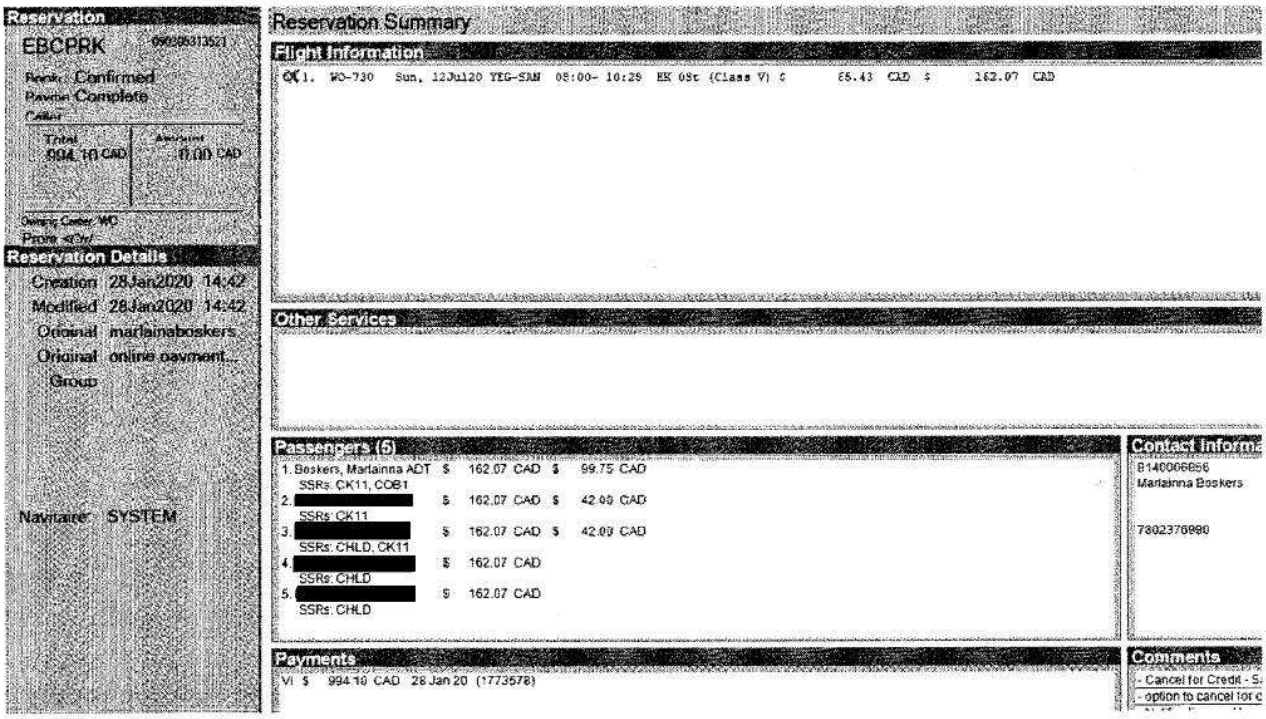
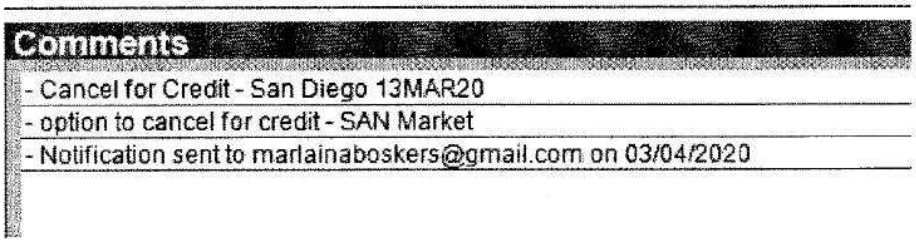
Merchant Comments
This is a non refundable ticket. Due to COVID-19 and subsequent travel bans and border closures, Swoop has implemented a flexible change and cancel policy. As per the flexible policy, full value of the booking has been placed into a travel credit valid for 2 years from the date of creation. No refund is due. AG Fraud

COVID-19 FLEXIBLE CHANGE/CANCEL POLICY APPLIED. Non-refundable fare.

This transaction is associated to a flight reservation for The BOSKERS family who were scheduled to travel from Edmonton to San Diego on July 12, 2020.



Due to the COVID-19 pandemic and/or travel bans imposed by the governments, this reservation receieved email notification of cancellation of the San Diego destination and the opportunity to place this non-refundable ticket into a travel credit.



Coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak:

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Swoop has suspended all international and transborder flights. This decision was made following Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's announcement imposing travel restrictions for all flights entering Canada to reduce the spread of COVID-19. At this time, the suspension will be in place until June 30, 2020.

Operational Updates

Effective March 18th, The Government of Canada has imposed travel restrictions for all flights entering reduce the spread of COVID-19. Any foreign individual, who has been present outside of Canada or the Ur the last 14 days will be prohibited entry and will be denied boarding. This does not apply to Canadian Citize Permanent Residents, Immediate Family Members and certain exempt persons, so long as no person is COVID-19 symptoms.

Beginning on Sunday, March 22, 2020, at 11:59 p.m., we will suspend all our international and transborder suspension follows Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's announcement imposing travel restrictions for all flig Canada to reduce the spread of COVID-19. The suspension will be in place until June 30, 2020

Travellers booked on flights between Canada and the United States, Mexico and Jamaica, scheduled to operate before June 30, 2020 may cancel for a Swoop credit, valid for 24 months. All travellers who fall in this category have been contacted with instructions on how to cancel for a credit.

Swoop flight cancellations, Cancel for credit steps.

1. Make sure you're eligible for cancel for credit!

   Travel booked between Canada and the United States, Mexico and/or Jamaica for travel before June 30th, 2020 or flights that have been changed or cancelled by Swoop.

2. Once you've confirmed you're eligible, you should have received an email from Swoop with instructions on how to access your credit.

   Check your junk/spam folder if you haven't received an email.

3. If you cannot find the email, you can still access your credit as long as you can log into Manage My Booking with your reservation code (6 digit alpha-numeric code) and the last name of the first traveller listed on your reservation (note: this could be different from the person who made the booking).

5. Once you're logged into Manage My Booking:

   1. Select 'Flight Changes

   2. Select 'Flight Interrup

   3. Hit 'cancel.'

6. If you want to confirm y available, you can view y credits through your Sw

Cancel for Credit Terms and Conditions

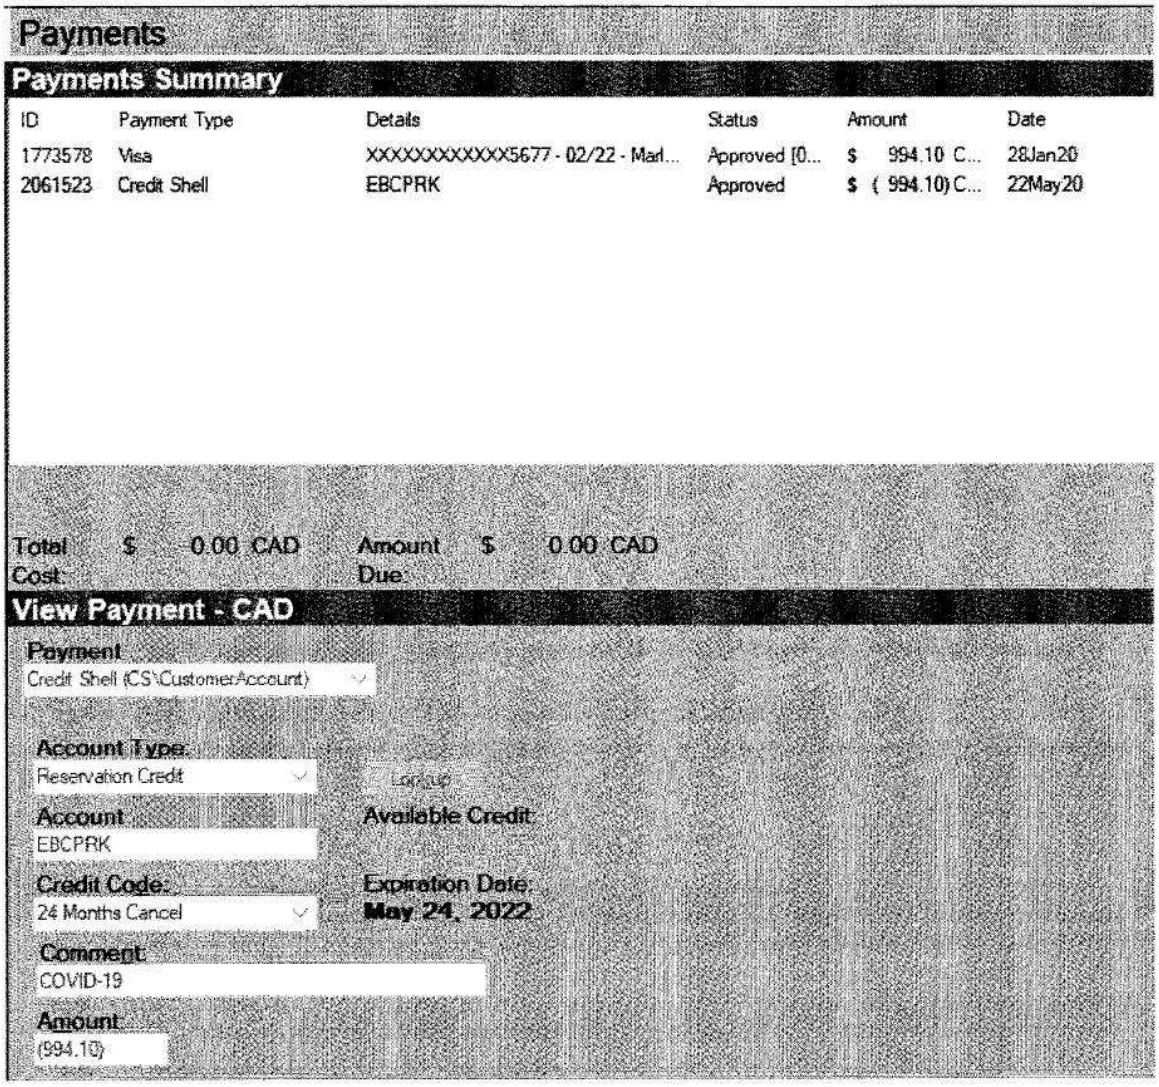
Swoop's one-time offer to cancel for credit applies to existing bookings that r following criteria: Existing flights booked for travel before June 30, 2020 bet Canada and the US, Mexico and Jamaica; existing flight reservations which ar or changed by Swoop.

Customers have the ability to cancel their reservation for a credit through M. Booking. The credit is available for use for up to 24 months after the date on cancellation occurs. Credit must be used within 24 months. The entire value booking will be applied to a credit on the profile of the first traveller on the re (in the event there are more than 1 travellers on a booking). A traveller profil created in order for credit to be issued. If Extras (seats, bags, etc.) were purch initial booking, the value of those Extras will be credited back to the traveller of Extras can be used towards either base fare or additional Extras on the sul booking. The credit can be used towards more than one subsequent booking. of the credit exceeds the value of the subsequent booking, the remaining diff value will remain available to the traveller within their Swoop account. If the subsequent booking exceeds the value of the credit, the traveller will be resp pay the difference. The credit can be used for any new travel purchase, even

Full details concerning the Coronavirus and available change/cancel options can be found on Swoop's website here:

https://www.flyswoop.com/making-changes-to-your-flight/
https://www.flyswoop.com/cancel-for-credit/

In accordance with Swoop's flexible cancellation policy, a credit in the amount of $994.10 has been issued to the customer. The credit is valid for 24 months from the date it was issued, expiring May 24, 2022.



Payments

Payments Summary

ID	Payment Type	Details	Status	Amount	Date
1773578	Visa	XXXXXXXXXXXX5677 - 02/22 - Marl...	Approved [0...	$ 994.10 C...	28Jan20
2061523	Credit Shell	EBCPRK	Approved	$ (994.10) C...	22May20

Total Cost: $ 0.00 CAD

Amount Due: $ 0.00 CAD

View Payment - CAD

Payment: Credit Shell (CS\CustomerAccount)

Account Type: Reservation Credit

Account: EBCPRK

Available Credit:

Credit Code: 24 Months Cancel

Expiration Date: May 24, 2022

Comment: COVID-19

Amount: (994.10)

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/important-information-travellers-during-covid-19

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only re passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines bel obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplate mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fai between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply t of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take ste economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropri context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

Swoop has made every attempt to offer a reasonable solution for all parties involved. Swoop is willing and able to offer services at a later date by providing a travel credit for future use.

There are no exceptions at this time. Therefore, a refund to the original form of payment is not due.

From: [redacted]
To: Credit Card Dispute, Mailbox
Cc: [redacted]
Subject: RE: Secure message from CIBC - D-1311760 12514
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2020 12:26:05 PM
Attachments: SWOOP_REFUND.pdf

[EXTERNAL]

Hello,

I am requesting a chargeback for a transaction in which the merchant has conveyed to me in writing that they are declining to render the services which this transaction on my credit card paid for. On Jan 28 I purchased 5 airline tickets from Swoop to fly from Edmonton to San Diego leaving on July 12. ($994.10). I received an email from Swoop on March 20th that my flights had been cancelled. On April 2nd I spoke to an agent via Swoop's live chat. I noticed that Swoop no longer offers flights to San Diego, which is my family's travel destination because we have accommodations and family there. I asked for a refund, and got denied. On April 3rd I continued the communications via live chat and again requested a refund. I was denied. April 22 I sent an email to Swoop requesting a refund, but I never got a reply. April 22 I sent another message via their live chat requesting a refund and again, got denied. Attached are screenshots of our communications.

Not only do Swoop credits not satisfy a legal obligation to a refund-but these credits have absolutely NO value to me now that they no longer fly to San Diego!! Swoop has failed to provide the services contracted in the tickets that I have purchased by cancelling our flights.Swoop is bound by it's tariff, which requires Swoop to provide a full refund to the original form of payment if it cannot provide the services paid for, EVEN in the case of force majeure! They denied me the refund to which I am entitled under sections 17(2) and 17(7) of Canada's Air Passenger Protection Regulations and relate case law.

Thank you,

Marlaina Boskers

From: Credit Card Dispute, Mailbox

Sent: Wed, 29 Apr 2020 16:22:58 +0000

To: [redacted]

Cc:

Subject: Secure message from CIBC - D-1311760 12514

April 29, 2020

Dear Mrs Marlaina Boskers:

Email address: [redacted]

This notification is being sent to the email address provided in accordance with your earlier verbal or written consent to obtain documents electronically. Please review the enclosed documents carefully and print or save them for future reference as they provide important information about your CIBC product(s).

Subject: Credit Card Number Ending in 5677

Recently, you asked us about the transaction billed to your CIBC credit card account for $994.10 by SWOOP RESERVATION, on January 30, 2020. We need your help to investigate this matter for you.

Please provide documentation by May 14, 2020

We are currently looking into this transaction for you. In order for us to dispute this transaction for you, please send us the supporting documentation as indicated below by May 14, 2020:

Services/Merchandise Not Rendered –A summary describing what was purchased and what was received including the merchant's response to your inquiry.

Please send the information promptly

You can provide the supporting documentation in writing via one of the following options:

- Scan and attach completed signed document and select reply through this secure email; or
- Fax the details to us at 1 888 595-8543; or,
- Mail the details to:
- CIBC Credit Card Services
- PO Box 4058, Station A
- Toronto ON
- M5W 1L8

Please make sure to provide the documentation before May 14, 2020. If we have not heard from you by then we will consider the matter resolved to your satisfaction and our file will be closed. So don't wait – please send it soon.

For more information

It is always a good idea to keep an eye on your credit card purchases. To learn more about what to do for a transaction that you do not believe is valid, or for information about disputed transactions, please visit our website at www.cibc.com/charges.

We're always here to help

Thank you for your patience while we investigate this matter for you. If you ever see a transaction that raises questions, remember we're ready to help. If you have any other questions, please call us at 1 866 629-8397 (in Canada and the U.S.) or 416 784-7100 (from elsewhere) and one of our Representatives will be pleased to assist you.

CIBC is committed to providing banking that fits your life, and we look forward to serving you.

Sincerely,

Adrienne Kelly

CIBC Credit Card Client Service Operations

D-1311760 12514

This mailbox is for the submission of the requested documents only. All other emails will not be retrieved.

This is Exhibit "130" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

[redacted]

Amex Bank of Canada
PO Box 3204 STN F
Toronto, Ontario,
M1W 3W7, Canada
Tel: 1 800 869 3016
Fax: 1 888 843 9523
Web: americanexpress.ca
April 28, 2020

Reference Number: [redacted]

Merchant Name: TRANSAT TOURS CANADA IN ETOBICOKE

Transaction Amount: CAD 500.00

Transaction Date: August 21, 2019

Dear SERENA UPPAL,

We are writing to you with important information about the inquiry you previously filed with us from TRANSAT TOURS CANADA IN ETOBICOKE for CAD 500.00.

When we contacted you on April 3, 2020 we informed you that a CAD 500.00 credit had been applied to your unbilled statement as ?Credit for disputed charge?.

The merchant has sent us a copy of the documentation, which we have enclosed for your reference. This documentation appears to support that the transaction was valid. As a result, the previously issued credit has been reversed. You will see this reversal of credit reflected on your next billing statement.

Thank you for your Cardmembership.

Yours sincerely,

American Express Customer Care

P000000047-C000000688-1/22-WP / S E L /

Canadian Transportation Agency – Statement on Vouchers

No refund to credit card is due as passenger is credited with future travel credit valid for 24 months.

Please reverse chargeback in favour of merchant.

Transat Accounting

1. [redacted] See Canada's travel advisories banning all unnecessary travel due to the COVID-19 pandemic regardless of destination as early as March 13th, 2020: https://travel.gc.ca/destinations/dominica and https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/advisories. In addition, Canada effectively closed its borders to most air travel as announced by Canada's Prime Minister on March 16th, 2020 and implemented by Transport Canada. See https://pm.gc.ca/en/news/news-releases/2020/03/16/prime-minister-announces-new-actions-under-canadas-covid-19-response and https://www.tc.gc.ca/en/initiatives/covid-19-measures-updates-guidance-tc/aviation-measures.html. Finally, the Government of Canada through the Canadian Transportation Agency has ordered various measures applicable to all carriers; including that ALL CARRIERS may issue refunds via travel credits for the time being. See these orders under Determination No. A-2020-42 at https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/ruling/a-2020-42 and Determination No. A-2020-47 at https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/ruling/a-2020-47, and Order No. 2020-A-37 at https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/ruling/2020-a-37

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Home

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide, mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Date modified:

INQUIRY

AMEX

DATE: 20-APR-2020

[redacted]

Cardholder: The Cardmember has requested a Credit for goods / services that were not received from your business. Please issue a Credit or provide Proof of Delivery, or a copy of the purchase agreement indicating the cancellation policy and an explanation of why a Credit is not due.

Merchant:

Please find attached, Transat rebuttal for charge back indicated.

Passengers booked with Transat for departures to May31,2020 and affected by cancellations as result of the COVID -19 global situation have been offered to change their travel dates or who wish to cancel their reservation, can use their credit towards future travel valid for 24 months.

Passengers: Serena Uppal - part of a larger group booked with TRAVELONLY INC. agency.

Cancelled itinerary: Toronto/Punta Cana/Toronto April 29, 2020/May06,2020

We are responding to the inquiry in accordance with Federal and Provincial impositions during covid-19 Global outbreak and situation.

I have attached a copy of the invoice reflecting the credit amount available to the cardholder which is what was paid to Transat on Amex shown below. The cardholder credit is the value paid NET $500.00 for the amount in question of inquiry.

Additional attachments:

Transat Terms and Conditions – Force Majeure

This is Exhibit "131" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amex Bank of Canada
PO Box 3204 STN F
Toronto, Ontario,
M1W 3W7, Canada
Tel: 1 800 869 3016
Fax: 1 888 843 9523
Web: americanexpress.ca
May 16, 2020

000045

HEATHER STEVENS
[redacted]

Reference Number: [redacted]
Transaction Amount: CAD 5157.78

Merchant Name: WESTJET CALGARY
Transaction Date: December 4, 2019

Dear HEATHER STEVENS,

We are writing to you with important information about the inquiry you previously filed with us from WESTJET CALGARY for CAD 5,157.78.

When we contacted you on April 9,2020, we informed you that a CAD 5,157.78 credit had been applied to your April statement as ?Credit for disputed charge?.

The merchant has sent us a copy of the documentation, which we have enclosed for your reference. Please be advised that as per the merchant policy presented by the merchant in the enclosed documentation, on page 4, indicates that value of the cancelled flight will be returned as credit to your travel bank, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. The merchant documentation appears to support that the transaction was valid. As a result, previously issued credit has been reversed. You will see this adjustment reflected on your next billing statement.

It is worth noting that the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has stated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. However, if you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, the CTA has indicated that you can file a complaint with them directly, and they will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff on a case-by-case basis in due course.

Thank you for your Cardmembership.

Yours sincerely,

American Express Customer Care

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

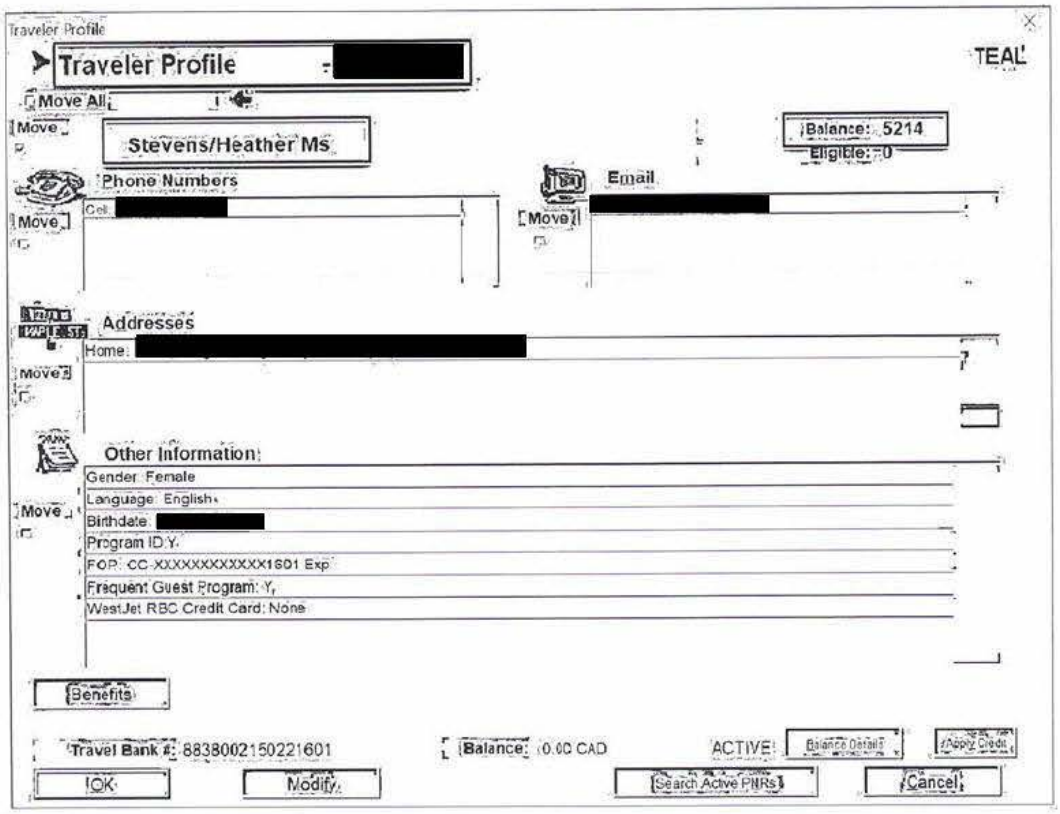
[redacted]

,PO Box 3204 STN F, Toronto, Ontario, M1W 3W7, Canada
ISS00120
INTUNGDMDIS0003EN

P000000045-C000000057-1/5-VIP / S E L /

Case # [redacted]

Merchant # 9322289969



Airlines

Example: An airline is unable to provide services to or from the affected areas and credit is not issued.

Issuers are reminded that cardholders must first attempt to resolve the dispute with the merchant. If the dispute cannot be resolved with the merchant, the acquirer is responsible for services not rendered.

According to the Canadian Transportation Agency, a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund during this type of global crisis.

https://otc-cta.gc.ca/eng/important-information-travellers-during-covid-19

Case # [redacted]

Merchant # 9322289969

Statement on Vouchers

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused major disruptions in domestic and international air travel.

For flight disruptions that are outside an airline's control, the Canada Transportation Act and Air Passenger Protection Regulations only require that the airline ensure passengers can complete their itineraries. Some airlines' tariffs provide for refunds in certain cases, but may have clauses that airlines believe relieve them of such obligations in force majeure situations.

The legislation, regulations, and tariffs were developed in anticipation of relatively localized and short-term disruptions. None contemplated the sorts of worldwide mass flight cancellations that have taken place over recent weeks as a result of the pandemic. It's important to consider how to strike a fair and sensible balance between passenger protection and airlines' operational realities in these extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances.

On the one hand, passengers who have no prospect of completing their planned itineraries with an airline's assistance should not simply be out-of-pocket for the cost of cancelled flights. On the other hand, airlines facing huge drops in passenger volumes and revenues should not be expected to take steps that could threaten their economic viability.

While any specific situation brought before the CTA will be examined on its merits, the CTA believes that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel, as long as these vouchers or credits do not expire in an unreasonably short period of time (24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases).

The CTA will continue to provide information, guidance, and services to passengers and airlines as we make our way through this challenging period.

Share this page

Date modified: 2020-03-25

Full details of the flexible change and cancel policy can be found on WestJet's website.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/about-us/legal/travel-terms-conditions/westjet-vacations

Case # [redacted]

Merchant # 9322289969

Flexible change and cancel policy for existing WestJet Vacations bookings

For vacation packages booked prior to March 3rd for travel in April, May or June 2020:

- $0 one-time fee waiver for changes or cancellations
- Value of cancelled vacations will be returned in the form of WestJet Dollars
- If you change your vacation, the difference in price will apply if the new package is higher value.

Please contact us to change or cancel your flight. If you initially booked through a third party, please contact your travel agent directly.

Note:

- Changes or cancellations more than 24 hours from purchase will be returned as WestJet dollars, valid for 24 months from date of issue. We are not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time. We will update this information when it is available.
- Policy does not apply to Group bookings.
- March and April, no hotel restrictions.
- Policy cannot be applied to packages with the following hotels in May: Disney, Universal, Hard Rock Resorts, Playa Resorts, Atlantis, Sandals Resorts, Beaches Resorts, and Grand Pineapple Resorts.

After your $0 one-time change if you cancel your booking:

- more than 45 days prior to departure, there will be a $250 CAD cancellation fee per person with the balance refunded to WestJet dollars.
- 44-22 days prior to departure, there will be a 50% cancel fee per person with the balance refunded to WestJet dollars
- within 21 days prior to departure will be a full forfeit.
- These terms and conditions apply to Economy, Premium and Business cabin bookings.

https://www.westjet.com/en-ca/travel-info/advisories#coronavirus

WestJet Vacations bookings are non-refundable. Due to the current situation with COVID-19, exceptions are being made to return the full cost of cancelled tickets to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. However, all tickets are still non-refundable. Therefore, a refund is not due.

In accordance with WestJet Vacations' flexible cancellation policy, this reservation was cancelled. The full amount was returned to the customers in the form of WestJet Dollars. The funds are valid for 24 months.

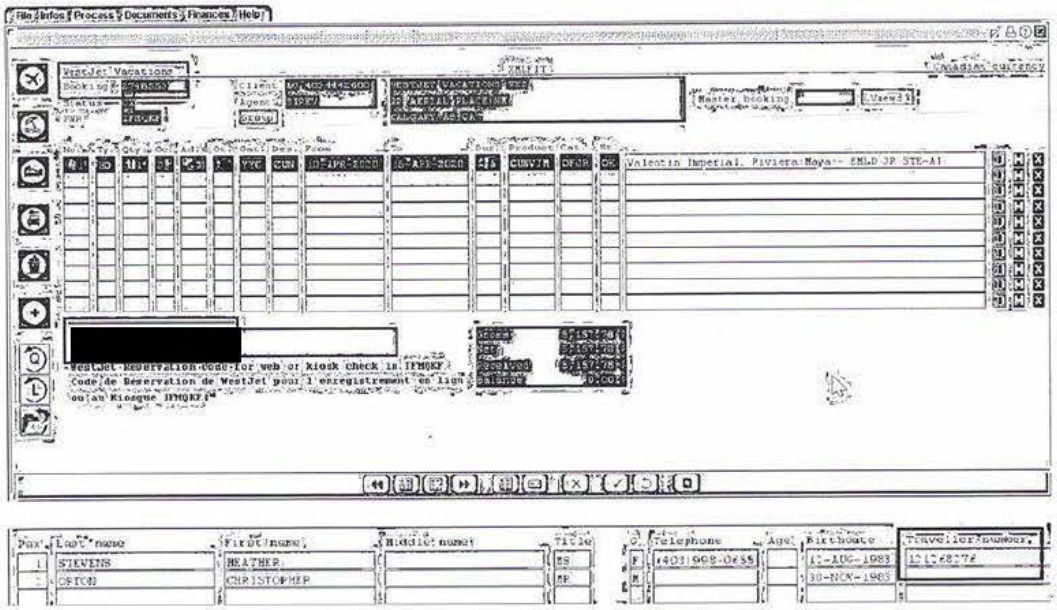
The amount of 5188 WestJet Dollars are now sitting in the customer's profile, 571221254, under the name HEATHER STEVENS. The funds are valid for 24 months.

Case # [redacted]

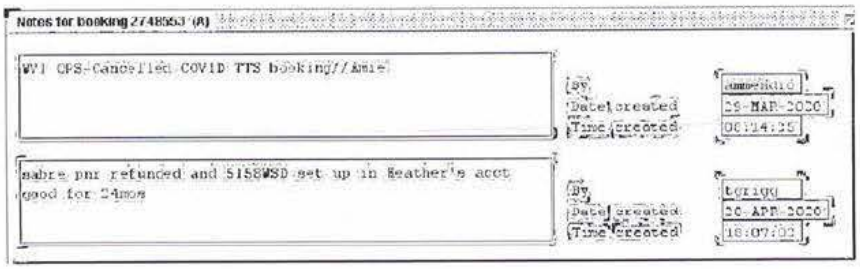
Merchant # 9322289969

COVID-19 FLEXIBLE POLICY APPLIED TO THIS RESERVATION.

This transaction is associated with a WestJet Vacations package for HEATHER STEVENS [redacted] to travel from Calgary to Cancun from April 10 – 15, 2020.



The booking was canceled on March 29, 2020 by the passengers due to the COVID-19 pandemic. On April 20, 2020, the full value of the reservation was credited in the form of WestJet Dollars to the account under the name HEATHER STEVENS.



Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, WestJet Vacations implemented a flexible change and cancel policy for existing bookings.

This is Exhibit "132" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amex Bank of Canada
PO Box 3204 STN F
Toronto, Ontario,
M1W 3W7, Canada
Tel: 1 800 869 3016
Fax: 1 888 843 9523
Web: americanexpress.ca
May 27, 2020

000581

TIM WILLMS
[redacted]

Reference Number: [redacted]
Transaction Amount: CAD 1510.00

Merchant Name: SUNWING VACATIONS ETOBICOKE
Transaction Date: February 21, 2020

Dear TIM WILLMS,

We?re writing in regard to your inquiry about the CAD 1,510.00 charge from SUNWING VACATIONS ETOBICOKE.

We suggest you work directly with the merchant to resolve this matter. Please bear in mind that American Express acts solely as a billing agent and only the merchant is able to issue a credit to your account.

It is worth noting that the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has stated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. However, if you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, the CTA has indicated that you can file a complaint with them directly, and they will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff on a case-by-case basis in due course.

We value your membership and hope you understand our position in this matter.

Thank you for your Cardmembership.

Yours sincerely,

American Express Customer Care

This is Exhibit "133" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amex Bank of Canada
PO Box 3204 STN F
Toronto, Ontario,
M1W 3W7, Canada
Tel: 1 800 869 3016
Fax: 1 888 843 9523
Web: americanexpress.ca
May 28, 2020

000015

CARLA R PARADISI
[redacted]

Reference Number: [redacted]

Transaction Amount: CAD 524.51

Merchant Name: WESTJET AIRLINES 410000 CAMBRIDGE BAY
Transaction Date: January 13, 2020

Dear CARLA R PARADISI,

We are writing to you with important information about the inquiry you previously filed with us from WESTJET AIRLINES 410000 CAMBRIDGE BAY for CAD 524.51.

When we contacted you on April 28, 2020 we informed you that a CAD 524.51 credit had been applied to your May 2020 statement as ?Credit for disputed charge?.

The merchant has sent us a copy of the documentation, which we have enclosed for your reference. This documentation appears to support that the transaction was valid. Please be advised as per the merchant policy presented by the merchant in the enclosed documentation, on page 1, indicates value of the cancelled flights will be returned as a credit to your Travel Bank, valid for 24 months from the date of issue. As a result, previously issued credit has been reversed. You will see this adjustment reflected on your next billing statement.

It is worth noting that the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has stated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. However, if you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, the CTA has indicated that you can file a complaint with them directly, and they will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff on a case-by-case basis in due course

Thank you for your Cardmembership.

Yours sincerely,

American Express Customer Care

000000015 /SEL/

This is Exhibit "134" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amex Bank of Canada
PO Box 3204 STN F
Toronto, Ontario,
M1W 3W7, Canada
Tel: 1 800 869 3016
Fax: 1 888 843 9523
Web: americanexpress.ca
June 21, 2020

000593

KELSEY PRUSE
[redacted]

Reference Number: D-[redacted]

Merchant Name: Air Canada VOYAGES A LA Saint Laurent

Transaction Amount: CAD 725.84

Transaction Date: February 11, 2020

Dear KELSEY PRUSE,

We are writing to you with important information about the inquiry you previously filed with us from Air Canada VOYAGES A LA Saint Laurent for CAD 725.84.

When we contacted you on May 16, 2020 we informed you that a CAD 725.84 credit had been applied to your May 2020 statement as ?Credit for disputed charge?.

The merchant has sent us a copy of the documentation, which we have enclosed for your reference. This documentation appears to support that the transaction was valid.Please be advised as per the merchant policy presented by the merchant in the enclosed documentation, on page 01, indicates that Air Canada is offering a full value credit for future travel with a one time change fee waiver. As a result, previously issued credit has been reversed. You will see this adjustment reflected on your next billing statement.

It is worth noting that the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has stated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. However, if you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, the CTA has indicated that you can file a complaint with them directly, and they will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff on a case-by-case basis in due course

Thank you for your Cardmembership.

Yours sincerely,

American Express Customer Care

P000000593-C000000593-1-AMP / 1311 /

This is Exhibit "135" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Amex Bank of Canada
PO Box 3204 STN F
Toronto, Ontario,
M1W 3W7, Canada
Tel: 1 800 869 3016
Fax: 1 888 843 9523
Web: americanexpress.ca
June 26, 2020

000507

NUO LI

Reference Number: I[redacted]
Transaction Amount: CAD 888.00

Merchant Name: Air Canada TEH CANADA Toronto
Transaction Date: January 9, 2020

Dear NUO LI,

We are writing to you with important information about the inquiry you previously filed with us from Air Canada TEH CANADA Toronto for CAD 888.00.

When we contacted you on June 4, 2020 we informed you that a CAD 888.00 credit had been applied to your upcoming statement as ?Credit for disputed charge?.

The merchant has sent us a copy of the documentation, which we have enclosed for your reference. This documentation appears to support that the transaction was valid. Please be advised as per the merchant policy presented by the merchant in the enclosed documentation, on page 02, indicates that Air Canada is offering a full value credit for future travel with a one time change fee waiver. As a result, previously issued credit has been reversed. You will see this adjustment reflected on your next billing statement.

It is worth noting that the Canadian Transportation Agency (CTA) has stated that, generally speaking, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. However, if you think you are entitled to a refund and the airline refuses to provide one or offers a voucher with conditions you don't want to accept, the CTA has indicated that you can file a complaint with them directly, and they will determine if the airline complied with the terms of its tariff on a case-by-case basis in due course

Thank you for your Cardmembership.

Yours sincerely,

American Express Customer Care

This is Exhibit "136" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Questions about travel plans and COVID-19?

Last updated: March 16, 2020

We've been getting questions from consumers and licensed travel agents about the Coronavirus (COVID-19) and travel bookings that were previously made. We understand that the situation is evolving. This information is intended to help you make informed decisions for you, your family, your customers, and your business.

The Government of Canada advises that any non-essential travel outside of Canada be avoided until further notice. Read their advisory.

For our licensed travel agents & wholesalers

Offering a refund to your customers for booked travel is your decision and must follow your business refund policy. Remember that your refund policy should be clear to your customers when booking travel.

Be informed about what BC's Travel Assurance fund covers. The Fund does not apply:

- If travel bookings are cancelled voluntarily
- During a natural disaster or a "force majeure", which is an unforeseeable circumstance that prevents someone from fulfilling a contract. COVID-19 is considered a "force majeure".

Find out more about the Travel Assurance Fund

Is your business being financially impacted?

If you believe that your business is being financially impacted and is at risk of ceasing operations, please contact us so that we can anticipate any possible impact on your clients.

If you are thinking of not renewing your travel licence with us, understand that:

- You are not allowed to operate in BC without a licence.
- You and your customers may not be eligible to claim against the Travel Assurance Fund
- You would pay more for a new licence and you would need to contribute to the Travel Assurance Fund again.

Advice for your customers if their travel has been cancelled by another supplier.

If your customers have been impacted by a cancellation made by a third party, you can offer these suggestions:

- Ask about the options: many airlines and wholesalers are offering options for re-booking. While your customers may not receive the travel services on the desired date, they may be able to rebook travel services on another date or possibly receive a refund. Be aware that in some cases, they may be required to pay the difference between the original booking and the new booking.
- Confirm cancellation rights: If travel services resume but your client still wishes wish to cancel, refer to the travel service provider's terms and conditions on cancellation.
- Review the Itinerary: While many people may remember to check flights, remind them to contact any accommodation providers and tours that may have been booked to find out cancellation rights and responsibilities.
- Understand the travel insurance policy: If travel insurance was purchased, your customer should contact their insurance provider to find out their policy on cancellation due to COVID-19.
- Check with the credit card provider: If your customer's travel services are not provided and services were paid for by credit card, the credit card company may provide a refund for the travel services that were not provided.

For travelers

We understand that this is a confusing time and you may find yourself faced with a variety of decisions related to your travel bookings.

Cancelling your travel?

- While many airlines are offering cancellation options, understand that if you are voluntarily cancelling your travel bookings, you may not get your money back.
- Read the terms and conditions on your travel insurance carefully to understand your cancellation rights. Several insurance providers have said that they will no longer cover new customers who need to cancel their trips due to COVID-19 as it is now a “known issue”.

- BC’s Travel Assurance Fund does not cover voluntary cancellation or a force majeure (such as a natural disaster or a situation like COVID-19). Find out more about the Travel Assurance Fund.
- Contact your licensed travel agent to explore your options.

Have your travel plans been cancelled?

- Some airlines and wholesalers are offering options for re-booking. While you may not receive the travel services on the desired date; you may be able to re-book travel services on another date or maybe even get a partial refund.
- Contact your travel service provider to find out their policy on cancellations and re-booking. Be aware that in some cases, you may be required to pay the difference between the original booking and the new booking or a cancellation fee.
- While you may remember to check your flights, don’t forget to contact your accommodation providers and any tours you may have booked to find out your cancellation rights and responsibilities.
- If you booked with a licensed travel agent, contact your booking agent for assistance. They will be able to help you with your options for re-booking.
- If travel services are not provided and you paid by credit card, check with your credit card company to see if they will provide a refund for the travel services that were not provided.

Whenever you are booking travel, always book with a licensed travel agent or wholesaler. If you aren’t sure if a business is licensed, check with us.

Check a licence.

We continue to monitor the situation and will share relevant information with you as quickly as we can.

Get reliable information about COVID-19

Reliable sources for information about COVID-19, including practical guidance about travel, preventing the contraction and spread of the virus, are:

- World Health Organization
- BC Centre for Disease Control
- Government of Canada outbreak update
- Government of Canada travel advice and general advisories

This is Exhibit "137" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

Information for consumers: travel vouchers and refunds

Last updated: May 25, 2020

We continue to get questions about consumer transactions in the time of COVID-19 including travel bookings and other types of businesses offering vouchers for future goods or services.

Many travel plans and other services have been disrupted over the last few months. When trying to resolve an issue, we encourage you to always start by contacting the business – in the case of travel, talk to your licensed travel agent, travel service provider or airline to find out what your options are. Please read all the fine print to fully understand the implications with any consumer contract.

The following information is focused on travel-related bookings, but the rules apply to any business offering vouchers, credits or gift cards, or anyone who has purchased a good or service online or by phone. Please note that these rules apply to not only to BC-based businesses and but also to any business dealing with a BC consumer.

Vouchers & credits

It's our understanding that many businesses are offering vouchers to accommodate their customers. Consumer protection laws do not address whether vouchers or credits are an appropriate method of refund. A business can offer you the option of a voucher and in most cases, it's your choice whether to accept it or not.

Vouchers and expiry dates

What to do if your voucher expires but it shouldn't

Read the Business Practices and Consumer Protection Act.
Read about the gift card/voucher rules in BC's Prepaid Purchase Card Regulation.

Trying to get a refund

If you wish to pursue a refund instead of a voucher, keep trying to get a refund directly from the business. If that doesn't work, there are some other options to consider.

Request a credit card chargeback

If your travel dates have passed and the business did not provide the service (as opposed to you choosing not to go) or if you have been informed by the business that your future travel has been cancelled, and you paid by credit card, check with your credit card company to request that the charges on the card be cancelled/reversed. If you are denied by your credit card company, you will need to go to the Civil Resolution Tribunal or court (depending on the dollar amount) to seek compensation from the business.

Did you book online or over the phone?

If you booked your travel online or by phone and didn't get your services (as opposed to you choosing not to go), you can cancel your contract under BC's distance sales contracts provisions and be entitled to a refund from the business or chargeback from the credit card company. There are several steps to this process, waiting periods, and the remedy only kicks in 30 days after you don't get the service you bought (which means the date that you were supposed to travel). To understand and follow the process, visit the "Problem with an online purchase" page on our website, and follow these steps:

- Step 1: Read the section called "My product never arrived" and follow the instructions using the cancellation form. If the business doesn't respond to issue you a refund within 15 days, go to step 2.
- Step 2: Read the section called "I tried to cancel but didn't get a refund" and follow those instructions to obtain a reversal or cancellation of the charges from your credit card provider.
- Step 3: If the business and the credit card company both fail to provide you a refund, contact us to file a complaint. (Please follow all the steps above first.)

Remember that these options apply to any transaction done over the phone or online, it is not limited to travel bookings.

Read about distance sales in the Business Practices and Consumer Protection Act.

Non-essential travel is still to be avoided. Stay up to date on travel advice from the Government of Canada:

- Government of Canada's travel advisories
- Coronavirus disease (COVID-19): Travel restrictions, exemptions and advice

When booking travel, always book with a licensed travel agent or wholesaler. If you aren't sure if a business is licensed, check with us.

Check a licence.

We will continue to monitor the situation and will share relevant information with you as quickly as we can.

This is Exhibit "138" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

FAQ: Refunds for cancelled travel services

Posted in COVID-19, Travel on 2021-04-30 by Amanda :: Add a new comment

Looking for a refund for travel services that were cancelled by your airline, cruise line or other travel provider? Here are some of the most common questions we get on this topic along with our answers.

What you need to know

After over a year of cancelled travel plans, many consumers have had issues getting refunds from travel suppliers. As a BC regulator, one of the laws we oversee gives you cancellation and refund rights when you don't receive the services you paid for online or over the phone. If you're eligible, you may be owed a refund under BC law.

There's a lot to know, and a number of steps to follow to get your refund, so we recommend you start by reading this page: COVID-19 and refunds for cancelled travel.

Read it carefully, as it has detailed information about eligibility, what forms to use, and the steps needed to request a refund properly. Please be aware that the laws we oversee when it comes to these transactions are very specific and not everyone will be eligible to go through the process for a refund.

Still have questions? Here are some answers.

Frequently asked questions

Q: What if I cancelled my travel plans myself?
A: If you cancelled the travel plans yourself, you are not eligible to go through our refund process. If your travel service was available to you, but you decided not to go, the cancellation and refund laws we oversee do not apply. In these cases, we would suggest you try and reach a solution with the business based on what their cancellation policy allows.

Q: What if I cancelled my travel plans because of the Government travel restrictions?
A: You are not eligible to go through our process for a refund if the travel service was available to you and you decided not to travel – even if it was because of COVID-19 travel restrictions. In these cases, you are bound to the cancellation policy you signed when you booked the travel. Review the cancellation policy to find out what the terms and conditions of your contract allow.

Q: The travel provider I booked with is not based in BC. Do they have to follow these rules?
A: If businesses are doing business with people who live in BC, they must follow the laws in our province. If you live in BC, you can follow our process for a refund, assuming you meet the other eligibility requirements.

Q: What if I don't live in BC?
A: If you don't live in BC but booked your travel with a BC-based travel provider, they are required to follow the laws of this province. You can follow our process for a refund, assuming you meet the other eligibility requirements.

Q: The travel supplier (airline, hotel, cruise, etc.) has given me a voucher. Does that count as a refund?
A: No. If you are eligible for a refund under our laws, you must be refunded in the same way you paid. A voucher is not an appropriate refund method unless that is what you would prefer or if you have clearly consented to accepting a voucher.

Here are some examples where a voucher is permissible, meaning you would not be eligible to go through our refund process: The travel supplier had a promotion or incentive of some kind to take a voucher and you agreed to it. Or you and the travel supplier agreed over email that a voucher was an acceptable resolution.

But if the supplier cancelled the travel service, and simply gave you a voucher or informed you that you were being given a voucher (without you agreeing to it), that is not consent and you may be eligible to follow our refund process.

Q: If I am owed a refund by the business, do I get all the fees back too?
A: Yes, if you are eligible, you should get a full refund. This includes all fees, charges, taxes and interest that may have been charged.

Q: The travel provider says that their policy does not allow for refunds/full refunds. Can they refuse me a full refund?
A: If you are eligible for a refund under the distance sales law, it does not matter what the business's refund/cancellation policy is – you should still receive a full refund.

Q: My travel agent is keeping their commission/charging me a fee for cancellation. Is this allowed?
A: No. If you are eligible for a refund and followed the proper steps, your travel agent is required to provide a full refund to you. They cannot withhold their commissions or charge you fees. If they are not following the rules around this, you can submit a complaint to our office.

Q: The travel provider offered me different dates in place of the original travel plans (such as a different flight), but that won't work for me. Can I get a refund?
A: If the business offered alternate dates within 30 days of the original travel, they are considered to have provided the service according to the law (even if that timeline does not work for you). The contract is still fulfilled, and you would have no ability to exercise cancellation and refunds rights under our laws.

Going through our refund process

The process includes three parts, officially cancelling your contract with the suppliers, if that doesn't work then you try to get a reversal of charges from your credit card provider, and if you are still unsuccessful, you can submit a complaint to us.

Q: I've already tried to get my money back from the business – do I have to go through the whole process again by using your forms?
A: Yes – to go through our process for a refund, you must follow all the steps on our website. We recommend you use our official forms, even if you've already tried to get your money back from the business. This is because what you send to the business/credit card provider needs to include very specific information to be legal and our forms make sure that all that is covered. This gives you the best chance at getting a refund.

Q: I booked my travel plans through a booking platform/travel agency. Who should I cancel my contract with– the booking platform/travel agency OR the airline/hotel/business providing the travel services?
A: To cover your bases, we suggest sending our contract cancellation form to both suppliers. If you get to the stage where you need to submit a complaint to our office, when we ask for the name of the supplier, use the airline/cruise line/hotel (the business that was ultimately providing the services).

Q: How long will this process take?
A: The refund process has several steps and each one has required waiting times. This means that getting your refund this way can take months. If your travel supplier has a new refund process in place, like Air Canada, we suggest you try that first before coming to us.

Starting the process for a refund

Do you think you're eligible for a refund for cancelled travel plans? Learn more and start the refund process.

Other resources on this topic

COVID-19 and travel refunds

About Consumer Protection BC

We are responsible for regulating specific industries and certain consumer transactions in British Columbia. If your concern is captured under the laws we enforce, we will use the tools at our disposal to assist you. If we can't help you directly, we will be happy to provide you with as much information as possible. Depending on your concern, another organization may be the ones to speak to; other times, court or legal assistance may be the best option. Explore our website at www.consumerprotectionbc.ca.

Leave a Reply

Your email address will not be published. Required fields are marked *

Comment

Name *

Email *

Save my name, email, and website in this browser for the next time I comment.

Post Comment

Could not connect to the reCAPTCHA service. Please check your internet connection and reload to get a reCAPTCHA challenge.

This is Exhibit "139" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

OBSI OMBUDSMAN FOR BANKING SERVICES AND INVESTMENTS

Consumer pursues credit card refund for vacation cancelled due to COVID-19

Show More

Posted Tuesday, January 11, 2022

Back to Search

Key lessons

- Whenever you buy goods and services, especially for future delivery, be sure to pay careful attention to the terms and conditions of the purchase. Return and refund policies vary, so before you agree to buy, it's important to understand what you will be entitled to if the goods are damaged, or the services are cancelled.
- Many provinces have specific consumer protection laws to protect consumers against improper business practices and give them certain rights when they purchase goods and services with a credit card. These laws set out very specific rules and timelines that need to be met for their protections to apply.

Consumer seeks refund when travel plans are cancelled

In early 2020, Ms. Z booked an all-inclusive family vacation for the upcoming March Break through her travel agency. She paid the travel agency $5,600 using her credit card. A week before Ms. Z's departure, the travel agency cancelled her trip due to the COVID-19 lockdown that began in mid March.

Ms. Z thought she would get a refund for the cancelled vacation. Instead, the travel agency offered her a voucher for future travel. Shortly afterwards, she contacted them to request a full refund on her credit card. When the travel agency refused, she contacted her bank to dispute the charge. The bank agreed to process a temporary chargeback for the full amount on Ms. Z's credit card while they investigated.

During the bank's investigation, the travel agency said that it refused Ms. Z's request because its agreement with the bank stated that consumers did not have dispute rights when their vacations were cancelled due to a government regulation. Additionally, the travel agency said their refund policy permitted them to provide travel credit for the value of a cancelled vacation.

Bank declines consumer's chargeback request

After speaking to Ms. Z's travel agency, the bank declined to refund the charge for Ms. Z's vacation and reversed the temporary chargeback it had processed earlier. The full amount of the charge for Ms. Z's vacation was rebilled to her credit card account.

Ms. Z was concerned that her consumer rights had not been respected. She consulted her local consumer protection office about her situation and requested more information about the protections in place for credit card users in her province. Based on the guidance she received, Ms. Z followed the steps required to request a reversal of the charges under her province's consumer protection law. These steps included sending formal requests to the travel agency and the bank containing specific information within specific time limits.

The bank again declined to reverse the credit card charges, maintaining that Ms. Z was responsible for the transaction because she had authorized it and agreed to its terms and conditions.

Dissatisfied with the bank's response, Ms. Z contacted OBSI for help.

Our findings

During our investigation, we interviewed Ms. Z and reviewed the details of the bank's investigation that led to its decision not to process the chargeback for her vacation. We found that the bank had appropriately applied its own policies and procedures and the rules for credit card chargebacks. However, when we reviewed the applicable consumer protection laws, we found that Ms. Z had complied with all the requirements and timelines for the charge to be cancelled or reversed under her provincial consumer protection law. As a result, we recommended that the bank process a refund for Ms. Z's vacation along with any associated interest.

The outcome

The bank agreed with our recommendation because it could confirm that Ms. Z had followed all the required steps when she initially requested a charge reversal under her provincial consumer protection law. The bank offered to cancel the $5,600 charge on Ms. Z's credit card, plus any interest accrued. Ms. Z accepted the bank's offer.

Toll-Free Telephone: 1 (888) 451-4519
Greater Toronto Area: (416) 287-2877
TTY Telephone: 1 (844) 358-3442

Toll-Free Fax: 1 (888) 422-2865
Greater Toronto Area Fax: (416) 225-4722

This is Exhibit "140" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

HOUSE OF COMMONS
CHAMBRE DES COMMUNES
CANADA

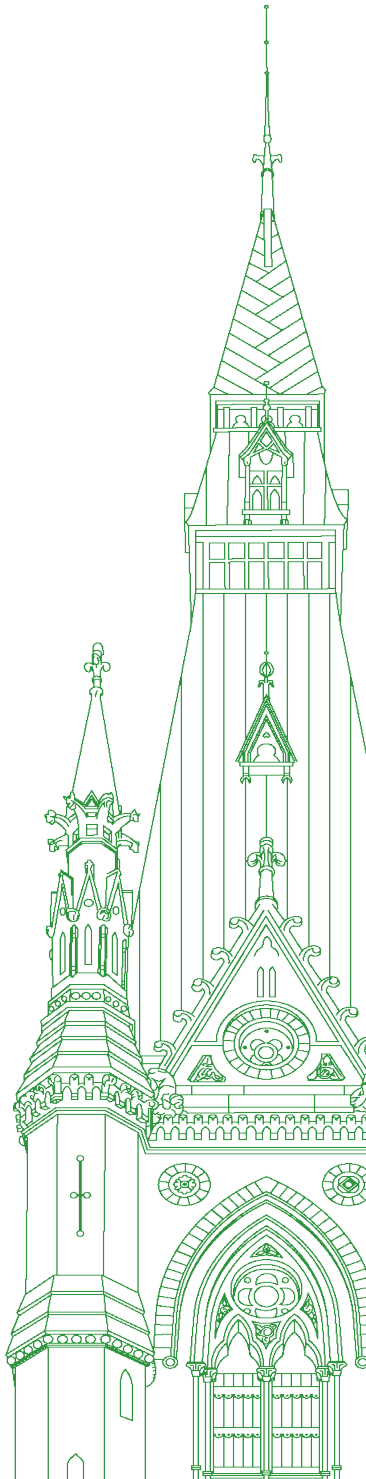
43rd PARLIAMENT, 1st SESSION

Special Committee on the COVID-19 Pandemic

EVIDENCE

NUMBER 013

Thursday, May 28, 2020



Chair: The Honourable Anthony Rota

At the beginning of the crisis, the government called on entrepreneurs in Quebec and Canada, inviting them to set an example in the situation we are experiencing. Many of them turned to the supplemental unemployment benefit (SUB) plan to maintain the employment relationship and to preserve some security, enabling their employees to get through this difficult period with more peace of mind.

However, on May 22, despite the fact that these entrepreneurs had made sure that the SUB program would still be in place when the CERB was introduced, they were surprised. Employees were told at that time that they would have to repay the CERB because of the alleged gains they had made under the SUB program. At SOPREMA, one of the large employers in the Drummondville region, 150 employees are affected. At Bridgestone, in Joliette, 1,100 employees are affected by this decision. At Goodyear, in Valleyfield, 150 employees are affected, and there are dozens more.

Does the minister intend to correct this mistake so that employers who are able and willing to do so can treat their employees better during this difficult period?

● (1315)

[English]

Hon. Carla Qualtrough: When we put in place the Canada emergency response benefit, the underlying goal was to make sure that every worker who needed it had access to income support as they were losing their employment for COVID reasons. We understood that meant some workers would not have access moving forward, although let me clarify that SUB plans that existed prior to March 15 are definitely in place. We consider the fact that workers have access to $1,000 a month in addition to CERB—and we've spoken with employers about this—to permit employers to assist their employees in an equitable way.

[Translation]

The Chair: Mr. Champoux, you have 15 seconds for your question.

Mr. Martin Champoux: Mr. Chair, employers received absolutely no news from the government before this measure was implemented, despite the fact that they were assured that this measure would be transferred to the CERB. That's not an answer when those folks acted honestly and in good faith. They feel cheated, and rightly so.

Does the government intend to fix this mistake, which would simply be the right thing to do?

[English]

Hon. Carla Qualtrough: Mr. Chair, I can assure the member opposite that the SUB plans that were in place prior to March 15 are indeed in place now. In addition, employees who are now on the CERB as an alternative have access to $1,000 of income in addition to their CERB. We are working with employers to perhaps provide the $1,000 in lieu of the SUB plans.

[Translation]

The Chair: We will continue with you, Mr. Barsalou-Duval.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval (Pierre-Boucher—Les Patriotes—Verchères, BQ): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

On April 27, Option consommateurs sent a letter to the Minister of Transport to warn him that the airlines' refusal to reimburse their customers for cancelled flights was contrary to Quebec's laws.

What is the minister going to do to put an end to this situation?

Hon. Marc Garneau (Minister of Transport): Mr. Chair, I sympathize with the people who would have preferred to get a refund, and I understand their frustration. It is not an ideal situation. The airlines are going through a very difficult time right now. If they were forced to refund their customers immediately, many of them would go bankrupt.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Chair, the minister sounds like a broken record.

A few hours ago, the following motion was passed unanimously: "THAT the National Assembly ask the Government of Canada to order airlines and other carriers under federal jurisdiction to allow customers whose trips have been cancelled because of the current pandemic to obtain a refund."

What will the Minister of Transport tell the National Assembly of Quebec?

Hon. Marc Garneau: Mr. Chair, as my hon. colleague knows, the Canadian Transportation Agency has ruled on this issue and has ruled that, in the present circumstances and in a non-binding way, it is acceptable for airlines to offer credits for up to two years. In the case of Air Canada, the credit has no expiry date.

The Chair: Mr. Barsalou-Duval, you have about 15 seconds for a question.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Chair, I find it rather odd that the Minister of Transport and the Canadian Transportation Agency are telling the airlines that Quebec's regulations and laws are not important and that they can override them. It seems to me that this is a strange way to operate. Theoretically, under the famous Canadian Constitution, which they imposed on us, that is not how it should work.

Can they uphold their own constitution?

The Chair: The hon. minister can answer in 15 seconds or less, please.

Hon. Marc Garneau: Mr. Chair, as my hon. colleague probably knows, the Canadian Transportation Agency is a quasi-judicial body that operates at arm's length from Transport Canada and the Government of Canada.

The Chair: We will now take a short break.

[English]

We're going to take a short break to allow employees supporting the meeting to switch in safety, including myself.

The Acting Chair (Mr. Bruce Stanton (Simcoe North, CPC)): We will now carry on with Mr. Baker for Etobicoke Centre.

Mr. Baker, go ahead.

This is Exhibit "141" to the Affidavit of Dr. Gábor Lukács

affirmed before me on September 7, 2023

_____

Signature

HOUSE OF COMMONS
CHAMBRE DES COMMUNES
CANADA

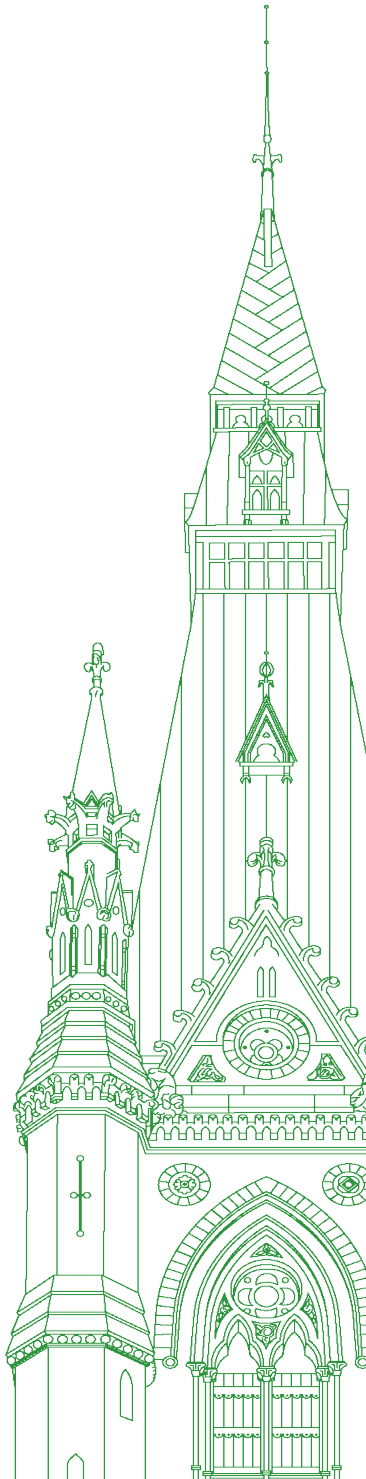
43rd PARLIAMENT, 2nd SESSION

Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

EVIDENCE

NUMBER 008

Tuesday, December 1, 2020



Chair: Mr. Vance Badawey

Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities

Tuesday, December 1, 2020

● (1535)

[English]

The Chair (Mr. Vance Badawey (Niagara Centre, Lib.)): I call this meeting to order. Welcome to Meeting number eight of the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport, Infrastructure and Communities.

Today's meeting is taking place in a hybrid format, pursuant to the House order of September 23. The proceedings will be made available via the House of Commons website. So that you are aware, the webcast will always show the person speaking, rather than the entire committee.

To ensure an orderly meeting, I would like to outline a few rules to follow. Members and witnesses may speak in the official language of their choice. Interpretation services are available for this meeting. You have the choice at the bottom of your screen of either the floor, English or French.

For members participating in person, proceed as you usually would when the whole committee is meeting in person in a committee room. Keep in mind the directives from the Board of Internal Economy regarding masking and health protocols.

Before speaking, please wait until I recognize you by name. If you are on video conference, please click on the microphone icon to unmute yourself. For those in the room, your microphone will be controlled as normal by the proceedings and verification officer. I will remind you that all comments by members and witnesses should be addressed through the chair. When you are not speaking, your mike should be on mute. With regard to a speaking list, the committee clerk and I will do the best we can to maintain the order of speaking for all members, whether they be participating virtually or in person.

Members, pursuant to Standing Order 108(2), the committee is meeting today to begin its study on the impact of COVID-19 on the aviation sector.

Now I would like to welcome our witnesses. Between 3:30 and 4:30, we have from the Canadian Transportation Agency, the CTA, Scott Streiner, chair and chief executive officer; Valérie Lagacé, senior general counsel and secretary; and Marcia Jones, chief strategy officer. From the Department of Transport, we have Lawrence Hanson, assistant deputy minister, policy; Aaron McCrorie, associate assistant deputy minister, safety and security; Nicholas Robinson, director general, civil aviation; Colin Stacey, director general, air policy; Christian Dea, director general, transportation and economic analysis and chief economist. Welcome, all you folks.

With that, I'm going to move to our witnesses. I'm not sure who has been queued to start us off with their five-minute presentation. I'll leave that up to you folks. The floor is yours.

● (1540)

Mr. Lawrence Hanson (Assistant Deputy Minister, Policy, Department of Transport): Thank you, Chair, I will begin.

Honourable members, thank you for the invitation to speak to you about the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the air transport sector in Canada.

My name is Lawrence Hanson, and I'm the ADM of policy at Transport.

Owing to the fact that Canada is a very large country with a widely dispersed population, and has a material number of people for whom the air mode is the only viable source of supply for parts of the year, we rely on air travel more than many other countries.

Canada has built a strong and effective air transport system that connects Canadians to each other and the world. It supports tourism, regional economic development, and an aerospace supply chain that produces aircraft with world-leading environmental performance.

The air sector employs about 108,000 people in Canada. Although the pandemic has had an impact on every sector of the economy, the decline in the air sector has been the most severe, and its recovery is expected to take relatively longer. Eight months into the pandemic, passenger levels are still down almost 90% from the same period last year.

Canada's air system has been traditionally funded by passengers themselves. Currently, however, we have a user-pay system that has almost no users. Consequently, airlines and airports continue to face significant fixed costs with little or no off-setting revenue.

Inevitably, this has led to efforts by key players to either find new revenue or, more likely, cut costs. There have been widespread layoffs, route suspensions and cancellations by airlines. Airports and the non-profit corporation that provides air navigation services, Nav Canada, have raised rates and fees.

Over and above these negative outcomes, Canadians across the country have received vouchers in lieu of refunds for travel cancelled due to the pandemic, and they are understandably angry.

To mitigate the severe impact and instability caused by the pandemic across all sectors, the government has implemented broad-based measures like the Canada emergency wage subsidy. These have been helpful in providing initial stability for air operators.

In addition, in March, the government waived payments for airport authorities that lease airports from the federal government for the remainder of 2020. The government also took action to ensure service to remote communities that rely on air transport for essential goods and services, with funding of up to $174 million announced in August, and a separate program of $17.3 million announced in April for the territories alone.

However, the impacts on the air sector during COVID-19 are without precedent, and service providers are unable to respond to these ongoing challenges on their own. This threatens the ability of Canadians to access reasonable air transport services at a reasonable cost, and these impacts could have important implications for communities, regions and the wider economy. It also threatens the many jobs in air transport and in the industries that rely upon it.

That is why, on November 8, Minister Garneau announced that in order to protect the interests of Canadians, the government is developing an assistance package for Canadian airlines, airports and the aerospace sector. Yesterday's fall economic statement provided additional information regarding rent and infrastructure support that will be provided to airports.

The minister's statement made it clear that support to air carriers would be dependent on securing real outcomes for Canadians, including the provision of refunds in place of vouchers, maintaining regional connectivity, and remaining good customers of the Canadian aerospace industry.

Helping to ensure the economic viability of the sector, and protecting the interests of Canadians is a necessary but not a sufficient condition for the successful restart of the air industry. It will also be important to ensure that air travel remains safe and secure, and addresses the added public health dimension created by the pandemic.

For that and related issues, I will turn to my colleague, the associate assistant deputy minister of safety and security at Transport, Aaron McCrorie.

The Chair: Mr. McCrorie, the floor is yours.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie (Associate Assistant Deputy Minister, Safety and Security, Department of Transport): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Good afternoon. It's a pleasure to be here.

I'm Aaron McCrorie, the associate assistant deputy minister for safety and security at Transport Canada.

Since the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, guided by the latest public health advice, Transport Canada has worked hard to respond quickly to ensure that Canadians remain safe while supporting the ongoing flow of critical goods and services across the country.

To reduce the risk of transmission of COVID throughout the aviation sector, Transport Canada has worked with partner departments, public health authorities, provinces and territories and the transportation industry to implement a system of layered measures, guidance, and requirements to ensure that transportation operations are safe for workers and passengers.

These include health screening measures and temperature checks to prevent symptomatic passengers from boarding flights to, from and within Canada. Workers at the 15 busiest airports in Canada are also subject to temperature checks before entering restricted areas. In addition, passengers on all flights departing or arriving at Canadian airports must have an appropriate mask or face covering when going through security checkpoints, when boarding and deplaning and on board the aircraft. These requirements also apply to some air crew members and airport workers.

The department also issued a notice restricting most overseas flights to landing at four airports in Canada: Montreal-Trudeau, Toronto-Pearson, Calgary, and Vancouver. This was done to support the work of health authorities to conduct medical assessments of symptomatic passengers and to notify passengers of the need to self-isolate for a period of 14 days. Transport Canada acted quickly to protect Canadians and air travel passengers to reduce the risk of transmission on an aircraft and the risk of importation. Making sure air travel is safe is a key factor in supporting the recovery of the air sector.

On August 14, Transport Canada released “Canada's Flight Plan for Navigating COVID-19”. This document is the foundation for aligning Canada's current and future efforts to address the safety impacts of COVID-19 on the aviation sector and was developed in close collaboration with industry partners. It demonstrates to Canadians the extensive and multi-layered system of measures that have been implemented to support public health, including temperature checks, health checks and face coverings as well as measures implemented by industry such as increased cleaning and disinfecting protocols, enhanced air conditioning and filtration systems and new protocols to encourage physical distancing.

Canada's flight plan is based on the comprehensive standards and recommendations from the International Civil Aviation Organization's Council Aviation Recovery Task Force, or CART, in order to ensure that Canada is aligned with the gold standard of international best practices. This document will be refined as we continue to learn more about COVID-19 and as guidance and public health measures evolve at the local, provincial, national and international levels.

Preventing the spread of the pandemic has been and remains the top priority of the government. The various regulatory requirements that were put in place will likely remain for the foreseeable future; however, there is room for adjustment to support the restart of the air sector. Transport Canada will actively assess orders that have been issued to see what can be done and will be consulting with industry on possible amendments as we move forward.

The department is also working closely with other federal departments to explore risk-based opportunities that will allow Canada to ease travel restrictions and reopen our borders. This includes implementing a sustainable approach to reducing public health risks today and building resilience to safeguard the system against similar risks in the future. For example, by leveraging opportunities for safe, contactless processing of passengers, these approaches will help rebuild public confidence in the safety of air travel.

Health Canada and the Public Health Agency of Canada, working with other key federal departments such as Global Affairs Canada, Transport Canada and the Canadian Border Services Agency, are responsible for making decisions related to the lifting of travel and quarantine restrictions. Presently, testing pilot projects are under way or in development across Canada to establish a good base of evidence for possible reduction of quarantine requirements. For example, Air Canada and the Greater Toronto Airports Authority, in partnership with McMaster University, launched a testing project in September focused on testing passengers arriving in Canada.

The Public Health Agency of Canada, in partnership with the Province of Alberta, launched a testing project in November for passengers and workers arriving by land at Coutts border crossing and by air at the Calgary International Airport.

● (1545)

The Chair: You have one minute, Mr. McCrorie.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

It's clear that ensuring a healthy and safe transportation sector is essential for reopening borders, restarting the tourism industry, and for the safety and security of Canadians at large. Transportation will play a vital role in supporting the country's economic recovery. Continued collaboration and shared insights are crucial in overcoming the challenges this pandemic has brought to the air sector. That is why the department will continue its important engagement with stakeholders and other partners as we work to address challenges faced by the air sector in Canada today and to ensure that we have a strong industry into the future.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. McCrorie, and thank you, Mr. Hanson.

Do we have other witnesses who wish to speak? Is anybody speaking from the CTA?

Mr. Streiner, the floor is yours for five minutes.

You are on mute, Mr. Streiner.

● (1550)

Mr. Scott Streiner (Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Canadian Transportation Agency): Okay: Can you hear me now?

The Chair: You're good to go.

Mr. Scott Streiner: All right. This is our lives now, eh? We have to overcome all these technical issues.

I will start again. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner.

[Translation]

Mr. Scott Streiner: I want to thank the committee for inviting my colleagues and me to appear today.

We're living through an unusual and difficult time. I hope all of you and your loved ones have remained healthy and safe over the last nine months. While we have our respective roles to play, we are, first and foremost, fellow citizens.

I have the privilege to lead the Canadian Transportation Agency. The CTA was established in 1904 and is Canada's second-largest independent, quasi-judicial tribunal and regulator.

[English]

At no time in the century since the dawn of commercial aviation have airlines and their customers gone through the sorts of events we have witnessed since mid-March. Canadian airlines carried 85% fewer passengers between March and September 2020 than during the same period in 2019. Such a collapse in volumes is without precedent.

Through this turmoil, the Canadian Transportation Agency has worked to protect air passengers. Despite the fact that almost every CTA employee has worked from home since the pandemic struck, the 300 dedicated public servants who make up the organization have spared no effort to continue providing services to Canadians.

Immediately after the crisis began, we updated our website with key information for travellers so that those scrambling to get home would know their rights. We temporarily paused adjudications involving airlines to give them the ability to focus on repatriating the Canadians stranded abroad. We took steps to ensure that no Canadian who bought a non-refundable ticket would be left out-of-pocket for the value of their cancelled flights. We worked around the clock to process and issue the air licences and permits required for emergency repatriation flights and cargo flights to bring urgently needed PPE to Canada.

In the subsequent months, we invested substantial resources and long hours to deal with the unprecedented tsunami of complaints filed since 2019. Between the full coming into force on December 15, 2019, of the air passenger protection regulations, the APPR, and the start of the pandemic three months later, the CTA received around 11,000 complaints—a record. Since then we've received another 11,000.

[Translation]

To put these numbers in perspective, in all of 2015, just 800 complaints were submitted. In other words, we've been getting more complaints every two to four weeks than we used to get in a year.

We've already processed 6,000 complaints since the pandemic reached Canada. By early 2021, we'll start processing complaints filed during the pandemic, including those related to the contentious issue of refunds. If the recently announced negotiations between the government and airlines result in the payment of refunds to some passengers, a portion of those complaints may be quickly resolved.

[English]

On the topic of refunds, it's important to understand that the reason the air passenger protection regulations don't include a general obligation for airlines to pay refunds when flights are cancelled for reasons outside their control is that the legislation only allows the regulations to require that airlines ensure that passengers can complete their itineraries. As a result, the APPR's refund obligation applies exclusively to flight cancellations within airlines' control.

No one realized at the time how important this gap was. No one foresaw mass, worldwide flight cancellations that would leave passengers seeking refunds frustrated; airlines facing major liquidity issues; and tens of thousands of airline employees without jobs.

Because the statutory framework does not include a general obligation around refunds for flight cancellations beyond airlines' control, any passenger entitlements in this regard depend on the wording of each airline's applicable tariff. Every refund complaint will be examined on its merits, taking the relevant tariff language into account.

● (1555)

The Chair: You have one minute, Mr. Streiner.

Mr. Scott Streiner: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The APPR rules are among the strongest air passenger protection rules in the world. They cover a wider range of passenger concerns than any other regime, but we now know that the gap highlighted by the pandemic is significant. If and when the CTA is given the authority to fix that gap, we'll act quickly.

Just before wrapping up, Mr. Chair, I'd like to mention one more area where the CTA has been active: accessibility.

Since the groundbreaking accessible transportation regulations came into effect last June, we've been providing guidance to Canadians with disabilities and to industry to ensure that these new rules are well understood and respected, and we've continued to play a leading role in encouraging the aviation sector in Canada and around the world to integrate accessibility into the rebuilding process. Persons with disabilities should not be left behind as air travel gradually recovers.

Let me conclude, Mr. Chair, by noting that because of the CTA's independent status and the quasi-judicial nature of our adjudications, it would not be appropriate for me to comment on government policy or on any matters that are currently before the CTA, but within those limits, my colleagues and I would be happy to respond to any questions the committee may have.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner, and to all our witnesses, thank you.

Are there any more witnesses who would like to speak? I see none.

We're now going to our first round of members' questions for six minutes, starting off with the Conservative Party and Ms. Kusie, followed by the Liberal Party and Mr. Rogers, and then the Bloc Québécois, with Mr. Barsalou-Duval, and the New Democratic Party, with Mr. Taylor Bachrach.

Ms. Kusie, you have six minutes. The floor is yours.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie (Calgary Midnapore, CPC): Thank you, Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to have these witnesses before us today.

Thank you very much for being here.

I'm going to start by going back to Mr. McCrorie's comments regarding rapid testing.

As he mentioned, there's currently a pilot project going on in my hometown of Calgary, in my home province of Alberta, a project in YYC and Alberta that we are very proud of. What it allows individuals to do, of course is to take the COVID test upon arrival and, if they receive a negative test, to reduce their quarantine going forward.

I'm wondering if I can get some information as to how long it took Transport Canada, as well as other various governmental departments, to get this pilot project under way.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Thank you for the question, Mr. Chair.

When it comes to the pilot projects, the testing projects, we've been playing a supporting role. I hate to defer the question, but I think for you to get a sense of the timelines and the level of effort to get it launched, you'd probably be better off asking our colleagues from the Public Health Agency of Canada and Health Canada, who are joining you, I believe, after this session. They were the leads in terms of putting the pilot in place.

I can say that Transport has played a supporting role over the last several months, in particular in working as a liaison between PHAC and Health Canada and the airport authority and the airlines involved and helping to facilitate those relationships. The actual implementation of the test and the design of it fell to our colleagues in the Health portfolio.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: Okay. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

Can you confirm, though, that you are in the process of implementing this at other airports across the country?

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Again, when it comes to the implementation of the pilots themselves, typically it's going to be Health Canada and PHAC that are the leads, but there are other pilot projects that are being contemplated. The Vancouver airport is contemplating a pilot project, for example, and I believe Montreal is. There is a series of pilot projects that are being contemplated, and we're doing our best to support them.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: Okay. I'm going to go, then, to the announcement yesterday in the fall economic statement, which said:

> To further assist airports to manage the financial implications of reduced air travel, the government proposes to provide $65 million in additional financial support to airport authorities in 2021-22.

Would you, Mr. McCrorie or Mr. Hansen, be able to provide any further information as to how these funds will be distributed and when they'll be distributed, and again, as you mentioned briefly, I believe, in the opening, the conditions tied to the money?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: Thank you very much, Chair.

With regard to the FES announcement yesterday, I'm not really in a position to give any additional details beyond what the Minister of Finance laid out yesterday. I would note that the conditional points really related more to a potential agreement and support for airlines, as opposed to yesterday's funding, which was more exclusively directed toward airports.

● (1600)

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: Okay. I appreciate that.

Of course, I'm sure you saw across the media that there was widespread disappointment from the airline sector. It certainly fell significantly short of the October 1 ask of $7 billion.

I was wondering if the government had conducted a comparative analysis of how Canada could support the sector compared with other nations and, if so, what it concluded. Are there supports for the airline sector that we've seen in other nations compared with what was offered to the Canadian airline sector yesterday?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: Thank you, Chair.

Certainly, we have looked at what other countries have done. The comparisons are different, of course, because sometimes it's in support for individuals versus support for carriers. Some countries have taken equity positions in carriers. We have done those comparisons. It's not always easy to get to an apples to apples comparison.

When it comes to a final comparison with what's done in the airline sector, obviously it will ultimately be dependent on what the eventual terms of an agreement with the air carriers looks like.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: Would you be able to table your research and the conclusion up to this point of what has been evaluated versus what was offered yesterday and versus what will be offered in the future?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: Chair, we would be happy to provide information on what we have learned about other countries' supports. To be candid, we have compiled information that is quite largely publicly available.

Obviously, we can't speculate on what future support might look like here in Canada.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: Thank you, Chair.

Mr. Streiner, the APPR gives airlines 30 days to respond to customer complaints. Why can't your own agency meet that standard?

You have said today you have a backlog. Why do you think any Canadian, or anyone for that matter, would complain to your agency and wait when they can complain to a carrier and get an answer in 30 days?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Mr. Chair, I think the folks seeking compensation should and, under the APPR, must turn to the airline to make their claims.

If we're talking about compensation, or the inconvenience associated with flight delays or cancellations, the regulations state that a claim should be made with the airline. But if they can't resolve that claim with the airline, then they can file a complaint with the CTA. We deal with all of those complaints on their merit, as I have said.

As far as the backlog goes, obviously the CTA wants to get through complaints as quickly as it can. As I noted in my opening comments, we received an unprecedented and extraordinary number of complaints after the APPR came into force, 11,000 complaints and another 11,000 since the pandemic began. It's unheard of for a quasi-judicial tribunal to receive 22,000 complaints when just five years earlier it was receiving 800.

We are absolutely mobilizing to get through those complaints as quickly as possible. We have already cleared 6,000 of them since the pandemic began, and we will continue to do everything we can to provide timely service to Canadians.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner, and thank you, Ms. Kusie.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

[Translation]

Thank you to the witnesses, too.

[English]

The Chair: We're now going to move on for six minutes to Mr. Rogers of the Liberal party.

Mr. Churence Rogers (Bonavista—Burin—Trinity, Lib.): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

I welcome all the guests today.

A few of my questions may fall under transport or the health sector, but I will leave it to our guests to decide if they want to respond to some of the questions.

For the last number of weeks and months, all of us MPs have been meeting with airline officials, airport security people, airport CEOs, regional airlines, large airlines, and many of them have been advocating for support for the industry.

Interestingly enough, rapid testing was certainly a big part of what I was lobbied for by many people. There were other supports such as rent relief and fees that are charged across the country to airports and airlines. Many of these proposed solutions were broad ranging. Ms. Kusie referred to some of the numbers in the area of $7 billion, but also, of course, the industry was suggesting that maybe some of that might be in the form of loan guarantees, non-repayable grants and a whole slew of possible solutions.

I want to focus a little on rapid testing in particular, because interestingly enough, many of the people I talked to really focused on that and said that things like that were more important than some of the money they were requesting.

Can you tell me how many rapid tests have been deployed by the federal government to the provinces so far, and whether or not these are still being deployed across the country?

● (1605)

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Mr. Chair, perhaps I could take that question.

The Chair: Go ahead, Mr. McCrorie.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: In terms of the number of tests that have been deployed, we'd have to defer to our colleagues at Health Canada and the Public Health Agency of Canada.

I could note that from a Transport Canada perspective, we saw that the restrictions at the border, obviously at the outset of the pandemic, were very effective in limiting the importation of COVID-19. We are, as I've noted, working with our partners to look at what measures could be put in place to reduce or change some of those border restrictions, in particular via testing. The pilot projects are a great example of gathering evidence to support, perhaps, a national program of testing as an alternative to quarantine. Ultimately, it will be our colleagues in the health sector who will make decisions about which tests are used, when to apply them and how to apply them.

Again, I think we play a really important role from a facilitation point of view. We've done some work with airports to look at what a testing regime would look like logistically and how you would set it up in your airport, for example. We've developed what is called an "operational plan" to support that, if and when a decision for testing is made. We've worked with the International Civil Aviation Organization and other international partners to look at some of the international standards or best practices for a testing regime, if we go down that path.

Again, as I've suggested, we've been working with domestic partners like the Calgary airport and the Vancouver airport as well as the airlines to help them set up the testing pilot projects that are being led by our health colleagues.

Mr. Churence Rogers: I'd like to ask you a follow-up question.

Can rapid testing at airports and other types of border crossings affect traffic? Is rapid testing going to be an option to consider for boosting the tourist industry and attracting international travellers?

Finally, what are the COVID-19 screening best practices at airports around the world that you might be familiar with?

The Chair: You're on mute, Mr. McCrorie.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Sorry about that, Mr. Chair. I was hoping I'd go through my career without being told I was on mute, but apparently not.

The Chair: No problem.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Again, the idea of the pilot projects is exactly to determine the most effective types of tests to use and where to apply them. There are concerns, obviously, if you're looking at the land border, about what that might mean from a congestion point of view. Consideration is even being given to testing prior to departure so that we can look at reduced congestion at the airport.

I talked a bit about trying to build a touchless journey. What we're really trying to do is to make sure that we can maintain physical distancing in an airport environment and reduce that congestion.

The pilot projects are giving us good information about what tests to use and where to apply them, and we're really proud to be working with our health colleagues on that. In terms of which specific test to use under what circumstances, I'd have to defer to my health colleagues for that.

Mr. Churence Rogers: I have one final question for you.

Based on your experience and that of the travel industry and what you know about rapid testing, do you think it's one of the key solutions for getting people back in the aircrafts and flying again so that we can have people moving across the country for the benefit of the tourism industry?

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: We tried to look at it from an aviation safety and security point of view, or even a transportation safety and security point of view. We look at layers of measures. It's about building layers of measures that protect...but also as we make adjustments, putting in place different layers of measures. Testing of some kind or another, I think, is showing a lot of promise as an alternative to quarantine. We're not there yet, but the pilot projects are helping us build that evidence base that will allow us to make that decision down the road. I think some changing of the measures is going to be key to the successful relaunch of the aviation industry.

● (1610)

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. McCrorie.

Thank you, Mr. Rogers.

We're now going to move on for six minutes to the Bloc Québécois.

Mr. Barsalou-Duval, the floor is yours.

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval (Pierre-Boucher—Les Patriotes—Verchères, BQ): Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

My first question is for Mr. Streiner of the Canadian Transportation Agency.

I'd like to know if you and the Canadian Transportation Agency are very familiar with the Air Transportation Regulations.

Mr. Scott Streiner: Thank you for your question, Mr. Barsalou-Duval. The answer is very short: yes.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Thank you very much, Mr. Streiner.

Actually, I'd like to know if you are familiar with subparagraph 122(c)(xii), which talks about the right to obtain a refund when the carrier fails to provide transportation for any reason.

In your opening remarks, you mentioned that nowhere in the legislation does it state that companies had to make these refunds. However, subparagraph 122(c)(xii) states the opposite:

> (xii) refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason...

Mr. Scott Streiner: In fact, this provision and regulation requires that the carrier or the airline specify its terms and conditions of services. This regulation doesn't specifically require terms and conditions of service. In other words, there is no minimum obligation in this regulation to refund customers in these situations.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Thank you, Mr. Streiner. However, if we read paragraph 122(c) correctly, what I just mentioned is one of the minimum conditions that tariffs must contain. So it's contained in the price of all tickets and in all carrier fares. This regulation applies to everyone, doesn't it?

Mr. Scott Streiner: This regulation applies, but it says that the airline must specify its terms and conditions of service. It does not specify exactly what conditions of service the tariffs must contain. It does not establish a minimum obligation.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Streiner, paragraph 122(c) states that, “Every tariff shall contain … the following matters, namely”, among which is noted that there must be a refund if the service is not provided. I think it's pretty clear that there has to be a refund.

Mr. Scott Streiner: It's clear that carriers must explain to passengers the terms and conditions of service contained in their tariffs. The interpretation of this regulation is clear. I don't want to repeat myself, but this regulation does not specify the exact content of tariffs.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: I think we're playing word games.

Are you able to name a single case in the jurisprudence that supports the interpretation that passengers aren't entitled to a refund in these circumstances?

Mr. Scott Streiner: As a quasi-judicial tribunal, we make decision case by case based on the facts and on the relevant act and regulations. This means that we consider all terms and conditions and all circumstances.

It's a question of interpretation of the legislation. I think all the honourable members understand that it isn't appropriate for me, as chair of the Canadian Transportation Agency, to interpret the legislation here or make formal rulings. There is a legal process for that.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: I'd like to know if the people who work at the Canadian Transportation Agency know the provisions of the Quebec civil code relating to consumers.

Mr. Scott Streiner: I suppose some of them do.

It's provincial legislation. We're responsible for applying federal legislation.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: According to the Quebec civil code, when a service has not been rendered, it must be refunded. It would be interesting if federal institutions, such as the Canadian Transportation Agency, could recognize and enforce the legislation that already exists.

I have another question. The Canadian Transportation Agency recently released new details about its statement on vouchers. You say that this statement isn't a binding decision. I'm trying to understand.

Does the Canadian Transportation Agency have the power to issue a statement that is unenforceable but in conflict with the legislation?

● (1615)

Mr. Scott Streiner: The agency has the power to issue statements and guidance material on any topic within its scope.

As you specified, the statement does not change the obligations of the airlines or the rights of the passengers. The statement contains suggestions, and only suggestions. It isn't a binding decision.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Does the Canadian Transportation Agency have the power to change the legislation?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Of course not. The legislation exists, and our responsibility is to enforce it, which we always do impartially and objectively.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Don't you think the positions that have been taken by the Canadian Transportation Agency call into question its impartiality?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Not at all.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: But that's the impression many people have.

The Canadian Transportation Agency is currently nearly two years behind in processing the various complaints. Last spring, the agency also said that none of the complaints regarding air travel and ticket refunds would be dealt with until September.

What kind of message does it send to the airlines when it says that it won't deal with travel complaints? Are they being told not to issue refunds to their customers, because they're not going to get a slap on the wrist anyway?

Mr. Scott Streiner: With all due respect, I must say that our employees work very hard to deal with all the complaints received. It should be noted that 99% of these complaints were submitted to the agency as of December 15. So there isn't a two-year delay in processing. The processing of complaints takes a long time, I agree. It would be preferable to do it faster, but it's a matter of volume. The volume is unprecedented: we've received 22,000 complaints since December 15. We're working very hard to deal with all these complaints.

With respect to the complaints that were received during the pandemic, we will begin processing them in early 2021. The number of complaints is remarkable and challenging. We're working very hard on it.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: I'd like your opinion on the following situation. Let's say that I manage a complaints department—

[English]

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Barsalou-Duval and Mr. Streiner.

We're now going to move to Mr. Bachrach, for six minutes.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach (Skeena—Bulkley Valley, NDP): Thank you, Mr. Chair, and thank you to our witnesses.

During this pandemic, Canadians have been hurt financially in so many ways. I hear from constituents all the time who've lost their income, who are in financial distress and having trouble paying their bills. Now, a relatively modest number of Canadians were in a very specific situation where they bought airplane tickets, some of these very expensive in the thousands of dollars, from airlines that up until the pandemic were doing very well.

The airlines are huge corporations that in 2019 were celebrating billions of dollars in profits, and had access to billions of dollars in liquidity. We're being told by the government that these Canadians, who purchased these airfares, are not able to get a refund, because the government is concerned that the airline corporations are going to go bankrupt.

You're putting citizens in a situation where they're essentially involuntary or unwilling creditors to these huge corporations. To either Mr. Streiner or Mr. Hanson, how could you possibly construe this as a fair situation?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: Mr. Chair, I'd be happy to take this question.

I would direct the member's attention to the statement by Minister Garneau on November 8, which was quite explicit on this point. Although the government is prepared to consider assistance for air carriers, given the significant pressures on their liquidity, it is not prepared to do so unless Canadians, whose flights were cancelled due to the pandemic, receive a refund rather than a voucher.

● (1620)

The Chair: Mr. Bachrach.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Mr. Hanson, is it fair to say the government has been forced into supporting a situation that is profoundly unfair for those Canadians who are out of pocket from an airfare?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: The government has always recognized the difficult situation, on the one hand, of individuals whose flights were cancelled as a result of the pandemic, and on the other hand, a situation where air carriers themselves have very constrained liquidity and cash flow because their revenues have collapsed. That's why it's come forward with an approach that says that it's prepared to provide support for the airlines, but putting conditionality on it in terms of refunds for passengers.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Mr. Streiner, in your opening remarks, if I understood you correctly, you indicated that the CTA was somewhat caught off guard by this gap in the regulation, and that in hindsight, this should have been rectified.

Is it fair to say you weren't aware of a gap in the air passenger protection regulations that could have avoided this situation?

Mr. Scott Streiner: I don't think anybody identified the gap. To be clear, the gap stems from the legislation. The legislation gave the CTA the authority to make the air passenger protection regulations.

If you read the relevant section related to cancellations that are outside the control of airlines, it constrains our ability to make regulations to only requiring that airlines ensure that passengers can complete their itineraries.

Frankly, if the section had been more permissive, we might well have established a refund obligation as we did for cancellations within the control of airlines, but we were constrained by the language of the legislation. I don't think anybody at the time, not parliamentarians, nor consumer rights advocates, recognized that the gap in the legislation and regulations could be as significant as we now realize it is.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Mr. Streiner, the reason I mention this is because the organization Air Passenger Rights wrote to the CTA during the crafting of those regulations and said very specifically:

> APR is deeply concerned about the omission of a number of important issues from the Proposed Regulations. This state of affairs creates the incorrect impression that airlines are free to do as they please in these areas. APR strongly believes this was not Parliament's intent.

So here they are; they've identified the gap and they're bringing it to your attention. Was there nothing that the CTA could do to address the situation in the regulations?

Mr. Scott Streiner: In terms of establishing a refund obligation—I assume that's the question—for flight cancellations beyond airline control, the answer is no. The legislation constrained us. There was no way we could establish that obligation in the regulations given the wording of the legislation.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Picking up where Mr. Barsalou-Duval left off, I did not get clarity on this in the answers to his questions, so I'm going to ask them again.

Mr. Scott Streiner: Certainly.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: In the air transportation regulations, it very specifically speaks to the refunds issue, yet the statement on vouchers says, “The law does not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons beyond their control.”

If you read the regulations, section 122, which Mr. Barsalou-Duval read earlier, it very clearly says:

> Every tariff shall contain...(xii) refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client’s unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier’s inability to provide the service for any reason

These seem to be in direct conflict with each other. How do you explain this?

Mr. Scott Streiner: The air transportation regulations in the section that you and your colleague referred to outline the areas or topics that must be addressed by an airline's tariff. They don't establish the minimum obligations. They don't establish what the terms are; they simply indicate that terms must be established in these areas. Therefore, they don't establish a minimum obligation to pay compensation or to pay refunds in situations beyond airlines' control, only that a tariff has to address those questions.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner, and Mr. Bachrach.

We're now going to to our second round of five minutes each from Mr. Soroka of the Conservative Party, as well as Mr. El-Khoury from the Liberal Party, and we have two and a half minutes each for Mr. Barsalou-Duval of the Bloc and Mr. Bachrach of the NDP.

Mr. Soroka, for five minutes you have the floor.

Mr. Gerald Soroka (Yellowhead, CPC): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

I'm not trying to put words in Mr. Hanson's mouth but it sounds like if the federal government gives support to airlines, there will be a condition that they have to refund passengers their money if the passenger wants that. If that's the case, if there's going to be a time frame attached to that, how long will you give airlines to refund all passengers who have had their trips cancelled so that the airlines can comply with the conditions the federal government has set?

● (1625)

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: Yes, I think when we get to the point of the payment of refunds, there would certainly need to be some sort of approach for detailing the manner and timing in which they would be provided.

Mr. Gerald Soroka: But you don't have a time frame right now as to what that will look like. Is it still in its infancy?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: I don't have a timeline. I think I will that say that a lot of people will be contacted individually. A lot of people, as you are probably aware, purchase their tickets through third-party vendors online, companies like Expedia and Travelocity, etc., but we would obviously be pushing for this to be done in a very timely fashion, because lengthy delays in getting refunds are not consistent with the idea of providing Canadians refunds that they're expecting.

Mr. Gerald Soroka: I recently held a Zoom call with several independent travel advisers. That association has over 1,200 members across Canada and each one of them owns or operates a small business. They are self-employed. Independent travel advisers work on 100% commission and have been hit very hard by COVID. Many in my riding do not qualify for existing CERB programs as well, so does the department have a plan in place to ensure that travel advisers won't be collateral damage from airline passengers getting refunded by airlines clawing back their commissions? Do you think that will be part of the conditions as well when you're negotiating or not?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: That is a great question. It points out some of the challenges associated with this and the need to get it right, because, as you say, there is a potential spinoff consequence for travel agents who suddenly see a collapse in commissions as a result of a massive wave of air refunds.

What I can tell the member is that we are aware of this issue. We are discussing it with our colleagues at ISED who work more with the sector than we do. Obviously, I can't say what solution we will arrive at, but I can assure the member that it's very much on the radar.

Mr. Gerald Soroka: Yes, it's very good to hear that you're at least aware of that and trying to work towards some kind of solution.

You also spoke about how there could be different types of conditions on travel. Currently we have face masks and temperature checking. Do you think that will now become a standard practice in airports? Is this just an anomaly, or will this continue after the COVID crisis is over?

The Chair: Go ahead, Mr. Hanson.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: If I may, Mr. Chair, perhaps I could take that question.

The Chair: Go ahead, Mr. McCrorie.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: We're constantly reassessing the measures that we have put in place from a health point of view, and we're adapting them as we go along based on the latest health guidance that we get. Depending on how the pandemic plays out over the weeks and months to come, and how, for example, a vaccine testing regime is implemented, we may be able to move away from some of these measures as new measures come into place or as the pandemic comes under control, but I think the bottom line is that we have the flexibility to adapt to changing health conditions and respond to the changing health advice.

A good example is how our requirements around face masks have evolved over time. We have adjusted them from the initial requirements in the spring to more recent requirements based on the latest health guidance that has provided more flexibility for parents travelling with younger children when using face masks.

We will evolve over time based on the latest information.

Mr. Gerald Soroka: Okay, that's quite interesting. It kind os sounds like a yes or a no. I know it's a hard decision to come forward right now.

I get a lot of residents with conspiracy theories about vaccinations and all of these kinds of stories. Do you think this will be a condition for travel where, if they do not take the vaccine, they will not be allowed to travel? Is there the potential for that?

Please alleviate my fears, because I have to deal with this on a regular basis.

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: I'm sorry, Mr. Chair, I missed the beginning part of the question, but I think it was if vaccination will be a standing requirement for travel.

The Chair: That's correct.

● (1630)

Mr. Aaron McCrorie: Again, it's premature to know for sure. Our colleagues from Health Canada may have some views on that as well, but it's certainly, I would say, in the repertoire of tools that we can bring to bear to manage the health risk.

For example, we talked about testing looking at people coming into the country and if there would be a requirement for a test prior to departure. Would we be looking for proof of vaccination prior to people getting on an aircraft? Those are certainly all options we're looking at, but it's premature to make any declarations at this point in time.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. McCrorie.

Thank you, Mr. Soroka.

We're now going to move on to Mr. El-Khoury for five minutes.

Mr. El-Khoury, the floor is yours.

[Translation]

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury (Laval—Les Îles, Lib.): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

I'd like to thank the witnesses. Their being here with us is really important and useful to the committee.

We are in the middle of a really complicated and dangerous situation. The impact of the pandemic on the airline industry is unprecedented. Here, in Canada, we rely heavily on our airline industry, much more so than most other countries.

My first question is for Mr. Streiner.

Mr. Streiner, you explained the provisions of the Air Transportation Regulations regarding the obligation to refund—or not—customers. Could you tell us what happens in case of a force majeure? And can the pandemic be called a force majeure?

Mr. Scott Streiner: I thank the honourable member for his question.

I can't really answer that question, for one simple reason: as a quasi-judicial tribunal, we might have to deal with this issue. It's a matter of interpretation of the situation, the facts and the legislation. In order to maintain our impartiality, it's important to wait for the decision-making process before answering this important question.

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: Can you tell us how the pandemic has affected independent travel agents?

Mr. Scott Streiner: If this question is for me, I would say that travel agents aren't under federal jurisdiction. From what we've read in the media, they fall under provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: If you had issued an order stipulating that the airlines had to refund customers, this would still have been legal, given the terms and conditions of service in the airlines' tariffs. I am thinking here of the provisions that apply in cases of a force majeure and the distinction made at the time of purchase between refundable and non-refundable tickets

[English]

The Chair: Mr. Streiner.

[Translation]

Mr. Scott Streiner: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

It's true that these distinctions can be important. Some Canadians have purchased refundable tickets, while others have purchased non-refundable tickets. The provisions for a force majeure may be relevant to this discussion. That said, all of these issues must be dealt with in a quasi-judicial process of formal decision-making. These are the kinds of issues we will be addressing in our discussions and decision-making processes.

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: In the context of this pandemic, in your opinion, Mr. Streiner, what would have happened to the airlines if they had been required to pay cash refunds to all passengers who applied for them? And what might have been the impact on Canadian travellers and communities?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Once again, I think this question should be directed more to my colleagues at Transport Canada, but I'll give a bit of an answer anyway.

We know that this crisis is unprecedented, but we don't know exactly what the consequences might have been in the situation you describe. Our role is simply to determine what the obligations of airlines are and what the rights of air passengers are under the law. These are the issues we are dealing with. I don't want to speculate by commenting on hypothetical situations.

● (1635)

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: Why did you issue directives that credits may be an acceptable alternative to cash reimbursement for travellers whose flights have been cancelled due to COVID-19?

Mr. Scott Streiner: The reason is simple: we did it to reduce the risk of air passengers ending up without any compensation. As I said, the legislation refers to this great variability in the conditions of service of different airlines; that's what creates this risk for air passengers. The objective of our Statement on Vouchers was to reduce this risk.

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: When you say—

[English]

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner and Mr. El-Khoury.

[Translation]

Mr. Fayçal El-Khoury: Thank you.

[English]

The Chair: We will now move on for two and a half minutes to Mr. Barsalou-Duval of the the Bloc.

Mr. Barsalou-Duval, the floor is yours.

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Mr. Streiner, it was mentioned earlier that there is currently a long wait for complaints to be processed. I have a question for you. If I ran a complaints department and there was a two-year wait for complaints to be processed, and I hadn't processed any complaints in the last nine months, do you think I would keep my job?

Mr. Scott Streiner: I'm sorry; could you repeat the question?

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: If I ran a complaints department, had two years of backlogged complaints on my desk, and hadn't processed any complaints in the last nine months, would I lose my job?

Mr. Scott Streiner: For me, the question would be whether all employees work hard and come together to deal with complaints. If it were employees of the Canadian Transportation Agency, the answer would be yes. Everybody is rallying to deal with complaints. As I said, we've managed to handle 6,000 complaints since—

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Thank you. I'm sorry for interrupting you, but I have only two and a half minutes.

Mr. Scott Streiner: Yes, that's fine.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: You still announced that you wouldn't deal with any complaints about cancelled airline tickets until September 2020, and then you postponed it until 2021.

In March, the Canadian Transportation Agency released the Statement on Vouchers, which was recently revised. I'd like to know if you had any input into this statement.

Mr. Scott Streiner: All statements, guidelines and guidance material are written by the organization and, as head of the organization, I am always involved, of course.

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Have there been any communications where the office of the Minister of Transportation has expressed a willingness to consider the direction the agency might take or the issue of ticket refunds?

Mr. Scott Streiner: We have communicated with the office of the Minister of Transportation throughout the crisis. Indeed, coordination is important in a crisis like this. It's a question of transparency. The purpose of these communications wasn't to obtain permissions or receive instructions, but to ensure that we don't create confusion in this time of crisis.

[English]

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner and Mr. Barsalou-Duval.

We're now going to move on to the NDP with Mr. Bachrach, for two and a half minutes.

The floor is yours.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Mr. Streiner, which individuals authored and approved the March 25 statement on vouchers?

Mr. Scott Streiner: With regard to the statement on vouchers, like all guidance material posted by the CTA—and we post a great deal of non-binding guidance material, policy statements and information—there are many people who participate in its preparation, in its drafting and in its review, so it's a large number of employees who contributed to that.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Who approved it?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Ultimately, every statement like this is an expression of the organization's guidance. As I emphasized earlier, the statement on vouchers, like these other documents, was non-binding in nature, and it's an expression of guidance or a suggestion to the travelling public by the institution.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: An email from a policy adviser at Transport Canada to Member of Parliament Erskine-Smith revealed that the CTA's members, vice-chair and chair would have approved the statement on vouchers, which gave airlines clearance to refuse refunds.

Is this correct?

Mr. Scott Streiner: Mr. Chair, I'm not sure about that email. I haven't seen the email. It's not in front of me.

The office of the Minister of Transport would not have been privy to the internal decision-making processes at the CTA, and I would simply reiterate that every statement—non-binding—that's made by the CTA, every guidance document is a reflection of institutional guidance and of course is reviewed by senior members of the organization.

● (1640)

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Mr. Streiner, will you commit to providing this committee with all internal documents, memos and emails concerning the March 25 statement on vouchers and the subsequent clarification?

Mr. Scott Streiner: The CTA is subject to the same access to information rules as any other organization. We have a policy of transparency, and so we try to come forward. I will commit to certainly providing the committee with those documents that it's appropriate to provide, but we are a quasi-judicial tribunal, an independent regulator, and certain material is privileged.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: The challenge here, Mr. Streiner, as I'm sure you can guess from this line of questioning, is that as a quasi-judicial body, the CTA is in a position to fairly and without prejudice adjudicate these complaints that have come in from air passengers. Does this statement on vouchers not prejudice that process? This very clearly sets out the outcome of those complaints related to refunds. You've already said that it's reasonable, so why adjudicate the specific complaint if you've already said that it's a reasonable approach?

Mr. Scott Streiner: I want to give a very clear response to this question. The non-binding statement on vouchers was issued in order to protect passengers from ending up with nothing at all as a result of this situation, in part because of the legislative gap that I spoke about earlier. Nothing in that non-binding statement in any way affected or affects the rights of anybody who brings a complaint before us. The Federal Court of Appeal has already recognized that passengers' rights aren't affected. Right in the body of the statement, we said that every complaint would be considered on its merit. Every complaint will be considered on its merit, impartially, based on the evidence and the law.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Streiner and Mr. Bachrach.

Mr. Taylor Bachrach: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you to the witnesses.

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Excuse me, Mr. Chair.

[English]

The Chair: Yes, go ahead.

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: I'd like to put forward a motion about what was discussed. Is it possible to do that now?

[English]

The Chair: Go ahead.

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: That's perfect, Mr. Chair.

Actually, I'd like to put forward a motion that has already been tabled at committee on October 26. The motion is as follows:

> That, pursuant to Standing Order 108(1)(a), an Order of the Committee do issue for correspondence between Transport Canada, including the Minister of Transport and his staff, and the Canadian Transportation Agency regarding cancelled plane tickets and the right of air passengers to be reimbursed, and that these documents be provided to the Committee Clerk within 15 days following the adoption of this motion.

[English]

The Chair: Okay, I'm assuming, Mr. Barsalou-Duval, that this is the motion you presented a few days ago, which you distributed.

Do you want to put on the table right now?

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Mr. Chair, it is not the motion on Air Transat, it's actually the one about the Canadian Transportation Agency. So it's a different motion and it pertains to today's meeting.

The motion I have just read to you has already been introduced, but the committee has not discussed it.

[English]

The Chair: Mr. Clerk, does the committee have a copy of that motion?

The Clerk of the Committee (Mr. Michael MacPherson): I'm just going to double-check, but I do believe that it was distributed.

The Chair: Members, while we check, I would like to get some clarification from Mr. Hanson regarding Mr. Soroka's question, even though this might not be the norm for a chair to do. Mr. Soroka asked a question about travel agents, and it's within this committee's interest. The importance of this issue has been discussed previously, too, by members of the committee because sometimes it can fall through the cracks, or these folks, travel agents, maybe seemed to have fallen through the cracks. I thought Mr. Soroka brought up a great point, a great question, with respect to that. I just want to get clarity from you to declare the travel agents.... Do you see them in a similar way as you would see the passengers who are unable to get refunds?

Mr. Lawrence Hanson: Thanks. It's a very fair question, Mr. Chair. I don't know if I'm in a position where I could declare that it would be policy to see them as analogous. That would be for someone other than me. I think what I can say is that the reality is that a mass kind of series of refunds done all at the same time would have implications for those travel agents. I think we need to understand that better, but I think I would kind of be creating policy on the fly to say that it is analogous to something else. I think I would really just be saying that we absolutely recognize that this issue is a consequence of the refund issue and that we have to be looking at it. I'm sorry that I can't be more precise than that, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Hanson.

Thank you to all of the other witnesses too.

We're now going to suspend for five minutes. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

● (1640)

_____(Pause)_____

● (1640)

The Chair: We have that notice of motion by Mr. Barsalou-Duval that was distributed Monday, October 26, 2020.

Mr. Barsalou-Duval, is that the motion you are putting on the floor?

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Yes, Mr. Chair.

[English]

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Barsalou-Duval.

Mr. Clerk, I am going to be asking for a vote by the committee to actually debate this now, as it is now being placed on the floor.

Members of the committee, Mr. Barsalou-Duval wishes to place this on the floor for debate. I'll take it, first of all, as a motion to debate it. First off, I'm going to be asking for a vote to place it on the floor for debate. All those in favour?

The clerk is telling me that we don't need a vote to get it on the floor. That's fine.

Debate has begun for this motion. Mr. Barsalou-Duval, I'll give you the floor.

● (1650)

[Translation]

Mr. Xavier Barsalou-Duval: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The discussions we had today with the official from the Canadian Transportation Agency actually support the reason why this motion was introduced. The goal of the motion is to better understand where the agency's statement on travel credits came from. It will tell us what interaction it had with the government and whether any directives were given during those interactions. Specifically, it would be helpful to find out whether there was a desire on the government's part to influence a judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal. That would be most unwelcome.

This is something that has an impact on thousands of families. Thousands of dollars are at stake. This has been a highly publicized issue. I hope that all members of the committee will want to obtain that information.

[English]

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Barsalou-Duval.

I will now go to Mr. Sidhu.

Mr. Sidhu, you have the floor.

Mr. Maninder Sidhu (Brampton East, Lib.): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Yes, I do understand the importance, but I also understand the importance of the witnesses being here. We're ready to ask them the questions that we have. There's a lot of important information. I know my constituents are waiting on answers in terms of rapid testing and a lot of other important matters.

With respect to our witnesses, we need to hear from them. They took the time; we prepared our questions. I think that's what we need to do here.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Sidhu.

I have Mrs. Kusie, Mr. El-Khoury and Ms. Jaczek.

Mrs. Kusie, the floor is yours.

Mrs. Stephanie Kusie: I support what Mr. Sidhu said, in particular, in the light that the witnesses from the first hour were.... When I say were not prepared, I mean did not feel comfortable responding to questions better directed to the Department of Health and the Public Health Agency.

I would ask that we return to the witnesses at this time. As well, I would ask the clerk if he could possibly redistribute the motion, if he has not done so already. I am attempting to locate it within my documents, and I'm struggling to do that. I would go out on a limb and say that I'm not alone.

Thank you.

● (1655)

The Chair: Thank you, Mrs. Kusie.

I have Mr. Bittle, followed by Mr. El-Khoury, Ms. Jaczek and Mr. Bachrach.

Mr. Bittle, the floor is yours.

Mr. Chris Bittle (St. Catharines, Lib.): I thank Mrs. Kusie, and I agree with her sentiment. I move that debate now be adjourned.

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Bittle.

With no questions or no debate on that motion, Mr. Clerk, perhaps you can do roll call.

(Motion agreed to: yeas 9; nays 2)

The Chair: Thank you, Mr. Clerk, and thank you, members.

We're now going to move on to our next session.

Mr. Clerk, I believe all witnesses are on board.

While we're waiting, the next round is going to start with the Conservatives with Mrs. Kusie for six minutes, followed by Ms. Jaczek for six minutes for the Liberal Party, followed by the Bloc and Mr. Barsalou-Duval for six minutes and Mr. Bachrach of the NDP for six minutes as well.

Once we get the witnesses on board and the sound checks done, we'll be ready to go.

Mr. Clerk, I'll leave it to you.

I will suspend for three minutes.

● (1655)

_____(Pause)_____

● (1700)

The Chair: We are now going to be entering the second part of our session.

From the Department of Health we have Ms. Frison, the acting assistant deputy minister, programs and implementation. From the Public Health Agency of Canada we have Ms. Diogo, vice president, health security infrastructure branch.

I'm going to ask both witnesses to be brief because we only have half an hour and I'm being told by the House that we have until 5:30 because we have 6:30 committees and we don't want to take away the resources from them. If you can be as brief as possible that will allow for more questions from members and that would be wonderful.

Ms. Frison, go ahead. The floor is yours.

Ms. Monique Frison (Acting Assistant Deputy Minister, Programs and Implementation, Department of Health): Thank you, Mr. Chair.

I want to begin by thanking the committee for the opportunity to speak to you today.

I work at Health Canada in the testing, contact tracing and data management secretariat. We know that COVID-19 has had devastating impacts right across the country, and the aviation sector is no exception. I'm sure the efforts of this committee to examine the consequences of this pandemic will undoubtedly shape the efforts to strengthen that sector, which is so vital to the Canadian economy and the lives of Canadians.

2863576 Ontario Inc.
E.M. GILLESPIE
Court Reporting & Transcription Services
1000 Innovation Drive, Suite 500, Ottawa, Ontario, K2K 3E7
Tel: 613-314-8501

Examination No. 22-0914 Court File No. A-102-20

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

B E T W E E N:

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS

Applicant

- and -

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondent

- and -

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

ORIGINAL

Intervener

****

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF BARBARA CUBER on Affidavit sworn April 21, 2022, pursuant to an appointment made on consent of the parties, to be reported by E.M. Gillespie Court Reporting, on September 16, 2022, commencing at the hour of 10:00 in the forenoon.

****

APPEARANCES:

Simon Lin, for the Applicant
Lorne Ptack, for the Respondent
Kevin Shaar, for the Intervener

The Examination was reported by E.M. Gillespie Court Reporting via video conference, having been duly appointed for the purpose.

(i)

INDEX

NAME OF WITNESS: BARBARA CUBER

EXAMINATION BY: MR. LIN

NUMBER OF PAGES: 180

ADVISEMENTS, OBJECTIONS & REFUSALS

EXHIBITS

(ii)

DATE TRANSCRIPT COMPLETED: OCTOBER 4, 2022

MR. PTACK: I am Lorne Ptack, counsel for the Respondent, Attorney General of Canada, in this matter. In the present instance, there is no one else available to swear in the witness so I will be doing so. Would the witness please identify herself for the record?

THE WITNESS: My name is Barbara Cuber.

MR. PTACK: Would you prefer to be sworn on a Bible or take an oath?

THE WITNESS: An oath, please.

MR. PTACK: Do you solemnly declare that your responses you give today are the truth, to the best of your knowledge and ability?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

MR. PTACK: Thank you, very much.

BARBARA CUBER, AFFIRMED:

EXAMINATION BY MR. LIN: Thank you for coming today, Ms. Cuber. As you know, my name is Simon Lin. I am counsel for the Applicant on this matter and I will be asking you some questions today, primarily about your affidavit that you swore on this proceeding.

Counsel, just for clarity, today is a cross-examination set by the Applicants. As such, I kindly ask that counsel for the Intervener refrain from answering questions on behalf of the affiant, and furthermore, since the Attorney General of Canada did not serve a Direction to Attend and also not adverse in interest to the CTA, we understand that the AGC is only attending today as an observer.

Just for shorthand I will refer to the Canadian Transportation Agency as the CTA and the Respondent, the Attorney General of Canada, as AGC for shorthand.

MR. PTACK: Mr. Lin, if I may chime in here briefly? The AGC is here as the Respondent. I am here as the Respondent's counsel, not as an observer, and as such I do reserve the right to participate or interject as may be necessary. I acknowledge I have not served a Direction to Attend on this witness. Of course there was no requirement for us to do so, and while I don't expect to be interjecting or participating in any particularly active point, I do have to disagree with your suggestion that I am only here as an observer.

MR. LIN: We can agree to disagree about that. We're moving on. Thank you.

MR. PTACK: Certainly and I'm happy to do so but on the record, should it be an issue later, let it be stated for the record that that is not the status the AGC accepts in this matter. Please proceed.

MR. LIN:

1. Q. Before we launch onto questions, Ms. Cuber, can you confirm what documents you have before you for this cross-examination?

A. Sorry? What exhibits I have? I just wanted to answer – you had asked me previously if I understood the instructions that you said about, for instance, the CTA being the shorthand for Canadian Transportation Agency and AGC, and you asked if I understood and I didn't get an opportunity to respond. I just wanted to say that I did understand. I have the exhibits that you sent at 9:53 this morning. They're not in – would you like me to --

2. Q. No. We know there are 17 documents in there. Other than that, do you have any other items before you?

A. I only have my affidavit with the three exhibits of my affidavit before me.

3. Q. What else do you have open on your screen besides this Zoom meeting?

A. I'm happy you asked that because you since you sent the exhibits by email, I have my email account open. I don't know if you prefer that I close that and that you will show me the exhibits as they arise. I closed any messaging services and I had intended to close my email account on my desktop so I'm not --

4. Q. We would suggest that you can download the 17 exhibits and then have the email account closed so there won't be any interruptions, if that's okay.

A. Yes. It's just going to take me a minute to do that.

5. Q. While you do that, can I ask you is there anyone else in the same room as you at the moment?

A. No, there is no one else. My phone is off and I don't have any messaging services and momentarily I will not have any email open. I believe I have them now so I am closing Outlook. If I happen to see an email pop up, is it alright with you if I just stop so that I can figure out how to make sure that I am not receiving any messages? Is that all right? If I see something pop up, I'll just let you know. I've closed my Outlook.

6. Q. Yes. I understand what you are referring to. Are we ready to begin?

A. Yes.

7. Q. I understand you are familiar with the Order issued my Madam Justice Gleason on October 15th, 2021, in this file?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: I will refer to this October 15th Order as the October Order. For clarity, that's the first document, number one, that was sent out this morning. I would like to ask Madam Court Reporter to mark Exhibit 1 the Order of Madam Justice Gleason, dated October 15th, 2021.

EXHIBIT NO. 1: Order of Justice Gleason, October

15, 2021.

8. Q. I understand that you are familiar with the Order issued by Madam Justice Gleason on April 11th, 2022, in this file?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: I will refer to this as the April Order and I will also ask that this be marked as an exhibit, Exhibit 2.

EXHIBIT NO. 2: Order of Justice Gleason, April 11, 2022.

9. Q. I understand, Ms. Cuber, you are familiar with another order that was recently issued by Madam Justice Gleason on July 19th, 2022, for this file?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: I will refer to this as the July Order for shorthand and I will also ask that this be marked as Exhibit 3.

EXHIBIT NO. 3: Order of Justice Gleason, July 19, 2022.

10. Q. Next I understand that on April 11th, 2022, Ms. Cuber, you swore an affidavit for this application as ordered by the court?

A. I don't think it was April 11th. I think it was April 21st. I'll just look.

11. Q. I misspoke. It is April 21st.

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: That affidavit is the fourth document that was sent out and I will ask that to be marked as Exhibit 4, please.

EXHIBIT NO. 4: Affidavit of Barbara Cuber, sworn April 21, 2022.

12. Q. Ms. Cuber, I understand you also received our Direction to Attend on or around August 29th, 2022, which includes a cover letter and that is the fifth document?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: We would like to mark that as Exhibit 5, please, the Direction to Attend and cover letter.

EXHIBIT NO. 5: Direction to Attend and cover letter, August 29, 2022.

13. Q. If we could have Exhibit 5, the Direction to Attend, open, please? That would be great. Ms. Cuber, do you have that open?

A. Yes, I do.

14. Q. Perfect. Did you bring any of the documents listed in the Direction to Attend, other than items 9, 12, and 13 which were the subject of an undertaking on August 5th, 2022?

A. No.

15. Q. You received our Direction to Attend, correct?

A. Yes.

16. Q. While we realise items 1 to 25 were subject to debate in the July Order, items 26 to 30 were added to this Direction to Attend. Did you bring items 26 to 30?

A. No.

17. Q. You are aware that the Federal Court Rules require you to produce documents today at cross-examination, and in particular, items 26 to 30?

A. Yes.

18. Q. Why did you not bring items 26 to 30?

A. I have to go back. It's certainly the case that some of them do not exist.

MR. SHAAR: Perhaps we should go through each one?

THE WITNESS: Yes. I didn't memorise them.

MR. LIN:

19. Q. Let's start with 26. Can you tell us why you did not bring item 26 on the Direction to Attend?

A. Item 26, it's not possible for me to give you a list of the attendees at the March 24th Executive Committee Meeting because we don't know who attended. There were just the participants which is the ordinary list of participants at Executive Committee Meetings and so we don't have anything further to produce on that front, as far as I understand it.

20. Q. Are you saying there is a list of participants but there is not a list of attendees?

A. I believe the Agency produced the schedule for that item and there is no list of attendees so there is nothing further that can be produced, as far as I understand it.

21. Q. How about item 27?

A. This doesn't exist because OneNote documents can't be saved in RDIMS. If I understand this item correctly, in order to be in existence, it would require that OneNotes could be saved in RDIMS and they can't.

22. Q. How about item 29?

A. For 29(a), I believe that we produced the March 24th, 2020, schedule for the Members' Meeting that the Agency has in its possession and we have no further items for 29(a).

29(b) is a request for printouts from the Outlook calendar for Ms. Lesley Robertson showing whether her calendar had any scheduled events on March 24th, 2020, at 10:30 am EST. The difficulty with that is that we verified in Outlook and Ms. Robertson doesn't appear as an attendee on Members' Meeting of In-Camera Members' Committee Meeting like the one that happened on March 24th, 2020. That doesn't exist in the sense that she has a calendar but she wouldn't have been involved in the Members' Committee Meeting.

MR. SHAAR: We're going to object to this document on the basis of relevance. Lesley Robertson isn't a member of the Executive Committee so it won't appear on her calendar because she wasn't invited. O

THE WITNESS: I just want to make sure that I describe as best as I can. It is my understanding when Ms. Robertson makes these meetings, she doesn't make them by her own calendar. She would make them through calendars that she controls like the Chair's calendar, for instance. She wouldn't appear as an attendee or a participant.

MR. LIN:

23. Q. She would be an organiser of whatever event? Is that correct?

A. I don't know that.

MR. SHAAR: It's not in her calendar which is why I'm objecting.

THE WITNESS: She wouldn't appear on any scheduled events in the sense that her calendar wouldn't show that she had an event.

MR. LIN:

24. Q. Thank you, Ms. Cuber, for clarifying. How about item 30?

A. We have provided the scheduler for the Members' Meeting that occurred on March 24th, 2020, at 11:00 am. That is all we have.

25. Q. How about at 10:30 am?

A. We have made verifications and there was no meeting at 10:30 am on March 24th, 2020.

26. Q. Do you know why there was no meeting at 10:30 when the Chair had made reference to talking at 10:30?

A. I spoke with Lesley Robertson about this and the explanation I received was that there was often trouble connecting to meetings at that time because there was high traffic, technical difficulties, and so it was not uncommon that when this was occurring, Ms. Robertson would re-schedule the meeting for 30 minutes later in order to try perhaps a different line or the same line at a different time so that participants might be able to join at that time.

Her explanation was that she likely would have just moved the meeting forward half an hour which was her practice at the time and that seemed like a reasonable explanation because you can see that one of the members, I believe it was Heather Smith, actually wrote that she was having trouble connecting at that time.

In addition to speaking to Ms. Robertson, I checked the scheduler of members for March 24th, 2020, at 10:30 am for the members that are at the Agency and I noted that they did not have a meeting at 10:30 scheduled in their schedulers but they did have a meeting scheduled at 11:00 am.

27. Q. Just following on one point you mentioned, you said members that are at the Agency. What do you mean by members that are at the Agency?

A. We can't check the schedulers of members who are no longer at the Agency because Outlook accounts are closed after personnel leave the Agency.

28. Q. Can you elaborate on what you mean by Outlook accounts are closed?

A. Sure. The Agency's policy about information management requires staff to save their records of business value, including records that are subject to litigation holds or records that are subject of ATIP requests into the corporate repository, and when they leave, their documents must all be saved in the corporate repository in the RDIMS because Outlook accounts are not kept after Agency personnel leave because Outlook accounts are not a corporate repository,

29. Q. I assume that applies to members and employees? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

30. Q. Are you saying that Mr. Scott Streiner and Ms. Marcia Jones's email accounts were wiped?

A. I'm not saying that they were wiped. I'm saying that they were closed after they saved records of business value, records that were subject to litigation holds, and records that were subject to ATIP requests into RDIMS.

31. Q. Closed means they still exist? Is that correct?

A. They are no longer available. They are no longer available after they leave. I don't know exactly what they do with them but they're not available.

32. Q. What do you mean by they? You said you don't know what they do with them. Who is they?

A. Information Technology staff have explained to me that the email accounts are not kept.

33. Q. So they have been wiped? Is that correct?

A. They're not kept. I hesitate to – I don't agree with the word wiped because I don't agree in the sense that wiped makes it sound like important things were deleted whereas in fact, the recordkeeping practices that Agency personnel are required to adhere to on a regular basis, and certainly before departure, require them to move all of their records of business value, all records that are subject litigation hold, and all records that are subject to ATIP requests into the corporate repository so that they are preserved there and then any records that are transitory are supposed to be deleted before, over the course of their day-to-day work, and then those will be removed from the account before they leave. IT doesn't wipe the account.

34. Q. Let's take a step back here while we're on this topic. In terms of Mr. Scott Shreiner and Ms. Marcia Jones, they are no longer at the Agency? Is that correct?

A. That's correct.

35. Q. Do you recall the approximate date that they left?

A. They both left in May 2021.

36. Q. So it was about a year ago. At the time, who decided which emails from their Outlook account had to be saved in the corporate repository?

A. They would have to decide which emails are saved in the corporate repository. Ms. Jones would have to decide which of her emails are saved in the corporate repository and Mr. Streiner would also have to decide which emails are saved in the corporate repository but it is my understanding that Ms. Robertson would probably be the one saving Mr. Streiner's items into the corporate repository but I can't confirm that Mr. Streiner did not also personally save his documents into RDIMS which is the corporate repository. If it's okay, I'll just call it RDIMS.

37. Q. Go ahead, please. Is it correct to say that there was no oversight in this scenario? It was the person themselves deciding for themselves what to save?

A. Well, I believe that everybody who – it's my understanding that everybody who saves their items into RDIMS has to have a list of people who will approve or sign a departure form that will confirm that they have saved all of their items into RDIMS and I've spoken with our IT staff who have said that that they do sort of checks on departing personnel, not to check every single item but just to verify that the number of items that are saved under that person's name seems to be an appropriate number of items given that people will produce documents of business value so if there are only two then it seems like they probably didn't save their documents of business value into the corporate repository.

38. Q. In the case of Mr. Streiner, who signed that departure form?

A. I don't know who signed his departure form.

39. Q. How about Ms. Jones? Who signed her departure form?

A. I don't know. I don't know who actually signed her departure form but I believe that Mr. Shreiner would be the person who would have signed it.

40. Q. In the case of Mr. Streiner, would you undertake to find out who signed the departure form and let us know?

MR. SHAAR: We will take it under advisement. A

MR. LIN: Is that a yes or a no, Mr. Shaar?

MR. SHAAR: That's neither. We'll take it under advisement. We're under no obligation to make any undertakings so we will consider your question and get back to you.

MR. LIN: In that case if we don't have your answer, we, of course, reserve the right to recall the cross-examination in that you refused to provide information.

MR. SHAAR: The witness hasn't provided any information. You've asked if there was an undertaking to produce the document. The Agency is under no obligation to provide undertakings. My answer is I will look at your request and we'll get back to you at a later date.

MR. LIN:

41. Q. Ms. Cuber, at the time Mr. Streiner and Ms. Jones left the CTA, you were the main counsel on this application, correct?

A. Yes.

42. Q. At the time, you were aware that they were departing from the CTA?

A. Yes – well, not Ms. Jones. I mean I knew that Mr. Streiner's term was up.

43. Q. Did you participate at all in reviewing the documents that you save on RDIMS before his departure?

A. Before whose departure?

44. Q. Before his departure, Mr. Streiner's departure?

A. No, I didn't participate in the review of documents before he left. It was my understanding that documents related to this matter would have already been preserved as part of the pre-existing Access to Information request.

MR. LIN: Just to take a step back, the undertaking that we asked for for Mr. Streiner, we'll ask the same for Ms. Jones's departure form. Mr. Shaar, I assume you have that noted?

MR. SHAAR: Yes. A

MR. LIN:

45. Q. When Mr. Streiner left the CTA, is it fair to say that the departure form was the only step that the CTA took to ensure the data on his computer or mobile devices were preserved?

MR. SHAAR: Mr. Lin, what does this have to do with the affiant's search for documents in order to find documents that were responsive to the court orders? It seems to me that we're getting a little far away from the scope of the cross-examination and we're getting into what was done in the context of a departure and what that process is. We're not actually dealing with the orders that were given or what the affiant did to respond to those orders but in things that happened before the orders were given. O

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, I understand that you are objecting. We know that there are various emails that are no longer in existence or were deleted and the court has specifically provided that in the number of topics that we intend to explore and that is, why the emails were deleted, and this goes to that line of enquiry. Why were they not preserved? We know the emails exist.

MR. SHAAR: Then put that question to her because if we're dealing with things that happened before the October Order then it's hard for Ms. Cuber to say what she did to respond to that order.

MR. LIN: We are asking the witness questions in terms of what she did in terms of preservation and unless you have a specific objection, Mr. Shaar, we ask that you not interject.

46. Q. Ms. Cuber, back to the question. Is it fair to say that when Mr. Streiner left the CTA, the only step that the CTA took to preserve data on his computer or mobile devices was the departure form?

A. That is the only step that I am aware of but Mr. Streiner was aware of this litigation and he was provided with a notice to preserve documents on April 14th, 2020, when the litigation began. He was aware of the motion under Rule 318 that was filed and served on the Agency on or around January 4th, 2021, and he was very aware of this litigation. He didn't have a lack of awareness and the departure form specifically refers to the need to preserve documents that are subject to a litigation hold.

47. Q. Ms. Cuber, thank for the explanation but my question is that was the only step the CTA took, the departure form? There was no oversight in terms of what Mr. Streiner had saved and you were not involved in overseeing it?

A. I can only say that I was not involved in overseeing it. I don't know if there were other steps taken. I'm not aware of any other steps taken.

48. Q. Thank you. We asked the same question for Ms. Jones's departure. The departure form was the only step that was taken to ensure that the data on her computer or mobile devices were preserved in RDIMS? Is that correct?

A. I'm not aware of any other steps that were taken. I am aware that Ms. Jones was informed of the litigation. I was not able to find a written record of her being informed or the need to preserve documents but I was able to find a written record of her being informed of the ATIP request that came in in May 2020 and I had a discussion with her on January 5th, 2021, about the motion under Rule 318 and she told me during our exchange where to find her responsive documents and what she had no knowledge of.

49. Q. Taking a step back to the departure forms, is that part of the CTA's policy for departing employees?

A. I don't have any other information. I requested information retention or record retention policies from Information Technology. I think that was one of the items in the Direction to Attend. There was nothing that was given to me. The only thing I'm aware of is the departure form.

50. Q. You've just talked about your discussion with Ms. Marcia Jones. How can you be so sure of the date that you spoke with her?

A. It was a written exchange. I should have said exchange. I apologise for that. It was a written exchange between us.

51. Q. Written exchange in the form of email?

A. Yes.

52. Q. Will you undertake to produce that email to us?

MR. SHAAR: The Agency is under no obligation to make undertakings but we will take your request under advisement and get back to you. A

MR. LIN:

53. Q. On the topic of the departure form, can you describe it? Have you seen it personally?

A. Yes, I have seen the departure form. I have used departure forms myself and I believe I asked whether Mr. Streiner had signed a departure form and I was told that he had but I can't remember if I saw it.

54. Q. How about Ms. Jones's departure form? Have you seen that yourself?

A. No, I have not.

55. Q. Do you know if she actually signed a departure form?

A. I don't. It's required of every departing employee so I have to assume that she did but I don't know.

56. Q. I assume you have seen a blank departure form before?

A. Yes.

57. Q. Can you describe to us what it looks like, what the contents are?

A. I'm going to say this based on my vague recollection. I don't want to misrepresent the state of my recollection of what the departure form contains. I might be wrong. I'm going on the basis of what I recall.

If it's understood that that's what I'm doing then I will respond.

58. Q. Please.

A. I believe that the departure form contains different boxes and in the boxes personnel have to acknowledge that they have returned all equipment, that they have returned anything that they have taken from Information Management or the library. They have to sign that they have saved in RDIMS, like I said, all records of business value, all records that are subject to any Access to Information or Privacy requests, all records that are subject to a litigation hold. They have to sign that they have given back any credit cards, that they have given back any keys.

The people that are in charge of each of these elements, so IM, IT, Security, et cetera, have to sign off that each of these steps have been taken before an employee is allowed to depart. I think that is what it looks like.

59. Q. Is this a form that is from the CTA or from the Treasury Board?

A. I don't know. It is a CTA form and it's my understanding that this form is in line with government policy. I have personally had to sign this form at any government that I have had. It is the same sort of form.

I've worked at three different places at the government and I've had to sign that very type of form three times.

60. Q. Have you enquired with the IT what happens with employees' electronic devices, including computer and mobile devices, after they are returned?

A. I only asked if there was a policy and I didn't receive a policy so I don't know what – I mean I personally have received other people's phones so I assume that – I'm talking about when I have returned a phone.

61. Q. I am asking specifically about Mr. Streiner and Ms. Jones's situation.

A. I don't know. It's my understanding that phones are re-issued to employees. As for Mr. Streiner's and Ms. Jones's phones, I don't know.

62. Q. Do you know if they actually returned it?

A. They have to return it in order to be able to leave the Agency. You're not allowed to take phones or computers with you when you leave.

63. Q. I understand what the policy is but what I'm asking is if in fact are you aware if they actually returned their mobile devices.

A. No.

64. Q. Thank you. On this point of whether Ms. Jones and Mr. Streiner actually returned their phones, we'll actually request an undertaking that you verify they in fact had returned their phones and what has been done with the phones thereafter.

MR. SHAAR: We won't be making any undertakings today, Mr. Lin. We will take your request under advisement and get back to you. A

MR. LIN: Thank you. I would ask the same for their computers as well, not just their phones. Mr. Shaar, you have that noted?

MR. SHAAR: Yes. A

MR. LIN: Thank you.

65. Q. Ms. Cuber, you did mention a notification that was sent out April 2020? Is that correct?

A. Yes. About the litigation, yes.

66. Q. You sent out that notification?

A. There are two notifications. One notification is sent out whenever litigation is begun and then in this instance, there was a separate notification to preserve documents that were sent. Both of those notifications were sent by Allan Matte.

67. Q. Do you know what date?

A. Yes. For both of them?

68. Q. For both of them. They were sent separately?

A. Yes. The first notification that went out was sent on April 10th and legal counsel at the Agency has a reporting policy so all of the heads of the branches and all members and the Chair and the Director of Communications are notified of new litigation and so that notification was sent out. I think it was on April 10th, 2020. Separate notifications were sent out on April 14th, 2020, to notify staff that was identified at that time or personnel that was notified or was thought to be relevant at that time of the need to preserve documents. That was April 14th.

69. Q. The April 14th notification that you just mentioned, that's at paragraph 8 of your affidavit?

A. Yes.

70. Q. There you mentioned "to relevant Agency personnel." Can you describe in this instance who the relevant Agency personnel are?

A. Yes. The persons who were notified in fact were the Chair, the Chief of Staff, and all members of the Agency. That was one notification. A notification was sent to the senior general counsel and secretary. That was another notification. A notification was sent to the Director of Secretariat and Registry Services, Patrice Bellerose, and then the Director of Communications, which I believe was Tim Hillier, was notified. I regret it was unclear when I was first reviewing the documents for this affidavit whether the Analysis and Outreach Branch had been contacted but I wasn't able to find a written notification that the Analysis and Outreach Branch was notified and that would be Marcia Jones's branch and so I regret that it seems misleading in my affidavit but that's not intended. It was not clear at the time but I was not able to find a written notification to Ms. Jones or the Analysis and Outreach Branch.

71. Q. You listed six different branches or departments for the notification. Was Mr. Matte's notification in one email or was it six separate emails?

A. I don't know if it was six. Hold on. I think it might have been four and they were separate.

72. Q. Ms. Cuber, I know you said you needed to check. Are you reviewing the email on your screen?

A. No. I was counting on my fingers. I was naming the people like a kindergartener.

73. Q. You were not able to find any written notification to the Analysis and Outreach Branch?

A. No, I was not.

74. Q. Taking a step back, on the April 10th notification that Mr. Matte sent out for litigation, who were the recipients of that?

A. The recipients of that would have been the Chair, all members, and then the heads of each branch so there would have been – I don't have it in front of me but I mean it would be Marcia Jones, Douglas Smith. Ms.

Lagacé would have received it. Like I said, the Director of Communications would have received it. I'm not sure who else. Everyone in Legal Services would have received it and Secretariat, I believe, would have received that notification as well.

75. Q. When you say everyone in Legal Services would have received it, I assume you received it as well?

A. I wasn't working at the Agency at the time so I did not receive it.

76. Q. Have you seen, yourself, the notification that Mr. Matte sent on April 10th?

A. Yes. I didn't see the original. What was saved in RDIMS was the original and then another email. It was sort of together so I saw what he sent but then another email as well that were in a string.

77. Q. In the email that Mr. Matte sent out, did he attach a Notice of Application?

A. I don't know. That's why I want to be careful. It is the practice of Legal Services to attach a notification, to attach the document, but I don't know that he did. What I can say is when I received the motion under Rule 318 on January 4th, 2021, I sent a copy of that to Ms. Jones and she reviewed that. She reviewed the motion on January 5th, 2021.

78. Q. Thank you. In the notification Mr. Matte sent on April 10th, does it make reference to preserving documents?

A. No, I don't recall that it did.

79. Q. Did it mention what the substance of the case was?

A. Yes.

80. Q. Can you tell us briefly what was said in terms of the substance of the case?

A. It was a description of what was contained in the Notice of Application, a summary.

81. Q. It would have been clear to a recipient what the Notice of Application was about?

A. Yes.

82. Q. We started at the Direction to Attend and then went forward a little bit. I want to take a few steps back. What is your current title at the CTA?

A. I am a senior counsel.

83. Q. How long have you been in this role at the CTA?

A. Since August 2020.

84. Q. To whom do you directly report to at the CTA?

A. Valérie Lagacé.

85. Q. Who does Ms. Lagacé report to?

A. The Chairperson.

86. Q. Have you have reported to Mr. Allan Matte?

A. No. Well, no. Sorry. I'm trying to remember when he – no, I have never reported to Allan Matte.

87. Q. Were you the one tasked with ensuring that all the documents in the October Order, the April Order, and July Order are produced?

A. No.

88. Q. Who was tasked with ensuring that all documents of the October Order, the April Order, and July Order were produced?

A. I was tasked with ensuring that all documents under the October Order were produced and then I stopped being assigned to the case because I became an affiant and so the responsibility for the April Order shifted between – I don't actually know the chain of command for who was responsible for the April Order. I informed myself about what was done. I know that Amanda Hamelin was responsible for collecting the responsive documents and so I suppose it would be Amanda Hamelin, but it was not me.

Compliance with the July Order, I don't know that anybody was specifically tasked with that. Legal counsel undertook to provide the documents. I don't know that the tasking was very clear.

89. Q. So is it correct to say you were not directly involved in the gathering of documents and reviewing documents for the April Order and the July Order?

A. That is correct. I was involved in a part of the compliance with the July Order. Namely I was asked, simply because others were on holiday, to verify whether there were any additional members' notes for the Members' Meeting that was in issue. It was March 24th of 2020. To the extent that I participated, it was just to verify that there were no other members' notes.

90. Q. Thank you. Who at the CTA provided you with the authority to gather documents for the October Order?

A. I don't know that I had authority. It was simply because I had carriage of the file, it fell upon me to gather the documents, but I wasn't given a special authority of any kind.

91. Q. Is it fair to say that whoever has carriage of the file will be the one tasked with complying with the order?

A. That's the de facto, I guess, responsibility but yes. This situation was a little bit unique. I was responsible for complying with the October Order. That's what I can say. I was given no special authority or permissions or powers in order to do that.

92. Q. After the April Order was issued, you became an affiant and for a period of time Mr. Matte took over the file? Do you recall?

A. Yes.

93. Q. And then Mr. Sharpe? Sorry. Please continue.

A. Mr. Matte took over carriage of the file for a short while and then Mr. Sharpe.

94. Q. I am going to move back to the notification that Mr. Matte sent on April 14th, 2020. Were you involved at all in preserving documents in relation to that notification?

A. No. There were no documents preserved at that time in relation to that order. I'm sorry. There were no documents collected at that time in relation to that order. The instruction was simply to preserve the documents.

95. Q. You said order. I assume you are referring to the notification?

A. Right. I thought you said the order. I misspoke. There was a notification that went out that advised of the need to preserve documents in connection with the Notice of Application.

96. Q. It's fair to say that there were no active steps taken to actually preserve the documents? It was only the notification that was sent out?

A. I don't know what individuals – individuals were told to preserve documents. There were no active steps taken to collect documents but the notification was to preserve documents. Custodians of documents are to preserve them.

97. Q. It was up to the individual recipient themselves to take steps to preserve the documents? Is that correct?

A. In the sense of not deleting them.

98. Q. Is that a yes? It is up to the individual recipients themselves?

A. As far as I understand it but I don't know that I – I didn't see any other instructions actually so I might be making an assumption. I didn't see any further instructions other than to notify personnel of the existence of the Notice of Application and of the need to preserve documents but I don't have any further information about that. That's what I know of.

99. Q. Do you know if Mr. Matte took any other steps in terms of preserving the documents besides sending out the notification?

A. No.

100. Q. Did you speak with Mr. Matte specifically about this topic?

A. I spoke with him and I understand that he notified personnel to preserve documents but took no steps to collect them.

101. Q. Did he take any steps to confirm that documents are being preserved?

A. I didn't ask that but – I didn't ask him that.

102. Q. So it's fair to say that the only step he took was to send out the April 10th notification and the April 14th notification about preserving documents?

A. Those are the two notifications of which I am aware and that I was given when I requested documents on that topic.

103. Q. Do you know if any of Agency personnel responded to Mr. Matte's April 14th notification?

A. I am aware that there were – I think I saw two. I am aware that there were responses. I can think of two.

104. Q. Do you recall who those two were?

A. Ms. Bellerose responded and Mr. Hillier, who was the Director of Communication.

105. Q. Did you see any other responses besides those two?

A. I can't remember any other responses. It's possible that there were but those are the two that I recall.

106. Q. And you personally have seen their responses?

A. Yes, I have.

107. Q. We'll ask for an undertaking that you produce those two responses.

MR. SHAAR: We'll take it under advisement and get back to you. A

MR. LIN:

108. Q. I'll take a step back. We just asked you about the April 14th notification. About the April 10th notification Mr. Matte sent out, was there any response to that notification?

A. I didn't see any response to that notification. That notification was saved on RDIMS because it's a record of business value. I didn't receive that information directly from Mr. Matte so I didn't see anything else saved in the corporate repository but I also did not ask Mr. Matte if anybody responded.

109. Q. Can I refer you to the Direction to Attend, please? Number 1, we ask for the original notification that was sent on April 14th, 2020, including the names of the recipients. Number 2 is all the responses from the recipients in respect of the notification mentioned therein. Will you undertake to do search and produce number 1 and number 2 to us?

MR. SHAAR: No, we won't make such an undertaking. The Agency has already objected to the production of these documents and the court has ruled on it. R

MR. LIN: Your objection is solely that the court has ruled on it?

MR. SHAAR: I'm not objecting. I've already objected and the court has already ruled on it.

MR. LIN: I guess we will have to debate that in court. Just to be clear, our position, the Applicant's position is the court did not rule on it. The court permitted the Applicant to question about these documents and seek an order accordingly.

110. Q. Can I refer you to paragraph 12 of the Direction to Attend, please? That is the Outlook system logs showing when the following emails were deleted from Ms. Marcia Jones's Outlook account; the first email being a March 18th email from Mr. Colin Stacey and the second email being email sent by Ms. Jones on March 25th, 2020. Ms. Cuber, did you bring those two emails with you today?

A. The emails?

111. Q. Yes, the March 18th, 2020, and the March 25th, 2020.

A. I didn't bring the emails. The Direction to Attend asks for the Outlook system logs.

112. Q. Did you bring the Outlook system logs with you today?

A. No.

113. Q. Why not?

A. Because we don't have them. I can explain. I contacted our Information Technology division twice. The first time I contacted IT was on or around May 4th and I was told at that time that we don't keep, that the Agency doesn't keep, Outlook system logs to that level of specificity and then I verified that answer again with IT on September 13th and they again confirmed that the Agency doesn't keep Outlook system logs to that level of specificity, that when emails are deleted, if I understand, when emails are deleted, they are kept for a couple – a log is kept for a couple of minutes in the form alphanumeric text which would be unreadable to use for an outside observer and then they are deleted. We can't keep the logs of that sort to that level of specificity.

114. Q. You said that level of specificity. Did IT tell you what level of specificity logs are kept to?

A. No because the Direction to Attend said Outlook system logs showing when the following emails were deleted from Ms. Marcia Jones's Outlook account and so I asked them whether Outlook system logs can show when emails were deleted from an individual's Outlook account.

115. Q. Did you ask IT if there are any other ways to determine when an email has been deleted from an Outlook account?

A. I didn't ask that question. I am aware that the Agency keeps backup tapes but for a very limited period of time, as outlined in my affidavit. I can explain that, if you would like, or I can leave it for a question.

116. Q. Please explain it?

A. As it was explained to me, the backup tapes that we usually have are kept on site for a period of 10 days and they are only meant for disaster recovery purposes. Within that period, it might be possible to locate an email that's been deleted if you know exactly what it is you're looking for but it would be very difficult to find, but as far as I understand it, it is possible. After that 10-day period, the backup tapes are moved off site and stored for a period of 12 weeks and then they are returned to the Agency and the Agency records over them again.

117. Q. In this instance, have you verified whether the emails from March 9th to 28th, 2020, are still on the Outlook tapes, the backup tapes?

A. No. No, I didn't because I believe that they wouldn't be there because the October Order came out more than 12 weeks after Ms. Jones left the Agency and there were no signs of the email in the corporate repository RDIMS and there were no signs of the email in the 3,000 emails that I reviewed or 5,099 pages of working copies that I reviewed. Those were the steps I took to check for the email but I didn't check on the backup tapes because I didn't think that they would exist there because they would have been recorded over.

118. Q. But there would have been a notification sent out by Mr. Matte on April 14th, 2020, to preserve documents, correct?

A. Yes, there would have been an email sent out by Mr. Matte to preserve documents. That email was not sent to Ms. Jones but the other difficulty in this is that the majority of emails that are part of this litigation could very well be considered to be transitory records and so in the normal information practices, it could have been perfectly normal for a person to delete the emails at the end of the their day, at the end of the week, at the end of the month.

119. Q. Just to take a step back on the April 14th, 2020 notification, you mentioned that a senior general counsel of the Agency, Ms. Lagacé, would have received that notification?

A. Yes.

120. Q. And she also was Secretary of the Agency? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

121. Q. And she would have oversight over the IT department, correct?

A. I don’t think – I don’t know that that is true. I don’t know.

122. Q. Who has oversight over the IT department?

A. I don't know what the chain of command is off the top of my head. I don't know.

123. Q. Are you suggesting that the IT would have overwritten on the tapes even though there is a notification to preserve documents?

A. Sorry. I don't understand the question. Can you repeat the question?

124. Q. Are you suggesting that IT has already written over the tapes despite there being a notification on April 14th, 2020?

A. Well, I have no knowledge that those tapes were preserved because of the litigation hold. I spoke with IT and Ms. Bellerose about whether, for instance, Access to Information requests will check back on tapes and it's my understanding that it is not the practice that backup tapes are searched in that context but I don't know. I don't believe that we have backup tapes.

125. Q. Is it fair to say you haven't actually searched the backup tapes for the March 18th, 2020, email sent from Mr. Colin Stacey and the March 25th, 2020, email sent by Ms. Marcia Jones that are mentioned in paragraph 12 of our Direction to Attend?

A. No, I have not searched the backup tapes because for the March 18th email, there was no sign that the email – I didn't check it for the March 18th email. What I can say is that for the March 25th email, it was clearly – they were both clearly deleted. I did not check backup tapes, no.

126. Q. You say clearly deleted. How can you be so sure they were clearly deleted?

A. For the March 25th, 2020, email, that email contained search terms that would have been captured by electronic searches of Outlook boxes, most specifically Ms. Jones's Sent box, and so the items that were captured in her Sent box did not reveal that email and that email was not found in any other search results that were obtained by Access to Information and so I think it's pretty clear that it was deleted because otherwise it would have been found.

For the March 18th email, it was not found through any searches, nor was it located in RDIMS.

I would just add that both of those emails could easily have been considered transitory records that did not need to be kept because they were not records of business value.

127. Q. Thank you. On the topic of the March 25th, 2020, email, how can you conclude that it's not of business value when it's so detailed and lengthy and it appears to be an announcement to third parties? How can you conclude it's only transitory?

A. My understanding of transitory records is that – sorry, records of business value – is that they have to advance sort of the policy or a policy objective or advance the work of a government organisation, and each branch or department within the organisation will determine what transitory records means to them. A notification that something that has gone up on the website and two decisions have been issued might not be considered to be of business value. What would be considered to be of business value are the decisions that are cited in that notice and the item that was posted on the website.

128. Q. Are you saying there is no consistent interpretation or view of what transitory stands for and it lies in the hands of the individual department heads to decide?

A. No, I'm not saying that. There are obviously definitions of what transitory records are but they can't get into a level of detail. There is clear definitions for what transitory records are and that is set out in our Information Management policies and it's also, I believe, based on Treasury Board policies but of course, whether an individual record in an individual case will be transitory or of business value will of course need to be determined in context and the context that makes sense for that is for the organisation to have an understanding and then each branch that performs functions within the organisation will have to have a common understanding of what constitutes transitory records and records of business value. The Agency certainly has sort of rules about what records of business value are that are common across the entire organisation and then there are specific instances where of course, based on the type of work you do, something will or will not be of business value.

129. Q. Since you mentioned that, in your view, the two emails in paragraph 12 of the Direction to Attend were clearly deleted, did you enquire with IT on whether those emails could be searched or found in another fashion, whether they could be restored?

A. I did not ask IT about that. I confirmed with Patrice Bellerose that they were deleted and that they couldn't be found. I had a conversation with IT about backup tapes in the winter of 2021, I'm not sure exactly when, about backup tapes. I imagine it would have been after you sent a deficiency letter, I had a discussion with them about backup tapes. It was my understanding at that time that backup tapes could not be searched for these documents.

130. Q. Why did they say backup tapes could not be searched for these documents?

A. Because they are only kept for a matter of 12 weeks and then they are returned to the Agency and recorded over.

131. Q. But there was no actual review of the tapes to confirm whether that was indeed the case, correct?

A. No because it wouldn't have revealed the emails which were sent in 2020 when Ms. Jones left the Agency in May 2021. By the time I enquired about this in December 2021, 12 weeks had elapsed.

132. Q. Did IT advise on any other way that emails could be restored?

A. No. It's my understanding that there is no other way. Unless it's saved in the corporate repository, it can't be restored.

133. Q. Please continue.

A. We have emails that were saved as a result of Access to Information searches that were done and so those are emails that could also – I said unless it's saved in the corporate repository but I should have added that because there is sort of a snapshot taken of documents at a point in time when they are searched, those can also be reviewed and those were reviewed.

134. Q. Just at the start of today's cross-examination you mentioned that former employees' Outlook accounts are closed after they depart. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

135. Q. Did you ask IT to specifically search Ms. Jones's closed Outlook account after learning that these two emails were deleted?

A. No. I asked IT what could be searched and her accounts cannot be searched. It is closed. It cannot be the subject of a search.

136. Q. What do you mean it cannot be subject of a search?

A. It's closed. They can't – I guess like the account is closed. She would have been required under existing Information Management policies and IT policies to save her records of business value in RDIMS to have preserved – her records were collected in the context of two Access to Information requests and preserved and she would have been required to delete all of her transitory records before leaving the agency such that the closure of the account would, if it contained anything, contain only transitory records or records that have otherwise been saved in the corporate repository, 137. Q. The closed accounts, the contents are deleted? Is that correct?

A. Well, the account is no longer accessible. I guess you could say deleted. What I'm saying is the contents of the account are supposed to be managed such that records of business value are saved in the corporate repository. Transitory records are deleted in the course of ordinary information management per our policies and then the account is closed so that there is nothing in it. When an employee leaves, the account should contain nothing in it.

138. Q. Have you checked with IT whether a closed account can be restored?

A. I have asked whether Marcia Jones and Scott Streiner's accounts can be searched and they cannot.

139. Q. I am not asking whether they can be searched. I'm asking whether they can be restored.

A. I didn't use the word restored but it is my understanding that they cannot.

140. Q. So they are permanently deleted? Is that what you are saying?

A. I can't answer that. It's my understanding that they can't be searched so as far as I understand, the accounts are permanently closed.

141. Q. Ms. Cuber, my question is not closed or not. It's whether they --

MR. SHAAR: We've done the tour of the question. She has answered. She's not an IT specialist. She has answered in the vocabulary that she understands on the subject. I mean you've asked the same questions three or four times now. Can we please move on? O

MR. LIN:

142. Q. Ms. Cuber, the understanding is that closed would mean that the account is permanently deleted?

MR. SHAAR: Again you are just repeating your questions, Mr. Lin. She has answered you in the way that she understands it. She is not an IT specialist so I don't see how it is useful to just keep repeating the same question and expecting a different answer. O

MR. LIN:

143. Q. Ms. Cuber, were you about to answer a question?

MR. SHAAR: She has answered your question.

MR. LIN: I believe she was about to say something.

144. Q. Can you please finish your sentence?

A. It's just that my knowledge of information technology is based on the questions that I asked of Information Technology. It was my understanding that as per our Information Management policies, Outlook accounts are not corporate repositories and therefore when departing employees are leaving, they have to save all of their records of business value in the corporate repository, delete any transitory records. After that, their accounts are closed and they are no longer available. I can't use synonyms for words because I'm not sure what the implication – I'm telling you what I have been told and that it was not possible to search in their accounts and that is what I know. It was not possible to search backup tapes because they would have been deleted over and they would not have yielded any results and that as per Information Management policies, both Ms. Jones and Mr. Streiner were required to save their records of business value in RDIMS.

145. Q. Between October 15, 2021, and the present, have you attempted to contact Mr. Scott Streiner to request documents or request his assistance in providing or locating documents for the October Order or the April Order or the July Order?

A. No.

146. Q. Between October 15, 2021, and the present, did you attempt to contact Ms. Marcia Jones to request documents or request her assistance in providing or locating documents for the October Order, April Order, or July Order?

A. No because we had already had an exchange in January 2021 and I knew where to find responsive documents and I knew the documents that she didn't have knowledge of.

147. Q. What do you mean documents she didn't have knowledge of?

A. She indicated that she had no knowledge of anything like meeting minutes or memos on the subject of the Statement on Vouchers and that responsive documents had been collected in the context of Access to Information searches.

148. Q. Did you confirm with Ms. Jones specifically about the March 18th and 25th emails?

A. No because I had no knowledge of those in January 2021.

149. Q. To take a step back, why did you not reach out to Mr. Scott Streiner to seek his assistance in gathering documents or finding documents?

A. He was not with the Agency anymore and I had no reason to believe that he would have access to any documents after his departure. I was tasked with finding documents in the Agency's possession.

150. Q. In terms of Ms. Jones, after you learned that those two emails were clearly deleted, have you made any attempts to contact her to ask her if she could provide assistance in locating the document or maybe she kept a backup?

A. No because I had no reason to believe that she would have kept a backup of those documents. I did not.

I didn't contact her.

151. Q. So you would not know when she deleted them or why she deleted them, correct?

A. No but there are many reasons why somebody might delete an email such as if they consider the email to be --

152. Q. Ms. Cuber, we are not asking you to --

MR. SHAAR: I'm going to object because you're asking the witness whether she knew what was in the state of someone else's mind who deleted email. I think that is a little beyond what we're here for today, Mr. Lin. O

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, Ms. Cuber provided an answer and I only objected because Ms. Cuber appears to be speculating.

MR. SHAAR: Your question was speculative so let's just leave it at that and move on, please.

MR. LIN: We disagree that the question was speculative. Anyway, we'll ask our next question.

153. Q. Do you know if anyone else at the CTA contacted Mr. Shreiner or Ms. Jones in regards to gathering documents for the October Order, April Order, or July Order?

A. I do not believe that anybody contacted Ms. Jones or Mr. Streiner with respect to any of the orders.

154. Q. Let me move to your affidavit, paragraph 33.

Do you have that in front of you, Ms. Cuber?

A. Yes, I do.

155. Q. Here you say, "In addition to reviewing documents from these three searches, on October 26th, 2021, I contacted Lesley Robertson, Executive Coordinator of the Office of the Chair and CEO of the Agency. Ms. Robertson worked directly with the Chair, Scott Streiner, in March 2020."

You made that statement in your affidavit?

A. Yes.

156. Q. Can you tell us what Ms. Lesley Robertson's work duties entailed back in March 2020?

A. I don't know exactly what her duties entailed but I know that she had access to Mr. Streiner's scheduler and that she also had access to documents and that in practice she would have saved records into RDIMS and that she would have access to correspondence involving Mr. Streiner.

157. Q. You say access to Mr. Streiner's scheduler. What is a scheduler?

A. I'm sorry. His Outlook calendar. I apologise. She also had access to other members' calendars so that's why I contacted her.

158. Q. At the time that you contacted her on October 26th, 2021, she still had access to Mr. Streiner's Outlook calendar? Is that correct?

A. No.

159. Q. You just stated that she had access to Mr. Streiner's Outlook calendar.

A. You asked me what her responsibilities were in March 2020 and I am responding to your question which is about what happened in October 2021. That's my understanding of the flow of what was asked.

160. Q. Are you suggesting in October 26, 2021, when you enquired with Ms. Robertson, did she have access to Mr. Scott Streiner's calendar?

A. No.

161. Q. Why not?

A. Because his Outlook account was closed. It was not there anymore.

162. Q. When you reached out to Ms. Lesley Robertson around October 26, 2021, were you asking her to search for anything in particular?

A. Yes, I was.

163. Q. What were they?

A. I asked Ms. Robertson – I explained to her what the October Order was about and I also specifically pointed to interest in meetings that would have occurred the weekend of October 21-22 – sorry. I apologise. It would have been March – I might need a break to get some water – March 21-22, 2020, which was the weekend meetings that had been referred to and so I was trying to obtain information about those, the general scope of the order, and also in particular meetings that might have occurred on that weekend.

164. Q. What was Ms. Robertson's response in terms your enquiry about the March 21 to 22 weekend meetings?

A. What was her response?

165. Q. Yes. What did she say?

A. She provided documents to me and I reviewed the documents to determine if any of them were responsive to the October Order.

MR. LIN: I know you mentioned that you needed a break so maybe now is a good time to take a short break. Just before we get off record, I just want to remind the witness that you are still under cross-examination and we ask that you not speak to anyone else about your evidence. Would 10 minutes be sufficient?

THE WITNESS: That would be great.

MR. LIN: Let's return at 11:37. Thank you.

(SHORT RECESS)

MR. LIN:

166. Q. Ms. Cuber, document number 6 that I sent out this morning, the CTA's Written Representations on February 1st, 2022, you were counsel on this file at the time?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: Can we mark the Written Representations as Exhibit 6, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 6: Written Representations of the Intervener, Canadian Transportation Agency (Pursuant to January 26, 2022, Direction of Justice Gleason), February 1, 2022.

167. Q. Going back to your enquiry with Ms. Robertson on October 26th, 2021, paragraph 33 of your affidavit, you mention there at paragraph 34 that from your exchange with Ms. Robertson she provided five documents, one of them being from Air Transat on March 22nd, 2020. Can you describe to us what other four documents were?

MR. SHAAR: Objection. Relevance. O

MR. LIN:

168. Q. Ms. Cuber, is it correct to say you presented Ms. Robertson with the October Order?

A. Yes. I explained to her what the October Order contained so she had an idea. She knew what the October Order was searching for and I also described in addition to that the specific elements that your client was interested in finding.

169. Q. Based on the search parameters that you provided to Ms. Robertson, she returned with five documents? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

170. Q. Referring to paragraph 35, you say you reviewed each of these documents and determined that one of the documents was responsive to the October Order?

A. Yes.

171. Q. On what basis did you conclude that they were not responsive to the October Order?

A. On the basis of out of the temporal scope of the Order or not being related to the Statement on Vouchers. I will say though just out of transparency that one of the documents was the scheduler for the Members' Meeting on March 24th which I told in submissions to the court I disclosed the existence of but at the time, based on the review and searches that I had done at the time, it appeared to be non-responsive but I disclosed its existence.

172. Q. After the April Order was issued, did you go back and revisit whether any of those four documents would be responsive to the April Order?

A. Yes.

173. Q. And were they responsive to the April Order?

A. No.

174. Q. After the July Order was issued, did you go back to confirm whether those four documents would be responsive to the July Order?

A. No. There was no need to.

175. Q. Why do you say there was no need to?

A. The scheduler for the March 24th Members' Meeting I believe was disclosed in response to the April Order but no, there was nothing in the July Order that changed or required a revisiting of those documents.

176. Q. Did those four documents mention any meetings with Transport Canada between March 21st --

MR. SHAAR: Objection. Relevance. O

MR. LIN: I haven't finished my question, Mr. Shaar.

MR. SHAAR: I know but you're getting into the contents of the four documents that weren't ordered produced by this court.

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, the witness --

MR. SHAAR: I'm finishing my objection, Mr. Lin. We've already objected to the production of the contents of your original request for them in the Notice to Attend. The court has ruled on that. These are documents that were deemed not responsive. The scope of this cross-examination is supposed to be the steps that were taken so if you want to ask about the steps, go right ahead, but if you want to get into the content of non-responsive documents then we are embarking on a fishing expedition and that's not what this cross-examination is for.

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, I had not finished my question and the question is clearly within the scope of cross-examination.

177. Q. Ms. Cuber, did any of those four documents mention any meetings with Transport Canada between March 21st and 22nd, 2020? Yes or no?

A. No.

178. Q. And you have reviewed those documents and you are certain of that?

A. Sorry?

179. Q. You have reviewed those four documents and you are certain that there was no reference to meetings between March 21st and 22nd with Transport Canada?

A. I conducted a search for those documents and my search revealed no such documents. I searched for documents that were responsive to the order and I was aware of the interest in the meetings that you are describing and my search revealed no such documents on that weekend.

180. Q. You say no documents on that weekend?

A. Well, you're asking about that weekend so I am responding about that weekend.

181. Q. Let's go back to Ms. Robertson. Is it fair to say she's responsible for coordinating Mr. Streiner's calendar?

A. It is my understanding but I don't know that she is exclusively in control or in charge of the calendar.

182. Q. But she would have access to it and she would have assisted Mr. Streiner accordingly, correct?

A. That would have been one of her roles, yes. This is why I approached her.

183. Q. Can we go to the Direction to Attend, please, Exhibit 5, paragraph 14? The request that we made was with reference to paragraph 38 of the affidavit, printouts from the Outlook calendars for Mr. Scott Streiner and Ms. Marcia Jones of the scheduled events between March 18th to 25th, 2020, including the weekend of the 21st and 22nd. Did you bring those printouts with you today?

MR. SHAAR: We weren't required to bring them, pursuant to the court's order.

MR. LIN:

184. Q. Ms. Cuber, have you made any enquiry with Ms. Robertson on what events occurred on March 21st and 22nd, 2020, on Mr. Streiner's calendar?

A. When I approached Ms. Robertson, I was looking for responsive documents and specifically those types of responsive documents.

185. Q. Did you ask Ms. Robertson if she has any specific recollection on meetings that occurred that March 21st to March 22nd weekend?

A. Did I ask her if she had any recollection?

186. Q. If she had any recollection whether Mr. Streiner had meetings that weekend?

A. I asked her for documents and she returned documents. That's what I asked her. I presented her with the Order. She was aware that I was looking for documents and she provided the documents that she had.

187. Q. My question is did you ask her if she has any recollection of whether Mr. Streiner had meetings during that March 21st to 22nd, 2020, weekend. That's my question.

A. I didn't ask if she had any recollection.

188. Q. Did you ask her if she has any other records or maybe a physical printout of meetings that occurred that weekend?

A. In none of my searches was I specific as to the format that I was looking for. I was searching for documents and I wasn't restrictive in any way about the format of documents. I was never restrictive about other formats or other – I was looking for responsive documents and I obtained the documents from Ms. Robertson that she gave me that I then reviewed.

In addition to that, I made requests for IT to search across all Agency accounts in order to find responsive documents. I'm sure we'll get to that but I was searching for responsive documents from the people who might have them and also in the broadest possible number of places.

189. Q. Is it fair to say you didn't specifically ask Ms. Robertson whether she has any records on March 21st or March 22nd, 2020?

A. I absolutely asked that.

190. Q. Let's go back to your affidavit, paragraphs 32 to 36. At paragraph 36 you say there is a letter from Air Transat dated March 22nd, 2020. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

191. Q. I will also refer you to the seventh document that I sent out this morning. Is this a letter that was referred to in paragraph 36 of your affidavit?

A. This looks like the letter.

MR. LIN: Can we have this marked as Exhibit 7, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 7: Letter from Jean-Marc Eustache of Air Transat to Scott Streiner, March 22, 2020.

192. Q. Going back to your affidavit at paragraph 33, you say, "In addition to reviewing documents from these three searches." What are "these three searches" you are referring to?

A. I am referring to the – sorry. I'm just going back into my affidavit. I was referring to the two Access to Information requests that were made in 2020 that concerned the Statement on Vouchers as well as the Standing Committee on Transport documents that were in our corporate repository.

193. Q. The two Access to Information searches are paragraphs 17 and 21 of your affidavit and the Standing Committee on Transportation search was at 29 of your affidavit?

A. Yes but the text is at paragraph 18 for the first Access to Information request. The paragraph 23 is the second one but yes, I am referring to it at 21 and then 29 and 30 is the text of the Standing Committee motion.

194. Q. Thank you. I will refer to paragraph 37 and 38 of your affidavit, please. Is Mr. Guindon the manager of IT Services?

A. Yes. This is my understanding of his title.

195. Q. What is the difference between IT and Information Management? Can you describe, please?

A. For the purposes of searching, Information Technology searches in Outlook accounts and I believe that Information Management searches in RDIMS for the purposes of conducting searches but I'm not sure if your question is broader than that.

196. Q. No. Thank you. Was Mr. Guindon the person responsible for conducting the search of Outlook accounts of Agency staff members?

A. Yes. I was put in touch with him in order to conduct a search of that nature so yes.

197. Q. Can we look at document number 8, please? Please let me know when you have it in front of you.

A. I have it.

198. Q. At the top we see your name there and then there is a date, November 26th, 2021?

A. Yes.

199. Q. Our understanding is this corresponds to item number 9 of the Direction to Attend that was provided to us. Do you recognise this document?

A. I recognise the document. I believe it does relate to item 9.

MR. LIN: Can we have this marked as Exhibit 8, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 8: Outlook Search Report for November 26, 2021 search.

200. Q. While we're on this document, you see near the middle of the page there's Items and then there's "799, Estimated number of items was 799"?

A. Yes.

201. Q. Is that the same 799 that's mentioned at paragraph 39 of your affidavit?

A. Yes.

202. Q. I understand this Exhibit 8 is an Outlook search report. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

203. Q. Was this the only Outlook search report that you had been working with for your document search?

A. This was the only search that I conducted and this is the only search document that I am aware of for – I don't know what "working with" means.

204. Q. Was this the only Outlook search report that you relied on for your document gathering?

A. Yes.

205. Q. Thank you. Looking at this report, there's a start time and there's an end time, November 26, 2021, 4:11 pm, and then end time is the same date at 4:14 pm. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

206. Q. Based this start and end time, would you believe that an Outlook search is rather simple to do?

A. I guess.

207. Q. Can I refer you to document number 9 that we sent out this morning? The title in English is IM-IT ATIP Records Retrieval Form?

A. Yes.

208. Q. Do you recognise this document?

A. Yes.

209. Q. Did you complete this document?

A. Yes, I did.

MR. LIN: Can we have this marked as Exhibit 9, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 9: IM-IT ATIP Records Retrieval Form for March 25, 2020 search.

210. Q. Now I will be asking you questions about Exhibits 8 and 9 so if you have those handy, that would be great. Just about this Exhibit 9, on what date did you complete this form? Do you recall?

A. Hold on now. I sent it. It was a Friday at the end of the day so I think it was November 19th. I sent sort of a draft to IT for them to review because I had never filled out a form like that before. I followed up with them on November 22nd and then made some changes to the form as a result of their comments. I would say I completed it on November 22nd, 2021.

211. Q. The version that we have before us, is it the version with IT's comments or the first version that you completed?

A. No. This was the version with IT's comments or as a result of IT's feedback.

212. Q. What was changed after IT provided their feedback? Do you recall?

A. I added search terms in French.

213. Q. And that was the only change that was made from before?

A. As far as I can recall.

214. Q. Just to go back to the form itself, there is French terms highlighted in yellow. Those are additions from IT? Is that correct?

A. I put the proposed additions in and highlighted them in yellow so that they could be easy to see.

215. Q. Thank you. On this form at the very bottom, there is two what I understand are signature lines. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

216. Q. Why is there no signature at the bottom from IT or IM?

A. I don't know why there is no signature at the bottom. What I can say is that in a search of this sort for a litigation file is not the usual – like we don't have a form for searching for things in litigation so I used the ATIP form that they ordinarily use so it wasn't signed. It just was IT needed a form.

217. Q. On the form on the second row is "MS Outlook distribution list that represent the OPI group, Members of this group will be included in the MS Outlook (MS Exchange) search." What does OPI stand for? Do you know?

A. In Access to Information terms, I believe OPI stands for Office of Primary Interest which means the branch or division or section of the Agency that would be most likely to have response documents.

218. Q. In this row, you specify Agency-wide? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

219. Q. Who would this include?

A. All staff and members.

220. Q. Does that include former staff or members?

A. No.

221. Q. Going to the search terms in green on the form, other than the one highlighted in yellow, who drafted those search parameters?

A. I wrote them down so I guess I drafted the search parameters but I had an exchange with Information Technology and I believe I had – no, I might not have had verbal discussions. I had exchanges with them in order to try to target what I was looking for.

222. Q. Is it fair to say they assisted you in coming up with these search terms?

A. I asked for their assistance because I didn't know how the searches worked and I wanted to have – I had no idea how the search would work and so I needed assistance just in understanding technically how it worked and also I was expressing to them the sort of results that I was looking for and I didn't know how to formulate how to achieve those or how to express the results and they basically needed a form to work with that would kind of capture what was being sought and so to that extent, they assisted.

223. Q. I'm looking back at search results, Exhibit 8. The Query line is Refund or Voucher and in French the same terms and COVID or Corona or Pandemic. That is reflected in the first and second line of the parameters that you provided. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

224. Q. How about the third, fourth, and fifth line? Were separate searches run for those?

A. No, they were not run for those because as I understood it, IT couldn't – well, no, they were not run for those. They looked for the search terms and then if anything came up, it would come up using the search term.

225. Q. So there was no specific search run for let's say correspondence with Transport Canada during the weekend of March 21st or 22nd, 2020?

A. Not in this search. It would have captured anything that contained the search terms.

226. Q. But if it didn't contain the search terms as drafted then it wouldn't be captured from this Outlook search?

A. Exactly.

227. Q. Is it correct to say that this search form only searched Outlook as it existed and it won't search the Outlook backup tapes?

A. Exactly. That is correct.

228. Q. Let's go back to Exhibit 8 and in particular the results row. I see in my version it's redacted. Can you describe to us what has been redacted?

A. Yes, I can describe to you what's been redacted. What's been redacted is an alphanumerical line, the entirety of which taken together contains sensitive IT information that could be used for hacking.

229. Q. Would it be fair to say that this deals with search results?

A. I spoke with Information Technology about this on two occasions and I raised that very concern with them. I spoke to them on September 9th about what it was that was sensitive in those lines, so I obtained an explanation of that but when I returned to them to confirm that on September 13th, I raised the question of the unfortunate term results and they agreed that a better term for that would be path but this is a search term or that the parameters on the left-hand side of that report are determined by Microsoft and not by them.

230. Q. You say you received an explanation from IT about it being sensitive. What was their explanation? Can you tell us?

A. Yes. I can tell you that the first part of the line contains a path that would give information about the Agency's infrastructure and the second part of the line contains a link to the mailboxes or mailbox in which search results like this are kept and those mailboxes have restricted access so that not everybody can look at them. The first part of the line is a pathway towards infrastructure that is apparently custom made by the Agency and the second part of the line contains a pathway towards a mailbox.

231. Q. Whose mailbox or mailboxes would that be in this case?

A. As I understand it, it's the search mailbox so when IT does searches like this in Outlook accounts, the search results go into this mailbox and then only certain people are permitted to look at the results. I was given access to the search results in this mailbox and so the line contains information about that, about where in the infrastructure and where the mailbox is.

232. Q. The path would only be accessible from within the CTA? Is that correct?

A. I have no idea. I can't answer that. They told me that it would present a hacking risk so I assumed that it should not be made public. I don't presume that it should not be made public. I discussed with them whether there was something sensitive from a public perspective and that's what they told me so I have to assume it has sensitive information that presented a hacking risk to the public.

233. Q. Let's move further down the first page of the form. There's a start date and there's an end date there. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

234. Q. The start date is March 9th, 2020, and the end date is March 25th, 2020?

A. Yes.

235. Q. Those correspond to the date range that you provided on the form? Do you see that on the form on the left side?

A. Yes.

236. Q. Going back to the search results, the start date March 9th, 2020, at 4:00, -4, end date March 25th, 4:00:59 am, -4, -4 time zone, that would be the Eastern Time Zone? Do you agree?

A. I guess so. I defer to you.

237. Q. We understand from the records that have been disclosed that the Statement on Vouchers was published or released sometime in the afternoon on March 25th, 2020. Would you agree?

A. Yes. I don't know the exact time but it was in the afternoon.

238. Q. Perhaps to put this in context, document number 10, we have an email from Mr. Streiner on March 25th, 2020, at 1:35 pm, with final edits on the Statement on Vouchers. Do you see that?

A. Where are you looking?

239. Q. Document number 10.

A. Yes.

240. Q. On the second page there is a line that appears to be a tracked change that was added "24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases." This was sent out at 1:35 pm on March 25th, 2020?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: Could we have this marked as Exhibit 10, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 10: Email from Scott Streiner to Marcia Jones, March 25, 2020, 1:35 pm, Statement on Vouchers.

241. Q. Let's go back to the search results. Ms. Cuber, just on the topic of Exhibit 10, you recall seeing this document previously, this email?

A. I believe this document was released as part of the December 14th disclosure so I must have seen it. It's out of context but I believe I would have.

242. Q. Fair enough. Let's go back to Exhibit 8, the search results. Based on the end date here, March 25th, 2020, 4:00 am Eastern Time Zone, this Outlook search would not have captured any activity after 4:01 am on March 25th? Would you agree?

A. That's probably true.

243. Q. Why was the end time set at 4:00 am on March 25, 2020?

A. I don't know. I didn't ask for that but I didn't – I don't know.

244. Q. When did you first learn that it was set at 4:00 am?

A. Moments ago.

245. Q. I assume there was no request to IT to ensure that the search captured the full day of March 25th, 2020? Is that correct?

A. No. I assumed that – I didn't know that they would pick time so I just put the date range. If I can – anyway, you might get to it in your questions.

I would note that that document was found as a result of previous electronic searches that span all the way into April at the very least, so April 8th or 9th, so as a result of other searches that were done, that document was found.

246. Q. To be clear, those other searches you are referring to, you are referring to the ATIP searches?

A. Yes.

247. Q. And those had different search terms? Do you agree?

A. Yes.

248. Q. In terms of search terms that you drafted, Refund or Voucher, same terms in French, and COVID or Corona or Pandemic, that search did not capture the whole time period that the court had required?

A. I guess that's true.

249. Q. Let's go back to the search query. I'm looking at the search query on Exhibit 8. The query says Refund of Voucher, the same in French, and COVID or Corona or Pandemic. Do you know if this search was limited only to the subject field of Outlook items or the body of emails or did it also include the content of attachments?

A. It included the subject, the body, and the content of attachments.

250. Q. Thank you. You might need to zoom in a little bit to see this but let's look at the query. There is no space between the Refund and the Or. Have you enquired with IT whether this would affect search results in any way? It's presumably a different word.

A. Yes, I have enquired with IT about whether that would have affected the search results and indeed it would have. It would have looked for the word Refund*Or.

251. Q. When did you make that enquiry?

A. I was enquiring about this last week when I noticed it.

252. Q. After you learned about it and enquired, did you run a further search with the proper spacing?

A. No. I didn't think it was necessary because there were over 3,000 emails that had been collected and reviewed in the context of complying with the court's order. There was a 5,099-page working copy of documents concerning or containing the word Voucher or Statement that had been collected in different ways in the context of ATIP searches. There were additional searches done in April in response to the April Order and I had made enquiries with various people in the Agency and so no additional search was done.

253. Q. You said there was an additional search in April. Who conducted that search?

A. Amanda Hamelin conducted the search.

254. Q. Do you know if she ran a similar Outlook search like the one we see here?

A. No. She ran a different type of search.

255. Q. What was the different type of search? Can you describe it?

A. Yes, I can. She contacted the invitees to Executive Committee Meetings and Members' Committee Meetings and she asked a series of questions aimed at obtaining responses and documents.

256. Q. Did she get responses from every one of those invitees?

A. Everyone who works at the Agency, yes. She ensured that each person who was contacted provided their response, yes.

257. Q. Did those people provide documents in response?

A. Yes, if they had documents but if they didn't have documents, they said, "I have no documents."

258. Q. And those documents were reviewed?

A. Yes.

259. Q. Who reviewed them?

A. Counsel reviewed them.

260. Q. Would that be you?

A. No.

261. Q. I assume that would be Mr. Sharpe?

A. I think it would have been Mr. Matte. Actually, I don't know. I wasn't – I think it would have been Mr. Matte.

262. Q. Taking a step back on this Outlook search that you've conducted, do you know if this Outlook search would have captured calendar items or is it just emails?

A. Yes. I specifically ensured that it would have captured calendar items.

263. Q. Thank you. Let's go to document number 11, please. We had some brief discussions about it earlier today. It's an email to Colin Stacey, March 18th, 2020, at 5:28 pm. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

264. Q. Do you recall this email being disclosed as part of the disclosure from the Agency?

A. Yes. I believe it was disclosed – it was part of the December 14th disclosure but I can't remember if this was disclosed a little bit later than that because of possible privilege claims but yes, I recognise this. It was in response to the October Order.

MR. LIN: Can we have this marked as Exhibit 11, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 11: Email from Marcia Jones to Colin Stacey, March 18, 2020, 5:28 pm.

265. Q. Just scrolling down, we see an email from Mr. Stacey March 18th, 2020, at 2:57 pm. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

266. Q. This is the email that's described at paragraph 12(a) of the Direction to Attend? The Direction to Attend is Exhibit 5.

A. Yes.

267. Q. You agree that's the email that is described at 12(a)?

A. The 2:57 pm email, it is my understanding that that is what you are referring to at 12(a).

268. Q. The email that Mr. Stacey sent out at 2:57 pm?

A. Yes.

269. Q. We had this discussion earlier that this original email from Mr. Stacey was clearly deleted. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

270. Q. Let's go back to the search terms in Exhibit 8, the search query. Would you agree with me that this query would not have captured, would not have found the original email because Mr. Stacey's email does not contain the word COVID or Corona or Pandemic?

A. I think you're right. It would not have captured that email with those search terms. What I did to make sure that I wasn't wrong in saying that the email was deleted was that I looked through the documents that we had collected and I looked myself and spoke with staff to ensure that looking for the actual names Colin Stacey and Marcia Jones in RDIMS would reveal whether there was the original email in RDIMS and I also searched by using "From MinO" because you see the title is kind of an usual title that wouldn't be expected to get very many hits if searched in RDIMS and the only search I had was the document that was disclosed.

271. Q. You mentioned that you search "From MinO." Why did you conduct that search?

A. If you look at the title, it says "Forward: From MinO," the subject line. I searched for any document that would contain that and I got search results but it was just this.

272. Q. You're saying you did a search but are you saying you searched within the body of documents you already had or are you conducting a new search in RDIMS or --

A. In the corporate repository of RDIMS.

273. Q. But you did not conduct a new Outlook search based on "From MinO," correct?

A. No, I did not.

274. Q. And you also did not conduct a search for Colin Stacey or just Stacey during that time period, March 9th to 25th, 2020, correct?

A. No because Marcia Jones's account would not have been searchable so the places to look would have been in the existing documents that she referred me to when she was still employed at the Agency which were the ATIP documents and then the RDIMS repository in case there was anything that was placed in there.

275. Q. If we look back at Exhibit 11, yes, the original email Ms. Jones was the only recipient but thereafter Ms. Jones seems to have copied a number of individuals. Some of them appear to be employees of the Agency, correct?

A. Yes.

276. Q. Can you tell us for certain that Mr. Stacey did not respond to this March 18th, 2020, email?

A. What would have come up in a search – actually, it's very unfortunate that the "Refund or" wasn't captured because of the typo but what ended up being captured was the word Credit in English because you will see in French the word Crédit means voucher and the system can't actually account for any accents so it looks for the word Credit and so I assume it would have captured the word Creditors which is in Mr. Stacey's email and it didn't capture that because there is the word COVID in the top here, COVID-19, and there's the word Creditors down here. Presumably it would have captured anything else that was in anybody's Outlook account at that time.

277. Q. But the word Refund was not searched, correct?

A. No. That's true at that time but there were other searches done and in different ways, both by asking individuals for responsive document and by searching for other search terms.

278. Q. But this specific query that you asked to be searched would only have the word Voucher and Rembourse or Crédit in French and COVID, Corona, or Pandemic, correct?

A. This search contained those search terms.

279. Q. And there were no specific searches for emails to and from Mr. Stacey during the March 9th to 25th, 2020, time period?

A. There was a specific search done in the corporate repository.

280. Q. But there was no specific search done for Outlook?

A. No.

281. Q. Have you taken steps to enquire of Mr. Stacey about retrieving that original email that Mr. Stacey sent at 2:57 pm on March 18th, 2020?

A. No, I have not.

282. Q. Why not?

A. Because that email was found in the collection of documents that Transport Canada had provided as part of the Standing Committee disclosure and so presumably if he had the original, he would have produced it as part of that disclosure package since they produced this document.

283. Q. But you have not made a specific enquiry with Mr. Stacey or with Transport Canada about the original of this email, correct?

A. No because my interpretation of my role was that under Rules 317 and 318 of the Federal Court Rules was that I was to produce documents in the Agency's possession and so I wouldn't possess Mr. Stacey's documents.

284. Q. I understand the answer is that you did not make a specific enquiry.

A. No.

285. Q. Thank you.

A. Of Mr. Stacey, I did not.

286. Q. How about anyone else at Transport Canada? Did you make a specific enquiry?

A. I made no enquiries with anyone at Transport Canada.

287. Q. You assumed that Transport Canada didn't have the original email just because they did not produce it in their disclosure bundle? Is that correct?

A. I can say that they didn't produce it. I didn't contact them because that wasn't my job but I noted that that email wasn't part of their bundle and it also wasn't part of any of the search results that I had or any of the searches that were conducted.

288. Q. So based on that, you presumed that the original did no longer exist?

A. I guess I shouldn't have presumed that. That might have been wrong of me to have. I think I might have said that. I think I said I knew that it would have been disclosed if they had it but I have no knowledge of what Transport Canada does so maybe I was talking out of school.

289. Q. Let's go back to Exhibit 11. At the top it says, "Hi Colin. I am sending this unencrypted as our remote network access is patchy and we are not able to open encrypted emails on our Samsungs at the Agency."

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

290. Q. Did you look into why Ms. Jones was referring to encryption there?

A. No.

291. Q. Did you enquire with IT why there is reference to encryption?

A. No.

292. Q. Is it the CTA's policy to send emails encrypted?

A. I am aware of no policy by which the Agency sends encrypted email.

293. Q. Right here we see Ms. Jones saying, "I am sending this unencrypted as our remote network access is patchy." It seems to suggest that Ms. Jones would have sent encrypted emails on her own previously. Do you agree?

A. I can't make that assumption. I don't know why she said that. I can't speak to why she said that.

294. Q. Did you enquire with IT what the policy is in terms of encrypting emails?

A. No.

295. Q. Did any of the search results that were returned, the 799 search results, did they reveal any encrypted emails?

A. I'm not aware of the distinction between encrypted and unencrypted emails. I read the document and I don't know if I would be able to tell the difference between an encrypted and unencrypted email based on the search results that I received. I didn't have to unencrypt any emails in the search results that I obtained.

296. Q. Just to be clear, you did not enquire with IT about encrypted emails? Is that correct?

A. I didn't enquire with IT about this email and its encryption. I just got email results and I looked at the email results and I am not aware of whether there are encrypted or unencrypted emails from among the search results. Like I don't know how I would tell the – I don't know how to tell the difference from within the search results that I obtained.

297. Q. You said from the search results you obtained you didn't have to unencrypt anything. Is it fair to say that the search results you received were all unencrypted emails?

A. I don't know because I received things that were in PDF format and I received – I didn't receive just emails. I received packages of documents and there were collections in RDIMS and so I don't know if I would tell if one of those were encrypted or not. I reviewed all emails and I have no knowledge that any document was an encrypted document or not.

298. Q. Just to be clear, I'm referring to the Outlook search that you requested that is at Exhibit 8. In your review of that search, there was no requirement for you to unlock or unencrypt any of the Outlook items, correct?

A. Correct. I don't recall having to unlock any encrypted items.

299. Q. No enquiries were ever made with IT about searching encrypted emails? Is that correct?

A. I didn't have to make an enquiry with IT about searching encrypted emails because I didn't come across any encrypted email.

300. Q. From what we see here in Ms. Jones's response, it is suggesting that Mr. Stacey's original email was encrypted. Do you agree?

A. That could be the case.

MR. SHAAR: You seem to be getting into the content of documents and not the search that was performed by the affiant. If you want to phrase your question as a search that was being performed then I think she has answered you anyway but now we're getting into the contents of documents which I think exceeds the scope of this cross-examination.

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, respectfully, we're asking about encrypted versus non-encrypted emails and that is well within the scope of --

MR. SHAAR: Then you can ask her about those but if you want to talk about what the content of this email says – again, feel free to ask about encrypted emails. I think she has answered you the best she can but you're going into a specific email and you're asking her to confirm or not confirm what's written in this email. I think getting into the content of the documents here is outside the scope of what she did to answer the court's orders.

MR. LIN:

301. Q. Ms. Cuber, is it correct to say that you did not ask IT to do a specific search for encrypted emails?

A. I did not ask them to do a specific search for encrypted emails.

302. Q. Do you know if IT has any policy in terms of encrypted emails?

A. No.

303. Q. Were you informed of any policies in regards to encrypted emails?

A. No.

MR. LIN: I see that we're heading into lunchtime so maybe this is a good time to break for lunch. Would 45 minutes be sufficient?

MR. SHAAR: That's fine with me.

MR. LIN: Is everyone else okay with 45 minutes?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. LIN: How about we return 45 minutes from now, 1:15 Toronto time? Just before we break for lunch, Ms. Cuber, same thing as before. We ask that you not speak with anyone about the evidence. Thank you.

(LUNCH RECESS)

MR. LIN:

304. Q. Ms. Cuber, can we go back to Exhibit 8, please, the search results? From our discussion before lunch, we know that there were some concerns with these search results, namely the query Refund*Or, an issue with the spacing, and also the end date not capturing the full extent of the time, namely March 25th, the day when the Statement on Vouchers was issued. Also in looking at Mr. Colin Stacey's March 18th email, we noticed that his original email did not have the key words COVID, Corona, or Pandemic. Do you recall that?

A. Yes. I'm looking for that email.

305. Q. His email is Exhibit 11 at the bottom. We see those three concerns, one being the spacing between Refund*Or and the additional parameters COVID, Corona and Pandemic, and the end date not capturing the full time period, those three concerns. We are requesting an undertaking to do an Outlook search with these three issue rectified, namely the spacing between Refund*Or with proper spacing, without the additional parameters COVID, Corona, Pandemic, and also the end date being March 25th, 11:59 pm in that triple time zone. Mr. Shaar, I assume you have that noted?

MR. SHAAR: Can you repeat it? I'm taking it down.

MR. LIN: A new Outlook search similar to Exhibit 8 but without the three issues that I identified, one being the spacing between Refund*Or, and without the parameters COVID or Corona or Pandemic, and also with the correct time period up until the end of day March 25th, 2020. We request that you do a search with the revised parameters and produce to us any documents from the search that have not already been produced.

MR. SHAAR: We'll take it under advisement. I have concerns that if the search terms are limited to Voucher or Refund, that that is going to include an incredible amount of documents at the Agency given the nature of our business. I would also point out looking at the email that the word Voucher is included so the email from Mr. Stacey would have been captured by the search in its current terms. We will take it under advisement but I raise those concerns with you now. A

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, just to be clear, Mr. Stacey's email did not have the terms COVID, Corona, or Pandemic so Mr. Stacey's original email or emails similar to Mr. Stacey's would not have been captured in this search.

MR. SHAAR: It was nonetheless produced.

MR. LIN: Well, we can't say what other emails would there be without actually doing the search and that is our request. If there is any concern about there being an excessive amount, we see that the time required to do the initial search does not seem to be significant. It takes three minutes, according to the search. That is our request on the record. We request an undertaking for that.

MR. SHAAR: I'll take it under advisement and we'll look into your request.

MR. LIN: We are certainly open to revising the undertaking if it produces too many results.

306. Q. Ms. Cuber, can we go to document number 12, please? This is an email from Mr. George Petsikas, March 25th, 2020, at 3:18 pm, to Ms. Jones. Do you recall this email?

A. I believe that it was produced in December 2021.

MR. LIN: Can we have this marked as Exhibit 12, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 12: Email from George Petsikas to Marcia Jones, March 25, 2020, 3:18 pm.

307. Q. When we scroll to the bottom below Mr. George Petsikas's response, we see an email from Ms. Jones at 2:34 pm that is sent from Ms. Jones to herself, copied to Ms. Caitlin Hurcomb and Mr. Allan Burnside. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

308. Q. This is the email that is referred to in paragraph 12(b) of the Direction to Attend? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

309. Q. We see here that Mr. George Petsikas was not in the To recipients list or the CC recipients list. Do you agree?

A. Yes.

310. Q. Also look at document 13, please. This is an email from Jason Kerr at CAA on March 25th at 4:11 pm. Do you recall seeing this email previously?

A. I believe this was also produced in December 2021.

311. Q. When we scroll down, we also see an email, this time from Air Consultations?

A. Yes.

312. Q. It is sent March 25th, 2020, at 4:01 pm?

A. Yes.

313. Q. We also see that Mr. Kerr was not on the To list or the CC list. Do you agree?

A. Yes, I agree.

314. Q. Do you agree that this email would be captured by paragraph 12(b) of the Direction to Attend?

A. The email --

315. Q. Exhibit 13.

A. Yes. Well, hold on. It is certainly an update. I had never noticed that it was sent by Air Consultations.

MR. LIN: That's my next question. Before we do that, can we mark Exhibit 13, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 13: Email from Jason Kerr to Marcia Jones, March 25, 2020, 4:11 pm.

316. Q. We see between Exhibit 12 and 13 that the time was a little different. The first one, Exhibit 12, was sent at 2:34 pm from Ms. Jones's account directly and then Exhibit 13 was sent from Air Consultations about an hour and a half later. Do you see that?

A. That would appear to be so, yes.

317. Q. Was it your understanding previously that it was only an email sent from Ms. Jones? I see that you were a bit surprised when we looked at the Air Consultations reference.

A. Yes. I had never noticed that. In any event, the reason I produced these documents was because they were responsive to the court's order but I didn't – they would have been responsive to the court's order no matter what so they were produced.

318. Q. Just taking a step back, Exhibit 13, Air Consultations, what is that precisely? Do you know?

A. No, I don't know.

319. Q. Who controls that mailbox? Do you know?

A. No, I don't know.

320. Q. Do you know which department would have controlled that mailbox?

A. No, I don't know.

321. Q. We know that Ms. Marcia Jones left the CTA but do you know if this Air Consultations mailbox is still active?

A. No.

322. Q. You don't know --

A. I don't know but this email should have come in an electronic search that was done in November 2020 because it contains search terms that were used for an electronic search of mailboxes at that time. I mean I presume that it would have been captured but I don't know that mailbox. I just looked for documents and produced the ones that were responsive.

323. Q. We will request an undertaking that you search this mailbox for the original email that we sent March 25th, 2020, at 4:01 pm, that would contain the BCC list of recipients. Mr. Shaar, I assume you noted that request?

MR. SHAAR: Yes. We'll take it under advisement. A

MR. LIN: A further request is we see that there is two emails, one documented in Exhibit 12 and one documented in Exhibit 13. I would ask that you also confirm how many such emails with this subject line, "Update: CTA measures" --

MR. SHAAR: Can you slow down a bit, please, Mr.

Lin?

MR. LIN: Sure. We see from Exhibit 12 and 13 that there is at least two emails sent out under this subject line.

MR. SHAAR: Let's start with Exhibit 12. What is it you want from Exhibit 12? A

MR. LIN: It's not specific to Exhibit 12. Can you let me finish, please?

MR. SHAAR: Yes.

MR. LIN: From the two exhibits we see, there's two emails sent out during the course of March 25th, 2020, with this subject line. Our request is for you to confirm how many such emails were sent out and whether these two were the only two emails that were sent out. In other words, did Ms. Jones send out another email on that day at a different time with this subject line or did Air Consultations send out the same email with the same subject line on that day, and to produce to us the original copy of those emails.

324. Q. Ms. Cuber, based on your reaction earlier, is it correct to say that you haven't specifically searched in the Air Consultations mailbox?

A. I haven't specifically searched in the Air Consultations mailbox. What was searched was the words Statement On Vouchers and Statement and Vouchers throughout the corporate repository and in Agency mailboxes, and individuals at the Agency were asked to provide their responsive documents. That's what was done. I have not specifically looked in that mailbox and I don't know what it – I don't have details about it.

325. Q. Do you know if it's still active and operational?

A. I don't know anything about that mailbox.

326. Q. But you knew that mailbox existed? Is that correct?

A. No, I didn't know that mailbox – like I don't know anything about that mailbox. I didn't notice the fact that it was from that mailbox until now, and in fact, your Direction to Attend refers to the original and your deficiencies have consistently referred to Marcia Jones's original email out and so that's what I was looking for in order to address your concerns about deficiencies.

327. Q. Respectfully, at the bottom of Exhibit 13 we see Ms. Jones's signature at the bottom so it is obviously an email that she sent. Would you agree? At the very bottom it has her contact details and her signature.

A. Yes but your deficiency says email, single, sent by Marcia Jones on March 25th, 2020, with the subject line, "Update: CTA measures/Mise à jour: mesures prises par l'OTC," so that's what the focus of attention was.

328. Q. You're stating that there was no specific search conducted in relation to this Exhibit 13 email that was from Air Consultations, correct?

A. I know that there were searches done for words that would have captured those terms and that people were asked to provide responsive emails in the context of ATIP searches. I can't say that there was no search done and whatever searches were done did reveal this, the response back, so I can't say one way or another. I mean nothing was specifically targeted to that but I think that the searches were sufficiently broad that if there were something, they would have included that email.

329. Q. We've made our request and we will wait to hear back from Mr. Shaar.

A. Can I just check one thing? My apologies. I just want to check one thing just so that I get a clear – may I just have a moment with this exhibit?

330. Q. Sure. Which exhibit are you talking about, 12 or 13?

A. I'm looking at Exhibit 13 but even in the Air Consultations – no. I see what you're saying because it was on March 25th. Okay.

331. Q. Let's go to document number 14. Sorry. Let's take a step back to Exhibits 12 and 13. Can you tell us, Exhibit 12, which search this email came from?

A. I don't remember and there were a lot of redundancies in the searches so I can't specifically recall. There were a lot of repeat hits throughout the searches. It may have been more than one.

332. Q. How about Exhibit 13? Do you recall which search results this came from?

A. Exhibit 13? I mean it must have been – if I go by your logic, it probably wasn't the search that I asked IT to conduct because that email would have come in after, as you pointed out, after the timeframe of the search since it ended at midnight so it probably wasn't that search. I would imagine that it was the search that was done previously in November 2020 using the words Statement On Vouchers and Statement and Vouchers since those terms are – it contained the word Statement and it contained the word Vouchers so it must have been in a previous search. It probably wasn't in the search that I asked to be conducted in November 2021. It would have been in ATIP searches.

333. Q. Did the search results indicate who saved these emails?

A. No. I don't even know how to --

334. Q. Actually, let me reframe. For Exhibit 12 and 13, we would ask that you confirm for us whether these were saved on RDIMS and also who saved them on RDIMS.

A. I'm sorry, no. They wouldn't have been saved in RDIMS. Well, they could have been saved in RDIMS. Sorry. What I can say is that I searched Marcia's personal Sent box hits in Outlook searches so they were not in RDIMS. They were contained in Outlook searches and I was careful to ensure that by looking at the Sent hits from the search that I was looking through, that if there was no hit, it is because that document had been deleted from the Sent box for Marcia so I was quite confident that – because it would have been captured if it were in her Sent box. It would have been captured because it would have taken a snapshot.

In November 2020, her email out was certainly deleted and then it was not found in RDIMS either but I don't know about the other In box but I didn't see a message out at any other time. That's all I can say for now.

335. Q. Just following up on what you said, you said you searched Ms. Jones's Out box. When did that occur?

A. In November 2020, there was a search done in Outlook accounts and it takes a snapshot and it will save responsive documents according to where they are in a person's Outlook account. It would say "Marcia Jones" and then it would say "Calendar" and then you could open the calendar and you could see the hits for that day or it would say "In box" and then you would get all the hits containing just those search terms.

It's not a snapshot of her entire In box but it is a snapshot of what was sent out that contains those search terms, what was in the In box that contains those search terms, what was in the calendar that contains those search terms in November 2020. A similar exercise had been performed in May 2020.

336. Q. Are you saying that were similar search results pages like the one in Exhibit 8 in May 2020 and also November 2020?

A. There were similar – yes. There were similar results of the type I've just described for – I want to be careful because it related to a May 2020 Access to Information request but I don't know that the search was actually conducted in May 2020. When I say May 2020, I'm just saying in relation to the May 2020 Access to Information request. A snapshot of responsive hits was taken in May and a snapshot of responsive hits was taken in November for search terms that had been used for those ATIP requests.

337. Q. A search result like the one in Exhibit 8 would have been produced for each of those two searches? Is that correct?

A. No, I didn't see – I don't think the first search would have – I don't remember seeing it in the first collection of searches. I can't remember actually. I don't know.

338. Q. We'll make a request that you verify whether there were similar search results documents like the one in Exhibit 8 for the two searches that you just mentioned, May 2020 and November 2020. If those exist, we ask that you produce them to us. Mr. Shaar, I assume you have it noted?

MR. SHAAR: We'll take it under advisement and get back to you. A

MR. LIN:

339. Q. Let's go to document 14, please. Ms. Cuber, do you recognise this document?

A. Yes.

340. Q. Do you agree that this corresponds to item 13 in the Direction to Attend?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: Can we mark this as Exhibit 14, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 14: IM-IT ATIP Records Retrieval Form for November 13, 2020 search.

341. Q. With reference to your affidavit, is this the search that is referred to in paragraph 13 of your affidavit?

A. It's only one search. There were many searches done in RDIMS but this is the only document that would show what was actually searched. When an individual looks in RDIMS for responsive documents such as in this case if counsel asked someone to look for responsive documents and they perform a search in RDIMS to retrieve responsive documents, that's not documented on any piece of paper so there is largely no way to produce documentation about RDIMS searches but this was an exception and so I considered it to be responsive to the item in the Direction to Attend. To answer your question, it doesn't represent all the searches that were done in RDIMS by any means.

342. Q. Going by this document – my question was very simple – this search form is the search that you refer to in paragraph 13 of your affidavit? Is that correct?

A. No because it's only one search. I said RDIMS was searched for responsive documents and this relates to that but it doesn't complete that sentence. Like this doesn't represent the entirety of RDIMS searches so I have to say no.

343. Q. Do you have a record of all the RDIMS searches that were made in relation to this Access to Information request?

A. In relation to this Access to Information request, no.

344. Q. Just going back to this form, I'm at the very top, third row, "MS Outlook distribution list that represent the OPI group." There's five listed there. Can you explain to us what AOB is?

A. The Analysis and Outreach Branch. That would be what would have been Marcia Jones's branch.

345. Q. How about the next one, ESB_LS?

A. That's Legal Services.

346. Q. What does ESB stand for?

A. Enabling Services Branch. It's sort of an internal services branch at the Agency that provides internal support services. Legal Services falls into that.

347. Q. How about the next one, OCC?

A. The Office of the Chair and CEO. That would involve the Chair and members.

348. Q. How about the fourth one, Doug Smith?

A. He was a branch head. I think he was the Dispute Resolution Branch head. He would have been a member of the Executive Committee.

349. Q. How about Tom Oommen?

A. Tom Oommen I believe at that time I believe he was the head of the Compliance and Enforcement Branch. He is also a member of the Executive Committee.

350. Q. We see there are only five branches or individuals listed here. Is it fair to say that this search was not Agency-wide?

A. This search does not appear to be Agency-wide. It would have captured, I guess, what was regarded as the most implicated accounts related to the Statement on Vouchers.

351. Q. Does this include the members?

A. Yes.

352. Q. Under which of the five?

A. Office of the Chair and CEO.

353. Q. Scroll to the bottom of the form, please. On page 1, three lines above the signature lines, we see that there is a box marked "Emails were found."

A. Yes.

354. Q. Can you tell us about that? How many emails were found?

A. 1,417 I think is the number I put in my affidavit. I believe that's the number of emails that were found.

355. Q. How did you come up with the 1,417 number?

A. Because I looked at the search results and it says how many items there are in total in relation to that search.

356. Q. This would have generated similar search results as the one in Exhibit 8, correct?

A. It would have a search results page.

357. Q. Like Exhibit 8?

A. You're talking about the report or are you talking about the results?

358. Q. I'm asking you because you say very confidently there was 1,417 Outlook items and I'm asking you how you got the 1,417. I'm asking you is it because there is a similar --

A. No. I know that because there was a – every ATIP request search in Outlook will generate like a folder of results and when you look at the bottom of the folder, it will say how many results there are. That's how I know how many results there are.

359. Q. Let's do a quick comparison between this Exhibit 14, the search terms in Exhibit 14, and the search terms in Exhibit 9. Would you agree that the search query is different between Exhibit 9 and Exhibit 14?

A. Yes.

360. Q. Specifically on the one in Exhibit 14, if the word Statement does not show up, if the word Statement is not in the document then it will not be returned in these search results, correct?

A. Right.

361. Q. Is it fair to say this search in Exhibit 14 is narrower than the one in Exhibit 9?

A. Narrower?

362. Q. Narrower in the sense that it requires the word Statement to be present?

A. I don't know if it would be. I guess yes, I suppose in the sense that Statement has to be present.

363. Q. This one also does not contain the word Credit, correct?

A. No, it doesn't contain the word Credit.

364. Q. If there were documents that only mentioned Vouchers, Credits, or Refund but does not have the word Statement then it will not be captured by this Exhibit 14 search, correct?

A. No but there were other searches done. This was not the only search done in relation to that request. This does not represent the – I just want it to be clear that these searches are cumulative. There are different searches done using different terms over time. This search required the word Statement. Other searches did not. There were other ways of searching as well. This does not represent the entirety of search results in relation to ATIP requests. I just want that to be clear.

365. Q. Can you tell us exhaustively what search terms were used?

A. What I can tell you is that in relation to the first ATIP request that was received in May 2020, the Office of the Chair and CEO and the Analysis and Outreach Branch were asked to produce their own responsive documents and so they would have determined which documents were responsive to the Statement on Vouchers' development. Those search results from that sort of search among custodians were imported into the working document for this second Access to Information request that came from Gábor Lukács.

There were different ways of searching and there was also a search done in RDIMS and so there were different ways of searching and there was also an RDIMS search done in relation to the first ATIP request that was also imported, to the extent that it was relevant, into the second Access to Information request.

366. Q. You mentioned the custodians of each branch. It would be up to the heads or custodians of each of those branches to provide the responsive documents? Is that what you're suggesting?

A. I am not suggesting that. I am saying that the office of primary interest will be – in that case, it will be the Analysis and Outreach Branch, and it would be the Office of the Chair and CEO would be notified of the Access to Information request and then they have a process in order to have individuals produce their responsive documents at that time and those are collected. I don't know who approves or is responsible for, in the chain of command, what the organisational structure of that process is.

367. Q. Let's take a step back. This form, Exhibit 14, from my understanding, it looks like it was from the November ATIP search. For the May ATIP search --

A. 2020.

368. Q. For the May 2020 ATIP search, did it cover the Analysis and Outreach Branch?

A. I don't know. I don't have – well, yes. The May 2020 searches covered the Analysis and Outreach Branch, yes. I don't have details on the electronic searches that were done. I know that the request to provide documents from individuals was addressed to the Analysis and Outreach Branch but I don't have details on the electronic searches that were done.

369. Q. Is it correct to say that there would have been a similar form for the May 2020 request?

A. I've looked for a form and I asked for a form but it wasn't documented in the same way as the others. They didn't have a form like this. I provided the forms that I had.

370. Q. You said they didn't document it this way. In what way did they document the May 2020 request?

A. They didn't document – like I don't have documents that would – I mean I don't have documents that would show what was actually inputted or what was – I don't have those details.

371. Q. But you know for certain that the Analysis and Outreach Branch was notified in May 2020 of that Access to Information request?

A. Yes. I've seen the email to tell them that they had to look for documents and I know that documents were produced and then they were put into the second Access to Information request search results and that's where I saw them.

372. Q. The May 2020 Access to Information request, this is the one in paragraph 18 of your affidavit?

A. Yes.

373. Q. Would it be fair to say that Ms. Jones's department would have known of this request here on or around May 5th, 2020?

A. Yes. I think they were told towards the end of May. I don't know if she was told before that but I know that they were asked to provide documents around the end of May 2020.

374. Q. You say you know they were asked. Was it in an email? Was it in a memo?

A. It was an email.

375. Q. And you saw that email?

A. Yes.

376. Q. Can you tell us what that email said specifically in terms of the request?

A. It reproduces the text of the request and then it provided a long list of instruction for how to provide responsive documents, collect and provide responsive documents.

377. Q. Other than email, was there any other emails to the Analysis and Outreach Branch in relation to this May 2020 ATIP?

A. I haven't seen any.

378. Q. Will you undertake to provide us that email that we were just talking about that was sent to the Analysis and Outreach Branch?

MR. SHAAR: We'll take it under advisement and get back to you. A

MR. LIN:

379. Q. On this May 2020 ATIP request, can you tell us what search terms were used?

A. I don't know.

380. Q. Do you know who conducted the search or who was responsible for the search?

A. ATIP was responsible for the search and there was a search in Outlook accounts and there was a search in RDIMS and there was a request made, as I described, to those two groups, AOB and the Office of the Chair and CEO, to provide documents.

381. Q. Do you know if there were search results prepared from Outlook?

A. Yes, there were search results from Outlook.

382. Q. How many were there? Do you know?

A. 683.

383. Q. Is that in your affidavit?

A. Yes. That's the 683 I refer to at paragraph 20.

384. Q. That refers to Outlook, correct?

A. Yes.

385. Q. How about RDIMS? How many were there from RDIMS?

A. I don't know because I was given the search results that were relevant to the Statement on Vouchers as part of the search results in the second Access to Information request so I'm not able to actually distinguish between the – like I don't know how many because I was given that in a 5,099-page working document and it doesn't distinguish between what came from where.

386. Q. Who decided what to transpose from the May 2020 ATIP request to the November 2020 ATIP request?

A. ATIP staff.

387. Q. They were the ones that determined what was relevant and what was not?

A. Yes. Actually, I don't know. I'm sorry. I don't know. I can't answer that question because I don't know what the – actually, I don't know.

388. Q. Is it fair to say that your review of documents responsive to the October Order and April Order and July Order were limited to what was filtered to you through the ATIP requests?

A. No, I don't think it's fair to say that because I relied on the ATIP requests that were done in various ways and then I also asked for my own search to be done which although flawed, still produced 799 documents among which there were responsive documents and I also asked the Chair's Executive Coordinator for responsive documents and I also spoke to members of the Executive Committee and I also spoke to – we also conducted an additional search in April talking to members of the Executive Committee and members in order to produce responsive documents so I would not say that it's accurate to say that the only search results I looked at for October, April, and July were filtered to me through ATIP. In any event, the search results are raw search results, not search results that ATIP determined to be responsive.

389. Q. Thank you. Let's go back to Exhibit 9, the search that you prepared. Here we see that there was only a box for "Emails were found" but there was no indication that RDIMS was searched. Why did you not request an RDIMS search?

A. Because there had been searches done in RDIMS. I had spoken to Marcia Jones who told me that responsive search results would be found in the ATIP search results, that she had no knowledge of other minutes or memos. I asked individuals like Lesley Robertson to look into responsive search results and she looked into RDIMS in order to find them.

390. Q. When did you speak with Ms. Jones? You mentioned a discussion with Ms. Jones.

A. January 5th, 2021. I keep saying speak but I exchanged with her. I think we had a discussion but it certainly began as a written exchange and I don't know that we had a discussion. I have evidence of a written exchange.

391. Q. I'm not sure if I made this request initially but if not then we request an undertaking that you provide to us the email that you exchanged with Ms. Jones, the quote, unquote, discussion about this.

My question was why you did not request an RDIMS search and you provided an answer but let's take a step back. The query terms that you formulated were different from the ones that were in previous searches like the November ATIP search. Would you agree with that with different terms, you would get different search results?

A. Yes. With different terms, you get different search results.

392. Q. On that basis we also request an undertaking that you do a search of RDIMS using the search terms in the form that you completed in Exhibit 9 and of course, with the three concerns that we had previously, namely the spacing, and with the COVID, Corona, Pandemic reference, and also with the appropriate time range. Our request is that you conduct a search in RDIMS for Refund* or Voucher* within the March 9th, 2020, to March 25th, 2020 timeframe.

A. Is it possible for me to make a comment on that just for better understanding?

393. Q. Please.

A. The difficulty with making a search using the terms Refund and Voucher in RDIMS is that it will return search results across the Agency and so because the terms Refund and Voucher are very common terms in the Agency's day-to-day work, like an air travel complaint, they will return any complaint across the repository that contains those words and so it will produce – that is why when Gábor Lukács had made his Access to Information request, he received an email from Access to Information staff at the Agency saying that the search returned over 10,000 pages of documents. This is because generic search terms of that sort will return an enormous number of documents that they have to be manually gone through.

If I may editorialise, I don't know that that's required from a reasonable search. It's just an exponential number of documents that get produced.

394. Q. Thank you, Ms. Cuber, for providing the clarification. I would assume that RDIMS could be capable of filtering out searches for, let's say, passenger complaints only. Is that correct?

A. I mean if you want it to be a thorough search, no. I don't know that it has that functionality. What I know is that the difficulty that ATIP ran into just in terms of ATIP, the difficulty that is faced by looking in RDIMS, is precisely this difficulty, that if you would like to get the largest number of hits possible, you get an outrageous number of hits and you have to look through them yourself in order to determine what is in fact relevant to what you're looking for.

395. Q. In RDIMS is there an advance search feature or a filter feature to exclude passenger complaints or complaint files?

A. If we do that then we end up back here being told that we shouldn't have done that, right? I mean --

396. Q. Yes, the court's order includes all third parties but what we're asking – if you're saying that it will return those kind of search results then perhaps it could be refined to exclude passenger complaints and focus on Agency communications?

A. We tried with Twitter messages and info@ messages and were told that your position was that those were not responsive so it becomes very difficult for us to filter things down without being told that we're not performing adequate searches.

397. Q. We're presenting a suggestion that would address that concern. For this particular search, we're asking that you do an RDIMS search for Refund* or Vouchers* or Credit* within that time period and if there is a method in RDIMS to filter out passenger complaints, we ask that you do so and we trust that should address your concern about voluminous documents being returned.

MR. SHAAR: We'll take your request under advisement. I don't know that RDIMS has that capability but again I am going to express my same concern that I did before and that Mrs. Cuber has again here, that it creates an extreme amount of material that is not relevant to this case and requires a lot of time and manpower to go through them when there has already been several searches. I'll take it under advisement. We have serious concerns regarding this request. A

MR. LIN: Again I propose the suggestion to address concerns which is to filter or use advanced searches to exclude passenger complaints.

MR. SHAAR: I don't know if we have that capability but I'll look into it.

MR. LIN: Thank you.

398. Q. On the topic of RDIMS, is RDIMS the only corporate repository used at the CTA?

A. It's the corporate repository, yes.

399. Q. Do you know if individual branches would have their own separate repositories?

A. No, I don't know whether they have their own separate repositories. I believe to the extent that they might use other apps, they connect with RDIMS.

400. Q. What do you mean by separate apps?

A. Like I mean there's like a – this is too complicated for me. What I have in my mind right now is not a document repository. It's just sort of like a function on the system where you can look at the status of cases before the Agency but those are given a case number and the case number can be – you would have to go into RDIMS with the case number in order to get documents in relation to that. To my knowledge, no, but I hesitate to say anything more. RDIMS is the corporate repository for the Agency.

401. Q. Back to my question. Do you know if the Analysis and Outreach Branch would have their own separate repository?

A. I do not believe that they would, no.

402. Q. How about the Office of the Chair and the CEO?

A. No. Everybody saves their items into RDIMS. That's where you would save your items.

403. Q. But for individual branches' documents, do you know if they would be saving them in a separate repository as well?

A. No because RDIMS is the corporate repository.

404. Q. Please go ahead.

A. Everything that is given to IM that is not in digital form or whatever will be digitised and put into RDIMS like our old cases and things like that. RDIMS is the corporate repository and that is where you are supposed to keep your electronic documents. There might be like a library that might be considered a repository for library things but in terms of records of business value for the Agency, to my knowledge, there is just RDIMS. I have never been directed to another repository that constitutes the corporate repository for the Agency.

405. Q. When you say library, what do you mean by that?

A. Like a library where you keep books.

406. Q. Do you know if any of the individual branches would have their own SharePoint, for example?

A. I don't know what SharePoint is.

407. Q. Microsoft SharePoint for storing documents and sharing notes?

A. I do not know.

408. Q. Is it fair to say you did not specifically enquire with individual branches on whether they have a separate repository or location to store some electronic documents?

A. No, I did not ask because – no, I did not ask. I had understood that the place to go would be the ATIP search results and I didn't ask about SharePoint or anything like that.

409. Q. How did you first know that the place to go would be the ATIP search results?

A. Well, the motion under Rule 318 provided a redacted copy of the release package from Access to Information Request A-2020-00029, along with all of the correspondence from ATIP staff at the Agency that referenced the fact that 10,000 pages of documents had been returned as a result of a search that had been done and so that was a good starting point because that was also retained by Justice Gleason in her October Order and it appears to have been repeated in subsequent orders, that there were many search results found and Justice Gleason in October even said that if we needed more time to go through all those search results, you could ask for more time. A lot of the request was framed around that Access to Information request so that's where I started.

410. Q. How about Standing Committee Motion? Who gathered documents for that?

A. Transport Canada.

411. Q. And the CTA was simply provided a copy of what Transport Canada had presented to this Standing Committee? Is that correct?

A. That's what my understanding is, yes, so that in addition to internal document searches, we also have a collection of documents that Transport Canada has kept on the subject of communications between the Agency and Transport Canada, including the Minister's office. I reviewed those notes as well in the course of my search – not notes but rather documents.

412. Q. Are you saying there is a separate folder for storing Transport Canada and Agency communications?

A. No, I'm not. I'm saying that there was a separate folder for those specific search results from that Standing Committee Motion. There is not a separate folder for Transport Canada and Agency communications.

413. Q. The CTA was not involved in compiling the Standing Committee Motion documents, correct?

A. That's correct.

414. Q. Did Transport Canada provide a listing or summary of what is in that package?

A. I am not aware of any listing or summary.

415. Q. How many documents were in that package? Do you know?

A. I don't know.

416. Q. You reviewed that package?

A. I did. I don't remember how many documents are in it. I can't estimate. I don't know.

417. Q. Did that document include emails?

A. Yes, it did.

418. Q. I'm moving to a different topic, Mr. Streiner's Outlook calendar for scheduled events between March 18th, 2020, to 25th, 2020. Did you personally review his Outlook calendar?

A. No.

419. Q. How about Ms. Jones's Outlook calendar for that time period, March 18th to 25th, 2020?

A. No.

420. Q. Let's go to your affidavit, paragraph 58, please. You state here that "No. These meetings were not recorded." How do you know these meetings were not recorded? Can you explain?

A. Yes, I can. In preparing in relation to the October Order, I spoke with Sébastien Bergeron, who is the Chief of Staff of the Agency, with respect to whether Executive Committee Meetings were recorded and he said no. I spoke Lesley Robertson, who is, again, the executive Coordinator of the Chair's Office, about whether in-camera Members' Meetings like the one that took place on March 24th were recorded and she said no. Then in response to the April Order, Amanda Hamelin wrote to each person invited to Executive Committee Meetings between March 19th and 24th and asked whether any of them had records of the meetings and each person said no. She also wrote to each member of the Agency and asked whether they had recordings of the March 24th, 2020, in-camera Members' Meeting and they all said no.

421. Q. Is it correct to say that you did not check directly with the teleconferencing provider to see if there is any recording stored?

A. I did not. I thought that that was adequate to address that concern. I --

422. Q. Please continue.

A. I think that there was a technical reason why nothing – in addition to the fact that it's not the practice, there is also a technical reason about storing recordings on teleconferencing services but my knowledge of that is a little bit limited. I think from my perspective, suffice to say, every single person was asked if there was a recording and the answer was no.

423. Q. Were you given access to the teleconference system in order to verify there was no recording?

A. No.

424. Q. Were you able to access the list of conferences that were held by Mr. Streiner between March 9th to 25th, 2020, using his dial-in code?

A. No.

425. Q. You never requested access to his list of conferences?

A. No. I don't know how I would have gotten information from that. It would require a level of technical knowledge that I wouldn't have. I would have to figure how to do that. I contented myself with the 3,000 emails and 5,099 pages of search results and speaking to people who would have information and then I guess we contented ourselves also with asking every individual for their individual notes from meetings that took place – not notes but documents from meetings that took place in response to the April Order.

426. Q. You mentioned we a number of times. Who is we?

A. I might be getting tired so I might be saying

we. I can't remember exactly what I said. I don't remember what I said.

MR. SHAAR: Maybe we should take a break.

MR. LIN: If the witness requires a break, please let us know. Ms. Cuber, are you --

THE WITNESS: Yes, but is there a way to have what I just said sort of read back so that I can clarify what I meant by we? I think I might have just been getting a little sloppy. I apologise.

MR. LIN: Let's finish this question and then we can take a break. Madam Reporter, can we have the witness's answer read back to her so she knows what we was in the context?

THE REPORTER: You have to give me a quick moment to get back up there.

MR. LIN: Sure, please.

THE REPORTER: I have to apologise here. It's not allowing me to scroll back up there to see. It's just keeping me updated with the most recent line of typing. I'm not sure with this program how to get back up there without closing everything and letting it mirror itself over.

THE WITNESS: If I can? It's possible that I used we in the way that we always use we when we talk about the Agency where we say we but it means as an Agency this was done. I don't want me using a term of phrase that is commonly used in speaking about things that happen in the workplace as meaning that I was involved in something when I wasn't. It's just that we is a very common way of speaking about things that have happen at the Agency. We collected…, like we did…, we should… It wasn't intentionally – I don't remember what I said and it certainly wasn't intentional.

MR. LIN:

427. Q. Ms. Cuber, looking back at my notes, you said, "We contented ourselves with," et cetera, et cetera.

A. What I meant by that is that I looked in relation to the October Order and Amanda looked in relation to the April Order and collectively, nothing further was done.

MR. LIN: On that note, maybe we could take a quick 10-minute break. The same request, Ms. Cuber. You are still under cross-examination. Let's return at 2:33. Thank you.

(SHORT RECESS)

MR. LIN:

428. Q. Ms. Cuber, may I refer you to the Direction to Attend, please? That's Exhibit 5. At paragraph 15, with reference to the April 20, 2022 documents, the first page of Appendix C1 shows the meeting invite from Mr. Streiner with his dial-in code of 935311571. We requested a printout from the teleconferencing platform showing all conferences that were hosted using this dial-in code between March 9th and 25th, 2020, including the weekend of March 21st to 22nd. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

429. Q. Have you accessed this teleconference system and printed out a list of conference during that time period for us?

A. No.

430. Q. Why not? We made a request here that you access the teleconference system. You have made no attempts to access it?

A. This is the Direction to Attend and this was objected to and the court didn't order us to produce it. Is that what you are referring to?

431. Q. I'm referring to paragraph 15 of the Direction to Attend. I'm asking why you did not attempt to access the teleconference system to printout that list.

A. I didn't – I was not required to bring that for this cross-examination. I don't know if that exists. I can't remember anymore the list of things that may or may not exist. I don't know if that's one of them. I can't recall.

432. Q. You say you don't know if it exists. Have you made any attempts to confirm if it exists on the teleconferencing platform?

A. Anything on this list where I didn't know if it existed or not, I mean the list of it would be in the Agency's submissions and I didn't memorise it. If you're asking me if I have consulted in the context with complying with the October Order, I did not. I looked for documents. I didn't think that looking at a printout from the teleconferencing platform showing all conferences that were hosted using that dial-in code between March 9th and 25th, 2020, including the weekend of March 21 to 22, 2020, would – I instead looked for documents and I don't know what I would have made of that list. I don't know what it would have shown me. It's not something that I could read on my own. I looked for documents and I don't know that teleconferencing numbers are something that I thought of to look at.

433. Q. Ms. Cuber, thank you for the answer. Really my question is really simple. You did not make any enquiry with IT about access the teleconferencing platform, correct?

A. No, I did not.

434. Q. And you did not do so because you did not believe that it would be relevant, correct?

MR. SHAAR: Mr. Lin, can I ask you to make a clarification? What time period are you talking about? Are you talking about before or after the Direction to Attend was sent?

MR. LIN:

435. Q. Before the Direction to Attend, Ms. Cuber?

A. No. That wasn't part of my search. That wasn't part of my search. I searched for documents by asking people and looking at search results and asking for searches to be done.

436. Q. How about after the Direction to Attend was issued, not this one, the previous one?

A. I can't recall anymore the steps I took. I know I had a discussion about teleconferencing platforms but I didn't gain access. I had a discussion but I don't remember the contents of what was said but I certainly didn't ask for that to be provided to me.

437. Q. Who did you have a discussion with?

A. I had a discussion with Ms. Lesley Robertson because she was at the outset of the pandemic having a lot of trouble with teleconferencing platforms and so we had a discussion about teleconferencing platforms but I don't remember the entire content of the – like I don't remember the content of the discussion enough. I know that I talked to her about it but I certainly didn't ask for the platform numbers.

438. Q. When you say discussion and talked to her, was it via email or was it verbal discussion?

A. We had a verbal discussion.

439. Q. Did you make any enquiries with Transport Canada on any meetings that may have occurred between March 20th, 2020, and March 22nd, 2020, in respect to the Statement on Vouchers?

MR. SHAAR: Objection, Mr. Lin. Our obligation is documents that are in our control and possession. O

MR. LIN:

440. Q. Let's go back to the ATIP searches. We know there is a May 2020 ATIP search and a November 2020 ATIP search. Do you know if Mr. Streiner or anyone at the Chair's Office reviewed those searches?

A. I don't know.

441. Q. Do you know if Ms. Jones reviewed those searches?

A. I know that Ms. Jones was familiar with the content of the records. I know that Ms. Jones was familiar with the contents of the ATIP requests or she was familiar with the ATIP requests.

442. Q. Was she involved in the document search or gathering?

A. She was responsible for – well, not responsible. She was involved in gathering documents for the first Access to Information request and I don't know if she was involved in gathering documents in relation to the second Access to Information request. I don't know if she was involved in that but I know she was familiar with the Access to Information requests.

443. Q. You say she was involved in the first request on May 2020?

A. Sorry. The Analysis and Outreach Branch was involved and by that I assumed that she was involved. I consider the Analysis and Outreach Branch was involved so she would have been contacted in order to gather and provide those responsive documents in that context and that's what I mean.

444. Q. And that would be in May 2020, correct?

A. Yes.

445. Q. That would still be within the time period that the Outlook tapes would still contain all the emails from March 2020, correct?

A. Access to Information doesn't search backup tapes.

446. Q. What I'm asking is it's still within the time period? Yes or no?

A. Yes, I think it would be within the 12 weeks.

447. Q. Ms. Jones was put on notice that she had to provide responsive documents in that ATIP request, correct?

A. Yes. When an ATIP request is received, one is not allowed to delete any records once the ATIP request is received but if you have deleted records and you emptied out your trash before an ATIP request comes in then the record is, from ATIP's perspective, as I understand it, gone. Once the notification is received, everything has to be preserved from that point on.

448. Q. From our discussion just now, we know that it would still exist on the Outlook tapes, correct?

A. It is within the timeframe.

449. Q. Do you know if Ms. Jones made any enquiries about retrieving any emails that she may have deleted from those Outlook tapes?

A. I have no knowledge that she would have done that.

450. Q. Do you know if the ATIP team, in relation to the first ATIP request, did any searches or enquiries in relation to the Outlook tapes?

A. I was not employed at the Agency at that time so I don't have any direct knowledge and I don't have any knowledge otherwise.

451. Q. Do you know who would have knowledge about this?

A. No because I think that the answer to the question is that ATIP doesn't search backup tapes. They are there for disaster recovery purposes only, not for responding to Access to Information requests when items have been deleted from a mailbox. The obligation to preserve documents exists, one, when they are records of business value at all times, and two, they apply to all documents, whether transitory or of business value when notified of an Access to Information request but not before then.

452. Q. Have you enquired with Ms. Marcia Jones at all in relation to the March 25th, 2020, email that was deleted or the March 18th, 2020, email that was deleted?

A. No, I have not.

453. Q. So you have not enquired with her on when she deleted them and why she deleted them?

A. No but I thought that was covered when you asked me if I had contact with her, but no. I think you asked that question and I answered it.

454. Q. I'm just going back to you mentioned business value a number of times. I'm just going back to, for example, Exhibit 12. If this email was preserved because there was business value, why wasn't the email Ms. Jones sent out preserved? That email is lengthier and appears to have more business value that the response.

A. The document wasn't preserved in RDIMS. The document was located in an Outlook account which is not a corporate repository where documents of business value are kept. When an ATIP request comes in and a search is done, that search will cover all documents whether they are transitory in nature or not. If a person has left a document in their email account at the moment that a search is made, it's captured by the ATIP request but this doesn't mean that that document that you are referring to has been preserved because it's of business value. It just means it was in an email account and so it was captured by the ATIP request, it hadn't been placed in RDIMS as far as I know, and it just was there. It doesn't mean anything in terms of whether it was preserved or kept because it has business value. It wasn't in RDIMS.

455. Q. Thank you for clarifying. Just going back to Mr. Matte's notification on April 14th, 2020, to preserve documents, why wasn't any steps taken to actually secure the documents and keep a copy at that time?

A. I don't know.

456. Q. What is the usual policy when any documents are requested in litigation?

A. When we get a request under Rule 318, it relates to an order or a decision of the Agency and the documents that form part of the record are very easily locatable because they are part of a record that is kept by the Agency and so they will consist of very clear items that are easily retrievable but in this case, the request was for all documents across the Agency for a matter that has no associated record so there was no obligation to keep this or that document on the record of this matter because there was no record. To answer your question, there is no usual practice for finding documents in relation to this type of matter.

457. Q. What is the usual policy – please continue.

A. When there are litigation holds that are required by, for example, class actions, there are instructions that are provided by the Department of Justice. In this case, this was a 318 request and our usual practice for a 318 request didn't apply. In this case what was done was that documents were asked to be preserved and then the actions to collect them would happen later.

458. Q. So is it correct to say the usual practice with a 318 request is to preserve the documents immediately?

A. No because with a 318 request, there is no obligation to preserve any documents because the documents that are ordinarily at issue in a 318 are preserved as records as a matter of course. There is a fixed list of items that will be on the record because a 318 will usually be the submissions and the decision and that's what a Rule 318 request usually involves because usually you are contesting an order or a decision of the Agency where there are clear filings involved.

In this case, there were no clear filings because it wasn't like that sort of – it wasn't a case before the Agency. There was no decision. It was just whatever documents that were not kept in a tidy place as one would for, let's say, a complaint, an air travel complaint or an application or a rail complaint where the process is very straightforward because the record is preserved as a matter of course, regardless of whether there is a 318 request.

459. Q. Do you know if anyone reached out to Mr. Matte to request clarification of what needs to be preserved?

A. No. There were responses but I don't remember there being a request for clarification.

460. Q. What were the responses? How many were there?

A. I believe you asked me earlier and I could recall that there were two responses and I don't know if I can get into the details of those responses because I think that that might be privileged. I'm having difficulty understanding how I should answer this question. He obtained responses from two people, to my knowledge. He was asking questions so he obtained responses to his questions and that's what I can recall. I have seen them and he did obtain two responses and at least one was a response to a question.

At that time, the 318 request was a little bit different and it involved technical matters and so it looked a little bit different than what the October Order actually ended up being.

461. Q. Now I will move to a slightly different topic, document number 15, please. It's a letter dated August 8th, 2022. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

462. Q. Do you recognise this letter and the enclosures?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: Could we have this marked as Exhibit 15, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 15: Letter from Kevin Shaar to the Judicial Administrator, Federal Court of Appeal, August 8, 2022, with enclosures.

463. Q. On the face of the letter, the second paragraph, it says, "The Agency has discovered that the Statement on Vouchers may have been discussed on March 24th, 2020, at an EC meeting." Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

464. Q. There were some requests made in the Direction to Attend, items 26 and 28. We went through that at the very beginning of the session. My question is we see here on page 2 of this PDF file, Exhibit 15, there is a list of required attendees and optional attendees?

A. Yes.

465. Q. Did you make any enquiries with Ms. Alysia Lau to see if she attended this March 24th, 2020, meeting?

A. I did have a discussion with Ms. Lau about this meeting.

466. Q. The March 24th, 2020, meeting, correct?

A. March 24th, 2020, yes.

467. Q. Did you ask Ms. Lau whether she kept notes of that meeting?

A. Yes.

468. Q. Have those notes been produced to us?

A. No because no notes were found. I asked her if she kept notes. You asked me if I asked her if she kept notes and I did ask her.

469. Q. Did she take notes that day?

A. She doesn't recall if she took notes that day. She gave her notes to Ms. Hamelin and Ms. Lau has left the Agency so she didn't have her notes anymore and couldn't recall and she advised me that she had left her notes with Ms. Hamelin, Amanda Hamelin.

470. Q. When did Ms. Lau leave the Agency?

A. Sometime in the summer but I don't recall when.

471. Q. Did you review the documents that Ms. Lau provided to Ms. Hamelin?

A. No, I didn't. Ms. Hamelin was simply asked whether she had notes and she searched and she concluded that she didn't have notes.

472. Q. I'm looking at the Direction to Attend, paragraph 27 in particular. The answer that we received this morning was that there were no responsive documents on RDIMS because RDIMS cannot store Microsoft OneNote documents. Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

473. Q. From what you said about Ms. Hamelin, is it correct to say that Ms. Hamelin would have the Microsoft OneNote document that Ms. Lau would have provided to her?

A. Ms. Lau told me, "I gave my notes to Amanda Hamelin," so Ms. Hamelin would have her notes. Ms. Hamelin was approached, not by me, and asked if she had notes for that day and she searched and she did not have notes and so no notes were produced.

474. Q. But you did not personally review the files that Ms. Hamelin was provided from Ms. Lau, correct?

A. No and nor did anyone else. We just – not we. She was asked for her notes and there were no notes to be produced.

475. Q. Our next request would be that we ask that you review the notes and documents that Ms. Lau provided to Ms. Hamelin and verify whether Ms. Lau had taken any notes for the March 24th EC meeting.

MR. SHAAR: We've already done that search, Mr. Lin.

MR. LIN: Our request is that Ms. Cuber actually obtain the documents and notes from Ms. Hamelin and do the review herself, not ask Ms. Hamelin whether there are notes.

MR. SHAAR: And that will change what?

MR. LIN: We don't know if Ms. Hamelin may have overlooked or mistaken. Ms. Cuber is the main person tasked with complying with the orders so we ask that she review it personally and satisfy herself that there were no notes on March 24th, 2020.

MR. SHAAR: We'll take it under advisement and get back to you. A

MR. LIN:

476. Q. When did you do the enquiry with Ms. Lau?

A. I can't recall if it was at the – it would either have been – I think it would have been shortly before July 22nd – it must have been or on July 22nd, somewhere around there.

477. Q. Was that before or after she left?

A. She had left already.

478. Q. Even though she left, you reached out to her for assistance? Is that correct?

A. Yes. She was a former colleague in the Legal Services Department and she had just left and we knew that her notes were someplace but we didn't know where so we asked.

479. Q. Going back to paragraph 27 of the Direction to Attend, we understand your position that Microsoft OneNote documents cannot be checked in to RDIMS.

A. Yes.

480. Q. Can PDF documents be checked in?

A. I think PDF documents can be checked in.

481. Q. Have you attempted to search on RDIMS for documents checked in by Ms. Alysia Lau with those search strings?

A. No.

482. Q. Could it be possible that Ms. Lau would have converted her Microsoft OneNote files to PDF and checked them in?

A. But I think she would have told me that when I spoke with her on the telephone because I asked her where her notes were and she said that she had given them to Ms. Hamelin.

483. Q. Did you specifically ask her if she uploaded or checked in her notes to RDIMS?

A. No but I asked her where we could find her notes and she said, "I gave them to Ms. Hamelin." If I asked her, "Did you put them in RDIMS," I already got my answer.

484. Q. What is Ms. Hamelin's position?

A. She works in the Information Technology division and I believe she has a management position there.

485. Q. Let's take a look at your written submissions, please, Exhibit 6, paragraph 83 to 84. Do you know how many members were in attendance on that March 24th, 2020, meeting?

A. No, I don't. I know that all members are invited and I don't know who attended. I don't know offhand who attended.

486. Q. Do you know if the March 24th, 2020, Members' Meeting was in-camera or not in-camera?

A. Yes. It was in-camera.

487. Q. Will you refer to document 16, please? This is a letter from Mr. Shaar, July 22nd, 2022. Do you recognise this letter and the enclosures?

A. I've read them. I probably have seen it before. I don't have a specific recollection of this.

MR. LIN: Could we have this marked as Exhibit 16, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 16: Letter from Kevin Shaar to the Judicial Administrator, Federal Court of Appeal, July 22, 2022, with enclosures.

488. Q. Could we go to the very last page of this PDF file? Is this the quote, unquote, scheduler that you refer to in paragraph 83 of your submissions?

A. Yes, I believe it is.

489. Q. Let's go to page 4 to 7 of this PDF file. It's a letter from Air Canada. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

490. Q. Do you have an explanation why this Air Canada letter was not produced to us when the court initially issued the Order in October?

A. I do. This letter didn't come up in any of the search results that I had reviewed from the Access to Information request. It hadn't been provided to me otherwise in my searches in relation to the October Order and it should have been captured by the electronic search that was done in November because this letter has the word Refund in it but because there was a typo, that letter was not collected and I didn't find it in any other search results. It came up for the first time as a result of the April search and so when it was found, it was produced.

491. Q. Can I direct you to page 3 of the PDF, please? This is an email from Mr. Bergeron to all the members of the CTA, attaching both the Air Canada and the Air Transat letters.

A. Yes.

492. Q. This email attaches side by side as attachments the Air Canada letter and the Air Transat letter. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

493. Q. The Air Transat letter would have been captured through your searches? Do you agree?

A. But it wasn't captured. I didn't receive the letter through that search. I received the Air Transat letter from Ms. Robertson. I don't actually know – I mean this letter was produced because it was given over by an individual. It wasn't eventually produced because it – I don't know. I don't have an explanation actually for that. I hadn't noticed that.

494. Q. So you don't have an explanation of why Mr. Bergeron's email on page 3 was not produced to us initially?

A. I can say to you the reason it wasn't produced is because I hadn't seen it. Like I didn't see this letter. Had I see the Air Canada letter, I certainly would have produced it in the same way that I produced the Air Transat letter but I didn't see this letter in any of the search results and that is why it was not produced but as soon as the Air Canada letter was found and as soon as this letter from Sébastien Bergeron was found, they were produced to the parties. I didn't see it. It's not that I saw it and didn't produce it. I produced the Air Transat letter and would have produced the Air Canada letter as well had I seen it.

495. Q. Can you explain to us how this email from Mr. Bergeron was ultimately found?

A. Yes. In response to the April Order, Amanda Hamelin asked all members who were on the list of attendees for the March 24th, 2020, in-camera Members' Meeting to produce documents in relation to that meeting and to answer questions about that meeting, and so individuals provided their documents to Ms. Hamelin and I don't know where they got the documents from. I don't know if they had saved them somewhere on their desktop or if they were sitting in their In boxes or they were saved in RDIMS. I don't know. They were just produced by the individuals when they were requested.

496. Q. From what appears on page 3, it looks like a printout from Microsoft Outlook. Do you agree?

A. Yes but I mean that can be – I don't know. I'm speculating now. Yes. What I can say is I did not find this letter. It was not in the search results and that's why I didn't produce it. I didn't see it and not produce it. I didn't have the letter but when it was found in April, it was produced to the parties. It's certainly an email.

497. Q. Let me take a step back here. When we looked at the search results in Exhibit 8, we understand that search would search both the subject line, the body, and even attachments. We see here that there are two attachments on this email from Mr. Bergeron, the Air Transat letter and Air Canada letter. They seem to contain the search terms; for example, the word COVID and the word Voucher.

A. Yes.

498. Q. Would you agree with me that this should have appeared in the search results that you reviewed, Exhibit 8?

A. It should have appeared in the search results and if it was still in Outlook. If somebody had, for example, put things aside like in a folder or something on their desktop then maybe it wouldn't appear in Outlook but it should have come up in the search results and it did not.

499. Q. You're saying someone putting things aside in a separate folder. Is that common practice?

A. No. I have no idea. I'm just saying – what I'm telling you is I didn't see the Air Canada letter before and I thought that it was just because the search was faulty that was done in November 2021 but you're quite right that if the Air Transat letter – well, no, you're not because I didn't get the Air Transat letter from an electronic search either. I got it from Ms. Robertson. I didn't find another copy of the Air Transat letter in the electronic search results so perhaps there is some other explanation but the fact remains that the place from which I got the Air Transat letter was directly from Ms. Robertson and I didn't see the Air Transat letter in electronic search results and I didn't see the Air Canada letter in electronic search results but as soon as they were found and identified in April, they were disclosed to the parties.

500. Q. You say you got the Air Transat letter initially from Ms. Robertson. Do you know if she had the Air Canada letter as well?

A. She didn't give me the Air Canada letter so I don't know if she – I mean she looked and she gave me responsive documents and this was not among them.

501. Q. Let's go to page 12 of this PDF file. It's an email from Mr. Streiner at 8:36 am, responding to his own email at 8:31 am. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

502. Q. Here we see there's two bullet points from Mr. Streiner. One is special measures in respect of the air industry and the second one is the agenda for Thursday's Members' Meeting. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I see that.

503. Q. In the submissions that you make in the court, at paragraph 83 you said, "The Agency has in its possession a single document in relation to this meeting, namely a scheduler."

We see here that there is actually email with agenda of at least two meeting agenda items. Can you explain why this email was not mentioned in your submissions?

A. I didn't see this email and it was located in April. That's when it was found. When it was found, it was disclosed to the parties. At the time when I was looking for documents, I had a discussion with Ms. Robertson about whether it was likely or – I was looking for agendas and I was told that it was not the practice to keep agendas for in-camera Members' Meetings at that time and so I didn't look any further.

In any event, this document was not among the documents that I saw or that I had in my search results when I was looking for documents in compliance with the October Order. It was only found in April and then it was disclosed.

504. Q. Let's go back to page 3 again, Mr. Bergeron's email. We see that the two attachments contain the key words from your search in November 2021, namely the words Voucher and COVID, Corona, or Pandemic. Are you sure this email did not appear in the search results that you reviewed, namely the one in Exhibit 8?

A. It did not appear in the search result. I was surprised to see this letter, not this specific email. I saw the Air Canada letter. It was put to me in April when I was no longer doing the searches and I was very surprised and upset that I hadn't seen it before and I went back into the search results in order to make sure that I hadn't overlooked something but I didn't find it in there. I did not find this document, this letter, in the search results and I looked for the letter in relation to individuals who I had seen obtain the letter and I didn't see this email and I didn't find the letter anywhere. I mean you can ask me many, many questions but the fact is I didn't see it. It was found in April. I was mortified and then it was released.

505. Q. In relation to the October Order, did you enquire with any of the CTA members about responsive documents?

A. No. I had not asked them about notes for the meeting and I didn't approach them about – we looked in sort of the corporate repository or in Outlook accounts but we didn't ask them personally for any of their responsive documents. At the time, I had the explanation that agendas were not kept and ordinarily notes were not kept for these sorts of meetings but I imagine because there was a transition to COVID, things started to – maybe they had an agenda in this case but it wasn't the practice. When I was looking for documents, it didn't seem unusual that not much came up and so I didn't enquire further but further enquiries were made in April and then the responsive documents were produced from individual members.

506. Q. In paragraph 84 of your submission you said that "In relation to this item, the Applicant has requested production of notes taken by or on behalf of participants at the meeting. The Agency submits that if personal notes were taken and kept by members, they are not in the Agency's possession."

Is it correct to say that you actually enquired with the members in regards to notes?

A. We said we didn't enquire with regards to notes with members when I made the submissions in February. The enquiry was made after the April Order.

507. Q. Why didn't you make an enquiry with the members?

A. Because I looked for notes in the repository and at the time, the Agency's position was that members' notes don't belong to the Agency and that was the position that was taken but after the April Order, the decision was made to enquire from among members whether they had any notes and then they were produced.

508. Q. Are you saying that you did not enquire with the members back in relation to the October Order because you didn't believe that it was required? Is that what you're saying?

A. The position as stated in the Agency's submissions was that if members took notes during those meetings, they were not in the Agency's possession so that we wouldn't ask them if they had notes in relation to that meeting but after the April Order, the Agency did or Agency staff, specifically Amanda Hamelin, did ask members if they had notes. Then whatever notes there were were produced.

509. Q. Just going back to page 3 of this Exhibit 16, Mr. Bergeron's email on March 24th, 2020, how was this found?

A. This was found because after the April Order, Amanda Hamelin wrote to each member at the Agency and asked them a series of questions in relation to March 24th, 2020, in-camera Members' Meeting and the questions included: Do you remember if the Statement on Vouchers was discussed; Do you have any notes; Do you have an agenda; Do you have a scheduler; Do you have any emails to set up or schedule the meeting; Do you have any correspondence about the decisions or deliverables?

Whatever was in your client's deficiency notice in relation to this meeting was put to each member as a question as well as, I think, Mr. Bergeron, and then this email was provided as part of that process.

510. Q. Thank you for the clarification. Earlier we did cover that it was not in the search results in Exhibit 8, correct, this email?

A. It was not in the search results, no. I would have put it in if it had been.

511. Q. We understand that. Did you investigate why it did not appear in the search results?

A. Yes. I didn't focus on this email. I wasn't focusing on this email. I was focusing on the Air Canada letter and so I enquired with IT and there were a number of possible explanations that they investigated but they eliminated the possibility that attachments wouldn't be included in search results and then landed on the probability that it was due to the typographical error in the search terms used in November 2021; that is to say, the missing space between Refund and Or. I didn't think of this correspondence and so I didn't put that to them.

The only thing I would note is that the Air Transat letter didn't come up in any electronic searches either. I didn't have the Air Transat letter in any other search results. I only had it because of Ms. Robertson giving it to me. I don't know if it perhaps is not in Outlook accounts anymore but maybe it was stored somewhere. I don't know.

512. Q. Was the Air Transat letter or the Air Canada letter in any of the ATIP search results? Do you recall?

A. It was not. I didn't see it in the ATIP search results. I have given that letter by Ms. Robertson. No, I don't recall seeing it anywhere else. I remember being given that letter from Ms. Robertson and then when you asked for the cover letter, I had to go back to Ms. Robertson and I believe she obtained those letters, those documents, from RDIMS or from someplace. I don't know where she got them from actually. I think she got them from RDIMS but I can't be certain. She had them somewhere.

513. Q. Earlier you said it could have been possible someone saved the Air Canada letter or Mr. Bergeron's email in a separate folder. Do you remember saying that?

A. Yes, I do.

514. Q. It is possible that an RDIMS and Outlook search would not be comprehensive? There would be alternative locations where people could have stored various documents like the Air Transat letter and the Air Canada letter, correct?

A. Well, I did obtain the Air Transat letter from Ms. Robertson and we did obtain the Air Canada letter from a subsequent search from among members and so I think that to the extent that the electronic search didn't bring up those letters, the searches that involved speaking directly to people and obtaining documents from them would have remedied that.

515. Q. Earlier you said you were mortified when learning about the Air Canada letter. Why was that?

A. Because I of course would have produced it and in the context of having accusations levied against people of contempt, it's mortifying to know that perhaps if the search terms had not contained a typo, this would have been produced earlier instead of later. I try to do a good job and it affects me when things like this happen. You know what? That's just true.

516. Q. When you say that's just true, what do you mean?

A. It's difficult --

MR. SHAAR: We're away from the search of documents.

MR. LIN: The witness offered the statement --

THE WITNESS: The intent was to do a thorough search and when additional documents are found through additional searches, it's regrettable for me that I didn't find those documents in a timely fashion. It was not for lack of trying. I guess that's all I'm trying to say.

MR. LIN:

517. Q. You would agree that the initial electronic searches that you made were not comprehensive?

A. No. I think that the electronic searches that were made were more than adequate to bring up 3,000 emails and 5,099 pages of working copy results and other documents that were found through other means. I think that responsive documents were found and they were produced and that additional searches done later in a different way produced further documents which were also disclosed.

518. Q. The fact that the Air Transat letter and the Air Canada letter did not appear in your electronic searches, would you say that that is demonstration that the electronic search was not comprehensive? Do you agree?

A. But the Air Transat letter was found through other means and disclosed. When an electronic search doesn't do what it's supposed to, other means can come and correct for that. In the end, pursuant to the April Order, these documents were found and then they were disclosed.

519. Q. I guess we're getting to the heart of the problem. Why were they not found initially and required a second order from the --

MR. SHAAR: We've already done the tour of this question. I think the affiant has responded to these questions several times over now. In the interest of getting out of here at a reasonable hour today, maybe we can move on. O

MR. LIN:

520. Q. Let's go back to Exhibit 16, please, page 12. How was this email found? Can you tell us?

A. This email was found because Amanda Hamelin wrote to each member of the Agency with respect to the March 24th in-camera Members' Meeting and requested that they respond to a series of questions and produce responsive documents, which they did. This document was found in the context of that search and then disclosed.

521. Q. In Ms. Hamelin's enquiry with the members, the members acknowledged that the Statement on Vouchers was discussed on the March 24th, 2020, Members' Meeting? Is that correct?

A. I don't know if they confirmed that it was but certainly when the question was asked, documents that were produced were handed over, even if individual members didn't have a specific recollection of whether the matter was discussed but I believe – anyway, it must have been responsive.

522. Q. Is it correct to say that all the members responded to Ms. Hamelin's enquiry?

A. Yes. All the members that she contacted responded to Ms. Hamelin. Sorry. That was ambiguous. She contacted everybody on this list who is at the Agency and they all provided documents. If somebody wasn't at the Agency anymore then they weren't contacted. I should make that clear.

523. Q. Thank you for the clarification. Was the contact in an email?

A. Yes. It was in writing.

524. Q. Did you review the email that Ms. Hamelin sent out and the responses that she received?

A. I reviewed the email that she sent out and I did review the responses she received because I was asked to verify that there were no other notes that needed to be produced pursuant to the July Order. In that context, I did review the responses received.

525. Q. Those responses, did the members indicate whether the Statement on Vouchers was discussed?

A. They would have responded to that question because that was a question that was put to them but I didn't memorise the responses. Presumably if these documents were disclosed, it's because there was a chance that it was discussed. It was determined that they were responsive.

526. Q. Can we go to page 1 of Exhibit 16, please? Here we have Mr. Shaar's letter saying, "This letter is in response to the Order issued by Madam Justice Gleason on July 19th, 2022, more specifically paragraph 6 of that Order." Do you see that?

A. Yes.

527. Q. Can you confirm what search was done in relation to paragraph 6 of that Order?

A. Documents had already been collected in April in respect of this meeting and it had already been clear to the Agency at that time – I don't know what paragraph 6 of the Order specifically says so maybe I should --

528. Q. The July Order, Exhibit 3, documents associated with the March 24th, 2020, call.

A. And then the Reasons for the Order are – so you have the Reasons for the Order in paragraphs 42 and 43?

529. Q. It's in Madam Justice Gleason's Reasons. Paragraph 42 says, "From the response received from the CTA, it is unclear whether there were additional notes taken by CTA members, its Chairperson, or Vice Chairperson during the call beyond those that have been disclosed. Within five days of this Order that accompanies these Reasons, the CTA shall advise the parties and the court whether it has been able to determine if any such additional notes were taken. If the Respondent asserts a claim of privilege over any such documents within 10 days of the date of the Order that accompanies these Reasons, they shall make a motion for a ruling on its privilege claim following a procedure above."

Paragraph 43 is, "Following resolution of the issues with respect to notes taken during this call, I will rule on the balance of the Applicant's disclosure request made in respect of the March 24th, 2020, call if the CTA does not voluntarily disclose the additional documents sought by the Applicant in respect of that call. The Applicant shall forthwith advise the court if a ruling on the remainder of its disclosure request in respect of the March 24th, 2020, call is required following resolution of the issues in respect to the notes taken during this call."

A. Those two paragraphs, if I understand them, refer to members' notes and as I understand it, it was clear to the Agency that the only notes collected from members in April were those that were already disclosed and so because each member had already been asked if they had taken notes and each member had responded and all responsive documents had already been disclosed as a result of the April Order. It only rested on – the only remaining thing to do was to double check that there were nothing in the collected documents from the April request to confirm that no notes remained.

That verification, that double checking was done but from the get-go, it had been that the notes were responsive had already been disclosed in April. We just double checked to make absolutely sure. By double check, I meant we looked back into the documents that had been received in response to the request that Ms. Hamelin had made.

530. Q. Can we go to document number 17, please? This is a document that has Meeting - March 23rd. Do you recall seeing this document previously?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: Can we mark this as Exhibit 17, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 17: OneNote document of Alysia Lau entitled Meeting – Mar. 23.

531. Q. Can you tell me in what context you saw this document?

A. Yes. I saw it after the additional search was done in response to the April Order.

532. Q. In terms of the third heading, Debriefs, there's the initials SS there. Do you have an idea who SS is?

A. That was likely Scott Streiner.

533. Q. In that same line, there's mention of TC. Any idea what TC stands for?

A. Likely Transport Canada.

534. Q. The whole line reads as follows, "TC indicated Agency moved faster than they expected. Other travel restrictions expected. Agreement between SS and MK that agencies/departments should not issue piecemeal decisions. Call this evening between TC and Agency officials."

Do you know who MK is?

A. I think possibly Michael Keenan.

535. Q. From Transport Canada?

A. I would think.

536. Q. These notes were from March 23rd, 2020, and here we see, "Call this evening between Transport Canada and Agency officials." Do you see that?

A. Yes.

537. Q. Did you enquire into whether there were discussions about the Statement on Vouchers or refunds at that evening meeting on March 23rd?

A. Yes.

538. Q. When did you make that enquiry?

A. I made that enquiry in response to the October Order. There had been a scheduler and so I made an enquiry about what the contents of the discussion that took place between TC and the Agency were. I concluded that it was not, in fact, a responsive document and then I made a subsequent enquiry in April to double check my findings and I concluded that it was not a responsive document.

539. Q. On what basis did you conclude that it was not a responsive document?

A. That the Statement on Vouchers – it was not possible to confirm that the Statement on Vouchers had been actually discussed at that meeting. It appears that there was a different discussion.

540. Q. You say a different discussion. What was the discussion then?

A. My understanding at that time is that there was a need to share information on a number of topics because it was the beginning of a crisis and so there were topics that could be discussed such as the repatriation of passengers who were stranded abroad and that there would be a need to potentially share information or receive information and I was not able to conclude that this was a responsive document but I did make the enquiry twice.

541. Q. You mentioned that there was a quote, unquote, scheduler. That's an Outlook calendar invite?

A. Yes.

542. Q. You were the attendees on that meeting? Do you recall?

MR. SHAAR: Are we getting into documents that haven't been disclosed because they are not responsive?

MR. LIN: I am asking Ms. Cuber because she said she reviewed it and we want to establish --

MR. SHAAR: You want to establish that it was responsive so you can ask her about who the attendees were.

MR. LIN:

543. Q. Ms. Cuber, what were the agenda items on the scheduler?

A. There was no agenda items.

544. Q. You say there could be a number of topics that could be discussed because it was at the beginning of the crisis, including repatriation. How would the CTA be involved in repatriation of Canadian passengers?

A. I don't know but I'm providing you with information that I received that helped me to determine that the document was non-responsive.

545. Q. Did you enquire with Transport Canada specifically about the meeting that occurred on March 23rd?

MR. SHAAR: Objection. She didn't enquire with anybody from Transport Canada. She enquired with people from the Agency. O

MR. LIN:

546. Q. Who at the Agency did you enquire with?

A. There were two people who provided me with information about that meeting. One of them was Ms. Robertson and one of them was Ms. Lagacé.

547. Q. Were they attendees of that meeting?

A. They were invited to the meeting and that's why I spoke to them to see if they had information that I could acquire about the topics or what the nature of the meeting was but like I said, on two separate occasions I was not able to determine that this was a responsive document but I made the enquiry twice.

548. Q. You say Ms. Lagacé and Ms. Robertson were invited to the meeting. Do you know if they attended?

A. I know that Ms. Lagacé attended the meeting but I do not know --

549. Q. What about Ms. Robertson?

A. I don't think she did attend the meeting.

550. Q. Do you know who else from the Agency would have attended the meeting?

A. I don't know who else from the Agency attended the meeting. I don't recall who was on the invitee list and I don't know who attended.

551. Q. Based on your enquiry with Ms. Lagacé, what was discussed at that meeting?

MR. SHAAR: Objection. Relevance. O

MR. LIN:

552. Q. Was the topic of refunds – sorry, Ms. Cuber. Go ahead.

A. I asked – I had a discussion about the responsiveness of this item because the document was before me but I was not able to conclude based on our discussions that it was a responsive document and so I could not produce it.

553. Q. Did you ask Ms. Lagacé if the topic of refunds was discussed at that meeting?

A. I had a discussion with her. She understood the scope of the order and I had a discussion with her about whether it was a responsive document and the conclusion was that it was not.

554. Q. Did you ask her if the issue of credit card chargebacks was discussed at that meeting?

MR. SHAAR: Objection. Relevance. O

MR. LIN: How is it irrelevant? The Air Canada and Air Transat letters both deal with that subject matter.

MR. SHAAR: We're not getting into the merits here. We're talking about the search for documents.

MR. LIN: Yes. That's why I'm asking Ms. Cuber if she asked Ms. Lagacé if the topic of credit card chargebacks was discussed at the meeting with Transport Canada.

MR. SHAAR: I'm objecting. My witness is not going to answer the question. The only questions that are relevant here was what Ms. Cuber did to determine if this was responsive to the court's order and she told you that's what she did and that it wasn't. Now you're trying to delve into the contents of discussions surrounding the meeting that is not responsive. This is starting to look like a fishing expedition. We're not going to get into meetings that have nothing to do with the Statement on Vouchers. Credit card chargebacks is not the Statement on Vouchers. O

MR. LIN: I don't think we will be debating on that here. Certainly if Ms. Cuber does not wish to answer the question, we can bring an objections motion. Credit card chargebacks and the Statement on Vouchers are clearly well related.

MR. SHAAR: We maintain our objection.

MR. LIN: I refer you back you Exhibit 11 where there is clear reference to the Air Transat getting pressure from creditors pushing the airlines for cash and requests that they be officially allowed to provide vouchers to passengers.

MR. SHAAR: Ms. Cuber told you about the enquiries she made to determine whether or not the Statement on Vouchers was discussed and she came to the conclusion that it wasn't so we're not going to talk about what was discussed if the Statement on Vouchers wasn't discussed.

MR. LIN:

555. Q. Ms. Cuber, I don't think I had a clear answer in terms of whether the topic of refunds to passengers was discussed at that Transport Canada meeting.

A. The discussion that I had was in light of the court's October Order and whether or not this was a responsive document. The discussion was is this responsive to the court's order and I concluded at the close of that discussion that it was not responsive to the court's order. I made a subsequent enquiry and the same conclusion was made. The discussion was in light of the court's order from October 15.

556. Q. Ms. Cuber, respectfully, you are not answering the question. You are stating the conclusion you had. The question was was the topic of refunds to passengers discussed at that Transport Canada meeting. Yes or no?

A. I guess I don't know. The conclusion that I came to was that the Statement on Vouchers was not the topic of discussion and it was not a meeting concerning – I could not conclude that this was a responsive document to the court's October Order.

557. Q. Did you ask Ms. Lagacé whether the topic of refunds to passengers was discussed at that meeting?

MR. SHAAR: Objection. We're not going to get into the topic of discussion between two counsel members. O

MR. LIN: Ms. Cuber has been discussing her discussions with Ms. Lagacé at length over the --

MR. SHAAR: Both are familiar with what was required by the April Order, that it was discussed, and they came to the conclusion that it was not a responsive document.

MR. LIN: We're not asking about Ms. Cuber's conclusion. We're asking about Ms. Cuber, "Did you ask Ms. Lagacé whether the topic of refunds to passengers was discussed at that Transport Canada meeting?" It's a yes or no answer. We are asking for facts, not legal opinion.

MR. SHAAR: If that would make it responsive then she asked that and concluded it was not responsive.

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, you can't answer for the witness. We're asking --

MR. SHAAR: You seem to be asking the same question over and over again and you're unsatisfied with the answer that the affiant is giving. You might not like the answer but she's giving you her answer on the question so I don't see how circling around it and asking the question over and over again is productive.

MR. LIN: We're entitled to ask the question --

MR. SHAAR: And you've asked the question.

MR. LIN: And we haven't received an answer.

558. Q. Ms. Cuber, did you specifically ask Ms. Lagacé whether refunds to passengers was discussed at that Transport Canada meeting on the evening of March 23rd, 2020? Yes or no?

A. I didn't ask her if the topic of refunds were discussed. I talked to her about the topic of the meeting and about whether this document was a responsive document. As with many of the questions you asked, I didn't ask to a level of minute detail when it wasn't necessary.

559. Q. Why did you conclude it was not necessary?

A. Because I concluded that this was not a responsive document. I had a discussion with Ms. Lagacé and the conclusion that we came to was that this was not responsive. I was not able to find any other documents that would suggest that it was a responsive document and then I revisited the matter in April and the same conclusion was reached.

560. Q. You're saying, "We came to the conclusion." You and Ms. Lagacé collectively decided the conclusion? Is that what you're saying?

A. No. I mean I obtained the information and it made the answer apparent.

561. Q. What do you mean by "made the answer apparent"?

A. It wasn't a responsive document. I can't produce documents when I have no way to say this is responsive. I can't produce a document just because it's interesting. I have to produce responsive documents.

562. Q. It seems the conclusion is circular. You're saying it's not responsive and therefore it's not responsive and that's why you don't need to enquire. Isn't the object of an enquiry to determine whether something is responsive so you ask questions? What was discussed? Was this topic discussed? Was that topic discussed? Would you agree that's proper --

A. No. We discussed – I brought up the document. We had a discussion about whether it was responsive to the court's order and as a result of that discussion, the document was not produced because it was not responsive.

563. Q. Who determined it was not responsive?

A. I don't – I guess I determined based on our discussion that it was a not a responsive document and I discussed it again.

564. Q. The document we are referring to is the schedule for that meeting, correct?

A. Yes.

565. Q. Did Ms. Lagacé refer to any other documents that were sent or received in relation to that meeting?

A. No.

566. Q. Was there an agenda for that meeting?

A. No. You've asked and I said that there was no agenda. There was no information. I had a discussion about it because there was no information about the contents – there was no agenda for the meeting that would lead me – I asked about it for that reason.

MR. LIN: I see the time right now. I propose we take a short 10-minute break and I'll review my notes in the meantime and hopefully we can wrap up shortly after the break. Does that work for everybody?

MR. SHAAR: Yes.

MR. LIN: Ten minutes, please. Just before we go off the record, Ms. Cuber, same reminder that you are still under cross-examination. Thank you, everyone.

(SHORT RECESS)

MR. LIN:

567. Q. Ms. Cuber, going back to this document again, Exhibit 17, when did you first come across this document?

A. I came across this document in April.

568. Q. April of this year?

A. Yes.

569. Q. We were talking about the bullet point just under Debriefs before our break. My next question also deals with that bullet point. It says there, "TC indicated Agency moved faster than they expected."

Did you make any enquiries into what that is referring to? What did Transport Canada mean by --

MR. SHAAR: Objection. This is going beyond the search for documents. This is beyond the scope of the cross-examination. You're getting into the content of material what Mrs. Cuber was not the author of. O

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, respectfully, the documents refer to the events that occurred and those lead to a trail of enquiry and that's why we're asking Ms. Cuber did she turn her mind to what that line says. That is the question.

MR. SHAAR: I think this goes beyond the scope of the search for documents. I maintain my objection.

MR. LIN:

570. Q. Ms. Cuber, did that line cause you to do any further enquiries?

MR. SHAAR: I've objected to the question. Mrs. Cuber's role was not to read every document that she spotted and then make interpretations as to what other people had said. There is no indication in that line that there are other documents so there was no reason for Mrs. Cuber to pursue an investigation regarding that line. I suspect you're getting into the merits here so I am going to maintain my objection. O

MR. LIN: We'll certainly debate that on an objections motion.

571. Q. Let's take a step back. March 23rd, 2020, was a Monday. Do you agree, Ms. Cuber?

A. I don't disagree. I imagine that if March 21-22 was the weekend then the 23rd would have been a Monday.

572. Q. I guess we can agree on that. In terms of any meetings that occurred between Mr. Streiner or Ms. Jones and Transport Canada over that weekend, what enquiries have you made to find documents in relation to those meetings?

A. I've already described the enquiries that I made. I spoke with Ms. Robertson. I think I described that quite a lot. I asked Ms. Robertson if she had any documents that would be responsive to that component of the order in particular but not exclusively because as the Executive Coordinator of the Chair's Office, she might be best placed to answer that question or not answer the question but provide documents that might be responsive.

573. Q. Can you tell us how Ms. Streiner or Ms. Jones was able to schedule meetings with Transport Canada? This is about any written record in the Agency's possession.

MR. SHAAR: Objection. Relevance. How they were able to schedule meetings has nothing to do with Mrs. Cuber's search for documents. O

MR. LIN:

574. Q. Ms. Cuber, do you agree that your search for documents would encompass any documents in relation to the meetings Mr. Streiner or Ms. Jones would have had with Transport Canada officials during that weekend?

A. Yes. The October Order required disclosure of documents or documents sent to or from third parties or relating to any meetings attended by Agency members at which the subject matter of the Statement on Vouchers was discussed so yes.

575. Q. What did you do to satisfy yourself in terms of meetings with Transport Canada that weekend that there were no responsive documents?

A. I reviewed the 3,000 emails that we had. I reviewed the working copy from ATIP. I spoke with Lesley Robertson. I asked for an additional search to be done and I reviewed the documents that Transport Canada themselves had produced on the topic of meetings between the Agency and Transport Canada in order to see if there was any evidence of meetings on that weekend and those were the steps that I took in order to try to determine whether there were any meetings that weekend. I also – those were the steps I took.

576. Q. But you did not directly ask Mr. Streiner or Ms. Jones whether there were meetings that weekend, correct?

A. I did not contact Mr. Streiner or Ms. Jones.

577. Q. Based on email chains that we have seen that the CTA has discussed, there were references to discussions over the weekend. Do you recall that?

A. I recall that there were references to discussion from the documents that we disclosed to you.

578. Q. To be clear, what we mean by discussion is discussions with officials at Transport Canada.

MR. SHAAR: Perhaps you can refer us to the document, Mr. Lin?

MR. LIN: It's the Agency documents, documents the Agency has disclosed. There was the email, for example, on March 20th, 2020, at 11:00 am, CTA Announcement Tomorrow. This was appended to the Agency's Motion Record for an informal motion to extend time on December 14th, 2021. That was when Ms. Cuber still had conduct of the file.

579. Q. Ms. Cuber, do you recall that motion, the informal motion made by the AGC for extension of time?

A. Yes.

580. Q. In there they request an extension of time in relation to this email exchange between CTA and Transport Canada. Do you recall that?

MR. SHAAR: It's very difficult when you're not putting the email to the witness or so that I can see it myself.

MR. LIN: We can certainly send it out right away. Just one second. We'll send out the whole Motion Record.

581. Q. Ms. Cuber, you recall this informal motion that was made by the AGC, correct?

A. Yes.

MR. LIN: Can we have this marked as Exhibit 18, please?

EXHIBIT NO. 18: Motion Record of the Attorney General of Canada, Informal motion in writing for an extension of time to claim privilege over portions of two documents, December 14, 2021.

582. Q. When we go to page 9 of this PDF file, at the bottom, Caitlin Hurcomb's email on Monday, March 23rd at 10:15 am says, "Hi Vincent. I understand there is a plan to release a statement indicating that, generally speaking, for cancelled flights, an appropriate approach in the current context could be for airlines to provide affected passengers with vouchers or credits for future travel. This was discussed between the Chair, the DM, and the" redacted "and Marcia spoke with your ADM over the weekend as well." Do you see that?

A. Yes.

583. Q. It is obvious from Ms. Hurcomb's email that she is referring to the Statement of Vouchers that would be issued on March 25th. Do you agree?

A. Yes, I think so.

584. Q. There is explicit reference here to Ms. Jones speaking with transport Canada's ADM over the weekend. Do you agree?

A. Yes.

585. Q. And then below on page 10, the initial email from Vincent Millette says, "Hi Cait. I was just on a conference call with Lawrence, our ADM, where he briefed us on an announcement the Agency would do tomorrow regarding the refund and voucher issue."

That is in relation to the Statement on Vouchers, do you agree?

A. Yes. I think so.

586. Q. Here we see there is reference in the email above to Ms. Jones having spoken to Transport Canada's ADM over the weekend in relation to the Statement on Vouchers topic. What steps did you take to find all documents relating to that meeting Ms. Jones had with the ADM? Can you please explain?

A. I reviewed the documents that had been provided in the context of the Access to Information request and that included documents that would have been provided by the Analysis and Outreach Branch of which Marcia Jones was the branch head. If she had responsive documents then presumably they would have been provided at that time and then I asked for an additional search to be run in November of 2021 to see if there could be any other documents using search terms. Those were the main steps that I took. Those were the steps I took.

587. Q. Did you enquire on how Ms. Hurcomb would have known about Ms. Jones's discussion with the Transport Canada ADM?

A. No. I believe Caitlin Hurcomb left the Agency in September 2021. I know that she left the Agency and I believe it was in September 2021.

588. Q. Going back to the email on Sunday, March 22nd, the one immediately below from Mr. Millette, he is referencing the Statement on Vouchers on Sunday, March 22nd. It seems obvious that Transport Canada learned about the Statement on Vouchers that the Agency was developing during that weekend. Do you agree?

MR. SHAAR: Objection. When somebody from

Transport Canada learned about the Statement of Vouchers is a little bit beyond what the scope of what Mrs. Cuber is here to testify on. She can't testify as to when somebody learned something. O

MR. LIN: Mr. Shaar, respectfully, the October Order deals with documents and meetings with third parties and --

MR. SHAAR: I'm not disputing that. I'm disputing your last question which asks the affiant to say when Transport Canada learned about something.

MR. LIN: We're not asking Ms. Cuber exactly when Transport Canada learned of it. We're asking her did she take any steps to figure out how Transport Canada learned about this. What search have you conducted? Did you conduct specific --

MR. SHAAR: Why would she search for something about how Transport Canada learned about this? Her search was for responsive documents pursuant to a court order. None of those required her to learn how Transport Canada learned about this.

MR. LIN: When the CTA notified Transport Canada that the Statement on Vouchers was being issued, that would be a responsive document because it's a document to a third party in relation to the Statement on Vouchers.

MR. SHAAR: If the document existed, it would be disclosed. Asking her to say when Transport Canada learned is not the same question.

MR. LIN:

589. Q. Ms. Cuber, did you make any specific searches – I'm not talking about the general searches like the November 2021 search you did or reviewing ATIP. We see here there is clear indication Transport Canada knew about the Statement on Vouchers as early as the weekend of March 22nd, 2020. What steps have you taken to search for documents during that weekend in relation to the Statement on Vouchers and notification to Transport Canada?

A. The steps that I took were to review the documents that we had from the Access to Information request that had been gathered at different times and in different ways in May and in November 2020, using searches in RDIMS, using requests to the Analysis and Outreach Branch and the Office of the Chair and CEO to provide responsive documents, and searches in Outlook. I relied on those.

I looked through the working copy that was 5,099 pages long. I asked Lesley Robertson specifically for information that she might have on this topic and I asked for IT to run an additional search with different search terms in order to see if there were any documents or hits in anybody else's email account that might still be remaining and that might be responsive to this particular issue and to the order in general.

590. Q. You are stating that amongst the documents that you reviewed, you did not see documents where the CTA notified Transport Canada about the Statement on Vouchers?

A. I didn't see any document on this issue that wasn't produced. Every document that I found on this issue, which I searched for, every document that I found was produced to the parties.

591. Q. Let me ask you, you as the lawyer that's searching for documents, we see here that there's a reference to Transport Canada learning about the Statement on Vouchers on March 22nd. Would be reasonable for you to do further searches into what communications occurred between Transport Canada and the CTA during that weekend?

A. That was the one of the intentions of my search was to look for documents of that sort and I thought that the best way to do that was to carefully look through the already-gathered documents and to see if Ms. Robertson had any specific documents because she, as the Executive Coordinator of the Chair's Office, would be best placed to be able to provide any documents that might exist and she produced no – I produced the responsive documents that she gave me. I didn't have any documents on this topic that I didn't produce to the parties. These are the documents that existed that were responsive to the court's order.

MR. LIN: Can we take a short break, maybe two minutes? I just want to review my notes off camera. Is that okay? I see Mr. Shaar nodding. Thank you.

(SHORT RECESS)

MR. LIN: Ms. Cuber, thank you for attending today. Subject to the requests that we made on the record and the objections, we will be adjourning today's cross-examination. Thank you.

-- THE EXAMINATION ADJOURNED AT THE HOUR OF 4:29 IN THE AFTERNOON.

WE HEREBY CERTIFY THAT the foregoing was transcribed to the best of our skill and ability.

.....

E.M. GILLESPIE / S.L. / S.P.

Court File No.: A-102-20

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

BETWEEN:

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS

Applicant

– and –

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondent

– and –

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Intervener

APPLICANT'S RECORD

VOLUME 2 of 3

SIMON LIN
Evolink Law Group
4388 Still Creek Drive, Suite 237
Burnaby, British Columbia, V5C 6C6
Tel: 604-620-2666

simonlin@evolinklaw.com

Counsel for the Applicant,
Air Passenger Rights

TO: ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA
Department of Justice
Civil Litigation Section
50 O'Connor Street, Suite 300
Ottawa, ON K1A 0H8

Sanderson Graham
Tel: 613-296-4469
Fax: 613-954-1920
Email: Sandy.Graham@justice.gc.ca

Lorne Ptack
Tel: 613-670-6281
Fax: 613-954-1920
Email: Lorne.Ptack@justice.gc.ca

Counsels for the Respondent,
Attorney General of Canada

AND TO: CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY
15 Eddy Street
Gatineau, QC K1A 0N9

Kevin Shaar
Tel: 613-894-4260
Fax: 819-953-9269
Email: Kevin.Shaar@otc-cta.gc.ca
Email: Servicesjuridiques.LegalServices@otc-cta.gc.ca

Counsel for the Intervener,
Canadian Transportation Agency

Table of Contents of Volume 2

Provincial Statutes and Regulations

Court File No.: A-102-20

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

BETWEEN:

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS

Applicant

– and –

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondent

– and –

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION AGENCY

Intervener

MEMORANDUM OF FACT AND LAW OF THE APPLICANT

PART I – OVERVIEW AND STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Overview

1. In March 2020, the Canadian Transportation Agency [CTA] and its appointed Members incepted and widely disseminated a misleading statement entitled "Statement on Vouchers" [Statement on Vouchers], purporting to be guidance, misinforming the public about passengers' legal rights to refunds for flights cancelled by airlines.

2. The CTA, including its appointed Members, acted for the improper purposes of:

(a) interfering with legal rights under provincial consumer protection laws and/or cardholder agreements to a credit card chargeback for services not received; and

(b) aiding airlines in withholding funds paid by passengers for flights the airlines already cancelled, and retaining that cash to shore up the airlines' balance sheets.

3. By giving the public a false sense of legitimacy to the airlines' unlawful actions, the CTA's Statement on Vouchers defeated existing federal laws for refunds and unlawfully interfered with passengers' credit card chargebacks and travel insurance claims.

4. The CTA's Statement on Vouchers was prompted by a Transport Canada email, forwarding Air Transat's request for an official endorsement of the airline withholding cash refunds, and subsequent requests by Air Canada and Air Transat that the CTA publicly state that "no refunds to passengers are required under the APPR." Senior CTA personnel had advised the CTA's chairperson and vice-chairperson that the CTA's endorsement would result in passengers receiving "useless vouchers" instead of refunds.

5. This Honourable Court should rebuke the conduct of the CTA and its Members, and protect the public interest in ensuring government bodies are acting in the interest of Canadians, and not the private financial interests of regulated for-profit businesses.

6. The Applicant, Air Passenger Rights [APR], is a non-profit entity that advocates for the rights of air passengers. APR seeks judicial review, in the public interest, of the CTA's Statement on Vouchers on two distinct grounds:

(a) Reasonable Apprehension of Bias Ground [RAB Ground] — the inception and/or dissemination of the Statement on Vouchers was contrary to the CTA's Code of Conduct, and/or gave rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias for the CTA as a whole, or the CTA's Members that endorsed the statement; and

(b) Misinformation Ground — the Statement on Vouchers misled the public about passengers' legal rights to refunds for flights already cancelled by the airlines.

7. The RAB Ground of judicial review is twofold: firstly, the pre-judgement by the CTA as an institution, or by its Members, regarding passengers' entitlement to refunds for flights already cancelled by airlines; and secondly, external third-party influence for the inception of the Statement on Vouchers, including airlines and Transport Canada.[1]

8. The Applicant seeks an order that the CTA retract the Statement on Vouchers and issue a corresponding correction notice, as well as an injunction enjoining the CTA and/or its Members from dealing with complaints relating to passenger refunds from the COVID-19 pandemic. Alternatively, the Applicant seeks declaratory relief.

---

[1] APR v. Canada (A.G.), 2021 FCA 201 at para. 17 [Tab 8, p. 1526].

B. The CTA, its Appointed Members, and the Members' Code of Conduct

9. The CTA is a body created by the Canada Transportation Act that administers regulatory schemes for transportation. In respect of air travel, the CTA has two main roles under the Canada Transportation Act: (i) as a quasi-judicial tribunal, it adjudicates consumer disputes between passengers and airlines; and (ii) as the economic regulator, it regulates entrants into the air travel industry through its statutory powers to issue operating licenses or permits to airlines.[2]

10. The CTA's enabling statute prescribes that the CTA is composed exclusively of its appointed Members, appointed by the Governor in Council. Appointed Members exercise the powers conferred upon the CTA by its enabling statute.[3] Appointed Members of the CTA are assisted by a roster of civil service staff, who are supervised by the appointed Members[4] and do not have independent authority to act on the CTA's behalf.

11. Two of the CTA's Members are designated as the chairperson and vice-chairperson.[5] The chairperson is also the chief executive officer, who has supervision over and direction of the work of the appointed Members and civil service staff.[6] At the material times for the impugned Statement on Vouchers, the CTA's chairperson was Mr. Scott Streiner and the CTA's vice-chairperson continues to be Ms. Elizabeth (Liz) Barker.

12. As a quasi-judicial body with substantial powers, the CTA's appointed Members must conform to a high standard of conduct similar to judicial members of a court, including maintaining independence, impartiality, and public confidence in their work.

13. The CTA's Code of Conduct, created pursuant to the Public Servants Disclosure Protection Act,[7] further reinforces the standard statutory and common law rules with specific safeguards of the appointed Members' independence, and prohibitions against

---

2 Lukács v. Canada (Transp. Agency), 2014 FCA 76 at paras. 50-52 [Tab 32, p. 2128].
3 Canada Transportation Act, ss. 7(2) and 16 [Appendix A, pp. 1353 and 1355].
4 Canada Transportation Act, s. 19 [Appendix A, p. 1356].
5 Canada Transportation Act, s. 7(3) [Appendix A, p. 1353].
6 Canada Transportation Act, s. 13 [Appendix A, p. 1354].
7 Public Servants Disclosure Protection Act, s. 6 [Appendix A, p. 1385].

outside influence and conduct that might create a reasonable apprehension of bias:

> (9) This Code establishes the standards for the conduct of Members and applies to all regular and temporary Members. It supplements, and should be read in conjunction with, any applicable requirements and standards set out in the Canada Transportation Act; other legislation administered by the Agency; other legislation establishing ethical and conduct obligations, such as the Conflict of Interest Act; relevant regulations, policies, and guidelines; other relevant codes; and letters of appointment.
>
> (39) Members shall not communicate with political actors or officials of other federal departments and agencies, provincial or foreign governments, or international organizations regarding a matter that is, was, or could be before the Agency.
>
> (40) Members shall not publicly express an opinion about any past, current, or potential cases or any other issue related to the work of the Agency, and shall refrain from comments or discussions in public or otherwise that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias.[8]

14. In addition, the CTA's Code of Values and Ethics acknowledges that the CTA is guided by "Integrity - We act with honesty, fairness, impartiality and transparency."[9]

C. Relevant Background for this Judicial Review Application

i. Airlines' Cancellation of Flights Without Refunds to Passengers

15. On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization declared COVID-19 a global pandemic. Two days later, on March 13, the Government of Canada issued a travel advisory against non-essential travel abroad and also restricted entry of foreign nationals into Canada. At the same time, the Government of Canada also urged Canadians to stay home unless absolutely necessary, in order to stem the spread of COVID-19.[10]

16. Between around March 16-22, 2020, major Canadian airlines announced the cancellation of some or all of their flights. On March 16, 2020, WestJet announced

---

[8] Code of Conduct for Members of the Agency, paras. 9 and 39-40 – Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "40" (emphasis added) [Tab 2(40), p. 624].

[9] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "41" (emphasis added) [Tab 2(41), p. 628].

[10] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibits "14"-"16" [Tabs 2(14)-2(16), pp. 392-401]

it was cancelling transborder and international flights as of March 22, 2020. Around March 17, 2020, Sunwing cancelled all southbound flights up to April 30, 2020. On March 18, 2020, Air Transat announced it was cancelling flights until April 30, 2020. On March 19, 2020, Swoop (a subsidiary of WestJet) announced it was cancelling transborder and international flights until October 24, 2020. On or around March 22, 2020, Air Canada announced cancellation of some of its flights.[11]

17. Between March 18-21, 2020, major Canadian airlines announced that they would be issuing vouchers with a two-year validity period for cancelled flights:

(a) On March 18, 2020, Air Transat announced that passengers whose flights were cancelled would receive a credit with 24-month expiry.[12]

(b) On March 18, 2020, Air Canada advised travel agents of a change to its cancellation policy and passengers with cancelled flights would instead receive a credit with 24-month expiry. Air Canada also urged travel agents to "refrain from actioning or refunding tickets affected by this schedule change."[13]

(c) On March 18, 2020, WestJet advised travel agents that WestJet was updating its existing cancellation policy and was "not processing refunds to original form of payment at this time." On or before March 21, 2020, WestJet announced that passengers with cancelled flights would receive a credit with 24-month expiry.[14] Although WestJet already announced its flight cancellations on March 16, 2020, WestJet claimed that it was still up to passengers to cancel their reservations.[15] Swoop also announced a substantially similar policy as WestJet.[16]

(d) On or before March 21, 2020, Sunwing stated that passengers would receive a credit valid for 24 months, and not a refund in the original form of payment.[17]

---

[11] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibits "17"-"25" [Tabs 2(17)-2(25), pp. 403-551].
[12] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "19" [Tab 2(19), p. 519].
[13] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibits "26"-"27" [Tabs 2(26)-2(27), pp. 553-559].
[14] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibits "30"-"31" [Tabs 2(30)-2(31), pp. 574-577].
[15] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibits "24" &"31" [Tabs 2(24) & 2(31), pp. 548 & 577].
[16] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibits "23" & "28"-"29" [Tabs 2(23) & 2(28)-2(29), pp. 543 and 566-570].
[17] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "21" [Tab 2(21), p. 530].

ii. Federal Laws on Passenger Refunds in March 2020

18. The regulatory scheme governing the transportation of passengers within, to, and from Canada requires each airline to establish a tariff setting out its terms and conditions.[18] The tariff is a contract between the airline and its passengers.[19]

19. Since at least 1988, the tariff must include terms and conditions relating to:

> refunds for services purchased but not used, whether in whole or in part, either as a result of the client's unwillingness or inability to continue or the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason;[20]

20. The Act and the ATR stipulate that an airline's tariff provisions must be reasonable.[21] As part of its quasi-judicial function, the CTA has rendered decisions on whether airlines' tariff provisions are reasonable.[22] Such decisions may be registered with the Federal Court and be given the force of a judgment of that court.[23]

21. Since 2004, the CTA has rendered four quasi-judicial decisions reiterating that an airline's tariff is not reasonable if it does not respect a passenger's "fundamental right" to a refund for unused portions of a ticket when the airline is unable to provide the services within a reasonable time [CTA Refund Jurisprudence]:[24]

(a) Re: Air Transat, CTA Decision No. 28-A-2004;[25]

(b) Lukács v. Sunwing Airlines Inc., CTA Decision No. 313-C-A-2013;[26]

(c) Lukács v. Porter Airlines Inc., CTA Decision No. 344-C-A-2013;[27] and

(d) Lukács v. Porter Airlines Inc., CTA Decision No. 31-C-A-2014.[28]

---

[18] Air Transportation Regulations [ATR], s. 111(1) [Appendix A, p. 1346]; and Canada Transportation Act [Act], s. 67.2(1) [Appendix A, p. 1365].
[19] Lukács v. Canada (CTA), 2015 FCA 269 at para. 20 [Tab 33, p. 2133].
[20] ATR, ss. 107(1)(n)(xii) and 122(c)(xii) (emphasis added) [Appendix A, pp. 1344 and 1348].
[21] ATR, s. 111(1) [Appendix A, p. 1346]; and Act, s. 67.2(1) [Appendix A, p. 1365].
[22] ATR, s. 113 [Appendix A, p. 1347]; and Act, s. 67.2(1) [Appendix A, p. 1365].
[23] Act, s. 33 [Appendix A, p. 1358].
[24] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 14-15, containing key excerpts [Tab 2, pp. 19-21].
[25] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "6" [Tab 2(6), p. 204].
[26] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "3" [Tab 2(3), p. 124].
[27] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "4" [Tab 2(4), p. 132].
[28] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "5" [Tab 2(5), p. 160].

22. The CTA Refund Jurisprudence has not been overtaken or otherwise overturned, and the legislative provisions underlying the interpretation remain in full force and effect. The Air Passenger Protection Regulations [APPR], promulgated in 2019, are deemed to form part of an airline's tariff in so far as the tariff does not provide more advantageous terms and conditions of carriage than those obligations specified in the APPR.[29] An airline's underlying legal obligation to clearly set out in the tariff reasonable terms and conditions relating to refunds due to "the air carrier's inability to provide the service for any reason" has remained unchanged, although it was renumbered.[30]

iii. Quebec-based Airlines are Trustees of Passengers' Funds

23. Both Air Canada and Air Transat are headquartered and based in the province of Quebec. The Quebec Consumer Protection Act stipulates that:

> 256. Any sum of money collected from a consumer by a merchant under a contract that stipulates that the principal obligation of the merchant is to be performed more than two months after the contract is made shall be transferred in trust. The merchant is the trustee of the sum and must deposit it in a trust account until the principal obligation has been performed.[31]

iv. Rights to a Credit Card Chargeback for Services Not Performed

24. Passengers who purchased air travel using their credit cards and who did not receive the services they paid for have recourse in two manners. The standard cardholder agreements between a credit card company and a consumer typically include a right for the consumer to a chargeback of the funds if the merchant does not provide the service and refuses to provide a refund [Contractual Chargeback].[32] In addition, consumer protection laws in every province, except PEI and NB, provide consumers with a statutory right to a chargeback in various circumstances [Statutory Chargeback].[33]

---

[29] Act, s. 86.11(4) [Appendix A, p. 1368].
[30] ATR, ss. 107(1)(n)(xii) and 122(c)(xii) (emphasis added) [Appendix A, pp. 1344 and 1348].
[31] Consumer Protection Act, CQLR c. P-40.1, s. 256 [Appendix A, pp. 1431 and 1437].
[32] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 93 and 208 [Tab 2, pp. 48 and 103].
[33] See excerpts of provincial laws [Appendix A, pp. 1387-1448]; see also discussion on the Internet Sales Contract Harmonization Template [Tab 47, p. 2393].

D. The CTA's Inception of the Statement on Vouchers

25. Around the same time as the airlines were uniformly announcing a new practice of issuing vouchers with 24-month validity instead of a refund for flights that they cancelled,[34] the CTA received multiple requests from airlines and the travel industry that the CTA publicly state that passengers have no right to refunds for flights cancelled by the airlines and that the CTA endorse the airlines' new practices [Industry Requests].[35]

26. The CTA knew that the purpose of the Industry Requests was to defeat passengers' right to credit card chargebacks.[36] Some CTA Members were advised that obliging the Industry Requests would leave affected passengers with "useless vouchers."[37]

27. After internal and external communications detailed below, which included undocumented meetings with Transport Canada [TC] over the weekend of March 21-22, 2020, the CTA obliged the Industry Requests by issuing the Statement on Vouchers.

i. External Requests from Air Transat and TC (Mar. 18, 2020)

28. The CTA received an encrypted email from TC conveying Air Transat's request that "we officially let [Air Transat] to provide vouchers to passengers instead of providing [passengers] cash because they literally do not have enough cash to give refunds."[38]

29. Shortly after TC's email, CTA and TC personnel had a "side exchange" about Air Transat possibly amending its tariff to stipulate the issuance of vouchers instead of cash refunds. The CTA personnel noted the 45-day statutory notice period before an amended tariff takes effect, and that an amended tariff must still be reasonable.[39]

30. On the evening of March 18, 2020, Mr. George Petsikas (Transat A.T.'s Senior

---

[34] See paragraph 17, supra.
[35] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 88, 93, 117, 119, and 126 [Tab 2, pp. 44, 48, 60, 61, and 65].
[36] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 93, 103, 117, and 119 [Tab 2, pp. 48, 53, 60, and 61].
[37] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 121-122 [Tab 2, pp. 62-63].
[38] Lukács Affidavit, para. 88 (emphasis added) [Tab 2, p. 44].
[39] Lukács Affidavit, para. 91 [Tab 2, p. 46].

Director of Government and Industry Affairs) had a lengthy call with Ms. Marcia Jones, the CTA's then Chief Strategy Officer. Mr. Petsikas requested that the CTA recognize vouchers to pre-empt passengers from making credit card chargebacks.[40] Mr. Petsikas's call with Ms. Jones, and the nearly contemporaneous email documenting that call, was not disclosed in the Communication Reports filed with the Lobbying Commissioner.[41]

31. For Transat A.T.'s request, the CTA's then chairperson, Mr. Streiner, stated that "I'm not sure we have a clear role here, as this seems to boil down to a commercial dispute between the carrier and the credit card companies."[42] Transat A.T.'s request would be discussed at the daily Executive Committee [EC] meeting the next day.

ii. CTA's EC Meeting Discussion about Airline Refunds (Mar. 19, 2020)

32. At the CTA's EC meeting, as part of the "Debriefs - External", the meeting notes state that air carriers were claiming that nothing was within their control and that the air carriers wanted the CTA "to clarify that they are not required to refund." At the same meeting, the CTA's Senior Special Project Officer also noted the preference for vouchers given airlines' cash flow issues. The EC meeting notes indicate that no discussion or consideration took place at that meeting about the unfairness for passengers to be deprived of their cash.[43]

33. Mr. Petsikas followed up with Ms. Jones on Transat A.T.'s urgent request from the previous evening. Ms. Jones indicated that "[p]lease rest assured we are looking into this [...] We do appreciate how much pressure you are facing." She promised to provide Mr. Petsikas with any updates.[44] The exchange between Mr. Petsikas and Ms. Jones was not disclosed in the Communication Reports filed with the Commissioner of Lobbying.[45]

---

[40] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 92-93 [Tab 2, pp. 47-48].
[41] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 148(a) and 149 [Tab 2, p. 76].
[42] Lukács Affidavit, para. 94 [Tab 2, p. 49].
[43] Lukács Affidavit, para. 96 [Tab 2, p. 50].
[44] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 97-98 [Tab 2, p. 51].
[45] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 148(a) and 149 [Tab 2, p. 76].

iii. The Statement on Vouchers Initiative is Parked (Mar. 20, 2020)

34. At the daily EC meeting on March 20, 2020, Ms. Jones was assigned the task to "[p]repare and circulate draft statement with respect to air passenger refunds and vouchers during COVID-19." However, at 5:00 p.m. Mr. Streiner instructed to remove this task "since we're not quite sure yet what will be done on this front or how."[46]

iv. Air Transat Repeats its Request to the CTA (Mar. 21, 2020)

35. Mr. Petsikas followed up again with Ms. Jones regarding Transat A.T.'s request, stating that recognizing the newly announced practice of providing vouchers for flights the airline cancelled was essential to avoid credit card chargebacks from passengers. There was no record of a response from Ms. Jones, but Ms. Jones circulated Mr. Petsikas's email to other CTA personnel.[47] Mr. Petsikas's further follow-up was not recorded in the Communication Reports filed with the Commissioner of Lobbying.[48]

v. CTA's Weekend Meetings with Transport Canada (Mar. 21-22, 2020)

36. Around the weekend of March 21-22, 2020, after Mr. Streiner had already parked the idea of drafting the Statement on Vouchers, a number of undocumented meetings occurred between CTA's personnel and officials at TC regarding the Statement on Vouchers [TC-CTA Weekend Meetings]:

(a) Mr. Streiner met with the Deputy Minister [DM] of Transport, Mr. Michael Keenan, and the Minister of Transport's Chief of Staff, Mr. Marc Roy.[49]

(b) Ms. Jones met with the Assistant DM of Transport, Mr. Lawrence Hanson.[50]

37. The occurrence of the meetings between TC and CTA are corroborated by other CTA and TC records. In the early afternoon of Sunday March 22, 2020, TC officials indicated they already knew about the draft Statement on Vouchers that Mr. Streiner

[46] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 101-102 [Tab 2, p. 53].
[47] Lukács Affidavit, para. 103 [Tab 2, p. 53].
[48] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 148(a) and 149 [Tab 2, p. 76].
[49] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 111 and 112(a)-(b) [Tab 2, pp. 57-58].
[50] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 111 and 112(c) [Tab 2, pp. 57-58].

circulated within the CTA that same morning.[51] There was no paper trail on how TC learned about it. At the Monday March 23, 2020 EC meeting, Mr. Streiner provided a debrief of his meeting and Mr. Streiner's "agreement" with Mr. Keenan. Mr. Streiner also conveyed TC's praise for the CTA acting faster than TC had expected.[52]

vi. CTA Members Approve Draft Statement on Vouchers (Mar. 22, 2020)

38. Mr. Streiner circulated the first draft of the Statement on Vouchers to senior CTA personnel early on Sunday morning. Around the same time, Mr. Streiner scheduled an "Urgent Debrief" with the senior CTA personnel for 10:30 a.m. on that morning.[53]

39. After the "Urgent Debrief" with senior CTA personnel, Mr. Streiner circulated the draft Statement on Vouchers to the CTA's Members for their comment and approval. Mr. Streiner noted that after "discussion with other federal players" the CTA was considering issuing the Statement on Vouchers. On the same day, the CTA's Members commented on the draft Statement on Vouchers and expressed their approval thereof.[54]

40. Mr. Streiner and Ms. Barker, who were part of the CTA's EC and also Members, were fully aware that it would be unfair for passengers to be deprived of a cash refund.[55]

vii. Further Industry Requests to Endorse Vouchers (Mar. 22-23, 2020)

41. On the afternoon of Sunday March 22, the Chairman, President, and CEO of Transat A.T. (Mr. Jean-Marc Eustache) substantially repeated Mr. Petsikas's request from March 18, 2020 that the CTA assist in pre-empting credit card chargebacks by publicly recognizing that: (1) all cancellations were outside of the airlines' control and no refunds were required under the APPR; and (2) vouchers in lieu of cash refunds was acceptable.[56] Upon receipt, Mr. Streiner forwarded Transat A.T.'s request to the EC.[57]

---

[51] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 110 and 104 [Tab 2, pp. 56 and 54].
[52] Lukács Affidavit, para. 128 [Tab 2, p. 66].
[53] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 104-105 [Tab 2, p. 54].
[54] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 106-108 [Tab 2, pp. 54-56].
[55] Lukács Affidavit, para. 109 [Tab 2, p. 56].
[56] Lukács Affidavit, para. 117 [Tab 2, p. 60].
[57] Lukács Affidavit, para. 118 [Tab 2, p. 61].

42. On Monday March 23, the Executive Vice President, International & Regulatory Affairs & Chief Legal Officer of Air Canada (Mr. David Shapiro) sent Mr. Streiner a "Private and Confidential" letter substantially repeating Transat A.T.'s aforementioned request, using identical wording as Transat A.T.[58]

43. On the evening of Sunday March 22, the Vice President of Advocacy and Member Relations of the Association of Canadian Travel Agencies [ACTA], Ms. Heather Craig-Peddle, requested the CTA to "assist with going to the banks and credit card companies for prevention of credit card chargebacks [...]."[59] Although the CTA marked ACTA's email for follow-up, there is no record of the CTA refusing ACTA's inappropriate request nor of any other effort by the CTA to distance itself from that request.

44. Transat A.T.'s request, Air Canada's request, and ACTA's request were not disclosed in the Communication Reports filed with the Commissioner of Lobbying.[60]

viii. CTA's Discussions on "Useless Vouchers" and Discouraging Passenger Complaints (Mar. 23, 2020)

45. On the morning of March 23, after the airlines already uniformly announced a new practice of issuing vouchers with 24-month validity instead of a refund for flights that the airlines themselves already cancelled,[61] Mr. Streiner started a discussion about what the CTA would say in the Statement on Vouchers regarding expiry of vouchers.

46. As part of the CTA's discussion on expiry of vouchers, at least two senior CTA personnel referred to airlines issuing "useless vouchers" and the CTA's Chief of Staff, Mr. Sebastien Bergeron, noted "[a]llowing airlines to give vouchers instead of cash is already a big move."[62] The CTA's EC personnel also emphasized that they "[d]o not want to solicit air travel complaints."[63]

---

[58] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 126 and 118 [Tab 2, pp. 65 and 61].
[59] Lukács Affidavit, para. 119 (emphasis added) [Tab 2, p. 61].
[60] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 149-151 [Tab 2, pp. 76-77].
[61] See paragraph 17, supra.
[62] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "71" (emphasis added) [Tab 2(71), p. 728].
[63] Lukács Affidavit para. 128 [Tab 2, p. 66].

ix. CTA Members Meeting about "Asks" from Airlines (Mar. 24, 2020)

47. Mr. Streiner circulated a comparison table of the "asks" from both Transat A.T.'s and Air Canada's letters.[64] This table was before the CTA Members at their March 24 meeting. One of the CTA Members annotated the table stating that the airlines' ask that flight cancellations be recognized as being outside of the airlines' control and that no refunds were required were "[a]lready addressed through the Agency's statement."[65]

x. The CTA Publishes the Statement on Vouchers (Mar. 25, 2020)

48. Prior to the publication of the Statement on Vouchers and after considering the airlines' "asks", Mr. Streiner (Chair) and Ms. Barker (Vice-Chair) summarily concluded that the Statement on Vouchers encapsulated "the sort of interpretation the Agency might could [sic] conceivably in future adjudications."[66]

49. Both Mr. Streiner and Ms. Barker knew that the Statement on Vouchers was not a regulatory guidance, but Ms. Barker supported exaggerating the character of the Statement on Vouchers so that members of the public would perceive it as guidance.[67]

50. Mr. Streiner made one final addition to the Statement on Vouchers regarding expiry dates that "24 months would be considered reasonable in most cases," echoing the airlines' recently announced practice of issuing vouchers with 24-month expiry.[68]

51. Ultimately, the Statement on Vouchers was published on the CTA's website at approximately 2:00 p.m.[69] Immediately thereafter, Ms. Jones announced to various industry stakeholders, including Mr. Petsikas (Transat A.T.), that "the CTA has released a statement providing guidance." Mr. Petsikas promptly thanked the CTA "for turning this around and getting it out the door" (emphasis added).[70]

---

[64] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "76" [Tab 2(76), p. 757].
[65] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "77" [Tab 2(77), p. 760].
[66] Lukács Affidavit, para. 138 [Tab 2, p. 72].
[67] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 139-140 [Tab 2, p. 73].
[68] Lukács Affidavit, para. 141 [Tab 2, p. 73].
[69] Lukács Affidavit, para. 76 [Tab 2, p. 39].
[70] Lukács Affidavit, para. 143 and Exhibit "87" [Tabs 2 and 2(87), pp. 74 and 791].

52. At 3:53 p.m., the CTA received an urgent media inquiry from the CBC, requesting authentication of the Statement on Vouchers, as the statement had no name attached to it and did not state "on what legislative basis it is endorsing credits and not refunds." The CBC reporter also brought to the CTA's attention passengers' fundamental right to a refund, recognized in the CTA Refund Jurisprudence. The CBC's urgent inquiry was forwarded to senior CTA personnel, but there is no record of any action being taken thereafter.[71] There is no record of any discussion within the CTA about the CTA Refund Jurisprudence before the Statement on Vouchers was issued either.

E. The CTA's Partial Backtracking After this Application was Filed

53. On April 22, 2020, the CTA published a new Frequently Asked Questions page [New FAQs Page] for the Statement on Vouchers,[72] and added a URL to it at the bottom of the Statement on Vouchers. The New FAQs Page is inconsistent with the facts at the time the Statement on Vouchers was published and introduces further contradictions.

(a) The New FAQs Page claims that the Statement on Vouchers "offers suggestions to airlines and passengers," when the CTA stated internally that the Statement on Vouchers was intended to be perceived as regulatory guidance.[73]

(b) The New FAQs Page claims that the Statement on Vouchers was to protect passengers from "a serious risk that passengers would simply end up out-of-pocket" for flights the airlines cancelled, but the airlines were already issuing 24-month vouchers before the Statement on Vouchers was contemplated.[74]

(c) The New FAQs Page's stated purpose was to answer frequent questions, but its true purpose was to "diffuse legal risk head on" in relation to this Application.[75]

(d) The New FAQs Page claims that the USA and the EU impose a "minimum obligation for airlines to issue refunds when flights are cancelled for reasons outside

[71] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 145-146 [Tab 2, pp. 74-75].
[72] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "115" [Tab 2(115), p. 946].
[73] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 139-140 (emphasis added) [Tab 2, p. 73].
[74] See paragraph 17, supra.
[75] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 178-180 [Tab 2, p. 89].

their control" but no such obligations exist in Canada. The CTA was aware of the CTA Refund Jurisprudence on the "fundamental right" to a refund.[76]

(e) The New FAQs Page claims that each case will be decided on its merits, but at the same time presumed or assumed that the flights the airlines themselves cancelled were cancelled "for reasons beyond airlines' control" under the APPR.

54. On or about November 16, 2020, the CTA changed the Statement on Vouchers again [Revamped Statement on Vouchers]. The Revamped Statement on Vouchers incorporated the New FAQs Page immediately below the Statement on Vouchers rather than as a separate URL link. The Revamped Statement on Vouchers also added a new textbox emphasizing that the Statement on Vouchers was a "non-binding statement."[77]

55. The Revamped Statement on Vouchers continued to (mis)represent that "the law does not require airlines to include refund provisions in their tariffs for flights that are cancelled for reasons beyond their control," when the CTA was aware of the CTA Refund Jurisprudence and ss. 107(1)(n)(xii) and 122(c)(xii) of the ATR.[78]

56. The CTA did not update the modified date for the Statement on Vouchers when the New FAQs Page or the Revamped Statement on Vouchers were introduced.[79]

57. Although some non-mainstream media learned about the New FAQs Page,[80] there is no evidence of the CTA announcing the New FAQs Page to any of its stakeholders (i.e., the airlines and travel industry). There is similarly no evidence of any attempt by the CTA to announce the Revamped Statement on Vouchers.

58. Mr. Streiner acknowledged to a Parliamentary committee that "[t]he statement contains suggestions, and only suggestions" and that it was not appropriate for him to provide an interpretation of legislation outside the CTA's quasi-judicial process.[81]

---

[76] See paragraph 21, supra.
[77] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 183-185 [Tab 2, pp. 90-91].
[78] Lukács Affidavit, para. 186 [Tab 2, p. 91]; see also paragraphs 19-21, supra.
[79] Lukács Affidavit, para. 187 [Tab 2, p. 92].
[80] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 181-182 [Tab 2, p. 90].
[81] Lukács Affidavit, para. 213 [Tab 2, p. 106].

F. The Statement on Vouchers' Prejudice to and Impacts on Passengers

59. The CTA's Statement on Vouchers was published near the start of the COVID-19 pandemic when Canadians were facing unemployment and significant economic uncertainty due to lockdowns from coast to coast. The CTA's broad dissemination of the Statement on Vouchers created a ripple effect of passengers being denied any non-judicial recourse for the airlines' refusal to refund their monies, including being denied credit card chargebacks and travel insurance claims being put into disarray.

i. CTA's Broad Dissemination of the Statement on Vouchers

60. Once the Statement on Vouchers was published, the CTA sent a template response regurgitating it in reply to passengers emailing for assistance, without directly answering passengers' specific questions.[82] The CTA also began to indiscriminately respond to passengers' public social media posts by stating "please refer to this link that will answer your question [...]," with a URL link to the Statement on Vouchers.[83]

61. The CTA included in its automated acknowledgment of receipt of formal complaints from passengers a link entitled "Statement on Vouchers for flight disruptions" under the heading "Air carriers' obligations during the global COVID-19 pandemic."[84]

ii. Airlines Using the Statement on Vouchers to Stonewall Passengers

62. The major Canadian airlines began citing the Statement on Vouchers to passengers as justification for refusing refunds for flights the airlines themselves cancelled.

(a) Sunwing's FAQ to its travel agents claimed that the Statement on Vouchers was a CTA ruling that supported Sunwing in refusing refunds to passengers.[85]

(b) WestJet represented that the CTA approved vouchers instead of refunds.[86]

---

[82] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 153-159 [Tab 2, pp. 78-80].
[83] Lukács Affidavit, para. 152 [Tab 2, p. 77].
[84] Lukács Affidavit, para. 160 [Tab 2, p. 80].
[85] Lukács Affidavit, para. 161 [Tab 2, p. 81].
[86] Lukács Affidavit, para. 162 [Tab 2, p. 82].

(c) Air Canada simply referred passengers to the Statement on Vouchers, and stated that Air Canada's policy was supported by the CTA.[87]

(d) Air Transat stated that the CTA had issued an opinion supporting Air Transat's approach to issuing vouchers instead of refunds.[88]

iii. Travel and Insurance Industry Citing the Statement on Vouchers

63. An article entitled "Tactful and tough, agents have effective strategies for refund demands" appeared in travel agents' trade publications, outlining how travel agents can use the Statement on Vouchers to coerce a passenger to forego their credit card chargeback, and blaming passengers for not purchasing travel cancellation insurance.[89]

64. The insurance industry also released an advisory stating that the Statement on Vouchers would in many instances negate any insurable loss under the travel cancellation insurance policies and recommending to refer the policyholder back to the CTA or the travel provider.[90]

iv. Credit Card Chargebacks Derailed by the Statement on Vouchers

65. Major Canadian airlines invoked the Statement on Vouchers to dispute passengers' credit card chargebacks for flights that the airlines themselves cancelled.

66. WestJet responded to credit card chargebacks using a template letter invoking the Statement on Vouchers [WestJet Template Letter]. The WestJet Template Letter acknowledged that WestJet cancelled the flights and stated that WestJet was "following [the CTA's] guidelines" (i.e., the Statement on Vouchers) that endorsed issuing of vouchers instead of providing cash refunds. The WestJet Template Letters were sent after the CTA's New FAQs Page was published on April 22, 2020, but WestJet provided credit card companies a copy of the outdated March 25, 2020 Statement on Vouchers.[91]

---

[87] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 163-164 [Tab 2, p. 82].
[88] Lukács Affidavit, para. 165 [Tab 2, p. 83].
[89] Lukács Affidavit, para. 168 [Tab 2, p. 84].
[90] Lukács Affidavit, para. 169 [Tab 2, p. 86].
[91] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 190-192 [Tab 2, pp. 93-95].

67. On or around September 10, 2020, WestJet responded to at least one credit card chargeback with a set of lengthy legal submissions that repeatedly invoked the Statement on Vouchers claiming that, according to the CTA, vouchers "is an acceptable form of refund" and that it was part of the CTA's policies.[92]

68. Similarly to WestJet, Swoop also claimed in response to a credit card charge-back that "[a]ccording to the [CTA], a future travel credit or Airline Dollars is an acceptable form of refund [...]."[93]

69. Air Canada invoked the Statement on Vouchers in response to a credit card chargeback, and touted it as "the [CTA]'s guidance" that supports Air Canada's policy to withhold refunds from passengers whose flights Air Canada itself had cancelled.[94]

70. In response to a credit card chargeback, Transat A.T. claimed that "no refund to credit card is due as passenger is credited with future travel credit valid for 24 months" and cited the CTA's Statement on Vouchers in support of its position.[95]

71. Some credit card issuers, such as Amex, relied on the CTA's Statement on Vouchers for the proposition that passengers who were offered vouchers cannot seek a credit card chargeback. Amex even inserted text from the Statement on Vouchers into its template letters refusing customers' credit card chargebacks.[96]

PART II – STATEMENT OF THE POINTS IN ISSUE

72. The four issues to be decided on this Application are:

(a) whether Air Passenger Rights should be granted public interest standing;

(b) whether the inception and/or issuance of the Statement on Vouchers gave rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias;

---

92 Lukács Affidavit, paras. 193-195 [Tab 2, pp. 95-96].
93 Lukács Affidavit, para. 197 [Tab 2, p. 97].
94 Lukács Affidavit, para. 196 [Tab 2, p. 96].
95 Lukács Affidavit, para. 198 [Tab 2, p. 97].
96 Lukács Affidavit, paras. 199-204 [Tab 2, pp. 97-98].

(c) whether the Statement on Vouchers misinformed the public and/or passengers on the right to a refund from air carriers; and

(d) the appropriate remedies to be granted on this Application.

PART III – STATEMENT OF SUBMISSIONS

A. Air Passenger Rights Should Be Granted Public Interest Standing

73. The principle that all holders of public power are to be accountable for their exercise of power rests at the heart of Canadian democracy and the rule of law.[97] "L'etat, c'est moi" and "trust us, we got it right" have no place in Canadian democracy. Those who wield public power cannot be a law unto themselves, immunized from truly independent review and shielded from meaningful scrutiny.[98]

74. Judicial review is the means by which the courts supervise those who exercise statutory powers, to ensure they do not overstep their legal authority. Judicial review therefore functions to uphold the rule of law and maintain legislative supremacy.[99]

75. Public interest standing is a means of upholding the principle of legality, which requires that state action must conform to statutory authority and that there must be practical and effective ways to challenge the legality of state action. Public interest standing ensures that state action is not immunized from judicial review.[100]

76. The legal test for public interest standing is the one formulated by the Supreme Court of Canada in Downtown Eastside, calling for the examination of three factors:

(i) whether there is a serious justiciable issue;

(ii) whether the party has a real stake or a genuine interest in the issue; and

(iii) whether the proceeding is a reasonable and effective means of bringing the issue before the courts.

---

[97] Tsleil-Waututh Nation v. Canada (A.G.), 2017 FCA 128 at para. 78 [Tab 40, p. 2276].
[98] Canada (CI) v. Tennant, 2018 FCA 132 at paras. 23-24 [Tab 17, p. 1718].
[99] Dunsmuir v. New Brunswick, 2008 SCC 9 at paras. 27-30 [Tab 26, pp. 1926-1927].
[100] Downtown Eastside at paras. 31-33 [Tab 25, p. 1906].

77. These factors should not be treated as technical requirements, and the principles governing the exercise of discretion to grant public interest standing should be interpreted in a flexible, liberal, and generous manner.[101] The factors are interrelated considerations to be weighed cumulatively, flexibly, and purposively, not individually.[102]

i. There are Serious Justiciable Issues in this Application

78. An "arguable case" meets the first factor of the public interest standing test.[103] Although not binding on the panel, at least three justices of this Honourable Court have accepted or determined that the underlying application raises an arguable case.[104]

79. Underlying the first factor are two distinct concerns about the traditional restrictions on standing: whether the issue is "justiciable" and whether it is "serious."[105]

80. An issue is "justiciable" if it is appropriate for judicial determination and consistent with the court's constitutional and judicial review role. Where there is an issue that is appropriate for judicial determination, a court should not decline to determine it on the ground that—because of its policy context or implications—it might be better left for review by the legislative or executive branches of government.[106]

81. The RAB Ground of judicial review (i.e., para. 6(a), supra) relates to whether the CTA and/or its constituent Members have engaged in improper conduct relating to the Statement on Vouchers, giving rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias.[107] Such legal issues fall squarely within the core mandate of a supervising court conducting judicial review, and are clearly appropriate for judicial determination.[108]

---

[101] Downtown Eastside at para. 35 [Tab 25, p. 1907]; and British Columbia (A.G.) v. Council of Canadians with Disabilities, 2022 SCC 27 [CCD] at para. 59 [Tab 13, p. 1626].
[102] Downtown Eastside at para. 36 [Tab 25, p. 1907]; and CCD at para. 97 [Tab 13, p. 1634].
[103] Lukács v. Canada (CTA), 2016 FCA 174 at para. 6 [Tab 34, p. 2144].
[104] APR v. Canada (A.G.), 2021 FCA 201 at paras. 5-6 [Tab 8, pp. 1522-1523].
[105] Downtown Eastside at para. 39 [Tab 25, p. 1907].
[106] Downtown Eastside at paras. 30 and 40 [Tab 25, pp. 1905 and 1908].
[107] APR v. Canada (A.G.), 2021 FCA 201 at paras. 17 and 24-25 [Tab 8, pp. 1526 and 1528-1529].
[108] Tsleil-Waututh Nation v. Canada (A.G.), 2017 FCA 128 at para. 99 [Tab 40, pp. 2279-2280] citing Roncarelli v. Duplessis, [1959] SCR 121 [Tab 37, p. 2167].

82. The Misinformation Ground of judicial review (i.e., para. 6(b), supra) relates to whether the Statement on Vouchers approved by the CTA's constituent members:[109]

(a) misinformed the public as to the passengers' rights to refunds under federal or provincial laws; and/or

(b) misinformed passengers and the public by concealing from them that the true purpose of the Statement on Vouchers was to assist airlines in deflecting their financial obligations, rather than protecting and upholding passengers' rights.

83. The aforementioned three issues relate to whether an administrative decision-maker's public statements were made outside its statutory mandate and/or for an improper purpose—these are questions appropriate for judicial determination.[110]

84. An issue is "serious" when it is "far from frivolous." An issue will be considered "serious" unless it is so unlikely to succeed that its result would be seen as a "foregone conclusion." Public interest standing should not be denied if at least one serious issue is raised, and it is not necessary to examine each issue in detail.[111]

85. The evidence discussed above and the submissions below clearly demonstrate that the issues are "serious." In respect of the RAB Ground, justices of this Honourable Court have accepted that it was a serious issue, and this issue was also carefully examined by Gleason J.A. before issuing a number of production orders against the CTA.[112]

ii. Air Passenger Rights Has Demonstrated Genuine Interest

86. This factor relates to concern for economical use of scarce judicial resources. Courts typically assess the party's "engagement" by examining their reputation, continuing interest, and link with the issue.[113]

---

[109] APR v. Canada (A.G.), 2021 FCA 112 at para. 1 [Tab 7, p. 1512].
[110] Apotex Inc. v. Canada (Health), 2015 FC 1161 [Apotex] at paras. 95-107 and 159-166 [Tab 12, pp. 1588-1591 and 1600-1602].
[111] Downtown Eastside at para. 42 [Tab 25, pp. 1908] and CCD at para. 49 [Tab 13, p. 1624].
[112] APR v. Canada (A.G.), 2021 FCA 201 at paras. 5-6 [Tab 8, pp. 1522-1523].
[113] Downtown Eastside at paras. 43 and 58 [Tab 25, pp. 1908-1909 and 1913].

87. In another case, this Court held that Dr. Lukács, APR's President, "would defend the interests of airline passengers in a way that the parties [i.e., AGC and the CTA] cannot," and granted leave to intervene in a public interest capacity.[114] This Court also previously found that "[i]t is undisputed that Dr. Lukács is an air passenger rights advocate, who has frequently brought applications to this Court in respect of Agency decisions, and therefore does have a genuine interest in the issues raised [...]."[115]

88. The Applicant, APR, is a registered non-profit organization that was established to continue the extensive public interest advocacy work undertaken by Dr. Lukács over the past fifteen years primarily using the banner "Air Passenger Rights."[116]

89. APR's mandate and activities include: (a) educating air passengers and the public of their rights and enforcement thereof via the media and online platforms, including a Facebook group that has approximately 133,200 members;[117] (b) appearing before Parliamentary committees by invitation, and giving evidence and making submissions on the issue of air passenger protection; (c) participating in the CTA's consultation processes for the APPR by the CTA's invitation as a stakeholder of the topic;[118] and (d) continuing the public interest litigation work of Dr. Lukács by initiating or intervening in judicial proceedings about airlines' obligations to passengers.[119]

90. APR has a strong and continuing interest in the issue of passenger rights in general, and refunds for flights cancelled by the airlines during the COVID-19 pandemic in particular. APR has directly engaged with passengers who had refunds withheld from them.[120] During the pandemic, APR also appeared on numerous occasions at Parliamentary committees on refunds for flights cancelled by the airlines during the COVID-19 pandemic and provided written submissions to assist the members of Parliament.[121]

---

[114] Lukács Affidavit, para. 22 [Tab 2, p. 23].
[115] APR v. Canada (A.G.), 2021 FCA 201 at para. 6 [Tab 8, p. 1523].
[116] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 2-3 [Tab 2, pp. 16-17].
[117] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 35-38 [Tab 2, pp. 27-28].
[118] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 23-34 [Tab 2, pp. 24-27].
[119] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 5(a), 13-22, and 39-40 [Tab 2, pp. 17, 19-23, and 28-29].
[120] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 2, 14, 65-69, and 188-204 [Tab 2, pp. 16, 19, 35-37, and 92-98].
[121] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 27-29 [Tab 2, pp. 25-26].

iii. Reasonable and Effective Means to Bring the Issue Before the Court

91. This factor concerns whether the proposed proceeding is an economical use of judicial resources, whether the issues are presented in a context suitable for judicial determination in an adversarial setting, and whether permitting the proceeding to go forward "will serve the purpose of upholding the principle of legality." These considerations are to be analyzed in light of the realistic alternatives.[122]

92. This factor is to be applied purposively, flexibly, and generously. This factor, like others, should be applied from a "practical and pragmatic point of view." In applying this factor, four non-exhaustive questions are considered: (a) the Applicant's capacity to bring the case forward; (b) whether the case is of public interest; (c) whether there are alternative means; and (d) the potential impact of the proceeding on others.[123]

93. The Applicant's Capacity to Bring the Case Forward. The Applicant's affidavit presents a sufficiently concrete and well-developed factual setting. The Applicant's diligence in seeking disclosure of the necessary evidence from the CTA through this Court's procedures shows that the Applicant has the necessary resources and expertise.

94. The Case is in the Public Interest. There is a significant public interest in ensuring that the CTA's actions are confined to the four corners of its statutory mandate, in accordance with the rule of law, and are not subverted for improper purposes.[124] Members of the Canadian public have an interest in ensuring that the CTA, as a quasi-judicial body, not only conducts its work impartially but is actually perceived to be impartial.

95. Realistic Alternative Means. Public interest standing should not be denied on the basis that others, including those who may have standing as of right, could hypothetically bring a claim.[125] In this case, the Respondent led no evidence of any alternative proceedings underway that could address the serious issues raised in this Application.

---

[122] Downtown Eastside at para. 50 (emphasis added) [Tab 25, p. 1910].
[123] CCD at paras. 54-55 [Tab 13, pp. 1625-1626].
[124] Apotex at para. 96 [Tab 12, p. 1589].
[125] Downtown Eastside at paras. 47 and 51 [Tab 25, pp. 1909-1911].

96. This third factor only requires that the Application be one of possibly several reasonable and effective means of bringing the issue before the court. It is not required to be the only reasonable and effective means.[126] Other than judicial review in this Court,[127] the only other avenue for judicial oversight of the CTA's actions is via the statutory right of appeal on a question of law or jurisdiction, subject to leave, under s. 41 of the Canada Transportation Act. This alternative is clearly impractical as no reasonable passenger would expend significant resources to amass the same evidence as the Applicant had. It is also a Catch-22 because the Statement on Vouchers, on its face, gives an impression that the CTA is leaning towards the airlines, thereby dissuading some passengers from filing a CTA complaint and cutting off the route to an appeal. Just because the CTA says "trust us, we will be fair" cannot undo the overall perception.

97. Potential Impact on Others. Passengers with complaints about refunds from airlines during the COVID-19 pandemic will benefit from this Court's decision, one way or another. If the Court finds in the Respondent's favour, it will "clear the air" and help re-establish public confidence in the administration of justice by the CTA. On the other hand, if the Court finds in the Applicant's favour, then affected passengers would be spared from having a tainted quasi-judicial body adjudicate their complaints.

iv. Conclusion on Public Interest Standing

98. The Applicant submits that the aforementioned factors support this Honourable Court exercising its discretion in favour of granting public interest standing, to ensure that the conduct of the CTA and its appointed Members is not immunized from judicial scrutiny of this Court. It will also ensure that the CTA and its appointed Members act within their statutory mandate, only for proper purposes, free from outside influences, and are perceived by the public as independent and impartial.

---

[126] Downtown Eastside at para. 44 [Tab 25, p. 1909]; applied in Democracy Watch v. Canada (A.G.), 2018 FCA 194 at paras. 20-22 [Tab 24, pp. 1887-1888].
[127] Federal Courts Act, s. 28(1)(k) [Appendix A, p. 1377].

B. The Statement on Vouchers Gave Rise to Reasonable Apprehension of Bias

99. The test for assessing an allegation of reasonable apprehension of bias, like in this case, is well known and involves asking: "[W]hat would an informed person, viewing the matter realistically and practically—and having thought the matter through—conclude. Would [that person] think that it is more likely than not that [the decision-maker], whether consciously or unconsciously, would not decide fairly." A claim that circumstances give rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias must be evaluated "through the eyes of the reasonable, informed, practical and realistic person who considers the matter in some detail," considered contextually and on a fact-specific basis.[128]

100. The CTA's expression of views and activities must be carefully reviewed in light of the entire context. Each case is fact driven, with no shortcuts or textbook examples. Evidence of actual bias is not required to show a reasonable apprehension of bias.[129]

101. While the CTA's appointed Members enjoy a presumption of impartiality and the threshold for a finding of a reasonable apprehension of bias is high, it is submitted that the evidence in this case amply meets that threshold in any of the following ways:

(i) Through the Statement on Vouchers, Members expressed opinions on a matter that would come before them, contrary to para. 40 of the Code of Conduct.

(ii) Prior to issuing the Statement on Vouchers, the CTA's then-chair (Mr. Streiner) met with third parties external to the CTA, including the Transport Minister's Chief of Staff (a political actor) and Transport Canada officials, regarding the Statement on Vouchers, contrary to paragraph 39 of the Code of Conduct.

(iii) The statement was incepted for the purpose of endorsing the airlines' new practice of withholding refunds from passengers whose flights were cancelled by the airlines, and interfering with passengers' remedies under provincial laws and extra-judicial remedies via credit card chargebacks.

---

[128] Colel Chabad Lubavitch Foundation of Israel v. Canada (NR), 2022 FCA 108 at paras. 36-37 [Tab 22, pp. 1821-1822].

[129] Wewaykum Indian Band v. Canada, 2003 SCC 45 at paras. 64-77 [Tab 43, pp. 2343-2346].

i. Public Expression of Opinions Contrary to the Code of Conduct

102. The CTA's Code of Conduct, which was enacted as mandated by the Public Servants Disclosure Protection Act,[130] provides that:

> (40) Members shall not publicly express an opinion about any past, current, or potential cases or any other issue related to the work of the Agency, and shall refrain from comments or discussions in public or otherwise that may create a reasonable apprehension of bias.[131]

103. The Statement on Vouchers is an expression of an extra-judicial opinion, by those appointed Members of the CTA who supported and/or approved it, on an issue that was, is, or could come before the CTA in its quasi-judicial capacity. The Statement on Vouchers ipso facto acknowledged the obvious possibility of passengers filing complaints via the CTA's quasi-judicial process. Mr. Streiner, in his capacity as the CTA's Chair at the time, subsequently represented to a Parliamentary committee that it is inappropriate to comment on whether the law requires passengers to be given a refund and that, as a quasi-judicial tribunal, "[t]here is a legal process for [interpreting the law]."[132]

104. The CTA speaks on issues of substantive law through its quasi-judicial decisions, similarly to how courts would express their views on the applicable law through formal decisions. While nearly every court would have procedural guidelines or practice directives published, those deal strictly with procedural topics. It is also not unusual for courts to issue a press release or "Coles Notes" regarding formal decisions that are of public interest, but in such situations there is a legally-binding decision underpinning those expressions. In sharp contrast, the Statement on Vouchers is purely an expression of an opinion without any legal support, and untethered to any quasi-judicial decision.

105. The Applicant accepts that administrative tribunals may issue guidance materials. However, the scope of such guidance is necessarily limited by the CTA's Code of Conduct, which codifies the sound principle of impartiality. Members must not, under the guise of guidance, stray into providing extra-judicial opinions on controversial

[130] Public Servants Disclosure Protection Act, s. 6 [Appendix A, p. 1385].
[131] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "40" (emphasis added) [Tab 2(40), p. 624].
[132] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 213-215 [Tab 2, pp. 106-109].

issues that are or would likely come before the CTA in its quasi-judicial capacity.

106. The CTA's affidavit provides helpful examples of bona fide guidance materials by the CTA in the past that fundamentally differ from the Statement on Vouchers.

(a) Interpretation Note for Interline Baggage Rules. As an economic regulator, on April 15, 2014, the CTA issued a legally binding Decision No. 144-A-2014 about interline baggage rules. Subsequently, the CTA issued an interpretation note in its regulatory capacity, not its capacity as a quasi-judicial tribunal, that explains the CTA's underlying decision.[133] In sharp contrast with the Statement on Vouchers, the Interpretation Note was tethered to a legally binding decision, and was not related to a live controversy that was or would likely come before the CTA in its quasi-judicial capacity.

(b) Notice to Industry about Section 59. This Notice to Industry is comparable to a court's practice directive, setting the procedural requirements and considerations for the exercise of the CTA's discretionary power to grant exemptions from an economic regulatory provision of the Canada Transportation Act about licensing requirements. The Notice to Industry does not suggest any conclusions, and does not relate to any controversial issues between passengers and airlines that were or would likely come before the CTA in its quasi-judicial capacity.[134]

(c) Guide to Canadian Ownership. This guide relates to an indispensable licensing requirement for operating an air service within Canada, and the exercise of a core economic regulation function of the CTA in ensuring compliance with same. The guide provides information, based on the CTA's past legally binding decisions (Annex D), to potential entrants about the principles followed (Annex B) and the factors considered (Annex C) by the CTA.[135] This guide does not purport to provide information or suggestions on controversial issues of a quasi-judicial nature that would give a perception of partiality.

[133] Desnoyers Affidavit, Exhibit "A".
[134] Desnoyers Affidavit, Exhibit "B".
[135] Desnoyers Affidavit, Exhibit "C".

107. Unlike the above materials, the CTA's Statement on Vouchers speaks to the merits or likely outcomes of pending or imminently to be filed complaints, contrary to paragraph 40 of the Code of Conduct. Moreover, the CTA was fully aware that the Statement on Vouchers was not only lacking any legally binding decision(s) underpinning it,[136] but was actually contradicting the body of CTA Refund Jurisprudence.[137]

ii. Communications and Meetings Contrary to the Code of Conduct

108. The Canada Transportation Act contemplates the Governor in Council's powers to issue directions or orders to be done transparently and to respect the principles of democracy and Parliamentary supremacy under the Westminster system.

(a) Policy directions from the Governor-in-Council, on any matter that comes within the CTA's jurisdiction, must undergo Parliamentary review and cannot affect complaints that are already before the CTA.[138]

(b) Governor-in-Council orders to stabilize Canada's transportation system in the event of extraordinary disruptions—when failure to act would be contrary to the interest of the users and operators of the system and no other federal law would be sufficient or appropriate to remedy the anticipated damage to the system—are still subject to specific Parliamentary review and oversight.[139]

109. Paragraph 39 of the CTA's Code of Conduct reinforces the requirement that in the absence of specific Governor-in-Council directions or orders, the CTA must act independently and be free from political and outside influences:

> (39) Members shall not communicate with political actors or officials of other federal departments and agencies, provincial or foreign governments, or international organizations regarding a matter that is, was, or could be before the Agency.[140]

---

[136] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 145-146 [Tab 2, pp. 74-75].
[137] See paragraph 21, supra.
[138] Canada Transportation Act, ss. 43-46 [Appendix A, p. 1362].
[139] Canada Transportation Act, s. 47 [Appendix A, pp. 1362-1364].
[140] Lukács Affidavit, Exhibit "40" (emphasis added) [Tab 2(40), p. 624].

110. It is undisputed that the Governor-in-Council did not issue formal directions under s. 43, nor any order under s. 47, directing the CTA to publish the Statement on Vouchers. Nevertheless, the CTA's Statement on Vouchers was a product of extensive informal communications and/or meetings between the CTA and Transport Canada officials or the Transport Minister's Chief of Staff, which lacked the necessary Parliamentary oversight, and were contrary to paragraph 39 of the CTA's Code of Conduct.

(a) On March 18, 2020, TC sent an encrypted email to the CTA emphasizing Air Transat's request that they officially permit Air Transat to issue vouchers instead of refunds, a request that was re-sent by Air Transat that evening and promptly made its way to Mr. Streiner and the EC. After the encrypted email, a CTA personnel also engaged in a "side exchange" with a TC official on this issue.[141]

(b) At the Friday March 20, 2020 EC meeting, Ms. Jones was tasked to draft a Statement on Vouchers due the following week. That afternoon, Mr. Streiner parked the idea of issuing such a statement "since we're not quite sure yet what will be done on this front or how."[142] Then on the early morning of Sunday March 22, 2020, Mr. Streiner circulated a draft Statement on Vouchers and scheduled an "Urgent Debrief" with key CTA personnel, and also informed the CTA Members that the draft Statement on Vouchers was incepted after "discussion with other federal players."[143] It was known within the CTA that Mr. Streiner had a meeting over that weekend with the Deputy Minister of Transport and the Transport Minister's Chief of Staff regarding the Statement on Vouchers.[144]

111. It is plain that Mr. Streiner changed his mind sometime between 5:00 p.m. of March 20, 2020 and the early morning of Sunday March 22, 2020 after learning "what will be done on this front or how." Although a litigation hold was promptly placed and brought to the attention of key CTA personnel,[145] the CTA failed to maintain a paper

[141] See paragraphs 28-30, supra.
[142] See paragraph 34, supra.
[143] See paragraphs 38-39, supra.
[144] Lukács Affidavit, paras. 111, 112(a)-(b), and 128 [Tab 2, pp. 57-58 and 66].
[145] Cuber Cross-Examination, Q65-Q81 [Tab 3, pp. 1142-1146].

trail on what caused Mr. Streiner to change his mind over the weekend on the Statement on Vouchers and details of the weekend meeting between Mr. Streiner and the Deputy Minister of Transport and the Transport Minister's Chief of Staff. Notably, although this weekend meeting occurred, it was not even documented in Mr. Streiner's calendar.[146]

112. It is within this Court's discretion to draw an adverse inference that Mr. Streiner received directions or instructions for the Statement on Vouchers from TC at the weekend meeting. On an evaluation of all of the evidence, it is plain that such inference is not based on uncertainty or speculation.[147] On Friday afternoon, Mr. Streiner was waiting for some clarity or instruction. On Sunday morning, Mr. Streiner scheduled an "Urgent Debrief" about the statement whose text speaks for itself, and the idea of such a statement was not new. That morning, Mr. Streiner then informed the CTA Members that the draft statement was incepted after "discussion with other federal players." At the EC debrief on Monday, Mr. Streiner mentioned the discussions and agreements with, and praise from, TC. There was no paper trail of the CTA conducting any independent analysis about the issue of refunds and vouchers during that weekend.

iii. The Statement on Vouchers was Incepted for Improper Purposes

113. The purpose for which an administrative body issues a public statement is judicially reviewable. A supervising court may order the full retraction of public statements that were issued in response to political pressure or outside influences rather than carrying out the administrative body's statutory mandate for the benefit of the public.[148] An improper purpose for a public statement may be found on the basis of correspondences and documents sent or received by the administrative body.[149]

114. In this case, the CTA and/or its appointed Members were acting for the purpose of stifling passengers' credit card chargebacks that airlines faced. This dissuaded credit card companies from making financial demands from airlines such as Air Transat.

---

[146] Cuber Cross-Examination, Q179-189 [Tab 3, pp. 1174-1177].
[147] Voltage Holdings, LLC v. Doe #1, 2023 FCA 194 at paras. 55-57 [Tab 42, p. 2314].
[148] Apotex at paras. 97-102 and 159-168 [Tab 12, pp. 1589-1590 and 1600-1602].
[149] Apotex at paras. 98 and 102-103 [Tab 12, pp. 1589-1590].

